words of David the Levites were numbered from twenty years old and above; ²⁸because their duty was to help the sons of Aaron in the service of the house of the LORD, in the courts and in the chambers, in the purifying of all holy things and the work of the service of the house of God, ²⁹both with ^ethe showbread and ^fthe fine flour for the grain offering, with ^gthe unleavened cakes and ^h*what is baked in the pan*, with what is mixed and with all kinds of ⁱmeasures and sizes; ³⁰to stand every morning to thank and praise the LORD, and likewise at evening; ³¹and at every presentation of a burnt offering to the LORD ^jon the Sabbaths and on the New Moons and on the ^kset ⁸ feasts, by number according to the ordinance governing them, regularly before the LORD; ³²and that they should ^lattend to the ^mneeds of the tabernacle of meeting, the needs of the holy place, and the ⁿneeds of the sons of Aaron their brethren in the work of the house of the LORD.

The Divisions of the Priests

Ithamar. ²And ^bNadab and Abihu died before their father, and had no children; therefore Eleazar and Ithamar ministered as priests. ³Then David with Zadok of the sons of Eleazar, and ^cAhimelech of the sons of Ithamar, divided them according to the schedule of their service.

⁴There were more leaders found of the sons of Eleazar than of the sons of Ithamar, and thus they were divided. Among the sons of Eleazar were sixteen heads of their fathers' houses, and eight heads of their fathers' houses among the sons of Ithamar. ⁵Thus they were divided by lot, one group as another, for there were officials of the sanctuary and officials of the house of God, from the sons of Eleazar and from the sons of Ithamar. ⁶And the scribe, Shemaiah the son of Nethanel, one of the Levites, wrote them down before the king, the leaders, Zadok the priest, Ahimelech the son of Abiathar, and the heads of the fathers' houses of the priests and Levites, one father's house taken for Eleazar and one for Ithamar.

⁷Now the first lot fell to Jehoiarib, the second to Jedaiah, ⁸the third to Harim, the fourth to Seorim, ⁹the fifth to Malchijah, the sixth to Mijamin, ¹⁰the seventh to Hakkoz, the eighth to ^dAbijah, ¹¹the

23:29 To free the priests for the work of offering sacrifices, the Levites prepared elements for the sacrificial ritual, such as fine flour and unleavened cakes, and in other ways assisted the prescribed services.

23:30 thank and praise: This ministry fell to the Levites engaged in choral and orchestral duties (25:1-31).

23:31 burnt offering: Though Levites outside the priestly line could not officiate at the sacrifices of the central sanctuary, they could assist the priests, for example by helping to skin the animal and cut it up. Sabbaths: The reason for the plural was not only because there were many Saturdays in a year, but other days as well could be called a "Sabbath." For example, the eighth day of the Feast of Tabernacles was considered a Sabbath no matter what day of the week it was (Lev. 23:39). New Moons: This referred to the first day of every month, otherwise known as the Feast of Trumpets (Num.

28:11-15). set feasts: These would be Passover and Unleavened Bread (Lev. 23:4-8), the Feast of Weeks or Pentecost (Lev. 23:9-22), and the Feast of Tabernacles (Lev. 23:33-43).

23:32 tabernacle of meeting: At this point the temple had not yet been built, so David's regulations for the Levites pertained to their service in the intermediate tabernacles at Gibeon and Mt. Zion. holy place: This referred to the outer room of the tabernacle as opposed to the Most Holy Place, to which only the high priest had access.

24:1 In order for the priests to serve in rotation and have time off from their duties, they were assigned to shifts or divisions. For this rotation, David divided the priests by their lines of descent from Aaron (see v. 3).

24:2 Nadab and Abihu died: This referred to the incident in which these two sons of Aaron incurred the wrath of God by offering up incense kindled with improper fire, that is, fire that did not originate from God (Lev. 9:23-10:2).

24:3 The Ahimelech here was the son of Abiathar (see v. 6), the young priest of Nob who had joined David in the wilderness many years before (1 Sam. 22:20). There is not a complete genealogy of Abiathar in the OT, but it is clear from this passage that his ancestry was from Aaron through Ithamar.

24:4, 5 When the descendants of the two lines were identified there were sixteen family divisions from Eleazar and only eight from Ithamar. This complicated the process of dividing the service assignments fairly. The solution was to assign the duties by casting lots. Evidently the priestly lines would each serve in turn, but the order of succession within each was determined by lot.

24:6 Shemaiah . . . wrote them down: In order to arrange the schedule for the priests' service and to keep it functioning properly, it was necessary that records be kept of all the names of the Levites by family and the shifts they were to fill in their rotation.

24:7 first lot: Since Eleazar and Ithamar are mentioned in that order in v. 6, it may be assumed that this list of names gives first someone from Eleazar, next someone from Ithamar, and so on alternately through the list.

24:10 This Abijah may be the ancestor of Zacharias, father of John the Baptist, who is named in Luke 1:5.

Levites

(Heb. levi) (23:26; Num. 3:9) Strong's #3881

The Levites were the descendants of Levi, one of the 12 sons of Jacob. The name is related to the verb lavah meaning "to join," implying that the Levites were "joined" to God (see Gen. 29:34). The tribe had three branches, named after the three sons of Levi: the Gershonites, the Kohathites, and the Merarites (Num. 3). At Mt. Sinai, God chose Aaron, Moses' brother and a Kohathite, to be the nation's high priest (Ex. 28:1). No one but a descendant of Aaron could serve as a priest, but the other branches of the Levites shared many of their privileges and responsibilities (Num. 18:2). Originally the non-priestly Levites helped care for the tabernacle (Num. 4), but when David began preparations for building the temple, he created new duties for these Levites, making them singers, gatekeepers, treasurers, and royal officials (24:1-26:19).

ninth to Jeshua, the tenth to Shecaniah, ¹²the eleventh to Eliashib, the twelfth to Jakim, ¹³the thirteenth to Huppah, the fourteenth to Jeshebeah, ¹⁴the fifteenth to Bilgah, the sixteenth to Immer, ¹⁵the seventeenth to Hezir, the eighteenth to ¹Happizzez, ¹⁶the nineteenth to Pethahiah, the twentieth to ²Jehezekel, ¹⁷the twenty-first to Jachin, the twenty-second to Gamul, ¹⁸the twenty-third to Delaiah, the twenty-fourth to Maaziah.

¹⁹This was the schedule of their service ⁶for coming into the house of the LORD according to their ordinance by the hand of Aaron their father, as the LORD God of Israel had commanded him.

The Musicians

25 Moreover David and the captains of the army separated for the service some of the sons of ^aAsaph, of Heman, and of Jeduthun, who should prophesy with harps, stringed instruments, and cymbals. And the number of the skilled men performing their service was: ²Of the sons of Asaph: Zaccur, Joseph, Nethaniah, and ¹Asharelah; the sons of Asaph were ²under the direction of Asaph, who prophesied according to the order of the king. ³Of ^bJeduthun, the sons of Jeduthun: Gedaliah, ³Zeri, Jeshiah, ⁴Shimei, Hashabiah, and Mattithiah, ⁵six, under the direction of their father Jeduthun, who prophesied with a harp to give thanks and to praise the LORD. ⁴Of Heman, the sons of Heman: Bukkiah, Mattaniah, ⁶Uzziel, ⁷Shebuel, ⁸Jerimoth, Hananiah, Hanani, Eliathah, Giddalti, Romamti-Ezer, Joshbekashah, Mallothi, Hothir, and Mahazioth. ⁵All these were the sons of Heman the king's seer in the words of God, to ⁹exalt his ^chorn. For God gave Heman fourteen sons and three daughters.

⁶All these were under the direction of their father for the music in the house of the LORD, with cymbals, stringed instruments, and ^dharps, for the service of the house of God. Asaph, Jeduthun, and Heman were ^eunder the authority of the king. ⁷So the ^fnumber of them, with their brethren who were instructed in the songs of the LORD, all who were skillful, was two hundred and eighty-eight.

⁸And they cast lots for their duty, the small as well as the great, ⁹the teacher with the student.

24:20, 21 sons of Levi: The non-priestly Levites also were divided by clan to determine their service rotation. The first division is Kohath, whose name does not appear but is implied in the mention of his son Amram. Jehdeiah and Isshiah, who were direct descendants of Moses (23:14–17), were omitted from the earlier list of Levites (23:16, 17).

24:22–24 The Izharites were Kohathites (see 23:12). Hebron was the third of the Kohathite clans (see 23:12). Uzziel was the last division of the Kohathites (see 23:12).

24:26 Founder of the entire clan that bears his name (see 23:6). Merari was the third son of Levi. Jaaziah: This descendant of Merari appears for the first time here.

24:31 To assure the fairness of the Levites' assignments, they were selected by their divisions through the casting of the sacred lots (see v. 5). fathers . . . younger brethren: There was no age discrimination in the work and shifts allocated to each. All served equally no matter what their age or status.

25:1 The involvement of captains of the army in the selection of Levitical musicians may at first appear strange. However in the conduct of God's battles against those who opposed His people, music was frequently an important element. prophesy: The role of a prophet was not limited to prediction or proclamation in words. Any divinely authorized utterance or deed from a prophet was a form of prophesying. Vocal and instrumental music could be a kind of prophetic message, usually in the form of praise (see 1 Sam. 10:5, 6; 2 Kin. 3:15).

25:2 according to the order of the king: This underscored the leading role David took in the religious life of the nation (see 23:27). Even as king, David ordered that proper worship be given to the Lord.

25:5 Like Nathan (17:1) and Gad (21:9), Heman enjoyed a close relationship to David. fourteen sons and three daughters: The sons were accounted for in vv. 4, 13, 23–31. The daughters were not named but clearly participated along with their brothers in the public worship of God.

25:6 the authority of the king: Once more the chronicler insisted that even the religious life of the nation was under the king's supervision. Israel was a theocracy in which God was the ultimate King and therefore head over all aspects of national life. As God's son (17:13), the king not only oversaw civil affairs, but also the worship of the Lord, the true King of Israel.

25:8 small . . . great . . . teacher . . . student: The equality of all

⁹Now the first lot for Asaph came out for Joseph; the second for Gedaliah, him with his brethren and sons, twelve; ¹⁰the third for Zaccur, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ¹¹the fourth for ¹Jizri, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ¹²the fifth for Nathaniah, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ¹³the sixth for Bukkiah, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ¹⁴the seventh for ²Jesharelah, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ¹⁵the eighth for Jeshaiiah, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ¹⁶the ninth for Mattaniah, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ¹⁷the tenth for Shimei, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ¹⁸the eleventh for ³Azarel, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ¹⁹the twelfth for Hashabiah, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ²⁰the thirteenth for ⁴Shubael, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ²¹the fourteenth for Mattithiah, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ²²the fifteenth for ⁵Jeremoth, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ²³the sixteenth for Hananiah, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ²⁴the seventeenth for Joshbekashah, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ²⁵the eighteenth for Hanani, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ²⁶the nineteenth for Mallothi, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ²⁷the twentieth for Eliathah, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ²⁸the twenty-first for Hothir, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ²⁹the twenty-second for Giddalti, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ³⁰the twenty-third for Mahazith, his sons and his brethren, twelve; ³¹the twenty-fourth for Romamti-Ezer, his sons and his brethren, twelve.

⁶Also to Shemaiah his son were sons born who governed their fathers' houses, because they were men of great ability. ⁷The sons of Shemaiah were Othni, Rephael, Obed, and Elzabad, whose brothers Elihu and Semachiah were able men.

⁸All these were of the sons of Obed-Edom, they and their sons and their brethren, ^dable men with strength for the work: sixty-two of Obed-Edom.

⁹And Meshelemiah had sons and brethren, eighteen able men.

¹⁰Also ^eHosah, of the children of Merari, had sons: Shimri the first (for though he was not the firstborn, his father made him the first), ¹¹Hilkiah the second, Tebaliah the third, Zechariah the fourth; all the sons and brethren of Hosah were thirteen.

¹²Among these were the divisions of the gatekeepers, among the chief men, having duties just like their brethren, to serve in the house of the LORD. ¹³And they ^fcast lots for each gate, the small as well as the great, according to their father's house. ¹⁴The lot for the East Gate fell to ³Shelemiah. Then they cast lots for his son Zechariah, a wise counselor, and his lot came out for the North Gate; ¹⁵to Obed-Edom the South Gate, and to his sons the ⁴storehouse. ¹⁶To Shuppim and Hosah the lot came out for the West Gate, with the Shallecheth Gate on the ^gascending highway—watchman opposite watchman. ¹⁷On the east were six Levites, on the north four each day, on the south four each day, and for the ⁵storehouse two by two. ¹⁸As for the ⁶Parbar on the west, there were four on the highway and two at the Parbar. ¹⁹These were the divisions of the gatekeepers among the sons of Korah and among the sons of Merari.

The Treasuries and Other Duties

²⁰Of the Levites, Ahijah was ^hover these servants of God is seen in the equal distribution of their assignments, a principle that had determined the nature of the ministry of the priests as well (24:31).

26:1 There were four divisions of the gatekeepers, but they came from only two of the Levitical clans, Kohath and Merari.

26:2 In both 9:21 and here, Zechariah is the son of Meshelemiah. This means that the lists of 9:17–27 and 26:1–19 refer to the same time and circumstances.

26:4 This Obed-Edom was probably not the Obed-Edom of 13:14, but a gatekeeper, the son of Jeduthun (16:38).

26:6 The oldest son of Obed-Edom (v. 4), Shemaiah, gave rise to a subclan of gatekeepers whose total number is given in v. 8.

26:12 The foregoing list appears to have identified the head gatekeepers only, that is, the chief men. Like their Levitical brethren in music (25:7) and the priests (24:31), these officials served right along with the four thousand others who made up the whole contingent of gatekeepers (23:5). They were not excused from such work because of their leadership positions.

26:14 The East Gate was the most important because it led straight into the main entrance of the temple (see 9:17, 18). It was therefore assigned to Shelemiah (or Meshelemiah, v. 1) himself. North Gate: This was the responsibility of the oldest son of Shelemiah.

26:15 South Gate: Obed-Edom was in charge of the gate itself, and his sons (vv. 4, 5) took charge of the storehouse. This was undoubtedly the same as the treasuries (v. 20).

26:20 house of God: This likely referred to the storage area where the treasuries of the house of God and over the treasuries of the ⁱdedicated⁷ things. ²¹The sons of ^sLaadan, the descendants of the Gershonites of Laadan, heads of their fathers' houses, of Laadan the Gershonite: ⁹Jehieli. ²²The sons of Jehieli, Zetham and Joel his brother, were over the treasuries of the house of the LORD. ²³Of the ^jAmramites, the Izharites, the Hebronites, and the Uzzielites: ²⁴^kShebuel the son of Gershom, the son of Moses, was overseer of the treasuries. ²⁵And his brethren were Rehabiah his son, Jeshaiiah his son, Joram his son, Zichri his son, and ^lShelomith his son.

²⁶This Shelomith and his brethren were over all the treasuries of the dedicated things ^mwhich King David and the heads of fathers' houses, the captains over thousands and hundreds, and the captains of the army, had dedicated. ²⁷Some of the ¹spoils won in battles they dedicated to maintain the house of the LORD. ²⁸And all that Samuel ⁿthe seer, Saul the son of Kish, Abner the son of Ner, and Joab the son of Zeruiah had dedicated, every dedicated thing, was under the hand of Shelomith and his brethren.

²⁹Of the Izharites, Chenaniah and his sons ^operformed duties as ^pofficials and judges over Israel outside Jerusalem.

³⁰Of the Hebronites, ^qHashabiah and his brethren, one thousand seven hundred able men, had the oversight of Israel on the west side of the Jordan for all the business of the LORD, and in the service of the king. ³¹Among the Hebronites, ^rJerijah was head of the Hebronites according to his genealogy of the fathers. In the fortieth year of the reign of David they were sought, and there were found among them capable men ^sat Jazer of Gilead. ³²And his brethren were two thousand seven hundred able men, heads of fathers' houses, whom King David made officials over the Reubenites, the Gadites, and the half-tribe of Manasseh, for every matter pertaining to God and the ^taffairs of the king.

The Military Divisions

27 And the children of Israel, according to their number, the heads of fathers' houses, the captains of thousands and hundreds and their officers, served the king in every matter of the military divisions. These divisions came in and went out month by month throughout all the months of the year, each division having twenty-four thousand.

²Over the first division for the first month was ^aJashobeam the son of Zabdiel, and in his division were twenty-four thousand; ³*he was* of the children of Perez, and the chief of all the captains of the army for the first month. ⁴Over the division of the second month was ¹Dodai an Ahohite, and of his division Mikloth also was the leader; in his division were twenty-four thousand. ⁵The third captain of the army for the third month was ^bBenaiah, the son of Jehoiada the priest, who was chief; in his division were twenty-four thousand. ⁶This was the Benaiah who was ^cmighty among the thirty, and was over the thirty; in his division was Ammizabad his son.

regular tabernacle or temple paraphernalia were kept at hand for the worship services (see 9:28, 29). dedicated things: The second storehouse would contain the items taken as spoils of war that were used exclusively for holy purposes. David had already obtained a great amount of these (vv. 26–28).

26:21–24 The Levites listed in vv. 21–23 were in charge of the regular storehouse (v. 22; see 23:8). Shebuel seems to have had general oversight of the regular storehouse. The Gershonites and other Kohathites of vv. 21–23 were under his direction.

26:25 The descendants of Eliezer became directors of the second storehouse, that of “the dedicated things” (v. 20). All the Levites who attended to the affairs of the tabernacle and temple treasuries traced their lineage back to Moses.

26:26 The treasuries of the dedicated things fell under Shelomith’s jurisdiction. These spoils of war were kept in storage until they could be used in the building and decoration of the temple (22:14; 29:2; 2 Chr. 5:1).

26:28 Showing the long-standing commitment of the nation to build and furnish the house of God, the chronicler listed leaders of the past who had dedicated spoils of war as readily as David had done.

26:30 This third Kohathite clan was responsible specifically for Israel on the west side of the Jordan.

26:31 Since Hashabiah directed the Hebronites on the west (v. 30), Jerijah took charge of those on the east. He must have been over Hashabiah as well because he is called here head of the He- bronites. fortieth year: David reigned for 40 years (29:27), so these arrangements were completed in his very last year. Jazer of Gilead: This Levitical city (6:81) was located in the tribal territory of Gad, about seven miles west of Rabbah.

26:32 Reubenites . . . Gadites . . . half-tribe of Manasseh: These were the tribes of Israel who occupied the east side of the Jordan.

27:1 heads of fathers’ houses: This probably referred to tribal units, since the order appears to be in decreasing size through thousands and hundreds. month by month: The view that fathers’ houses meant tribes is strengthened by the fact that there were 12 divisions, one for each month. Apparently a professional standing army is being described here, one broken up into 12 corps that served a month at a time on a rotating basis. twenty-four thousand: The total available manpower throughout Israel would be 288,000.

27:2 A connection can be made here to the list of David’s mighty men, which is also headed by Jashobeam (11:11). He was one of “the three,” which meant he was regarded as unusually heroic.

27:4 Dodai’s son Eleazar was the second of the mighty men included in the first trio along with Jashobeam (11:12).

27:5 As the son of a priest, Benaiah was from the tribe of Levi. In the earlier list of mighty men he was celebrated for having killed a lion and a gigantic Egyptian (11:22, 23). Because of this kind of courage, he became part of the second group of “the three” (11:24). Later he was named commander of the entire Israelite army (1 Kin. 4:4). His son served with him (v. 6).

onites, Shephatiah the son of Maachah; ¹⁷over the Levites, ^kHashabiah the son of Kemuel; over the Aaronites, Zadok; ¹⁸over Judah, ^lElihu, one of David's brothers; over Issachar, Omri the son of Michael; ¹⁹over Zebulun, Ishmaiah the son of Obadiah; over Naphtali, Jerimoth the son of Azriel; ²⁰over the children of Ephraim, Hoshea the son of Azaziah; over the half-tribe of Manasseh, Joel the son of Pedaiiah; ²¹over the half-tribe of Manasseh in Gilead, Iddo the son of Zechariah; over Benjamin, Jaasiel the son of Abner; ²²over Dan, Azarel the son of Jeroham. These were the leaders of the tribes of Israel.

²³But David did not take the number of those twenty years old and under, because ^mthe LORD had said He would multiply Israel like the ⁿstars of the heavens. ²⁴Joab the son of Zeruiah began a census, but he did not finish, for ^owrath came upon Israel because of this census; nor was the number recorded in the account of the chronicles of King David.

Other State Officials

²⁵And Azmaveth the son of Adiel was over the king's treasuries; and Jehonathan the son of Uzziash was over the storehouses in the field, in the cities, in the villages, and in the fortresses. ²⁶Ezri the son of Chelub was over those who did the work of the field for tilling the ground. ²⁷And Shimei the Ramathite was over the vineyards, and Zabdi the Shiphmite was 27:7 David's nephew Asahel (see 2:15, 16) was among the 30 mighty men but did not achieve a position among "the three" (11:26). His son also served with him.

27:9 A Tekoite was a person from the village of Tekoa, some five or six miles southeast of Bethlehem. This would make Ira a member of the tribe of Judah. It is clear that even if the military divisions were made up along tribal lines, their commanders were often David's own fellow Judeans. This appears to be so for Jashobeam (v. 2), Asahel (v. 7), Shamhuth (v. 8), and now Ira.

27:10 Helez: The leadership of the army was not limited to Judeans (27:9), since Helez was an Ephraimite in such a position.

27:11 Since Husha was a Judean (4:4), Sibbechai also came from the tribe of Judah. Zarhites likely referred to descendants of Zerah, a son of Judah (2:4; see Num. 26:20). The present passage apparently placed the Hushathites in a position subsidiary to the Zarhites. In any case, Sibbechai was one of the 30 heroes, having distinguished himself by killing a Philistine giant (11:29; see 2 Sam. 21:18).

27:12 A Benjamite commander, Abiezer came from the Levitical town of Anathoth, just north of Jerusalem. He was also a member of the elite 30 (11:28).

27:13 Since Netophah was a village near Bethlehem, Maharai was still another of David's fellow tribesmen named as commander of a division and member of the valorous 30 (11:30).

27:14 Another Ephraimite, this Benaiah (see v. 5) came from Pirathon, five miles south of Samaria. Like the others he was one of the 30 mighty men (11:31).

27:15 Like Maharai (v. 13), this captain came from Netophah. Besides being one of the 30 (11:30), Heldai could claim descent from Israel's first judge, Othniel.

27:16 officer: The list that begins here (vv. 16–22) is clearly nonmilitary and tribal in nature. The description of these officers is much more political than the descriptions of the captains and officers of the military divisions (see v. 1).

27:18 Elihu: This brother of David is usually called Eliab (1 Sam. 16:6).

27:23 take the number: This ties in the previous list of tribes and leaders with David's ill-fated census near the end of his reign (v. 24; 21:1–17). So confident was David that his military might would be sufficient for any encounter, he omitted from his census all those twenty years old and under. Even so, the result of this census was over a million men (see 21:5), a multitude very much like the stars of the heavens—the words of God's promise to Abraham (see Gen. 12:2; 15:5).

27:24 Joab's count included all the tribes except for Levi and Benjamin (see 21:6). Although these two tribes are included in the present list (vv. 17, 21), nothing is said of their being counted. On the other hand, Asher and Gad, missing in this list (see vv. 16–22), must have been included in Joab's census.

27:25 As opposed to the "treasuries of the house of God" and the "treasuries of the dedicated things" (26:20), the king's treasuries were the royal storehouses. They contained the revenues of the state in the form of precious metals (29:3–5) and other goods and commodities gained through taxation, tribute, and other means (see 2 Chr. 9:13, 14). storehouses: These were regional collection facilities ranging no doubt from granaries to warehouses to places of safe deposit of valuables. According to the following list, their primary purpose was to store agricultural produce.

27:27 vineyards: This industry was in two divisions, one to grow the grapes and the other to make wine.

over the produce of the vineyards for the supply of wine. ²⁸Baal-Hanan the Gerderite was over the olive trees and the sycamore trees that were in the lowlands, and Joash was over the store of oil. ²⁹And Shitrai the Sharonite was over the herds that fed in Sharon, and Shaphat the son of Adlai was over the herds that were in the valleys. ³⁰Obil the Ishmaelite was over the camels, Jehdeiah the Meronothite was over the donkeys, ³¹and Jaziz the ^pHagrite was over the flocks. All these were the officials over King David's property.

³²Also Jehonathan, David's uncle, was a counselor, a wise man, and a ⁴scribe; and Jehiel the ⁵son of Hachmoni was with the king's sons. ³³^qAhithophel was the king's counselor, and ^rHushai the Archite was the king's companion. ³⁴After Ahithophel was Jehoiada the son of Benaiah, then ^sAbiathar. And the general of the king's army was ^tJoab.

God, and had made preparations to build it. ³But God said to me, ^g'You shall not build a house for My name, because you have been a man of war and have shed ^hblood.' ⁴However the LORD God of Israel ⁱchose me above all the house of my father to be king over Israel forever, for He has chosen ^jJudah to be the ruler. And of the house of Judah, ^kthe house of my father, and ^lamong the sons of my father, He was pleased with me to make me king over all Israel. ⁵^mAnd of all my sons (for the LORD has given me many sons) ⁿHe has chosen my son Solomon to sit on the throne of the kingdom of the LORD over Israel. ⁶Now He said to me, 'It is ^oyour son Solomon who shall build My house and My courts; for I have chosen him to be My son, and I will be his Father. ⁷Moreover I will establish his kingdom forever, ^pif he is steadfast to observe My commandments and My judgments, as it is this day.' ⁸Now therefore, in the sight of all Israel, the assembly of the LORD, and in the hearing of our God, be careful to seek out all the commandments of the LORD your God, that you may possess this good land, and leave it as an inheritance for your children after you forever.

⁹"As for you, my son Solomon, ^qknow the God of your father, and serve Him ^rwith a loyal heart and with a willing mind; for ^sthe LORD searches all hearts and understands all the intent of the thoughts. ^tIf you seek Him, He will be found by you; but if you forsake Him, He will ^ucast you off forever. ¹⁰Consider now, ^vfor the LORD has chosen you to build a house for the sanctuary; be strong, and do it."

27:29 A fertile plain between Israelite and Philistine territory, Sharon was ideal for grazing cattle and sheep. It is appropriate that someone from Sharon, who knew the land and all its seasonal changes, should be in charge of the livestock of that region.

27:30 Inhabitants of the desert were at home with the breeding and use of camels (Gen. 37:25), so naturally an Ishmaelite would be in charge of such animals.

27:31 Since there was no essential difference between the king and his state, the property of the king consisted of the assets of the nation.

27:34 Jehoiada the son of Benaiah: In the list of military officers there was also a "Benaiah who was a son of Jehoiada" (see v. 5). This is probably an example of the custom in which a man is named after his grandfather. The counselor Jehoiada was probably the grandson of Jehoiada the priest and son of the famous warrior Benaiah (v. 5). Joab: From the days of David's conquest of Jerusalem, Joab held the position of commander of the army of Israel (11:6), a post he kept until Solomon became king (1 Kin. 2:28–35).

28:1 These were the individuals of 27:1–34, plus others no doubt, who were the leaders of all the branches and extensions of Israel's government. The occasion was of such significance that a total assembly of dignitaries was essential.

28:2 The word footstool is a metaphor describing either the ark of the covenant or the tabernacle as the earthly base of God's activity. He sits on a throne in heaven, and His connection with the earth is focused in his earthly dwelling place, the tent or the ark. Elsewhere, the whole earth is described as God's footstool (Is. 66:1).

28:5 The call to rule was not limited to David, but included his descendants (see 17:11). Since only one of his sons could reign in his place, a choice had to be made (see 14:3, 4), and God chose Solomon to succeed David as the king of Israel (22:9, 10; see 2 Sam. 12:24; 1 Kin. 1:13, 30).

28:6 My son . . . his Father: This remarkable statement not only shows that the Davidic kings enjoyed unparalleled access to the Lord as His adopted sons (see 17:3; Ps. 2:7), but it anticipates the absolute sonship of the Son of David, Jesus Christ (Acts 13:33; Heb. 1:5).

28:7 The conditional aspect of the covenant with David and his dynasty is real, not hypothetical. Not one of the kings, including David, was able to observe the commandments and judgments perfectly. Therefore they were unable in themselves to reign forever or even set the stage for an everlasting rule. But One would come who would be able to do so and who would fulfill the covenant perfectly. This One was Jesus, the Son of David (see Matt. 5:7; 21:9).

28:9 True service of God is more than rational and intellectual. It requires a commitment of the emotions as well. This was precisely where Solomon failed. Even though he had great wisdom (2 Chr. 1:12; 9:3, 22, 23), he allowed his heart to turn aside from God because he loved foreign women (1 Kin. 11:1–4). Loyalty of heart is essential for faithful, effective service.

¹¹Then David gave his son Solomon ^wthe plans for the vestibule, its houses, its treasuries, its upper chambers, its inner chambers, and the place of the mercy seat; ¹²and the ^xplans for all that he had by the Spirit, of the courts of the house of the LORD, of all the chambers all around, ^yof the treasuries of the house of God, and of the treasuries for the dedicated things; ¹³also for the division of the priests and the ^zLevites, for all the work of the service of the house of the LORD, and for all the articles of service in the house of the LORD. ¹⁴*He gave* gold by weight for things of gold, for all articles used in every kind of service; also silver for all articles used in every kind of service; ¹⁵the weight for the ^alampstands of gold, and their lamps of gold, by weight for each lampstand and its lamps; for the lampstands of silver by weight, for the lampstand and its lamps, according to the use of each lampstand. ¹⁶And by weight he gave gold for the tables of the showbread, for each ^btable, and silver for the tables of silver; ¹⁷also pure gold for the forks, the basins, the pitchers of pure gold, and the golden bowls—he gave gold by weight for every bowl; and for the silver bowls, silver by weight for every bowl; ¹⁸and refined gold by weight for the ^caltar of incense, and for the construction of the chariot, that is, the gold ^dcherubim that spread their wings and overshadowed the ark of the covenant of the LORD. ¹⁹*“All this,” said David,* “the LORD made me understand in writing, by His hand upon me, all the ²works of these plans.”

²⁰And David said to his son Solomon,

Offerings for Building the Temple

29 Furthermore King David said to all the assembly: “My son Solomon, whom alone God has ^achosen, is ^byoung and inexperienced; and the work is great, because the ¹temple is not for man but for the LORD God. ²Now for the house of my God I have prepared with all my might: gold for things to be made of gold, silver for things of silver, bronze for things of bronze, iron for things of iron, wood for things of wood, ^conyx stones, stones to be set, glistening stones of various colors, all kinds of precious stones, and marble slabs in abundance. ³Moreover, because I have set my affection on the house of my God, I have given to the house of my God, over and above all that I have prepared for the holy house, my own special treasure of gold and silver: ⁴three thousand talents of gold, of the gold of ^dOphir, and seven thousand talents of refined silver, to overlay the walls of the houses; ⁵the gold for things of gold and the silver for things of silver, and for all kinds of work to be done by the 28:11 The plans for the temple, as v. 12 makes clear, were not from David’s own creative imagination but from the Spirit of God. vestibule: This was a porch in front of the temple (see 2 Chr. 3:4). treasuries: These, also called storehouses (26:15, 17), included “treasuries of the house of God” and “treasuries of the dedicated things” (26:20). upper chambers: Besides the main temple building, there were rooms of all kinds attached to it to accommodate the priests, the Levites, and all the equipment and items they needed to carry out the temple worship (see Neh. 13:4, 5). Some of these chambers were built high on the outside of the temple walls (1 Kin. 6:6, 8). the place of the mercy seat: This was the Most Holy Place, the inner room that housed the ark of the covenant, the cover of which was known as the mercy seat (Ex. 25:17). 28:12, 13 by the Spirit: Moses had received the plans for the tabernacle by direct revelation from God (Ex. 25:8, 9). David explained that he received the plans for the temple in the same way. David wanted it to be known that even the assignments he gave to the priests and the Levites (23:1—26:32) were revealed to him by God. 28:18 The chariot was a way of referring to the cherubim who hovered over the ark with outstretched wings, symbolizing the holiness of God. Cherubim appear in the story of the expulsion of man and woman from the Garden of Eden (Gen. 3:24) and as guardians of the “throne” of God in the tabernacle (Ex. 25:18–20) and temple (2 Chr. 3:10–13). They overshadowed the mercy seat of the ark of the covenant, enhancing its glory and protecting its holiness.

28:19 David asserted that all the works of these plans existed in written form from the hand of the Lord. David himself may have been the scribe, for he said that God’s hand was upon him in the production of the plans. The detailed precision of the temple plans (vv. 11–18) attests to the clarity of the revelation and to its faithful recording by David. 28:20 Be strong and of good courage: David’s charge to Solomon is very similar to the charge given to Joshua when Moses handed over the leadership of Israel to him. For Moses’ charge to Joshua, see Deut. 31:7, 8; for God’s charge to Joshua, see Josh. 1:6–9. 29:1 God Himself had chosen David out of all his brothers (28:4). Now He chose Solomon out of all of his brothers to succeed David on the throne (28:5). the work is great: Since the very plans and specifications had been revealed to David by God (28:19), David was fully aware of the significance of his charge to Solomon. God’s work could not be undertaken lightly. Solomon himself was aware of his limitations in this respect and of his need for supernatural direction (2 Chr. 1:10; 2:2–7). 29:3 Because David loved God, he loved the work of God. my own special treasure: As a testimony to his professed affection for the house of his God, David pledged generous gifts from his own resources. 29:5 This magnanimous gesture by David gave him the boldness to solicit a similar response from those under him. It is important to note that David asked the others to consecrate themselves, hands of craftsmen. Who then is ^ewilling to ²consecrate himself this day to the LORD?"

⁶Then ^fthe leaders of the fathers' houses, leaders of the tribes of Israel, the captains of thousands and of hundreds, with ^gthe officers over the king's work, ^hoffered willingly. ⁷They gave for the work of the house of God five thousand talents and ten thousand darics of gold, ten thousand talents of silver, eighteen thousand talents of bronze, and one hundred thousand talents of iron. ⁸And whoever had precious stones gave them to the treasury of the house of the LORD, into the hand of ⁱJehiel³ the Gershonite. ⁹Then the people rejoiced, for they had offered willingly, because with a loyal heart they had ^joffered willingly to the LORD; and King David also rejoiced greatly.

David's Praise to God

¹⁰Therefore David blessed the LORD before all the assembly; and David said:

not their treasures. David knew that those who first consecrated themselves to God would have no difficulty in being generous to the work of God.

29:7 five thousand talents: About 190 tons. ten thousand darics: About 185 pounds of gold. eighteen thousand talents of bronze: This was equivalent to about 675 tons. one hundred thousand talents of iron: This was approximately 3,750 tons.

29:8 These precious stones provided the adornments worn on the shoulders and breastplate of the high priest (Ex. 28:9–12, 17–21).

29:9 loyal heart: The Hebrew is literally "with a fullness of heart." This parallels the word willingly, and the two words together suggest that coercion played no part in the offering.

29:10 David blessed the LORD: Upon the completion of the offerings, David offered praise, using a song no doubt composed especially for this occasion (vv. 10–12), followed by a prayer of confession and petition.

29:11 The purpose of the temple was to exalt the LORD and to acknowledge the universality of His kingdom. David modeled before the people the worship of the living God. It typically starts with praise for God's eternity, His complete control over the universe, and His great power. He is the glorious Master over all (see Ps. 134:3).

29:12–14 David confessed that the riches and honor he enjoyed had come from God's generosity. The offerings he and his people had just made were possible only because God first had given to them. able to offer so willingly: Not only the ability to give, but the willingness to give, is a gift of God (see 2 Cor. 9:7, 8).

29:15 aliens and pilgrims: David asserts that life on earth is transitory and even nomadic. Only when a person becomes conscious of his or her place within the care and blessing of a sovereign God does life become more than a shadow. Suddenly the hope of a future with God illuminates that person's journey on this earth (see Heb. 11:13–16; 13:14).

29:17 If people truly can give nothing of value to God, why does He ask His people to give? David answers this question. God enjoys a person's uprightness or righteousness. With gifts, offerings, and sacrifices, a person tangibly demonstrates not only gratitude to God, but trust in Him (see 1 Sam. 15:22). A righteous life always produces a generous spirit. For this reason, David could proclaim that his giving was only out of the uprightness of his heart. Moreover, his joy was heightened all the more when he saw that his people also understood this principle of true giving.

29:18 This formula LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel was associated with God's covenantal promises to the Israelites (see Ex. 3:6, 15; 6:3, 4; Deut. 6:10). With this name of God, David was petitioning God to keep His people always in covenant fellowship with Himself.

29:19 In his prayer, David used the language of the covenant—commandments, testimonies, and statutes (see Deut. 6:1, 2, 20; 8:11; 11:1). Unlike v. 18, David uses this language not as much for the nation as a whole as for his son Solomon. God had already made a covenant with David (17:7–14) and promised to renew it with his descendants. As with giving (see v. 14), zeal for faithfulness to God's covenant must also come from God Himself (v. 14). Therefore, David prayed that God would give Solomon a loyal heart to be obedient. In Solomon's case, David's particular concern was that his son would keep his pledge to build the temple.

all these things, and to build the ⁷temple for which ^rI have made provision.”

²⁰Then David said to all the assembly, “Now bless the LORD your God.” So all the assembly blessed the LORD God of their fathers, and bowed their heads and prostrated themselves before the LORD and the king.

Solomon Anointed King

²¹And they made sacrifices to the LORD and offered burnt offerings to the LORD on the next day: a thousand bulls, a thousand rams, a thousand lambs, with their drink offerings, and ^ssacrifices in abundance for all Israel. ²²So they ate and drank before the LORD with great gladness on that day. And they made Solomon the son of David king the second time, and ^tanointed him before the LORD to be the leader, and Zadok to be priest. ²³Then Solomon sat on the throne of the LORD as king instead of David his father, and prospered; and all Israel obeyed him.

²⁴All the leaders and the mighty men, and also all the sons of King David, ^usubmitted ⁸ themselves to King Solomon. ²⁵So the LORD exalted Solomon exceedingly in the sight of all Israel, and ^vbestowed on him such royal majesty as had not been on any king before him in Israel.

The Close of David’s Reign

²⁶Thus David the son of Jesse reigned over all Israel. ²⁷^wAnd the period that he reigned over Israel was forty years; ^xseven years he reigned in Hebron, and thirty-three years he reigned in Jerusalem. ²⁸So he ^ydied in a good old age, ^zfull of days and riches and honor; and Solomon his son reigned in his place. ²⁹Now the acts of King David, first and last, indeed they are written in the ⁹book of Samuel the seer, in the book of Nathan the prophet, and in the book of Gad the seer, ³⁰with all his reign and his might, ^aand the events that happened to him, to Israel, and to all the kingdoms of the lands.

29:22 the second time: This unusual phrase can only refer to the ratification of Solomon’s kingship, not to its original establishment. David had appointed his son to be king at least two years earlier (see 23:1), an appointment that made Solomon a coregent rather than a true king, since he ruled alongside his father David. Zadok . . . priest: Zadok had remained loyal to David and Solomon. But Abiathar defected to Adonijah, David’s other son who attempted to overthrow Solomon’s succession (see 1 Kin. 1:1–8). 29:23 Once more the chronicler ties the kingship of David and that of God closely together. As God’s son (see 17:13), Solomon would sit on the throne as God’s representative. In that sense, the royal throne was also the throne of the LORD (see also v. 20). Eventually, Jesus as the Son of David and the Son of God would sit on that throne and reign forever (see Luke 1:32).

29:25 any king before him: Obviously this included only Saul and David, but it is still a remarkable statement in light of David’s widely recognized power and magnificence (11:9; 14:2; 18:1–13; 29:28). 29:28 In comparison to the patriarchs and even to such men as Eli and Samuel, David’s 70 years seem short. However, in his time this was a good old age. Moses used it as the standard for reasonable longevity (see Ps. 90:10). 29:29 Here the chronicler revealed three sources he used in writing, and the reader interested in more information about the acts of King David is referred to those books. This note shows that the author of Chronicles did not invent the account or depend on oral tradition. Instead the chronicler cited texts available in his day.

THE SECOND BOOK OF THE CHRONICLES

WHEN IT WAS FIRST WRITTEN, 2 Chronicles brought a ray of hope to a people desperately in need of encouragement. The Israelite community, reduced to a tiny minority in exile among the Babylonians, was struggling to understand its place. Had God's promises to Abraham and David been revoked because of the nation's sins? Was there any hope of reviving David's dynasty? Could Judaism survive without the temple? Second Chronicles addressed questions like these. Its answers came in a historical review of God's faithfulness to the Israelites. Although the nation had steadily declined over the centuries, God had always been faithful to those who remained true to Him. The good that God had done in the past would be the pattern for His future acts. God would keep His glorious promises to the Israelites.

Author and Composition First and 2 Chronicles were at first a single book (see Introduction to 1 Chronicles). The book itself does not state who wrote it, but the overall consistency of viewpoint and style indicates that it was probably the work of one person. Most commentators refer to this person as the "chronicler." One Jewish tradition identifies him as Ezra (c. 460–430 B.C.) because Chronicles and Ezra share common themes like extensive lists, the Levites, and the temple.

The chronicler had access to many official documents, which he often mentions by name. These include (1) the book of the kings of Israel and Judah (27:7; 35:27; 36:8); (2) the book of the kings of Judah and Israel (16:11; 25:26; 28:26; 32:32); (3) the book of the kings of Israel (20:34; 33:18); (4) the annals (commentary) of the book of the kings (24:27); (5) the book of Nathan, the prophecy of Ahijah, and the visions of Iddo (9:29); (6) the history of Shemaiah (12:15); (7) the annals of Iddo (13:22); (8) the writings of the prophet Isaiah (26:22); (9) the sayings of Hozai (33:19); and (10) the Laments (35:25). The chronicler also cites the canonical books of 1 and 2 Kings.

Purpose The details of the history of Israel and Judah in 2 Chronicles communicate the great message of redemption—particularly God's blessing on David and his successors. First Chronicles focuses on the Davidic covenant during David's time, and 2 Chronicles continues that theme in the period after David's death. Even though 2 Chronicles relates the experiences of Solomon and his successors, it continues to emphasize God's promise of an everlasting dynasty to David. Successors to David came and went. Some were true to the requirements of that covenant—they "walked in the former ways of [their] father David" (17:3)—and others were not. But God's commitment to the household of David continued throughout, even after the exile to Babylon.

Because of this emphasis on covenant, 2 Chronicles makes frequent mention of priests, Levites, the temple, and other elements of Israel's religious life. It tells how Solomon's temple was built and furnished (2:1—8:16) and includes a thorough description of the temple and its ministry (20:5–13, 24–30; 23:12–21; 24:4–14; 29:3—31:21; 34:3—35:19).

The centrality of the Davidic covenant also explains why 2 Chronicles devotes more attention to Judah than to Israel. Ever since the division into southern and northern kingdoms (10:16–19; see 1 Kin. 11:9–13), Judah had become the inheritors of God's promises to David. Though David's successors ruled only the smaller kingdom of Tablet of Asherah, a Canaanite goddess. King Asa of Judah commanded that figurines, as well as foreign altars, high places, and sacred stones be destroyed (2 Chr. 14:3–5).

Judah, God had remained faithful to His unconditional covenant with David. Judah was the nucleus through which God would accomplish His work of redemption.

CHRIST IN THE SCRIPTURES

The temple in 2 Chronicles is spotlighted in chapters 2 and 7. It suggests the incarnation of Jesus. Although the temple is built to be God's dwelling place on earth, Solomon realizes that no manmade building can house the God of the universe: "But will God indeed dwell with men on the earth?" (6:18). This verse touches on the truth—Solomon knows that God could willingly dwell in the temple, but beyond that He would come in a much more glorious way. Solomon's words anticipate Jesus' arrival as Immanuel, "God with us" (Matt. 1:23). As beautiful as the temple is, when Jesus later walks inside its walls, He says of Himself, "In this place there is One greater than the temple" (Matt. 12:6). Jesus also likens His body to the temple (John 2:19). In fact, according to the Book of Revelation, at the end of time Jesus, the Lamb of God, will replace the need for an earthly temple (Rev. 21:22).

Solomon Requests Wisdom

Now ^aSolomon the son of David was strengthened in his kingdom, and ^bthe LORD his God was with him and ^cexalted him exceedingly.

²And Solomon spoke to all Israel, to ^dthe captains of thousands and of hundreds, to the judges, and to every leader in all Israel, the heads of the fathers' houses. ³Then Solomon, and all the assembly with him, went to ¹the high place that was at ^eGibeon; for the tabernacle of meeting with God was there, which Moses the servant of the LORD had ^fmade in the wilderness. ⁴But David had brought up the ark of God from Kirjath Jearim to the place David had prepared for it, for he had pitched a tent for it at Jerusalem. ⁵Now ^hthe bronze altar that ⁱBezalel the son of Uri, the son of Hur, had made, ²he put before the tabernacle of the LORD; Solomon and the assembly sought Him there. ⁶And Solomon went up there to the bronze altar before the LORD, which was at the tabernacle of meeting, and ^joffered a thousand burnt offerings on it.

⁷^kOn that night God appeared to Solomon, and said to him, "Ask! What shall I give you?"

⁸And Solomon said to God: "You have shown great ^lmercy to David my father, and have made me ^mking in his place. ⁹Now, O LORD God, let Your promise to David my father be established, ⁿfor You have made me king over a people like the ^odust of the earth in multitude. ¹⁰^pNow give me wisdom and knowledge, that I may ^qgo out and come in before this people; for who can judge this great people of Yours?"

¹¹^rThen God said to Solomon: "Because this was in your heart, and you have not asked riches or wealth or honor or the life of your enemies, nor have you asked long life—but have asked wisdom and knowledge for yourself, that you may judge My people over whom I have made you king—¹²wisdom and knowledge are granted to you; and I will give you riches and wealth and honor, such as ^snone of the kings have had who were before you, nor shall any after you have the like."

Solomon's Military and Economic Power

¹³So Solomon came to Jerusalem from ³the high place that was at Gibeon, from before the tabernacle of meeting, and reigned over Israel. ¹⁴^tAnd Solomon gathered chariots and horsemen; he had one thousand four hundred chariots and twelve thousand horsemen, whom he stationed in the chariot cities and with the king in Jerusalem. ¹⁵^uAlso the king made silver and gold as common in Jerusalem as stones, and he made cedars as abundant as the sycamores which are in the lowland. ¹⁶^vAnd Solomon had horses imported from Egypt and Keveh; the king's merchants bought them in Keveh at the current price. ¹⁷They also acquired and imported from Egypt a chariot for

1:1 exalted him exceedingly: The repetition here of the wording from 1 Chr. 29:25 shows how 1 and 2 Chronicles were originally one book, even though it is customary to print the two parts separately.

1:3 The term high place comes from the fact that many ancient worshippers used hills for their sacred rites, thinking that such places were good "meeting points" between heaven and earth. Over time, high place came to mean any worship center, whether it was on a hill or not. In the OT, the high places were usually associated with pagan, particularly Canaanite, religion, but there was nothing inherently evil about using a hilltop as a place of worship. Thus the patriarchs (Gen. 12:8; 22:2) and other worshippers of God offered their sacrifices on high places (1 Sam. 9:12; 1 Kin. 18:19, 36-38). The high place at Gibeon was the location of the Mosaic tabernacle after Saul destroyed Nob (1 Sam. 22:19). It seems that the Israelites moved the tabernacle to Nob after they had stopped using Shiloh as the religious center of Israel (1 Sam. 4:21, 22; Jer. 7:12). The tabernacle remained in Gibeon together with the great bronze altar throughout David's reign.

1:5 Bezalel was one of the two men chosen especially by God to build the tabernacle in the wilderness (Ex. 31:1-11). Aholiab was the other. The text here mentions Bezalel alone apparently because he was the master craftsman, while Aholiab was his assistant. the assembly sought Him there: This phrase is important because Solomon and the people, as a congregation, usually worshiped God at Gibeon.

1:6 went up: Solomon's worship at Gibeon affirmed the covenant that bound God and the Davidic dynasty together (1 Chr. 17:7-14) and showed that Solomon accepted the religious responsibilities of his office (v. 3).

1:9 Solomon knew about the Abrahamic covenant and God's promise to make Abraham's descendants like the dust of the earth (Gen. 13:16). Solomon believed that the promise had come to pass, and he was confident that God would fulfill His promise to David as well. This meant that he saw his own succession (1 Chr. 17:11) and the building of the temple as fulfillment of God's promises (1 Chr. 17:12, 13).

1:10 go out and come in: This figure of speech refers to the totality of Solomon's life. As king he would lead by example as well as by edict.

1:11, 12 Solomon's request for wisdom centered on God's people and how he could best serve them, not on his own gain. Once Solomon had demonstrated this spirit of servanthood, God granted many unsolicited blessings.

1:14 Solomon located his chariots in other cities besides Jerusalem, possibly in Hazor, Megiddo, and Gezer (1 Kin. 9:15, 19). The 1,400 chariots and twelve thousand horsemen here compare to four thousand stalls for horses and chariots and twelve thousand horsemen in 9:25. A chariot force of 1,400 units was a significant achievement for Israel, a nation located primarily in hilly terrain where chariots were of limited value.

1:16 Keveh was probably an ancient name for what later came to be known as Cilicia. This city was on the northeast Mediterranean coast, a region famous for horses. The horses imported from Egypt were larger horses bred in Nubia and used mainly for pulling chariots.

1:17 six hundred shekels of silver: It is often impossible to assign a price in a modern currency to the goods and services of the ancient world. But this verse suggests that a chariot cost as much as six hundred shekels of silver, and a horse for one hundred and fifty; thus, ⁴through their agents, they exported them to all the kings of the Hittites and the kings of Syria.

Solomon Prepares to Build the Temple

2 Then Solomon ^adetermined to build a temple for the name of the LORD, and a royal house for himself. ^{2b}Solomon selected seventy thousand men to bear burdens, eighty thousand to quarry stone in the mountains, and three thousand six hundred to oversee them.

³Then Solomon sent to ¹Hiram king of Tyre, saying:

“As you have dealt with David my father, and sent him cedars to build himself a house to dwell in, so deal with me. ⁴Behold, ^dI am building a temple for the name of the LORD my God, to dedicate it to Him, ^eto burn before Him ²sweet incense, for ^fthe continual showbread, for ^gthe burnt offerings morning and evening, on the ^hSabbaths, on the New Moons, and on the ³set feasts of the LORD our God. This is an ordinance forever to Israel.

⁵ And the temple which I build will be great, for ⁱour God is greater than all gods. ^{6j}But who is able to build Him a temple, since heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain Him? Who am I then, that I should build Him a temple, except to burn sacrifice before Him?

four horses. they exported them: Solomon had a thriving business in horses and chariots. Because Israel was on the route between Asia and Africa, such goods would go through Israel and become subject to Solomon's heavy import and export taxes. Hittites were the peoples of the ancient nation of Hatti in central Asia Minor. They reached the height of their power at about 1350–1300 B.C., but were nearly exterminated by the Sea Peoples in about 1200 B.C. There were pockets of Hittites in Solomon's day, mainly north of Israel among the Syrians.

2:1 a royal house for himself: It was customary for a new king to build a palace as a physical and visible sign of his newly won sovereignty, though this usually was done right after a military conquest (see 1 Chr. 14:1, 2).

2:3 Hiram king of Tyre was the same Phoenician ruler who had provided men and materials for David's palace (1 Chr. 14:1).

2:5 Solomon's statement that our God is greater than all gods means that God is the only true God, not that He is the greatest one among many lesser ones. All pagan "gods" are actually imaginary.

2:6 Solomon could not build a dwelling place for God because God could never be contained within any physical structure. The temple provided a place for God's people to go and offer sacrifices of worship to the Lord.

2:7, 8 The skillful men . . . with me refers to the ones David had already selected and organized for the purpose of building the temple (1 Chr. 22:15, 16). The chronicler emphasized David's intense interest in the temple and the elaborate steps he took to prepare for its building (1 Chr. 22:1–19). Algum logs probably refers to a kind of exotic tree imported from Ophir—south Arabia, perhaps Yemen.

2:10 The amount of ground wheat here is about 125,000 bushels or 3,750 tons. Twenty thousand baths is approximately 115,000 gallons.

2:12 Blessed be the LORD God of Israel: Most likely a polite salutation to Solomon rather than a sincere recognition of God as the one true God. a wise son: It is clear from his letter that Hiram knew a great deal about Solomon, including: (1) the background of Solomon's request for materials and workmen, (2) Solomon's selection by God to be king (v. 11), (3) Solomon's unusual wisdom, and (4) Solomon's call to build the temple. Apparently Hiram, David, and Solomon maintained close contact.

2:14 Hiram had an Israelite mother and a Phoenician father. Moses

Solomon Builds the Temple

3 Now ^aSolomon began to build the house of the LORD at ^bJerusalem on Mount Moriah, where ¹*the LORD* had appeared to his father David, at the place that David had prepared on the threshing floor of ^cOrnan² the Jebusite.

had warned the Israelites not to take spouses committed to pagan religions (Deut. 7:1–5).

2:16 Joppa, now known as Jaffa, was the only seaport on the Israelite Mediterranean coast between Dor on the north and Philistia to the south. Jonah sailed from Joppa to escape God’s call to Nineveh (Jon. 1:3). Though Hiram’s rafts helped transport the timber from Lebanon to Israel, the route from Joppa to Jerusalem was not so easy—it was a winding, steep ascent of nearly 40 miles.

2:17 Solomon’s policy of forced labor drafted aliens first into the hard work of carrying loads and quarrying stone (v. 18). The term suggests any persons living in Israel who were not native Israelites.

The census refers to David’s ill-advised count in the closing years of his reign (1 Chr. 21:1–5).

3:1 Mount Moriah was sacred and therefore an appropriate place for the temple not only because the threshing floor of Ornan was there (see 1 Chr. 21:18–30), but also because it was the “land of Moriah” to which Abraham took Isaac for sacrifice (Gen. 22:2). David had received explicit instructions from the Lord that the very site that he had purchased from Ornan, and where he had already built an altar, should be the location of the future temple (1 Chr. 21:18, 26). Mount Moriah is known today as the temple mount and the site of the Muslim Dome of the Rock. It is

Solomon’s Temple

Solomon’s temple was the first of three temples that Israel built in its long history. David wanted to build it, but as a man of war he was unqualified to build such a holy place. So with the plans that God gave David and David passed on to him, King Solomon built the house of God. As God had instructed, Solomon built it on Mount Moriah just north of the ancient City of David.

Solomon wanted to build a temple worthy of being the center of worship for the entire nation, so he used only the best craftsmen and materials. The materials included cedar and alnum logs, gold and silver, cut stone, and fine linen. Most of the temple’s beams, posts, walls, and doors were overlaid with gold, decorated with carvings of palm trees, garlands, and cherubim. The Most Holy Place alone was overlaid with 23 tons of fine gold. In this room two giant gold cherubim, with seven-and-a-half-foot wings overshadowed the ark of the covenant. A veil of crimson and fine linen separated the Most Holy Place from the holy place. The temple’s furnishings included ten lampstands of gold, ten tables, and one hundred bowls of gold. Only the most skilled craftsmen worked on these details. The temple was 60 cubits long and 20 cubits wide or 90 by 30 feet.

It took seven years for Solomon’s workers to complete this grand building, and the finished structure dazzled all who saw it. Yet for all its beauty, Solomon knew that no manmade building could contain God, as heaven itself could not contain Him (6:18). The temple served mainly as a reminder of God’s covenant. To all who came and worshiped there, God held out His promised presence.

However, the temple was no guarantee of that presence. God had promised to live among the Israelites forever, and the temple was God’s so-called “dwelling place,” but for the Holy God to live among His people they had to remain faithful to Him. Unfortunately they did not remain faithful, and consequently the temple was looted and destroyed as were the second and third temples after it.

BIBLE TIMES & CULTURE NOTES

The Color Purple

Since dyes were made from vegetable sources or from shellfish, quality control was difficult. The completed colors were often impure and inexact. These problems were compounded by the fact that many dyes were closely guarded family recipes that were sometimes lost or changed. The most precious of ancient dyes was purple. In Ugarit, a city of the Canaanites, wool was often dyed this color. Phoenicia derived its name from the source of the dye. The word “Canaan” probably means “land of purple.” The dye itself was derived from the murex shellfish found in the Mediterranean Sea. Approximately 250,000 mollusks were required to make one ounce of the dye, which partly accounts for its great price. It was highly valued within the nation of Israel. The Lord prescribed the use of purple in several features of the tabernacle, such as the curtains (Ex. 26:1) and the screens (Ex. 27:16). It was also an essential part of the temple (2 Chr. 2:14).

a hill directly north of Mt. Zion, the location of David’s tabernacle (1 Chr. 15:1).

3:2 The second day of the second month fell in April of the modern calendar. Making arrangements for the building, amassing building materials, and clearing the site could easily have required four years.

3:3 The Israelites had two standard cubits, one about 17.4 inches long and the other about 20.4 inches. Probably the former measure mentioned here was the 17.4-inch cubit, making the temple foundation about 90 feet long and 30 feet wide. The Mosaic tabernacle was 45 feet long and 15 feet wide (Ex. 26:15–37).

3:5 The larger room was the holy place or “sanctuary” (1 Kin. 6:17).

3:8 The Most Holy Place was the inner sanctuary, where the ark of the covenant (1 Kin. 6:19) was kept. This room was cubical in shape, twenty cubits (30 ft.) on a side (see 1 Kin. 6:20 for the height). Six hundred talents is approximately 23 tons of gold.

3:9 Gold by itself is too soft to use for nails, so the nails mentioned here must have been decorative or else some other metal plated with gold. The weight fifty shekels (about 1.2 lbs.) implies that they were plated nails.

3:10 The cherubim that Solomon had fashioned for the Most Holy Place were not the ones carved into the walls of the holy place (see v. 7), but additional ones carved and plated with gold here in the Most Holy Place.

3:11–13 The cherubim stood side by side with outstretched wings touching in the middle and overshadowing the ark. Since each wing was five cubits long and the room was 20 cubits across, the cherubim’s wings spanned the entire width of the room. Facing inward meant that the cherubim were facing the veil and the holy place.

3:14 The veil was a heavy curtain between the holy place and the Most Holy Place. It shielded the ark and cherubim from view (see 5:9). Cherubim were woven into the fabric of the veil. The materials and colors used here—blue, purple, crimson, and fine linen—are the same as those of the veil of the tabernacle.

3:15 The two pillars in front were free-standing and did not support any part of the temple. Thirty-five cubits was about 53 feet, and with the capital that was . . . five cubits, the pillars were about 60 feet tall.

4 Moreover he made ^aa bronze altar: twenty cubits was its length, twenty cubits its width, and ten cubits its height.

^{2b}Then he made the ¹Sea of cast bronze, ten cubits from one brim to the other; it was completely round. Its height was five cubits, and a line of thirty cubits measured its circumference. ^{3c}And under it was the likeness of oxen encircling it all around, ten to a cubit, all the way around the Sea. The oxen were cast in two rows, when it was cast. ⁴It stood on twelve ^doxen: three looking toward the north, three looking toward the west, three looking toward the south, and three looking toward the east; the Sea was set upon them, and all their back parts pointed inward. ⁵*It was* a handbreadth thick; and its brim was shaped like the brim of a cup, like a lily blossom. It contained ²three thousand baths.

wash in them; such things as they offered for the burnt offering they would wash in them, but the ³Sea was for the ^fpriests to wash in. ^{7g}And he made ten lampstands of gold ^haccording to their design, and set them in the temple, five on the right side and five on the left. ⁸ⁱHe also made ten tables, and placed them in the temple, five on the right side and five on the left. And he made one hundred ^jbowls of gold.

⁹Furthermore ^khe made the court of the priests, and the ^lgreat court and doors for the court; and he overlaid these doors with bronze. ^{10m}He set the Sea on the right side, toward the southeast.

¹¹Then ⁿHuram made the pots and the shovels and the bowls. So Huram finished doing the work that he was to do for King Solomon for the house of God: ¹²the two pillars and ^othe bowl-shaped capitals that were on top of the two pillars; the two networks covering the two bowl-shaped capitals which were on top of the pillars; ^{13p}four hundred pomegranates for the two networks (two rows of pomegranates for each network, to cover the two bowl-shaped capitals that were on the pillars); ¹⁴he also made ^qcarts and the lavers on the carts; ¹⁵one Sea and twelve oxen under it; ¹⁶also the pots, the shovels, the forks—and all their articles ^rHuram his ⁴master craftsman made of burnished bronze for King Solomon for the house of the LORD.

¹⁷In the plain of Jordan the king had

3:16 As in v. 5, chainwork appears to be a network of fruits and plants, as the presence of pomegranates indicates. First Kings expands the description (1 Kin. 7:17–20). There were seven wreaths of chainwork on each capital and two rows of pomegranates above the wreaths. The capitals seem to have been in the form of lilies four cubits high with a one-cubit width band at their base. The wreaths and strands of pomegranates were intertwined around the base. The one hundred pomegranates were one of four strands, two to each pillar, or 400 pomegranates in all.

3:17 The names Jachin and Boaz mean “He Establishes” and “In Him Is Strength.” Thus the two pillars were constant reminders of the presence and power of God.

4:1 The bronze altar was for burnt offerings in the courtyard of the temple.

4:2 The Sea was a receptacle for water corresponding to the much smaller bronze laver of the Mosaic tabernacle (Ex. 30:17–21). That laver provided water for the priests to wash their hands and feet in preparation for ministering at the altar. The Sea served the same purpose (see v. 6). It was huge—15 feet in diameter and 45 feet in circumference.

4:3 The oxen stood for strength and fertility. Other Bible passages use the ox’s horn to signify this (see 1 Sam. 2:10).

4:4 The twelve oxen were in addition to the ones engraved on the outside of the Sea, and like them they symbolized strength and productivity. Their number corresponds to the twelve tribes of Israel.

4:5 The Sea was very heavy even when empty. When filled with three thousand baths (about 27,000 gallons) of water, it would have weighed about 110 tons more.

4:6 The ten lavers were arranged in two rows of five, on the north and south sides of the Sea. According to 1 Kin. 7:38, each held 40 baths or about 230 gallons. They could accommodate large animals such as oxen. The law of the burnt offering required that certain parts of the animal be washed in water before being placed on the altar (see Lev. 1:9, 13).

4:7 Whereas the wilderness tabernacle had only one lampstand, this temple had ten (see Ex. 25:31), five on the north side of the holy place and five on the south. They probably had the same form as the one in the tabernacle—a central stand with three branches extending from each side, making a total of seven lamps per unit (see Ex. 25:32, 37). They symbolized the light of God’s creation (Gen. 1:3–5) and the fact that God Himself is light (see John 8:12).

4:8 There had been only one table in the tabernacle (Ex. 25:23), but the temple had ten. They held the loaves of showbread (Ex. 25:30). Bowls of gold: The word for bowls here is derived from the Hebrew verb meaning “to sprinkle.” The priests used the bowls to hold liquids that were sprinkled.

4:9 There were areas in and about the temple that only the priests could enter. One of these was the area immediately surrounding it and enclosed by a separating wall, the court of the priests. The great court was an outer area where the people in general could go.

4:10 The Sea was placed to one side of the entrance to the temple, to the southeast. The temple faced east.

4:14 Carts were mobile stands designed as bases for the ten lavers referred to in v. 6. They were four cubits on a side and three cubits high, had four bronze wheels, and were covered on the sides by richly decorated panels (1 Kin. 7:27–37).

4:17 Many bronze products were made at a place in the Jordan valley about 35 miles north of the Dead Sea. Archaeologists have uncovered evidence of this work in an area where the clay is suitable for bronze casting.

them cast in clay molds, between Succoth and ⁵Zeredah. ¹⁸s And Solomon had all these articles made in such great abundance that the weight of the bronze was not determined.

¹⁹Thus ^aSolomon had all the furnishings made for the house of God: the altar of gold and the tables on which was ^uthe showbread; ²⁰the lampstands with their lamps of pure gold, to burn ^vin the prescribed manner in front of the inner sanctuary, ²¹with ^wthe flowers and the lamps and the wick-trimmers of gold, of purest gold; ²²the trimmers, the bowls, the ladles, and the censers of pure gold. As for the entry of the ⁶sanctuary, its inner doors to the Most Holy Place, and the doors of the main hall of the temple, were gold.

⁵So ^aall the work that Solomon had done for the house of the LORD was finished; and Solomon brought in the things which his father David had dedicated: the silver and the gold and all the furnishings. And he put them in the treasuries of the house of God.

The Ark Brought into the Temple

^{2b}Now Solomon assembled the elders of Israel and all the heads of the tribes, the chief fathers of the children of Israel, in Jerusalem, that they might bring the ark of the covenant of the LORD up ^cfrom the City of David, which is Zion. ^{3d}Therefore all the men of Israel assembled with the king ^eat the feast, which was in the seventh month. ⁴So all the elders of Israel came, and the ^fLevites took up the ark. ⁵Then they brought up the ark, the tabernacle of meeting, and all the holy furnishings that were in the tabernacle. The priests and the Levites brought them up. ⁶Also King Solomon, and all the congregation of Israel who were assembled with him before the ark, were sacrificing sheep and oxen that could not be counted or numbered for multitude. ⁷Then the priests brought in the ark of the covenant of the LORD to its place, into the ⁸inner sanctuary of the ¹temple, to the Most Holy Place, under the wings of the cherubim. ⁸For the cherubim spread their wings over the place of the ark, and the cherubim overshadowed the ark and its poles. ⁹The poles extended so that the ends of the ^hpoles of the ark could be seen from the holy place, in front of the inner sanctuary; but they could not be seen from outside. And ²they are there to this day. ¹⁰Nothing was in the ark except the two tablets which Moses ⁱput there at Horeb, ³when the LORD made a covenant with the children of Israel, when they had come out of Egypt.

¹¹And it came to pass when the priests came out of the Most Holy Place (for all the priests who were present had ⁴sanctified themselves, without keeping to their ^jdivisions), ^{12k}and the Levites who were the singers, all those of Asaph and Heman and Jeduthun, with their sons and their brethren, stood at the east end of the altar, clothed in white linen, having cymbals, stringed instruments and harps, ^land with them one hundred and twenty priests sounding with trumpets—¹³indeed it came to pass, when the trumpeters and singers were as one, to make

4:19 This is the first mention of the altar of gold in Chronicles (see Ex. 30:1-10; 1 Kin. 7:48). This altar was used for offering incense. It was in the holy place just in front of the veil (see 3:14).
4:22 inner doors: The tabernacle had only a veil between the holy place, here called the sanctuary, and the Most Holy Place (Ex. 26:31-33). Solomon's temple had a set of doors there as well.
5:1 The treasures of the house of God listed here were dedicated by David in the sense that he had allotted them to the building and maintenance of the temple (see 1 Chr. 18:7, 8; 29:3-5). Solomon put them in the regular temple treasures.
5:2 Though David had built a tabernacle on Mt. Zion to house the ark (1 Chr. 15:1), it was still separate from the original tabernacle at Gibeon and thus was not yet in a permanent location. Completing Solomon's temple made it possible at last to place the ark in its proper setting.
5:3 Since this was in the seventh month (that is, Ethanim or Tishri; 1 Kin. 8:2), the feast was Tabernacles. This feast was an appropriate occasion for moving the ark to a permanent location, because the Feast of Tabernacles commemorated Israel's wandering in the wilderness, when the ark had no permanent place (Lev. 23:39-43).
5:5 The term tabernacle of meeting refers to the Mosaic tabernacle. Solomon ended worship at the high place at Gibeon by dismantling the Mosaic tabernacle located there (see 1:3) and by bringing it and all its furnishings to Jerusalem.
5:6 Like David before him, Solomon, a priestly king, exercised the privileges of his office by offering sacrifices (see 1 Chr. 16:1-3).

5:8 According to Moses' instructions (Ex. 25:12-15; Num. 4:6), the ark had rings attached to each corner, through which poles were inserted to carry it. These poles were about 20 cubits (30 feet) long, since those who ministered in the holy place could see them at either end of the veil (v. 9).
5:9 to this day: This statement would be charged with emotion for any Israelite who lived through the Babylonian Exile years later, when Nebuchadnezzar's army destroyed Solomon's temple and carried away many of its furnishings.
5:11 On this day of inaugurating the temple all the priests participated in the services regardless of their priestly divisions. From then on they would serve in rotation according to their division (see 1 Chr. 24:1-19). The Most Holy Place was normally restricted to the high priest only (Lev. 16:15; Heb. 9:7); on this occasion the regular priests had entered it to bring in the ark (v. 7).
5:12 Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun were the heads of the divisions of Levitical musicians (see 1 Chr. 6:33, 39, 44; 15:17; 16:37, 42; 25:1). The east end of the altar was between the east gate of the inner court and the great bronze altar. Altogether there were far more than one hundred and twenty priests; the ones numbered here were probably a select group of instrumentalists.
5:13 As v. 14 suggests, the cloud was a manifestation of God's glory. In a sense, the cloud both revealed and concealed the glory of God, which is too awesome for human eyes to see (see Ex. 19:16, 18; 20:18, 21; 24:16-18; 33:9, 10, 22; 40:34-38).

m“For He is good,
For His mercy endures forever,”

that the house, the house of the LORD, was filled with a cloud, ¹⁴so that the priests could not ⁵continue ministering because of the cloud; ⁿfor the glory of the LORD filled the house of God.

6 Then ^aSolomon spoke:

“The LORD said He would dwell in the ^bdark cloud.

² I have surely built You an exalted house,
And ^ca place for You to dwell in forever.”

Solomon's Speech upon Completion of the Work

³Then the king turned around and ^dblessed the whole assembly of Israel, while all the assembly of Israel was standing. ⁴And he said: “Blessed be the LORD God of Israel, who has fulfilled with His hands what He spoke with His mouth to my father David, ^esaying, ⁵‘Since the day that I brought My people out of the land of Egypt, I have chosen no city from any tribe of Israel in which to build a house,

Solomon's Prayer of Dedication

^{12l}Then ²Solomon stood before the altar of the LORD in the presence of all the assembly of Israel, and spread out his hands ¹³(for Solomon had made a bronze platform five cubits long, five cubits wide, and three cubits high, and had set it in the midst of the court; and he stood on it, knelt down on his knees before all the assembly of Israel, and spread out his hands toward heaven); ¹⁴and he said:

6:1, 2 The dark cloud which had represented the glory of God now filled the temple (5:14). This was in line with God's own promise to David when He said, in response to David's decision to build a temple, that He had lived in a portable tabernacle (1 Chr. 17:5). Although David's son built a temple for God, the time would come when God would build David an eternal house or dynasty. With David's permanent dynasty would come God's permanent relationship with His people (1 Chr. 17:7-14). Thus Solomon built the “house” in which God could live among them.

6:4 fulfilled with His hands: A direct reference to the covenant that God had made with David, when He promised him an everlasting house (see 1 Chr. 17:11, 12). Solomon, as David's chosen heir, had lived to see God's words of promise come true. God had made Solomon king and built the temple. Solomon may have hired Phoenician craftsmen, but he knew that the project's success lay with God, and that “His hands” really had done the work.

6:6 I have chosen Jerusalem: This refers not so much to Jerusalem as a political capital, as it was for David and Solomon (1 Chr. 11:4-8), but as a place for God's name. This emphasis is unmistakable in the narrative about Ornan's threshing floor (see 1 Chr. 21:18—22:1). Only Jerusalem would be acceptable as a place for God's earthly dwelling. I have chosen David: In His grace God chose David long before David actually took the throne, as Samuel's anointing of him in his youth made clear (1 Sam. 16:1, 12, 13).

6:11 The covenant of the LORD refers to the stone tablets of the Ten Commandments (see 5:10).

6:13 The bronze platform was not a regular feature of the temple but a stage constructed for Solomon's speech, so the assembly outside the walls of the courtyard could see him. It was seven and a half feet square and four and a half feet high.

6:14 no God . . . like You: God is different from all other “gods.” He alone made and kept a covenant with His people, something unheard of in the religious traditions of the nations. Solomon's acclamation makes sense to every child of God who reflects on God's faithfulness. covenant and mercy: The word for mercy here assembly

(Heb. qahal) (6:3; Deut. 18:16; Judg. 20:2) Strong's #6951

The Hebrew term denotes a gathering of people for any type of occasion. It is used in a secular sense to designate civil meetings, war councils, a gathering of evildoers, and even an assembly of the dead (1 Sam. 17:47; 1 Kin. 12:3; Ps. 26:5; Prov. 21:16). But the word is also used to speak of the gathering of individuals for religious purposes, such as the receiving of the Mosaic Law and the celebration of religious festivals before the Lord (30:23; Deut. 5:22). Sometimes the term applies to groups of men only—most frequently with assemblies for war, but once, apparently, for those gathered to hear Joshua's reading of the Law (Josh. 8:35). During the time of Ezra, women, children, and even servants were specifically included in one religious assembly (Ezra 2:64, 65; 10:1). The expression “assembly of the LORD” occurs several times in the OT to indicate a gathering of God's people for religious or secular purposes—including once to grumble against Moses (Num. 20:4; Deut. 23:1-3; 1 Chr. 28:8; Neh. 13:1).

"LORD God of Israel, ^mthere is no God in heaven or on earth like You, who keep Your ⁿcovenant and mercy with Your servants who walk before You with all their hearts. ^{15o}You have kept what You promised Your servant David my father; You have both spoken with Your mouth and fulfilled it with Your hand, as it is this day. ¹⁶Therefore, LORD God of Israel, now keep what You promised Your servant David my father, saying, ^p"You shall not fail to have a man sit before Me on the throne of Israel, ^qonly if your sons take heed to their way, that they walk in My law as you have walked before Me." ¹⁷And now, O LORD God of Israel, let Your word come true, which You have spoken to Your servant David.

¹⁸"But will God indeed dwell with men on the earth? ^rBehold, heaven and the heaven of heavens cannot contain You. How much less this ³temple which I have built! ¹⁹Yet regard the prayer of Your servant and his supplication, O LORD my God, and listen to the cry and the prayer which Your servant is praying before You: ²⁰that Your eyes may be ^sopen toward this temple day and night, toward the place where You said You would put Your name, that You may hear the prayer which Your servant makes ^ttoward this place. ²¹And may You hear the supplications of Your servant and of Your people Israel, when they pray toward this place. Hear from heaven Your dwelling place, and when You hear, ^uforgive.

connotes loyalty; it means that God is faithful to His servants—to those who walk before Him with all their hearts.

6:16 Solomon's very position as king attested to God's having fulfilled His promise (see v. 10). But portions of God's promise depended on God's people obeying God's law. Only if David's sons took heed to their way would they enjoy the full benefits of God's favor. So Solomon prayed that his people would stay faithful. God would be faithful to them—would they be faithful to Him? No matter what their choice, however, God would carry out his ultimate plan to send the Messiah (see Ps. 89:30–37).

6:18 will God . . . dwell with men: God is altogether separate from humanity (2:6), but He accommodates Himself to the low position of human beings in order to fellowship with them (see Gen. 2:8; 11:5; 18:1, 2; Ex. 23:20–26). He did this in an ultimate sense in the incarnation of Jesus Christ (John 1:14).

6:21 The temple was God's dwelling place in the sense that it gave God's people a place to pray to the living God. Yet God could not be contained within the four walls of a building (see v. 18).

6:22 comes and takes an oath: A reference to legal oaths in which people swore their innocence before God (see Ex. 22:8–11; Deut.

17:8, 9). Such oaths had to be sworn in the temple and before the altar, symbolic of God's presence among His people.

6:23 Solomon's request that God hear from heaven underscored God's transcendence. Although God had chosen to be present on earth at the temple, He also transcended the temple building.

6:25 bring them back: A hint of the future captivity and deportation of God's disobedient people (Deut. 28:29, 30). When the Exile to Babylon became a reality, the temple was destroyed and no one could pray at that place as before. But even in those days, God's people directed their prayer toward Jerusalem. This is what Daniel did (see Dan. 6:10).

6:29 Israel was a community and could pray together as a nation. But each member was also responsible for his or her own sin (Ezek. 18:1–4) and each needed to seek God's forgiveness. Prayer toward the temple could be national or individual.

6:32, 33 God made His covenant exclusively with Israel, the nation descended from Abraham, but He did so for the purpose of attracting the nations to Himself, the Creator of all people. A foreigner who embraced the Lord as God would be numbered among God's people.

Solomon Dedicates the Temple

7 When ^aSolomon had finished praying, ^bfire came down from heaven and consumed the burnt offering and the sacrifices; and ^cthe glory of the LORD filled the ¹temple. ²^dAnd the priests could not enter the house of the LORD, because the glory of the LORD had filled the LORD’s house. ³When all the children of Israel saw how the fire came down, and the glory of the LORD on the temple, they bowed their faces to the ground on the pavement, and worshiped and praised the LORD, saying:

“For He is good,
¹For His mercy endures forever.”

⁴^gThen the king and all the people offered sacrifices before the LORD. ⁵King Solomon offered a sacrifice of twenty-two thousand bulls and one hundred and twenty thousand sheep. So the king and all the people dedicated the house of God. ⁶^hAnd the priests attended to their services; the Levites also with instruments of the music of the LORD, which King David had made to praise the LORD, saying, “For His mercy endures forever,” whenever David offered praise by their ²ministry. ⁱThe priests sounded trumpets opposite them, while all Israel stood.

⁷Furthermore ^jSolomon consecrated the middle of the court that was in front of the house of the LORD; for there he offered burnt offerings and the fat of the peace offerings, because the bronze altar which Solomon had made was not able to receive the burnt offerings, the grain offerings, and the fat.

⁸^kAt that time Solomon kept the feast seven days, and all Israel with him, a very great assembly ^lfrom the entrance of 6:36 there is no one who does not sin: This statement is repeated in the NT (see Rom. 3:23; 1 John 1:8–10). All people sin and are guilty before God. take them captive: Solomon’s speech anticipated the possibility of exile (v. 25), something that had already taken place by the time Chronicles was written.

6:40 Let Your eyes be open: God is Spirit (John 4:24) and doesn’t have physical eyes and ears, but He is a Person who intimately knows us and hears our prayers. Solomon was praying that God would not ignore His people.

6:41 In light of Ps. 132:8, 9 (the passage quoted by Solomon), the resting place is the temple. Ark is a synonym for the presence of God.

6:42 Your Anointed: A reference to Solomon, which shows that he understood his unique role as one set apart by God for royal service (see 1 Chr. 22:10, 11). Like David, Solomon was a messianic figure who anticipated the goal of his royal line, the true Anointed One, Jesus Christ (see 1 Sam. 2:10; Ps. 2:2; 18:50; 89:38, 51; 132:17).

7:1, 2 God responded positively to Solomon’s prayer by igniting the sacrifices with heavenly fire, an act of approval recorded in other parts of the Bible as well (see Judg. 6:21; 1 Kin. 18:38). Glory . . . filled: This was in the form of a thick cloud that filled the temple with darkness. The priests could no longer minister because of their awe and reverence before the glory of the Lord.

7:3 The people saw in God’s glory His acceptance of the king and the temple, two central elements in His covenant promise to David (see 1 Chr. 17:11, 12).

7:8 The feast was the Feast of Tabernacles, which began on the fifteenth day of the seventh month and continued through the twenty-second day (Lev. 23:34–36). Hamath and Brook of Egypt specify the extent of Solomon’s early kingdom from north to south.

Hamath to ^mthe³ Brook of Egypt. ⁹And on the eighth day they held a ⁿsacred assembly, for they observed the dedication of the altar seven days, and the feast seven days. ¹⁰^oOn the twenty-third day of the seventh month he sent the people away to their tents, joyful and glad of heart for the good that the LORD had done for David, for Solomon, and for His people Israel. ¹¹Thus ^pSolomon finished the house of the LORD and the king's house; and Solomon successfully accomplished all that came into his heart to make in the house of the LORD and in his own house.

God's Second Appearance to Solomon

¹²Then the LORD ^qappeared to Solomon by night, and said to him: "I have heard your prayer, ^rand have chosen this ^splace for Myself as a house of sacrifice. ¹³^tWhen I shut up heaven and there is no rain, or command the locusts to devour the land, or send pestilence among My people, ¹⁴if My people who are ^ucalled by My name will ^vhumble themselves, and pray and seek My face, and turn from their wicked ways, ^wthen I will hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin and heal their land. ¹⁵Now ^xMy eyes will be open and My ears attentive to prayer ^ymade in this place. ¹⁶For now ^zI have chosen and ⁴sanctified this house, that My name may be there forever; and ⁵My eyes and ⁶My heart will be there perpetually. ¹⁷^zAs for you, if you walk before Me as your fa-

Solomon's Additional Achievements

8 It ^acame to pass at the end of ^btwenty years, when Solomon had built the house of the LORD and his own house, ²that the cities which ¹Hiram had given to Solomon, Solomon built them; and

The Brook of Egypt is probably the Wadi el-Arish, a seasonal stream about 40 miles southwest of Gaza.

7:9 The Feast of Tabernacles ended with an eighth day assembly, which fell always on the twenty-second day of the seventh month, Tishri. The seven-day dedication of the altar is the one referred to in 5:3.

7:10 he sent the people away to their tents: Probably a reference to the huts or booths in which people stayed as part of the Feast of Tabernacles (Lev. 23:42, 43). Few if any Israelites used tents for their housing at this time.

7:11 The king's house refers to Solomon's own palace, a project much more elaborately explained in 1 Kings (see 1 Kin. 2:1; 7:1, 8). Since it took Solomon 13 years to build his palace and 20 years in all to build it and the temple (8:1), these events too are halfway through Solomon's 40-year reign.

7:12 In the next several verses (vv. 13–15), the Lord reviews and answers the petitions of Solomon (6:14–42). Solomon's prayers had been heard and would be answered, but there were conditions (see v. 14).

7:14 If God's people would do three things, God would respond in three ways. The Lord's people needed to become humble, that is, confess; they needed to pray, or repent; and they needed to turn, or come back to Him. If they did, God would hear, forgive, and heal them.

7:17, 18 if you walk: The Lord challenged Solomon to remain faithful to Him and to the laws of the covenant so that he could enjoy the full benefit of God's blessing (vv. 17–20). I will establish the throne: The conditions for God's blessing on David and his line did not extend to the ongoing existence of that dynasty. The covenant promises to David were unqualified. The Lord had told David that if his son—that is, Solomon—sinned he would be disciplined, but "My mercy shall not depart from him," and "your house and your kingdom shall be established forever before you" (2 Sam. 7:15, 16; see 1 Chr. 17:13, 14). Solomon might sin and be disciplined, but God's promises would stand—David's dynasty would go on.

7:19 if you turn: Here the word for you is plural. The Lord was speaking to the nation as a whole.

7:20 proverb: The nation of Israel would become an object lesson to other nations, who would see the temple lying in ruins and understand the clear message about sin and its cost.

7:22 embraced other gods: Idolatry would be the downfall of the nation (Deut. 28; 29).

8:1, 2 This compressed account of transactions between Solomon and Hiram is more fully spelled out in 1 Kin. 9:10–14. In payment for pray

(Heb. palaf) (7:14; Gen. 20:7; Num. 21:7; 1 Kin. 8:44; Is. 16:12; Jer. 7:16) Strong's #6419

The Hebrew verb translated pray in God's promise concerning the revival of Israel (7:14) can also mean "to inter-vene," "to interpose," "to arbitrate," or even "to judge." The Lord was asking His people to intercede for others in their prayers. During the dedication of the temple, Solomon modeled intercessory prayer (6:3–42). He pleaded with God on behalf of the people and continued to pray with determination until the Lord answered. According to the Lord, this type of prayer would be the catalyst for revival and restoration in the future (see Dan. 9:3–19).

he settled the children of Israel there. ³And Solomon went to Hamath Zobah and seized it. ^{4c}He also built Tadmor in the wilderness, and all the storage cities which he built in ^dHamath. ⁵He built Upper Beth Horon and ^eLower Beth Horon, fortified cities with walls, gates, and bars, ⁶also Baalath and all the storage cities that Solomon had, and all the chariot cities and the cities of the cavalry, and all that Solomon ^fdesired to build in Jerusalem, in Lebanon, and in all the land of his dominion.

¹¹Now Solomon ⁱbrought the daughter of Pharaoh up from the City of David to the house he had built for her, for he said, “My wife shall not dwell in the house of David king of Israel, because the places to which the ark of the LORD has come are holy.”

¹²Then Solomon offered burnt offerings to the LORD on the altar of the LORD which he had built before the vestibule, ¹³according to the ^jdaily rate, offering according to the commandment of Moses, for the Sabbaths, the New Moons, and the ^kthree appointed yearly ^lfeasts—the Feast of Unleavened Bread, the Feast of Weeks, and the Feast of Tabernacles. ¹⁴And, according to the ³order of David his father, he appointed the ^mdivisions of the priests for their service, ⁿthe Levites for their duties (to praise and serve before the priests) as the duty of each day required, and the ^ogatekeepers by their divisions at each gate; for so David the man of God had commanded. ¹⁵They did not depart from the command of the king to the priests and Levites concerning any matter or concerning the ^ptreasuries.

¹⁶Now all the work of Solomon was well-ordered ⁴from the day of the foundation of the house of the LORD until it was finished. So the house of the LORD was completed.

¹⁷Then Solomon went to ^qEzion Geber and ⁵Elath on the seacoast, in the land of Edom. ^{18r}And Hiram sent him ships by the hand of his servants, and servants who knew the sea. They went with the servants of Solomon to ^sOphir, and acquired four hundred and fifty talents of gold from there, and brought it to King Solomon.

The Queen of Sheba's Praise of Solomon

9 Now ^awhen the queen of Sheba heard of the fame of Solomon, she came to Jerusalem to test Solomon with hard questions, having a very great retinue, camels that bore spices, gold in abundance, and precious stones; and when she came to Solomon, she spoke with him about all that was in her heart. ²So Solomon answered all her questions; there was nothing so difficult for Solomon that he could not explain it to her. ³And when the queen of Sheba had seen the wisdom of Solomon, the house that he had built, ⁴the food on his table, the seating of his servants, the service of his waiters and their apparel, his ^bcupbearers and their apparel, and his entryway by which he

the timber and gold that Hiram provided for Solomon's construction projects, Solomon gave 20 Galilean cities to Hiram. The Phoenician did not like the cities, but he took them anyway and even paid 120 talents of gold for them. Eventually Solomon took back the cities, rebuilt them, and settled Israelites in them once more.

8:4 Solomon built and fortified cities such as Tadmor because they were on vital caravan routes. These fortified cities provided protection to his own caravans and became the customs points at which Solomon collected taxes. storage cities: Facilities were scattered throughout Solomon's outlying provinces to provide warehouses for his armies and merchantmen, as well as to store produce and other tribute paid by the vassal states (see 1 Kin. 9:19).

8:5 Upper Beth Horon and Lower Beth Horon were strategically located near the border between Judah and the northern tribal districts, along a major mountain pass to the Mediterranean (see Josh. 10:10; 1 Sam. 13:18).

8:7, 8 The people groups named in this verse were remnants of the population of Canaan who survived the conquest. Israel reduced many of them to forced labor (see 2:17).

8:11 The daughter of Pharaoh is not named here. Solomon had married her early in his reign (1 Kin. 3:1) and had provided her housing near David's palace on Mt. Zion. She had been forbidden to live in the palace, presumably because she was neither Hebrew nor God-fearing.

8:13 The daily rate refers to the morning and evening sacrifices of lambs, one on each occasion (Ex. 29:38-42).

8:14, 15 Solomon, like all kings in David's line, had jurisdiction over the priests and Levites, as well as over civil, military, and political affairs.

8:17 Ezion Geber and Elath were cities located close together at the northern end of the east branch of the Red Sea.

8:18 The Phoenicians were world-famous mariners, so when Solomon undertook a merchant marine enterprise he called once more on his good friend Hiram, the King of Tyre. The land of Ophir, located apparently in South Arabia (see 1 Chr. 29:4), was a source of finest gold.

9:1 Sheba was more than a thousand miles south of Israel, at the southern end of the Arabian Peninsula. hard questions: Solomon was known for his great wisdom (1:10-12; 1 Kin. 4:29-34).

went up to the house of the LORD, there was no more spirit in her.

⁵Then she said to the king: “It was a true report which I heard in my own land about your words and your wisdom.”
⁶However I did not believe their words until I came and saw with my own eyes; and indeed the half of the greatness of your wisdom was not told me. You exceed the fame of which I heard.
⁷Happy are your men and happy are these your servants, who stand continually before you and hear your wisdom!
⁸Blessed be the LORD your God, who delighted in you, setting you on His throne to be king for the LORD your God! Because your God has ^cloved Israel, to establish them forever, therefore He made you king over them, to do justice and righteousness.”

⁹And she gave the king one hundred and twenty talents of gold, spices in great abundance, and precious stones; there never were any spices such as those the queen of Sheba gave to King Solomon.

¹⁰Also, the servants of Hiram and the servants of Solomon, ^dwho brought gold from Ophir, brought ¹algun wood and precious stones.
¹¹And the king made walkways of the ²algun wood for the house of the LORD and for the king’s house, also harps and stringed instruments for singers; and there were none such as these seen before in the land of Judah.

¹²Now King Solomon gave to the queen of Sheba all she desired, whatever she asked, much more than she had brought to the king. So she turned and went to her own country, she and her servants.

BIBLE TIMES & CULTURE NOTES

Ophir

Although Ophir is mentioned several times in the OT, its exact location remains a mystery. Some believe Ophir was an island situated in the Red Sea; others think it was in India; still others believe it was in Africa, perhaps Somaliland, or on the southwest corner of the Arabian Peninsula, perhaps in the land of Sheba. Ophir is consistently associated in the OT with gold, probably its most noteworthy product. The gold may have come from Ophir itself, or it may have simply passed through Ophir from its place of origin. The air of mystery about Ophir adds to its significance when spoken of in a symbolic way in the Bible. Psalm 45:9 speaks of “the queen in gold from Ophir.” Job 28:16 says that wisdom “cannot be valued in the gold of Ophir,” suggesting its incomparable worth.

hammered gold; ³three hundred shekels of gold went into each shield. The king put them in the ^fHouse of the Forest of Lebanon.

¹⁷Moreover the king made a great throne of ivory, and overlaid it with pure gold.
¹⁸The throne had six steps, with a footstool of gold, which were fastened to the throne; there were ⁴armrests on either side of the place of the seat, and two lions stood beside the armrests.
¹⁹Twelve lions stood there, one on each side of the six steps; nothing like this had been made for any other kingdom.

²⁰All King Solomon’s drinking vessels were gold, and all the vessels of the House of the Forest of Lebanon were pure gold. Not one was silver, for this was accounted as nothing in the days of Solomon.
²¹For the king’s ships went to ^gTarshish with the servants of ⁵Hiram. Once every three years the ⁶merchant ships came, bringing gold, silver, ivory, apes, and ⁷monkeys.

²²So King Solomon surpassed all the kings of the earth in riches and wisdom.
²³And all the kings of the earth sought the presence of Solomon to hear his wisdom, which God had put in his heart.
²⁴Each man brought his present: articles

9:8 Blessed be the Lord your God: This was the language of politeness in the ancient world and does not suggest that the queen of Sheba was converted. Visiting dignitaries customarily praised the god of the host nation. Still, the queen’s statements about God’s love of Israel and election of Solomon were true enough (see 1 Chr. 17:11–14).

9:13 Solomon’s annual income in gold through taxes alone amounted to 25 tons. Since king and state were identified, this figure reflects the annual revenues of the entire nation through taxes.

9:14 The gold and silver that the kings and governors brought to Solomon was tribute—a form of taxation on vassal states, not a voluntary gift.

9:15 The shields of hammered gold were for decorative or ceremonial purposes, not the armory. Gold was too expensive, too heavy, and too soft to use in battle.

9:21 To Tarshish is possibly a figure of speech, meaning “a great distance” or “to the ends of the earth.”

9:23 In the context of Solomon’s own time and place, all the kings referred to the kings of the eastern Mediterranean world.

9:24 Each man brought his present: Ordinary presents are not of silver and gold, garments, ^harmor, spices, horses, and mules, at a set rate year by year.

²⁵ Solomon ⁱ had four thousand stalls for horses and chariots, and twelve thousand horsemen whom he stationed in the chariot cities and with the king at Jerusalem.

²⁶ So he reigned over all the kings ^k from ⁸ the River to the land of the Philistines, as far as the border of Egypt. ²⁷ ^l The king made silver as common in Jerusalem as stones, and he made cedar trees ^m as abundant as the sycamores which are in the lowland. ²⁸ ⁿ And they brought horses to Solomon from Egypt and from all lands.

Death of Solomon

²⁹ ^o Now the rest of the acts of Solomon, first and last, are they not written in the book of Nathan the prophet, in the prophecy of ^p Ahijah the Shilonite, and in the visions of ^q Iddo the seer concerning Jeroboam the son of Nebat? ³⁰ ^r Solomon reigned in Jerusalem over all Israel forty years. ³¹ Then Solomon ⁹ rested with his fathers, and was buried in the City of David his father. And Rehoboam his son reigned in his place.

The Revolt Against Rehoboam

10 And ^a Rehoboam went to Shechem, for all Israel had gone to Shechem to make him king. ² So it happened, when Jeroboam the son of Nebat heard it (he was in Egypt, ^b where he had fled from the presence of King Solomon), that Jeroboam returned from Egypt. ³ Then they sent for him and called him. And Jeroboam and all Israel came and spoke to Rehoboam, saying, ⁴ “Your father made our yoke heavy; now therefore, lighten the burdensome service of your father and his heavy yoke which he put on us, and we will serve you.”

⁵ So he said to them, “Come back to me after three days.” And the people departed.

⁶ Then King Rehoboam consulted the elders who stood before his father Solomon while he still lived, saying, “How do you advise me to answer these people?”

⁷ And they spoke to him, saying, “If you are kind to these people, and please them, and speak good words to them, they will be your servants forever.”

¹⁰ Then the young men who had grown up with him spoke to him, saying, “Thus you should speak to the people who have spoken to you, saying, ‘Your father made our yoke heavy, but you make it lighter on us’—thus you shall say to them: ‘My little finger shall be thicker than my father’s waist! ¹¹ And now, whereas my father put a heavy yoke on you, I will add to your yoke; my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with ¹ scourges!’”

¹² So ^d Jeroboam and all the people came to Rehoboam on the third day, as the king had directed, saying, “Come back to me the third day.” ¹³ Then the king answered them roughly. King Rehoboam rejected the advice of the elders, ¹⁴ and he spoke to them according to the advice of the young men, saying, ² “My father made your yoke heavy, but I will add to it; my father chastised you with whips, but I will chastise you with ³ scourges!”

given and received at a set rate so these presents were tribute paid to the king by vassals.

9:26 Most of the kings of Israel had continuing trouble with the Philistines, even though they were able to subdue every other surrounding neighbor. David had some success against the Philistines (1 Chr. 18:2), and later Jehoshaphat managed to exact tribute from some of them (see 17:11).

9:29 Nathan the prophet had rebuked David for his adultery and murder (2 Sam. 12:1) and had become a confidant and counselor to both David and Solomon (1 Kin. 1:8, 11). Ahijah the Shilonite would select Jeroboam as the first king of the northern kingdom of Israel (1 Kin. 11:26–40) and later would announce God’s judgment on him (1 Kin. 14:1–16). Iddo the seer was a contemporary of Ahijah who compiled accounts of both Jeroboam and Rehoboam (12:15).

9:31 Rehoboam was a son of Solomon by his wife Naamah of Ammon (12:13). Rehoboam was 41 when he began to rule, so he must have been born during the period when Solomon ruled alongside David (see 1 Chr. 29:22, 23).

10:1 Why did Rehoboam go to Shechem to be crowned? First, Shechem had a rich history dating back to Abraham’s travels in the land (see Gen. 12:6, 7; 35:4; Josh. 24:1–28). But more importantly, a rift had begun to develop between the northern and southern tribes (1 Kin. 11:26–40), and Shechem would be a more neutral place than Jerusalem.

10:2 As head of all of Solomon’s forced labor in the district of Ephraim, Jeroboam enjoyed great favor with the king. But the prophet Ahijah informed him that he would become ruler of the ten northern tribes because of Solomon’s idolatry (1 Kin. 11:26–33). When Solomon heard of this he tried to kill Jeroboam (1 Kin. 11:40), but Jeroboam fled to Egypt.

10:4 Solomon’s heavy yoke included taxation and forced labor (see 1 Sam. 8:11–18; 1 Kin. 4:7; 9:15).

10:10, 11 Rehoboam promised that even the lesser evils of his reign—his finger—would be as hard as anything they knew under Solomon. The young men compared Solomon’s rule to a whip and Rehoboam’s to a scourge, a whip with sharp bits of metal that cut the flesh and caused excruciating pain.

¹⁵So the king did not listen to the people; ^efor the turn of events was from God, that the LORD might fulfill His *f*word, which He had spoken by the hand of Ahijah the Shilonite to Jeroboam the son of Nebat.

¹⁶Now when all Israel saw that the king did not listen to them, the people answered the king, saying:

“What share have we in David?
We have no inheritance in the son of Jesse.
Every man to your tents, O Israel!
Now see to your own house,
O David!”

So all Israel departed to their tents.
¹⁷But Rehoboam reigned over the children of Israel who dwelt in the cities of Judah.

¹⁸Then King Rehoboam sent Hadoram, who was in charge of revenue; but the children of Israel stoned him with stones, and he died. Therefore King Rehoboam mounted his chariot in haste to flee to Jerusalem. ^{19g}So Israel has been in rebellion against the house of David to this day.

11 Now ^awhen Rehoboam came to Jerusalem, he assembled from the house of Judah and Benjamin one hundred and eighty thousand chosen men who were warriors, to fight against Israel, that he might restore the kingdom to Rehoboam.

Let every man return to his house, for this thing is from Me.”” Therefore they obeyed the words of the LORD, and turned back from attacking Jeroboam.

Rehoboam Fortifies the Cities

⁵So Rehoboam dwelt in Jerusalem, and built cities for defense in Judah. ⁶And he built Bethlehem, Etam, Tekoa, ⁷Beth Zur, Sochoh, Adullam, ⁸Gath, Mareshah, Ziph, ⁹Adoraim, Lachish, Azekah, ¹⁰Zorah, Aijalon, and Hebron, which are in Judah and Benjamin, fortified cities. ¹¹And he fortified the strongholds, and put captains in them, and stores of food, oil, and wine. ¹²Also in every city he put shields and spears, and made them very strong, having Judah and Benjamin on his side.

Priests and Levites Move to Judah

¹³And from all their territories the priests and the Levites who were in all Israel took their stand with him. ¹⁴For the Levites left ^etheir common-lands and their possessions and came to Judah and Jerusalem, for ^dJeroboam and his sons had rejected them from serving as priests to the LORD. ¹⁵^eThen he appointed for 10:15 the turn of events was from God: Human foolishness and decisions achieved God’s purposes. Solomon’s defection from God late in his reign had already disqualified his descendants from ruling over all Israel (1 Kin. 11:9–13). Rehoboam initiated the split with his own foolish actions.

10:16 In the people’s poem, Israel referred to the ten northern tribes, David to the southern kingdom of Judah.

10:18 Hadoram, called Adoniram in 1 Kin. 4:6, was Jeroboam’s counterpart in Judah as officer in charge of forced labor.

11:1 Shortly after the kingdom divided, the tribe of Benjamin joined Judah to form the southern kingdom. This is ironic because Saul was a Benjamite. However, Benjamites had shown great loyalty to David many years before (see 2 Sam. 19:16–20, 40–43). Also, Benjamin was closer geographically to Judah than to the northern tribes.

11:2 Like Nathan, Ahijah, and Iddo (9:29), Shemaiah was a prophet who wrote. The writer of Chronicles depended on Shemaiah’s writings for some of his information (see 12:15).

11:13, 14 all their territories: Though Israel and Judah had split into two kingdoms, the priests and the Levites of Israel sided with Judah. One reason for this was that they knew that Rehoboam was David’s offspring, and therefore the heir of God’s covenant promise to David. Another reason was that Jeroboam had established his own religious cult which had no need for the true priests of God (see 1 Kin. 12:25–33).

11:15 The calf idols were the golden calves that Jeroboam had installed at Bethel and Dan.

The Family of Rehoboam

¹⁸ Then Rehoboam took for himself as wife Mahalath the daughter of Jerimoth the son of David, and of Abihail the daughter of ^kElijah the son of Jesse. ¹⁹ And she bore him children: Jeush, Shamariah, and Zaham. ²⁰ After her he took ^lMaachah the ³granddaughter of ^mAbsalom; and she bore him ⁿAbijah, Attai, Ziza, and Shelomith. ²¹ Now Rehoboam loved Maachah the granddaughter of Absalom more than all his ^owives and his concubines; for he took eighteen wives and sixty concubines, and begot twenty-eight sons and sixty daughters. ²² And Rehoboam ^pappointed ^qAbijah the son of Maachah as chief, to be leader among his brothers; for he intended to make him king. ²³ He dealt wisely, and ⁴dispersed some of his sons throughout all the territories of Judah and Benjamin, to every ^rfortified city; and he gave them provisions in abundance. Egypt Attacks Judah

12 Now ^ait came to pass, when Rehoboam had established the kingdom and had strengthened himself, that ^bhe forsook the law of the LORD, and all Israel along with him. ^{2c} And it happened in the fifth year of King Rehoboam that Shishak king of Egypt came up against Jerusalem, because they had transgressed against the LORD, ³ with twelve hundred chariots, sixty thousand horsemen, and people without number who came with him out of Egypt—^dthe Lubim and the Sukkiim and the Ethiopians. ⁴ And he took the fortified cities of Judah and came to Jerusalem.

⁵ Then ^eShemaiah the prophet came to Rehoboam and the leaders of Judah, who were gathered together in Jerusalem because of Shishak, and said to them, “Thus says the LORD: ‘You have forsaken Me, and therefore I also have left you in the hand of Shishak.’”

⁶ So the leaders of Israel and the king ^fhumbled themselves; and they said, ^g“The LORD is righteous.”

⁷ Now when the LORD saw that they humbled themselves, ^hthe word of the LORD came to Shemaiah, saying, “They have humbled themselves; therefore I will not destroy them, but I will grant them some deliverance. My wrath shall not be poured out on Jerusalem by the hand of Shishak. ⁸ Nevertheless ⁱthey will be his servants, that they may distinguish ^jMy service from the service of the kingdoms of the nations.”

^{9k} So Shishak king of Egypt came up

11:16 Once the legitimate religious leaders had left Israel, the worshipers of God in the northern kingdom could no longer worship in good conscience, so they made pilgrimages to Jerusalem three times a year (see 1 Kin. 12:27, 32, 33).

11:17 Jeroboam’s program of establishing a new religious structure in Israel apparently took at least three years. Meanwhile, the pilgrimage of godly Israelites from the north to Jerusalem strengthened Rehoboam and weakened Jeroboam (1 Kin. 12:27).

11:18 Mahalath may have been David’s great-granddaughter. Rehoboam was David’s grandson, so in any case this marriage was within the larger royal family.

11:20 Rehoboam’s claims to legitimacy took further support from his marriage to Maachah, granddaughter of David’s son Absalom. Their son Abijah would eventually succeed Rehoboam (see 12:16).

11:22 Rehoboam named his son Abijah to be the next king to ensure a smooth succession following his death. Abijah probably served under or alongside Rehoboam, just as Solomon had served under David (1 Chr. 23:1).

12:1 the law: The normal Hebrew word for the Mosaic covenant, the Ten Commandments.

12:2, 3 Egypt was beginning to recover from a long period of decline and wanted to reestablish control over Palestine. God used their ambitions to discipline Rehoboam for abandoning the Lord.

The Lubim were the Libyans. The Sukkiim were other desert tribes, perhaps from western Libya. Ethiopians: Sometimes referred to as Cushites, these famous warriors originated in the lands south of Egypt.

12:8 In order that the Judeans might understand how privileged they were to serve God, He would allow them to become servants to the Egyptians. Only then would they appreciate again the joy of being God’s servant people.

12:9 The treasures of the king’s house that the Egyptians seized transgressed

(Heb. ma’al) (12:2; Lev. 6:2; Ezek. 14:13) Strong’s #4603

The principal sense of this word is “to break a trust,” most often willfully but in some cases unintentionally (Lev. 5:15). The term is used in association with the word sin on several occasions (Lev. 5:15; 6:2; Ezek. 18:22–24). Transgression is almost always against the Lord and may be committed by individuals or communities, especially the covenant community (Num. 31:16; Neh. 1:6, 7; Ezek. 14:13). Also a wife can transgress against her husband, or a king can transgress by not rendering a true judgment (Num. 5:12; Prov. 16:10). The word occurs predominantly in the exilic and postexilic books. There death, military defeat, and exile are all viewed as divine judgments on Israel’s transgressions (12:1–9; 1 Chr. 10:13; Ezek. 39:23; Dan. 9:7).

against Jerusalem, and took away the treasures of the house of the LORD and the treasures of the king's house; he took everything. He also carried away the gold shields which Solomon had ¹made. ¹⁰Then King Rehoboam made bronze shields in their place, and committed them ^mto the hands of the captains of the guard, who guarded the doorway of the king's house. ¹¹And whenever the king entered the house of the LORD, the guard would go and bring them out; then they would take them back into the guardroom. ¹²When he humbled himself, the wrath of the LORD turned from him, so as not to destroy him completely; and things also went well in Judah.

The End of Rehoboam's Reign

¹³Thus King Rehoboam strengthened himself in Jerusalem and reigned. Now ⁿRehoboam was forty-one years old when he became king; and he reigned seventeen years in Jerusalem, ^othe city which the LORD had chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, to put His name there. His mother's name was Naamah, an ^pAmmonitess. ¹⁴And he did evil, because he did not prepare his heart to seek the LORD.

¹⁵The acts of Rehoboam, first and last, are they not written in the book of Shemaiah the prophet, ^qand of Iddo the seer concerning genealogies? ^rAnd there were wars between Rehoboam and Jeroboam all their days. ¹⁶So Rehoboam ¹rested with his fathers, and was buried in the City of David. Then ^sAbijah² his son reigned in his place.

Abijah Reigns in Judah

13 In ^athe eighteenth year of King Jeroboam, Abijah became king over ^bJudah. ²He reigned three years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was ¹Michaiah the daughter of Uriel of Gibeah.

And there was war between Abijah and Jeroboam. ³Abijah set the battle in

Shishak

Shishak was a Libyan war chieftain who became pharaoh of Egypt and reigned from about 940 to 915 B.C. In about 926 B.C., in the fifth year of the reign of King Rehoboam, Shishak invaded Judah and captured many of its fortified cities (1 Kin. 14:25). He then marched against Jerusalem, Rehoboam's capital city, forcing Rehoboam to pay tribute and plundering the treasures of the temple and Rehoboam's palace (1 Kin. 14:25, 26). The Egyptian account of Shishak's invasion of Judah was recorded on the wall of the temple of the Egyptian god Amon at Karnak (ancient Thebes), in southern Egypt. More than a hundred cities captured or destroyed by Shishak are listed, including Adoraim, Aijalon, and Socoh. Cities from the northern kingdom of Israel, such as Shechem, Beth Shean, and Megiddo, are also listed on this monument as being captured by Shishak.

order with an army of valiant warriors, four hundred thousand choice men. Jeroboam also drew up in battle formation against him with eight hundred thousand choice men, mighty men of valor.

⁴Then Abijah stood on Mount ^eZemaraim, which is in the mountains of Ephraim, and said, "Hear me, Jeroboam and all Israel: ⁵Should you not know that the LORD God of Israel ^dgave the dominion over Israel to David forever, to him and his sons, ^eby a covenant of salt? ⁶Yet Jeroboam the son of Nebat, the servant of Solomon the son of David, rose up and ^frebelled against his lord. ⁷Then ^gworthless had been spoils of war captured by David and dedicated to God (1 Chr. 18:6-8; 22:14). Judah was now a vassal state of Egypt.

12:12 The king's conduct had inevitable consequences on the nation. When a king obeyed God, the Lord would bless the nation. When the king turned away from the Lord, his subjects would suffer. But when the king repented and humbled himself before God, God's forgiveness and restoration would cover both him and his kingdom.

12:14 did not prepare his heart to seek the Lord: Note the differences between David, Solomon, Rehoboam, and Abijah (in ch. 13). David, a man of God (see 8:14), died at a very old age with riches and honor. Solomon died wise, rich, and powerful. But Rehoboam did evil. As a result, he fought wars throughout most of his troubled reign. Abijah followed Rehoboam's example of not honoring God (13:8-18).

13:4 Mount Zemaraim was a few miles southwest of Bethel (see Josh. 18:22).

13:5 covenant of salt: Salt was a preservative and symbolized durability—an apt description of the eternal Davidic covenant (see Lev. 2:13; Num. 18:19). Israel refers to the whole nation, not just the northern kingdom.

13:6 Abijah blamed the division of the kingdom on Jeroboam, not Rehoboam, or even Solomon (see 10:16). But Jeroboam's rebellion was fueled by Solomon's disobedience to the covenant and his harsh policies. Moreover, Rehoboam's foolish plan to increase the severity of those abuses infuriated the Israelites even more. The blame lay with all three—Jeroboam, Rehoboam, and Solomon.

13:7, 8 Abijah's version of the nation's division put his father in a relatively good light. According to Abijah, if Rehoboam had made any mistakes, it was merely because he was young and rogues gathered to him, and strengthened themselves against Rehoboam the son of Solomon, when Rehoboam was ^hyoung and inexperienced and could not withstand them. ⁸ And now you think to withstand the kingdom of the LORD, which is in the hand of the sons of David; and you are a great multitude, and with you are the gold calves which Jeroboam ⁱmade for you as gods. ^{9j} Have you not cast out the priests of the LORD, the sons of Aaron, and the Levites, and made for yourselves priests, like the peoples of other lands, ^kso that whoever comes to consecrate himself with a young bull and seven rams may be a priest of ^l*things that are* not gods? ¹⁰ But as for us, the LORD is our ^mGod, and we have not forsaken Him; and the priests who minister to the LORD are the sons of Aaron, and the Levites attend to their duties. ¹¹ⁿ And they burn to the LORD every morning and every evening burnt sacrifices and sweet incense; they also set the ^oshowbread in order on the pure gold table, and the lampstand of gold with its lamps ^pto burn every evening; for we keep the command of the LORD our God, but you have forsaken Him. ¹² Now look, God Himself is with us as our ^qhead, ^rand His priests with sounding trumpets to sound the alarm against you. O children of Israel, do not fight against the LORD God of your fathers, for you shall not prosper!”

¹³ But Jeroboam caused an ambush to go around behind them; so they were in front of Judah, and the ambush was behind them. ¹⁴ And when Judah looked around, to their surprise the battle line was at both front and rear; and they ^scried out to the LORD, and the priests sounded the trumpets. ¹⁵ Then the men of Judah gave a shout; and as the men of Judah shouted, it happened that God ^tstruck Jeroboam and all Israel before Abijah and Judah. ¹⁶ And the children of Israel fled before Judah, and God delivered them into their hand. ¹⁷ Then Abijah and his people struck them with a great slaughter; so five hundred thousand choice men of Israel fell slain. ¹⁸ Thus the children of Israel were subdued at that time; and the children of Judah prevailed, ^ubecause they relied on the LORD God of their fathers.

¹⁹ And Abijah pursued Jeroboam and took cities from him: Bethel with its villages, Jeshanah with its villages, and ^vEphrain² with its villages. ²⁰ So Jeroboam did not recover strength again in the days of Abijah; and the LORD ^wstruck him, and ^xhe died.

14 So Abijah rested with his fathers, and they buried him in the City of David. Then ^aAsa his son reigned in his place. In his days the land was quiet for ten years.

Asa Reigns in Judah

² Asa did what was good and right in the eyes of the LORD his God, ³for he removed the altars of the foreign gods and ^bthe ¹high places, and ^cbroke down the sacred pillars ^dand cut down the wooden images. ⁴ He commanded Judah to ^eseek the LORD God of their fathers, and to observe the law and the commandment. ⁵ He also removed the ²high places and the incense altars from all the cities of Judah, and the kingdom was quiet under him. ⁶ And he built fortified cities in Judah, for the land had rest; he had no war in those years, because the LORD had given him ^frest. ⁷ Therefore he said to Judah, “Let us build these cities and make inexperienced. Abijah further equated the kingdom of Judah with the kingdom of the LORD, making the victory of Judah over Israel sound like a foregone conclusion. This was a misrepresentation of the truth (see v. 6) designed to scare the Israelites.

13:9 Jeroboam’s illicit religion filled the priestly ranks with anyone who had the means to purchase the office. Thus Abijah asserted that all a person had to do to consecrate himself was to come with the appropriate sacrifices (1 Kin. 12:31; see Lev. 8:2). But Abijah’s words were hypocritical, for the same evil deeds were going on in his own kingdom (see 14:2–5).

13:10, 11 The priests of Judah were true priests, who traced their ancestry to Aaron as the Law required (see 1 Chr. 6:1–15). Throughout the passage the contrast is between the authorized worship at Jerusalem and the illicit practice of religion at Dan and Bethel. In summary, Abijah argued that Judah had remained true to God while Israel had forsaken Him.

13:19 Among the Israelite cities that fell to Judah was none other than Bethel, the southern center of the false religious cult that Jeroboam had established (see 1 Kin. 12:29). Jeshanah may have been some six miles north of Bethel. Ephrain, otherwise known as Ephron, lay four miles northeast of Bethel.

13:21 One of the gauges of a king’s power and prosperity was the size of his family.

14:1 Abijah’s son Asa reigned for 41 years, until 870 B.C. (see 16:13). ten years: This suggests that during the first ten years of Asa’s reign there was peace between Judah and Israel (see v. 6).

14:3 Sacred pillars were stone posts associated with Canaanite fertility rites. Wooden images were fashioned from live evergreen trees, which were regarded as a fertility symbol, since they retain their leaves throughout the year. Eventually, cut poles took the place of live trees, because they could be erected anywhere, even in places where trees did not grow.

14:6 Rehoboam had built fortified cities in his time, but Shishak of Egypt had destroyed them (11:5–12; 12:2–4). It is likely that Asa merely rebuilt them. The phrase in those years refers to the first ten years of Asa’s reign, the years of peace (v. 1).

walls around them, and towers, gates, and bars, while the land is yet before us, because we have sought the LORD our God; we have sought Him, and He has given us rest on every side.” So they built and prospered. ⁸And Asa had an army of three hundred thousand from Judah who carried ³shields and spears, and from Benjamin two hundred and eighty thousand men who carried shields and drew ^gbows; all these were mighty men of ^hvalor.

⁹ⁱThen Zerah the Ethiopian came out against them with an army of a million men and three hundred chariots, and he came to ^jMareshah. ¹⁰So Asa went out against him, and they set the troops in battle array in the Valley of Zephathah at Mareshah. ¹¹And Asa ^kcried out to the LORD his God, and said, “LORD, it is ^lnothing for You to help, whether with many or with those who have no power; help us, O LORD our God, for we rest on You, and ^min Your name we go against this multitude. O LORD, You are our God; do not let man prevail against You!”

¹²So the LORD ⁿstruck the Ethiopians before Asa and Judah, and the Ethiopians fled. ¹³And Asa and the people who were with him pursued them to ^oGerar. So the Ethiopians were overthrown, and they could not recover, for they were broken before the LORD and His army. And they carried away very much ⁴spoil. ¹⁴Then they defeated all the cities around Gerar, for ^pthe fear of the LORD came upon them; and they plundered all the cities, for there was exceedingly much ⁵spoil in them. ¹⁵They also ⁶attacked the livestock enclosures, and carried off sheep and camels in abundance, and returned to Jerusalem.

The Reforms of Asa

15 Now ^athe Spirit of God came upon Azariah the son of Oded. ²And he went out ¹ to meet Asa, and said to him: “Hear me, Asa, and all Judah and Benjamin. ^bThe LORD is with you while you are with Him. ^cIf you seek Him, He will be found by you; but ^dif you forsake Him, He will forsake you. ^{3e}For a long time Israel has been without the true God, without a ^fteaching priest, and without ^glaw; ⁴but ^hwhen in their trouble they turned to the LORD God of Israel, and sought Him, He was found by them. ⁵And in those times there was no peace to the one who went out, nor to the one who came in, but great turmoil was on all the inhabitants of the lands. ⁶ⁱSo nation was ²destroyed by nation, and city by city, for God troubled them with every adversity. ⁷But you, be strong and do not let your hands be weak, for your work shall be rewarded!”

⁸And when Asa heard these words and the prophecy of ³Oded the prophet, he took courage, and removed the abominable idols from all the land of Judah and Benjamin and from the cities ^jwhich he had taken in the mountains of Ephraim; and he restored the altar of the LORD that was before the vestibule of the LORD. ⁹Then he gathered all Judah and Benjamin, and ^kthose who dwelt with them from Ephraim, Manasseh, and Simeon, for they came over to him in great numbers from Israel when they saw that the LORD his God was with him.

14:9 Since Egypt was strong at this time (12:3) and fully in control of its own territory, it is likely that Zerah and his large army were mercenaries of the Egyptian king Osorkon I (914–874 B.C.), successor to Shishak. Mareshah was one of Asa’s important fortified cities, about 25 miles southwest of Jerusalem (11:8). It was near the Via Maris, the coastal highway connecting Egypt and Canaan, making it strategically important.

14:10 The Valley of Zephathah was on the north side of Mareshah. 14:11 it is nothing for You to help: Asa showed great faith in his prayer before the battle against Zerah’s huge army. in Your name: Asa believed that God was on his side and that Zerah’s attack was aimed at the Lord as well as at God’s people (see 13:8, 12, 14, 15).

14:13, 14 Gerar was at the frontier between Egypt and Canaan and might have been in Egyptian territory at this time.

15:3–5 For a long time: Much of what Azariah said to Asa could be said of the era of the judges, a time marked by long years of apostasy, ignorance, and lawlessness (see Judg. 18:1; 21:25). in their trouble: These times were difficult. The Israelites were constantly being invaded and harassed. But when circumstances looked most hopeless, the people cried out to God in repentance, and He delivered them (see Judg. 2:11–19). no peace: Beside the dangers of war, the continual perils of robbery and crime plagued the nation, a point expressly made in the Song of Deborah (Judg. 5:6, 7).

15:9 Along with godly priests and Levites (see 11:13–17), many of the ordinary citizens of Israel came over to Judah when they saw Asa’s zeal for God, and God’s blessing upon him.

15:10 The third month quite likely locates this festival at the time of the firstfruits, the Feast of Pentecost (see Lev. 23:15–21; Num. 28:26–31).

15:11 Spoil likely refers to the animals taken from the Ethiopians after Asa’s victory over Zerah (14:15). If so, the battle of Mareshah (see 14:9, 10) must have taken place right before this event.

15:12 Asa gathered an assembly to reaffirm Israel’s covenant (or promise) to seek the Lord. The nation had assembled before to renew their commitment to God (Deut. 27:9, 10; 29:1; 31:10–13; Josh. 8:30–35; 24:1–28).

¹⁴Then they took an oath before the LORD with a loud voice, with shouting and trumpets and rams' horns. ¹⁵And all Judah rejoiced at the oath, for they had sworn with all their heart and ¹⁶sought Him with all their soul; and He was found by them, and the LORD gave them ¹⁷rest all around.

¹⁸He also brought into the house of God the things that his father had dedicated and that he himself had dedicated: silver and gold and utensils. ¹⁹And there was no war until the thirty-fifth year of the reign of Asa.

Asa's Treaty with Syria

16 In the thirty-sixth year of the reign of Asa, ¹Baasha king of Israel came up against Judah and built Ramah, ²that he might let none go out or come in to Asa king of Judah. ³Then Asa brought silver and gold from the treasures of the house of the LORD and of the king's house, and sent to Ben-Hadad king of Syria, who dwelt in Damascus, saying, ⁴*Let there be a treaty between you and me, as there was between my father and your father. See, I have sent you silver and gold; come, break your treaty with Baasha king of Israel, so that he will withdraw from me.*

⁴So Ben-Hadad heeded King Asa, and sent the captains of his armies against the cities of Israel. They attacked Ijon, Dan, Abel Maim, and all the storage cities of Naphtali. ⁵Now it happened, when Baasha heard it, that he stopped building Ramah and ceased his work. ⁶Then King Asa took all Judah, and they carried away the stones and timber of Ramah, which Baasha had used for building; and with them he built Geba and Mizpah.

Hanani's Message to Asa

⁷And at that time ⁸Hanani the seer came to Asa king of Judah, and said to him: ⁹*“Because you have relied on the king of Syria, and have not relied on the LORD your God, therefore the army of the king of Syria has escaped from your hand. ¹⁰Were ¹¹the Ethiopians and ¹²the Lubim not a huge army with very many chariots and horsemen? Yet, because you relied on the LORD, He delivered them into your ¹³hand. ¹⁴For the eyes of the LORD run to and fro throughout the whole earth, to show Himself strong on behalf of those whose heart is loyal to Him. In this ¹⁵you have done foolishly; therefore from now on ¹⁶you shall have wars.”* ¹⁷Then Asa was angry with the seer, and ¹⁸put him in prison, for he was enraged at him because of this. And Asa oppressed some of the people at that time.

Illness and Death of Asa

¹¹Note that the acts of Asa, first and last, are indeed written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel. ¹²And in the thirty-ninth year of his reign, Asa became diseased in his feet, and his malady was severe; yet in his disease he ¹³did not seek the LORD, and ¹⁴the physicians.

¹³So Asa ¹⁴rested with his fathers; he died in the forty-first year of his reign. ¹⁵They buried him in his own tomb, which he had ¹⁶made for himself in the 15:14 Taking an oath was an essential part of covenant-making (Ex. 24:7, 8; Deut. 27:11–26; 29:12). The people declared their determination to keep the covenant and agreed to accept God's judgment if they broke it.

15:15 The conflict with Zerah the Ethiopian (14:9) had broken the ten-year period of peace at the start of Asa's reign (14:1). After winning the war and renewing the covenant with God, Judah once again had rest all around.

15:16 Maachah is called Asa's mother, a Hebrew word that can also mean grandmother. Maachah was the mother of Asa's father, Abijah (see 13:2). Still, Asa demoted her from being queen mother because she had set up pagan idols—a courageous and delicate task for anyone, even a king.

15:17 high places were not removed from Israel: Asa destroyed the high places of Judah, but not those of Israel (see 14:3, 5).

15:18 silver and gold and utensils: These items were taken as spoils of war and dedicated to the worship of God; they could not then be used for any other purpose (1 Chr. 18:8; 26:20).

16:2, 3 The treasures of the house of the LORD were items of value stored in the temple as ordinary revenue (see 1 Chr. 26:20). They did not include things dedicated to the Lord (see 15:18). Asa used these treasures to secure Ben-Hadad's assistance against Baasha king of Israel.

16:4 Ijon was in the tribal territory of Naphtali, some ten miles north of Dan and 35 miles north of the Sea of Galilee. Abel Maim was only three miles west of Dan. Naphtali was the most northern tribal territory of Israel, very close to Damascus.

16:6 Diverted by attacks from the north, Baasha left Ramah unfinished (v. 5). Asa, the king of Judah, took advantage of the situation and built his own fortifications at Geba, just east of Ramah, and at Mizpah, between Ramah and Bethel. Ramah ended up between Asa's fortresses and the Israelites could not rebuild it.

16:7–9 Hanani the seer was probably the father of another prophet Jehu, who once challenged King Jehoshaphat of Judah (see 19:2; 20:34).

16:12 diseased in his feet: Asa may have been suffering from gout, a common disease in the ancient world. For his malady Asa did not seek the LORD, but the physicians. The problem was not that Asa used doctors, but that he failed to turn to God during his sickness.

16:14 great burning: This had nothing to do with cremation, but was the burning of spices and perfumes to mourn a king's death (see 21:19).

City of David; and they laid him in the bed which was filled ^awith spices and various ingredients prepared in a mixture of ointments. They made ^ba very great burning for him.

Jehoshaphat Reigns in Judah

17 Then ^aJehoshaphat his son reigned in his place, and strengthened himself against Israel. ²And he placed troops in all the fortified cities of Judah, and set garrisons in the land of ^bJudah and in the cities of Ephraim ^cwhich Asa his father had taken. ³Now the LORD was with Jehoshaphat, because he walked in the former ways of his father David; he did not seek the Baals, ⁴but sought ¹the God of his father, and walked in His commandments and not according to ^dthe acts of Israel. ⁵Therefore the LORD established the kingdom in his hand; and all Judah ^egave presents to Jehoshaphat, ^fand he had riches and honor in abundance. ⁶And his heart took delight in the ways of the LORD; moreover ^ghe removed the ²high places and wooden images from Judah.

⁷Also in the third year of his reign he sent his leaders, Ben-Hail, Obadiah, Zechariah, Nethanel, and Michaiiah, ^hto teach in the cities of Judah. ⁸And with them he sent Levites: Shemaiah, Nathaniah, Zebadiah, Asahel, Shemiramoth, Jehonathan, Adonijah, Tobijah, and Tobadonijah—the Levites; and with them Elishama and Jehoram, the priests. ⁹ⁱSo they taught in Judah, and had the Book of the Law of the LORD with them; they went throughout all the cities of Judah and taught the people.

¹⁰And ^jthe fear of the LORD fell on all the kingdoms of the lands that were around Judah, so that they did not make war against Jehoshaphat. ¹¹Also some of the Philistines ^kbrought Jehoshaphat presents and silver as tribute; and the Arabians brought him flocks, seven thousand seven hundred rams and seven thousand seven hundred male goats.

¹²So Jehoshaphat became increasingly powerful, and he built fortresses and storage cities in Judah. ¹³He had much property in the cities of Judah; and the men of war, mighty men of valor, were in Jerusalem.

¹⁴These are their numbers, according to their fathers' houses. Of Judah, the captains of thousands: Adnah the captain, and with him three hundred thousand mighty men of valor; ¹⁵and next to him was Jehohanan the captain, and with him two hundred and eighty thousand; ¹⁶and next to him was Amasiah the son of Zichri, ¹who willingly offered himself to the LORD, and with him two hundred thousand mighty men of valor. ¹⁷Of Benjamin: Eliada a mighty man of valor, and with him two hundred thousand men armed with bow and shield; ¹⁸and next to him was Jehozabad, and with him one hundred and eighty thousand prepared for war. ¹⁹These served the king, besides ^mthose the king put in the fortified cities throughout all Judah.

Micaiah Warns Ahab

18 Jehoshaphat ^ahad riches and honor in abundance; and by marriage he ^ballied himself with ^cAhab. ²^dAfter some years he went down to visit Ahab in Samaria; and Ahab killed sheep and oxen in abundance for him and the people who were with him, and persuaded him to go up with him to Ramoth Gilead. ³So Ahab king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat king of Judah, "Will you go with me against Ramoth Gilead?"

And he answered him, "I am as you are, and my people as your people; we will be with you in the war."

⁴Also Jehoshaphat said to the king of 17:2 cities of Ephraim: Ephraim is a synonym for Israel. The cities referred to here are mentioned also in 15:8; they could include Ramah, Geba, and Mizpah as well (16:6), depending on fluctuations of the border between Israel and Judah.

17:3 Jehoshaphat was the first king since David who walked in the former ways of his father David. He obeyed God's commandments and took delight in the Lord's ways.

17:9 The Book of the Law refers to the five books of Moses, the Pentateuch. When Moses passed the leadership of Israel on to Joshua he instructed him never to let "this Book of the Law" depart from his mouth (Josh. 1:8). Unfortunately, Jehoshaphat's initiative in sending out teachers to instruct the nation in God's laws was not the norm (see 15:3).

17:11 There is no record of Jehoshaphat conquering Philistia, but he was powerful enough to compel at least some of the Philistines to pay tribute to his sovereignty. Up to this point, only David had obtained such respect (see 1 Chr. 18:2).

17:13-18 Jehoshaphat's men of war were grouped into three divisions of Judeans with a total number of 780,000 (vv. 14-16), and two divisions of Benjamites numbering 380,000 (vv. 17, 18). The Hebrew word for thousand can also mean "clan" (as in Judg. 6:15; 1 Sam. 10:19) or "village" (as in Mic. 5:2), and possibly "company" in a military context. Thus 780,000 may refer to 780 companies and 380,000 to 380 companies. The totals would then be nearer to 78,000 and 38,000.

17:19 Jehoshaphat's troops were stationed at Jerusalem. He had additional forces in the fortified cities throughout the countryside.

18:1 Jehoshaphat allied himself with Ahab by arranging for his son Jehoram to marry Ahab's daughter Athaliah (see 21:5, 6; 22:2).

18:2 Ahab died in battle a few days after Jehoshaphat's visit (v. 34). Ramoth Gilead: This important city some 35 miles east of Beth Shan was controlled by the Arameans. It was also one of the Israelite cities of refuge (Josh. 20:8; 1 Chr. 6:80).

18:3 I am as you are: Jehoshaphat was referring to the intermarriage of their families (v. 1).

Israel, “Please inquire for the word of the LORD today.”

⁵Then the king of Israel gathered the prophets together, four hundred men, and said to them, “Shall we go to war against Ramoth Gilead, or shall I refrain?”

So they said, “Go up, for God will deliver it into the king’s hand.”

⁶But Jehoshaphat said, “Is there not still a prophet of the LORD here, that we may inquire of him?”¹

⁷So the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, “There is still one man by whom we may inquire of the LORD; but I hate him, because he never prophesies good concerning me, but always evil. He is Micaiah the son of Imla.”

And Jehoshaphat said, “Let not the king say such things!”

⁸Then the king of Israel called one of his officers and said, “Bring Micaiah the son of Imla quickly!”

⁹The king of Israel and Jehoshaphat king of Judah, clothed in their robes, sat each on his throne; and they sat at a threshing floor at the entrance of the gate of Samaria; and all the prophets prophesied before them. ¹⁰Now Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah had made horns of iron for himself; and he said, “Thus says the LORD: ‘With these you shall gore the Syrians until they are destroyed.’”

¹¹And all the prophets prophesied so, saying, “Go up to Ramoth Gilead and prosper, for the LORD will deliver it into the king’s hand.”

¹²Then the messenger who had gone to call Micaiah spoke to him, saying, “Now listen, the words of the prophets with one accord encourage the king. Therefore please let your word be like the word of one of them, and speak encouragement.”

¹³And Micaiah said, “As the LORD lives, whatever my God says, that I will speak.”

¹⁴Then he came to the king; and the king said to him, “Micaiah, shall we go

¹⁵So the king said to him, “How many times shall I make you swear that you tell me nothing but the truth in the name of the LORD?”

¹⁶Then he said, “I saw all Israel *i*scattered on the mountains, as sheep that have no *j*shepherd. And the LORD said, ‘These have no master. Let each return to his house in peace.’”

¹⁷And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, “Did I not tell you he would not prophesy good concerning me, but evil?”

¹⁸Then Micaiah said, “Therefore hear the word of the LORD: I saw the LORD sitting on His *k*throne, and all the host of heaven standing on His right hand and His left. ¹⁹And the LORD said, ‘Who will persuade Ahab king of Israel to go up, that he may fall at Ramoth Gilead?’ So one spoke in this manner, and another spoke in that manner. ²⁰Then a *l*spirit came forward and stood before the LORD, and said, ‘I will persuade him.’ The LORD said to him, ‘In what way?’ ²¹So he said, ‘I will go out and be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets.’ And the LORD said, ‘You shall persuade him and also prevail; go out and do so.’ ²²Therefore look! ^mThe LORD has put a lying spirit in the mouth of these prophets of yours, and the LORD has declared disaster against you.”

²³Then Zedekiah the son of Chenaanah went near and *n*struck Micaiah on the cheek, and said, “Which way did the spirit from the LORD go from me to speak to you?”

²⁴And Micaiah said, “Indeed you shall see on that day when you go into an inner chamber to hide!”

²⁵Then the king of Israel said, “Take Micaiah, and return him to Amon the 18:5 The prophets were probably prophets of Asherah, the Canaanite goddess worshiped by Ahab's wife Jezebel (see v. 6; 1 Kin. 18:19).

18:9 The entrance of the gate often led to a large open place in Israelite cities. Public assemblies could convene there or in rooms built into the sides of the gateway. The threshing floor was a large, flat area where grain was separated from straw (see 1 Chr. 21:15). The threshing floor of Ornan was just outside the walls of Jerusalem, where the winds could blow away the chaff. This is probably where the kings had set up their thrones.

18:10 Horns symbolize strength in the OT, so horns of iron would represent great strength (see Zech. 1:18–21).

18:11 In this context, prophesied suggests rantings and ravings typical of the demon-possessed false prophets of Canaan (see 1 Kin. 18:26–29), not true prophecy.

18:13 whatever my God says: The true prophets' prophecies come directly from God. Their words are God's words.

18:15 Ahab knew from experience that his prophets told him what they thought he wanted to hear, not the truth. Because their prophecies agreed with Micaiah's, he knew that Micaiah must have been lying when he prophesied success.

18:16 The Bible often uses sheep and shepherd as metaphors for the people of a nation and their king (see 1 Chr. 17:6, 7). no master: This is a prediction of Ahab's death (v. 34).

18:18 Micaiah saw the Lord in heaven. Here we see God's sovereignty over all. The spirits who stood before Him were both angels and demons, and none could act without God's permission.

18:21, 22 A lying spirit was a demon whom the Lord allowed to deceive the prophets. God cannot lie (see Num. 23:19), but He does allow others to do so. In this sense, God put a lying spirit in the mouth of Ahab's prophets.

governor of the city and to Joash the king's son; ²⁶and say, "Thus says the king: ^a"Put this fellow in prison, and feed him with bread of affliction and water of affliction, until I return in peace."'"

²⁷But Micaiah said, "If you ever return in peace, the LORD has not spoken by me." And he said, "Take heed, all you people!"

Ahab Dies in Battle

²⁸So the king of Israel and Jehoshaphat the king of Judah went up to Ramoth Gilead. ²⁹And the king of Israel said to Jehoshaphat, "I will ^adisguise myself and go into battle; but you put on your robes." So the king of Israel disguised himself, and they went into battle.

³⁰Now the king of Syria had commanded the captains of the chariots who were with him, saying, "Fight with no one small or great, but only with the king of Israel."

³¹So it was, when the captains of the chariots saw Jehoshaphat, that they said, "It is the king of Israel!" Therefore they surrounded him to attack; but Jehoshaphat ^ccried out, and the LORD helped him, and God diverted them from him. ³²For so it was, when the captains of the chariots saw that it was not the king of Israel, that they turned back from pursuing him. ³³Now a certain man drew a bow at random, and struck the king of Israel between the ²joints of his armor. So he said to the driver of his chariot, "Turn around and take me out of the battle, for I am wounded." ³⁴The battle increased that day, and the king of Israel propped himself up in his chariot facing the Syrians until evening; and about the time of sunset he died.

19 Then Jehoshaphat the king of Judah returned safely to his house in Jerusalem. ²And Jehu the son of Hanani ^athe seer went out to meet him, and said to King Jehoshaphat, "Should you help

The Reforms of Jehoshaphat

⁴So Jehoshaphat dwelt at Jerusalem; and he went out again among the people from Beersheba to the mountains of Ephraim, and brought them back to the LORD God of their ^ffathers. ⁵Then he set ^gjudges in the land throughout all the fortified cities of Judah, city by city, ⁶and said to the judges, "Take heed to what you are doing, for ^hyou do not judge for man but for the LORD, ⁱwho is with you ²in the judgment. ⁷Now therefore, let the fear of the LORD be upon you; take care and do it, for ^jthere is no iniquity with the LORD our God, no ^kpartiality, nor taking of bribes."

⁸Moreover in Jerusalem, for the judgment of the LORD and for controversies, Jehoshaphat ^lappointed some of the Levites and priests, and some of the chief fathers of Israel, ³when they returned to Jerusalem. ⁹And he commanded them, saying, "Thus you shall act ^min the fear of the LORD, faithfully and with a loyal heart: ¹⁰ⁿ Whatever case comes to you from your brethren who dwell in their cities, whether of bloodshed or offenses against law or commandment, against statutes or ordinances, you shall warn them, lest they trespass against the LORD and ^owrath come upon ^pyou and your brethren. Do this, and you will not be guilty. ¹¹And take notice: ^qAmariah the chief priest is over you ^rin all matters of the LORD; and Zebadiah the son of Ishmael, the ruler of the house of Judah, for all the king's matters; also the Levites will be officials before you. Behave courageously, and the LORD will be ^swith the good."

18:27 A real prophet's predictions always came true (Deut. 13:1-3; 18:22). Micaiah staked his reputation on the fact that Ahab would not come home in peace—that is, alive.

18:33 at random: This is the human perspective. The wounding of Ahab, disguised as he was, appeared to be an accident. But from God's perspective, chance had no part in it. The arrow reached its true destination. Ahab's disguise could not foil God's plan. Micaiah's prophecy had come true (see v. 16).

19:2 The prophet Hanani had once chastised King Asa for depending on the Arameans to defeat Baasha, king of Israel (see 16:7). Jehu the son of Hanani, also a prophet, now went on a similar mission to Jehoshaphat.

19:4 Originally the land of Israel stretched "from Dan to Beersheba" (see Judg. 20:1). Dan refers to the town of Dan just north of the Sea of Galilee, not the tribe of Dan near Judah. But after the division into two kingdoms the mountains of Ephraim became the northern border of Judah. Thus this verse asserts that Jehoshaphat restored the people of Judah to more faithful observance of the covenant. This was admirable, but it was also a basic duty of the Davidic monarch (see 14:4; 15:9; 17:7-9). Jehoshaphat was only doing his job.

19:5, 6 The role of Jehoshaphat's judges differed from that of the heroic leaders who led Israel before David's time (Judg. 2:16). The judges that Jehoshaphat appointed served as local officials in the fortified cities.

19:8 Matters too difficult for the local judges or those that required appeal went to the high court in Jerusalem where the Levites, priests, and chief fathers sat.

19:11 As chief priest, Amariah (mentioned only here) held jurisdiction over all matters of the LORD, that is, religious cases. Zebadiah, the ruler of the house of Judah (see 1 Kin. 4:7), ruled over all the king's matters—that is, civil cases.

Ammon, Moab, and Mount Seir Defeated

20 It happened after this that the people of ^aMoab with the people of ^bAmmon, and others with them besides the ^cAmmonites, ¹ came to battle against Jehoshaphat. ²Then some came and told Jehoshaphat, saying, “A great multitude is coming against you from beyond the sea, from ²Syria; and they are ^din Hazazon Tamar” (which is ^eEn Gedi). ³And Jehoshaphat feared, and set ³himself to ^fseek the LORD, and ^gproclaimed a fast throughout all Judah. ⁴So Judah gathered together to ask ^hhelp from the LORD; and from all the cities of Judah they came to seek the LORD.

⁵Then Jehoshaphat stood in the assembly of Judah and Jerusalem, in the house of the LORD, before the new court, ⁶and said: “O LORD God of our fathers, are You not ⁱGod in heaven, and ^jdo You not rule over all the kingdoms of the nations, and ^kin Your hand is there not power and might, so that no one is able to withstand You? ⁷Are You not ^lour God, who ^mdrove out the inhabitants of this land before Your people Israel, and gave it to the descendants of Abraham ⁿYour friend forever? ⁸And they dwell in it, and have built You a sanctuary in it for Your name, saying, ⁹“If disaster comes upon us—sword, judgment, pestilence, or famine—we will stand before this temple and in Your presence (for Your ^pname is in this temple), and cry out to You in our affliction, and You will hear and save.” ¹⁰And now, here are the people of Ammon, Moab, and Mount Seir—whom You ^qwould not let Israel invade when they came out of the land of Egypt, but ^rthey turned from them and did not destroy them— ¹¹here they are, rewarding us ^sby coming to throw us out of Your possession which You have given us to inherit. ¹²O our God, will You not ^tjudge them? For we have no power against this great multitude that is coming against us; nor do we know what to do, but “our eyes are upon You.”

¹³Now all Judah, with their little ones, their wives, and their children, stood before the LORD.

¹⁴Then ^vthe Spirit of the LORD came upon Jahaziel the son of Zechariah, the son of Benaiah, the son of Jeiel, the son of Mattaniah, a Levite of the sons of Asaph, in the midst of the assembly. ¹⁵And he said, “Listen, all you of Judah and you inhabitants of Jerusalem, and you, King Jehoshaphat! Thus says the LORD to you: ^w“Do not be afraid nor dismayed because of this great multitude, ^xfor the battle is not yours, but God’s. ¹⁶Tomorrow go down against them. They will surely come up by the Ascent of Ziz, and you will find them at the end of the ⁴brook before the Wilderness of Jeruel. ¹⁷^yYou will not need to fight in this battle. Position yourselves, stand still and see the salvation of the LORD, who is with you, O Judah and Jerusalem!” Do not fear or be dismayed; tomorrow go out against them, ^zfor the LORD is with you.”

¹⁸And Jehoshaphat ^abowed his head with his face to the ground, and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem bowed before the LORD, worshipping the LORD. ¹⁹Then the Levites of the children of the Kohathites and of the children of the Korahites stood up to praise the LORD God of Israel with voices loud and high.

²⁰So they rose early in the morning and went out into the Wilderness of Tekoa; and as they went out, Jehoshaphat stood and said, “Hear me, O Judah and you inhabitants of Jerusalem: ^bBelieve in the LORD your God, and you shall be established; believe His prophets, and you shall prosper.” ²¹And when he had 20:1 Moab went to battle against Jehoshaphat under the leadership of Mesha, who had gained Moab’s independence from the Omri dynasty of Israel soon after Ahab died (see 18:34). The battle mentioned here took place when Ahab’s son Ahaziah was king of Israel (20:35). The defeat of Jehoshaphat’s enemies in Israel only meant the rise of other enemies outside Israel. This situation would test Jehoshaphat’s faith.

20:2 Hazazon Tamar is on the western shore of the Dead Sea, a few miles south of Qumran. It was David’s hiding place in the days of Saul (1 Sam. 23:29).

20:3, 4 seek the LORD: Jehoshaphat’s reforms (see 19:4) were not hollow religiosity, and they did not break under the strain of sour circumstances. As soon as he heard of bad news from the north, Jehoshaphat sought God and proclaimed a fast. He knew that success required God’s favor. And if God was for them, they could not lose (vv. 6–12; see 13:5, 12).

20:7 Jehoshaphat recalled God’s care for His people Israel in the past, when He had led them to victory over their Canaanite foes.

20:14 As a member of the Asaph division of the Levites (1 Chr. 6:39; 15:17, 19; 16:7), Jahaziel was probably a musician. Music was an important part of Israel’s religious life (see 13:12). The people would go into battle praising God with instruments and voices (vv. 19, 21, 22, 28).

20:16, 17 The Ascent of Ziz was a dry stream bed just north of En Gedi. The Wilderness of Jeruel lay between Hebron and the Dead Sea.

20:19 The Kohathites were members of the Levitical division of Heman (1 Chr. 6:33). The Korahites were a subclan of the Kohathites (1 Chr. 6:37, 39), who were employed as gatekeepers to the temple (1 Chr. 26:1–19). Their positive response to Jahaziel’s speech and their praise to God (see vv. 15–17) was as important as any military preparation.

20:20 Tekoa was a town about ten miles south of Jerusalem. The Wilderness of Tekoa was between the town and the Ascent of Ziz (v. 16).

20:21 sing . . . praise: The battle was the Lord’s and its outcome was certain. The people celebrated God and His victory (see Ex. 15:1, 20, 21; Judg. 7:18–20; Ps. 47; 98).

consulted with the people, he appointed those who should sing to the LORD, ^eand who should praise the beauty of holiness, as they went out before the army and were saying:

^d“Praise the LORD,

²²Now when they began to sing and to praise, ^fthe LORD set ambushes against the people of Ammon, Moab, and Mount Seir, who had come against Judah; and they were defeated. ²³For the people of Ammon and Moab stood up against the inhabitants of Mount Seir to utterly kill and destroy them. And when they ⁵had made an end of the inhabitants of Seir, ^gthey helped to destroy one another.

²⁵When Jehoshaphat and his people came to take away their spoil, they found among them an abundance of valuables on the ⁶dead bodies, and precious jewelry, which they stripped off for themselves, more than they could carry away; and they were three days gathering the spoil because there was so much. ²⁶And on the fourth day they assembled in the Valley of ⁷Berachah, for there they blessed the LORD; therefore the name of that place was called The Valley of Berachah until this day. ²⁷Then they returned, every man of Judah and Jerusalem, with Jehoshaphat in front of them, to go back to Jerusalem with joy, for the LORD had ^hmade them rejoice over their enemies. ²⁸So they came to Jerusalem, with stringed instruments and harps and trumpets, to the house of the LORD. ²⁹And ⁱthe fear of God was on all the kingdoms of those countries when they heard that the LORD had fought against the enemies of Israel. ³⁰Then the realm of Jehoshaphat was quiet, for his ^jGod gave him rest all around.

The End of Jehoshaphat's Reign

³¹^kSo Jehoshaphat was king over Judah. He was thirty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-five years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Azubah the daughter of Shilhi. ³²And he walked in the way of his father ^lAsa, and did not turn aside from it, doing what was right in the sight of the LORD. ³³Nevertheless ^mthe ⁸high places were not taken away, for as yet the people had not ⁿdirected their hearts to the God of their fathers.

³⁴Now the rest of the acts of Jehoshaphat, first and last, indeed they are written in the book of Jehu the son of Hanani, ^owhich is mentioned in the book of the kings of Israel.

³⁵After this ^pJehoshaphat king of Judah allied himself with Ahaziah king of Israel, ^qwho acted very ^rwickedly. ³⁶And he allied himself with him ^sto make ships to go to Tarshish, and they made the ships in Ezion Geber. ³⁷But Eliezer the son of Dodavah of Mareshah prophesied against 20:23 Before Judah's armies could even reach the battlefield, the Ammonites and Moabites attacked their Edomite allies and destroyed them, then they turned against each other. As a result, Judah won without even having to fight. God had demonstrated that the battle was His (v. 15) and that He could accomplish His purposes without even using an army.

20:25 Spoils of war like valuables (precious metals) and jewelry became God's property, because God Himself had triumphed and therefore deserved the fruits of war (see 15:18; Josh. 6:24; 1 Chr. 18:7, 8).

20:26 After they experienced God's blessing and protection in the wilderness, the Judeans renamed Ziz the Valley of Berachah, meaning "Blessing," to remind themselves of God's goodness.

20:29 The LORD had fought: The spectacle of Jehoshaphat's enemies in defeat, like the battles that Joshua had led years before, struck fear in the hearts of enemy nations (17:10; see Josh. 2:9-11; 1 Chr. 14:17) because it involved an obvious miracle. No human army could prevail over God's omnipotence.

20:34 For a complete account of Jehoshaphat's reign the chronicler recommended the book of Jehu, which itself was cited in the book of the kings of Israel. Jehu was the son of the prophet Hanani and was a prophet himself (see 19:2). He is mentioned in 1 Kings in connection with the kings of Israel (see 1 Kin. 16:1, 7). He was therefore a good source of information about both the northern and southern kingdoms.

20:35 Ahaziah was the son of Ahab; he succeeded his father and reigned for two years (1 Kin. 22:51). Ahaziah was injured in a fall and turned to the Philistine gods rather than to the Lord for healing (2 Kin. 1:2).

20:36 Tarshish was in the western Mediterranean. The name also came to represent any place far away. Ships of Tarshish were large vessels able to transport heavy cargo over long distances (see 8:17, 18; 9:21). Ezion Geber was a port on the Gulf of Aqaba (or Elath), the eastern arm of the Red Sea (see 8:17).

(Heb. yashar) (20:32; Ex. 15:26; Deut. 12:25; Judg. 17:6) Strong's #3477

The Hebrew word frequently translated right (as when used in Chronicles and Kings to assess the reigns of the kings of Israel and Judah) derives from a Hebrew word meaning "to be level" or "to be upright." By extension it carries connotations of being just or righteous. The word is not only used to speak of the perfect righteousness of God (Deut. 32:4; Ps. 111:7, 8) but is also used to speak of the integrity of one's speech (Job 6:25; Eccl. 12:10) or the righteous quality of a person's lifestyle (Prov. 11:3, 6). The word even implies pure and faithful motives (as in Deut. 9:5; 1 Kin. 9:4). As Israel's second king, David exemplified these qualities in his life (1 Kin. 3:6), becoming a standard for assessing all the kings that followed him (see 17:3; 34:2).

Jehoshaphat, saying, “Because you have allied yourself with Ahaziah, the LORD has destroyed your works.” ¹Then the ships were wrecked, so that they were not able to go ²to Tarshish.

Jehoram Reigns in Judah

21 And ^aJehoshaphat ¹rested with his fathers, and was buried with his fathers in the City of David. Then Jehoram his son reigned in his place. ²He had brothers, the sons of Jehoshaphat: Azariah, Jehiel, Zechariah, Azaryahu, Michael, and Shephatiah; all these were the sons of Jehoshaphat king of Israel. ³Their father gave them great gifts of silver and gold and precious things, with fortified cities in Judah; but he gave the kingdom to Jehoram, because he was the firstborn.

⁴Now when Jehoram ²was established over the kingdom of his father, he strengthened himself and killed all his brothers with the sword, and also others of the princes of Israel.

⁵^bJehoram was thirty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned eight years in Jerusalem. ⁶And he walked in the way of the kings of Israel, just as the house of Ahab had done, for he had the daughter of ^cAhab as a wife; and he did evil in the sight of the LORD. ⁷Yet the LORD would not destroy the house of David, because of the ^dcovenant that He had made with David, and since He had promised to give a lamp to him and to his ^esons forever.

⁸^fIn his days Edom revolted against Judah’s authority, and made a king over themselves. ⁹So Jehoram went out with his officers, and all his chariots with him. And he rose by night and attacked the Edomites who had surrounded him and the captains of the chariots. ¹⁰Thus Edom has been in revolt against Judah’s authority to this day. At that time Lib-

nah revolted against his rule, because he had forsaken the LORD God of his fathers. ¹¹Moreover he made ³high places in the mountains of Judah, and caused the inhabitants of Jerusalem to ^gcommit harlotry, and led Judah astray.

¹²And a letter came to him from Elijah the prophet, saying,

Thus says the LORD God of your father David:

Because you have not walked in the ways of Jehoshaphat your father, or in the ways of Asa king of Judah, ¹³but have walked in the way of the kings of Israel, and have ^hmade Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to ⁱplay the harlot like the ^jharlotry of the house of Ahab, and also have ^kkilled your brothers, those of your father’s household, who were better than yourself, ¹⁴behold, the LORD will strike your people with a serious affliction—your children, your wives, and all your possessions; ¹⁵and you will become very sick with a ^ldisease of your intestines, until your intestines come out by reason of the sickness, day by day.

¹⁶Moreover the ^mLORD ⁿstirred up against Jehoram the spirit of the Philistines and the ^oArabians who were near the Ethiopians. ¹⁷And they came up into Judah and invaded it, and carried away all the possessions that were found in the king’s house, and also ^phis sons and his wives, so that there was not a son left to him except ⁴Jehoahaz, the youngest of his sons.

¹⁸After all this the LORD struck him ^qin his intestines with an incurable disease. ¹⁹Then it happened in the course of time, after the end of two years, that his intestines came out because of his sickness; so he died in severe pain. And his people made no ⁵burning for him, like ^rthe burning for his fathers.

21:2 The names of Jehoram’s brothers highlight Jehoram’s choice as king emphatically, as if to say, “Not these brothers, but this one.” We soon learn how significant for all of them this choice turned out to be (see v. 4).

21:3 gifts . . . fortified cities: Jehoshaphat did what his great-grandfather Rehoboam had done. He gave the kingdom to his firstborn and then distributed extravagant gifts to his other sons (11:23). The purpose evidently was to satisfy each of his sons, since only one of them could succeed him as king.

21:4 princes of Israel: Jehoram extended his bloody purge as far as his distant relatives in Israel (see 18:1). He was so evil that not even blood ties restrained his lust for power.

21:7 Individual kings such as Jehoram committed evil and scorned covenant obligations, but the promise of God to David (Ps. 89:30–37) concerning his house remained intact (see 1 Chr. 17:7–14).

a lamp: This is a figurative way of describing a descendant of David (see 1 Kin. 11:36).

21:8 Edom revolted: Jehoram’s father Jehoshaphat had conquered Edom (20:22, 36).

21:10 In the western lowlands of Judah, Libnah was close to the border with Philistia.

21:11 commit harlotry: Israel’s covenant with God was like a marriage relationship, and to violate it was to commit spiritual unfaithfulness (see Ezek. 16:15–43; 23:1–21; Hos. 4:11–19). Like Solomon before him (1 Kin. 11:1–8), Jehoram failed to provide godly leadership. He led Judah astray.

21:12 Though 1 and 2 Kings pay considerable attention to Elijah the prophet (1 Kin. 17:1–2; 2 Kin. 2:18), the books of the Chronicles mention him only here. He had been taken up into heaven after King Ahaziah’s death (2 Kin. 1:17; 2:1).

21:16 The Arabians were from the southwestern part of the Arabian peninsula, probably near present-day Yemen. They lived across the Red Sea from the Ethiopians.

²⁰He was thirty-two years old when he became king. He reigned in Jerusalem eight years and, to no one's sorrow, departed. However they buried him in the City of David, but not in the tombs of the kings.

Ahaziah Reigns in Judah

22 Then the inhabitants of Jerusalem made ^aAhaziah his youngest son king in his place, for the raiders who came with the ^bArabians into the camp had killed all the ^colder sons. So Ahaziah the son of Jehoram, king of Judah, reigned. ²Ahaziah was ¹forty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned one year in Jerusalem. His mother's name was ^dAthaliah the ²granddaughter of Omri. ³He also walked in the ways of the house of Ahab, for his mother advised him to do wickedly. ⁴Therefore he did evil in the sight of the LORD, like the house of Ahab; for they were his counselors after the death of his father, to his destruction. ⁵He also followed their advice, and went with ³Jehoram the son of Ahab king of Israel to war against Hazael king of Syria at Ramoth Gilead; and the Syrians wounded Joram. ⁶^eThen he returned to Jezreel to recover from the wounds which he had received at Ramah, when he fought against Hazael king of Syria. And ⁴Azariah the son of Jehoram, king of Judah, went down to see Jehoram the son of Ahab in Jezreel, because he was sick.

⁷His going to Joram ^fwas God's occasion for Ahaziah's ⁵downfall; for when he arrived, ^ghe went out with ⁶Jehoram against Jehu the son of Nimshi, ^hwhom the LORD had anointed to ⁷cut off the house of Ahab. ⁸And it happened, when

Queen Mothers

The writers of 1 and 2 Kings and 2 Chronicles tell us much about the queen mothers of Judah. In referring to the 20 different kings who ruled in Judah from the time of Solomon to the time of the Exile, only once do these books fail to mention a queen mother. We assume that the mother of the king must have been an important person in Judah. Unfortunately, very little is known about her role in the government or the society.

Athaliah, the mother of Ahaziah, seized the throne when her son was killed in battle. She then tried to kill all the rightful heirs (22:10). But one of the infant princes was hidden from her. For six years Athaliah ruled Judah with an iron hand; but as soon as the young prince was old enough to become king, Athaliah was overthrown and killed (2 Kin. 11:1-16).

Jehu was ⁱexecuting judgment on the house of Ahab, and ^jfound the princes of Judah and the sons of Ahaziah's brothers who served Ahaziah, that he killed them. ⁹^kThen he searched for Ahaziah; and they caught him (he was hiding in Samaria), and brought him to Jehu. When they had killed him, they buried him, "because," they said, "he is the son of ^lJehoshaphat, who ^msought the LORD with all his heart."

So the house of Ahaziah had no one to assume power over the kingdom.

Athaliah Reigns in Judah

¹⁰ⁿNow when Athaliah the mother of Ahaziah saw that her son was dead, she arose and destroyed all the royal heirs of the house of Judah. ¹¹But ⁸Jehoshabeath, 21:20 The tombs of the kings was a royal cemetery in Jerusalem where most of David's dynasty were buried (Asa was an exception; see 16:14). Jehoram was not buried there, but in Jerusalem, the City of David.

22:1 Ahaziah of Judah was the namesake of his uncle from Israel. Ahaziah's father Jehoram had married a sister of Ahab's son Ahaziah (see 1 Kin. 22:40; 2 Kin. 1:17; 8:18).

22:5 Jehoram the son of Ahab succeeded his brother Ahaziah because Ahaziah had no sons of his own (2 Kin. 1:17). He is also called Joram, a short form of Jehoram, to distinguish him from his brother-in-law Jehoram who was king of Judah. Hazael was the king of Damascus who came to power after assassinating Ben-Hadad (2 Kin. 8:7-15). Elijah had prophesied that this would come about and had even commissioned Elisha to anoint Hazael to his new position (1 Kin. 19:15). Ramoth Gilead: Ahab and Jehoshaphat had tried to recover this city from Aramean domination 12 years earlier (18:3, 28-34). Ahab's son Jehoram persuaded Ahaziah king of Judah to join him in a renewed effort to accomplish that objective.

22:6 Jezreel was a royal city located in the Plain of Jezreel and frequented by the kings of Israel. It was about 10 miles west of the Jordan and 25 miles west of Ramoth Gilead (see 1 Kin. 21:1-4). In this instance Ramah is an abbreviated form of Ramoth Gilead.

22:7, 8 Ahaziah's visit to his dying uncle turned out to be God's occasion for Ahaziah's downfall. Jehu was an officer in Israel's army who participated in the campaign against Ramoth Gilead and who was anointed there as king by a servant of Elisha (2 Kin. 9:1-6). Elijah had prophesied that Jehu would become king of Israel (1 Kin. 19:16). Elisha carried out the commission through his servant, telling Jehu to remove Joram from the throne and to eradicate the entire Omri dynasty (2 Kin. 9:7-10).

22:9 When Ahaziah became aware of the slaughter of the northern dynasty and even some of his own relatives who happened to be in Jezreel (see v. 8), he fled to Israel's capital, Samaria. But Jehu found him there and murdered him. In one day, both kingdoms lost their rulers. they buried him: The people honored him in this way only because Ahaziah was the grandson of the godly Jehoshaphat.

22:10 Most of the royal heirs Athaliah murdered were her own grandchildren. She wanted to stamp out the Davidic dynasty and bring Judah back under Israelite control. But this could not happen as long as Jehu was in power in the north.

22:11 It was Ahaziah's own sister Jehoshabeath who rescued her nephew Joash from her mother Athaliah.

the daughter of the king, took ^cJoash the son of Ahaziah, and stole him away from among the king's sons who were being murdered, and put him and his nurse in a bedroom. So Jehoshabeath, the daughter of King Jehoram, the wife of Jehoiada the priest (for she was the sister of Ahaziah), hid him from Athaliah so that she did not kill him. ¹²And he was hidden with them in the house of God for six years, while Athaliah reigned over the land.

Joash Crowned King of Judah

23 In ^athe seventh year ^bJehoiada strengthened himself, and made a covenant with the captains of hundreds: Azariah the son of Jeroham, Ishmael the son of Jehohanan, Azariah the son of ^cObed, Maaseiah the son of Adaiah, and Elishaphat the son of Zichri. ²And they went throughout Judah and gathered the Levites from all the cities of Judah, and the ^dchief fathers of Israel, and they came to Jerusalem.

³Then all the assembly made a covenant with the king in the house of God. And he said to them, "Behold, the king's son shall reign, as the LORD has ^esaid of the sons of David. ⁴This is what you shall do: One-third of you ^fentering on the Sabbath, of the priests and the Levites, shall be keeping watch over the doors; ⁵one-third shall be at the king's house; and one-third at the Gate of the Foundation. All the people shall be in the courts of the house of the LORD. ⁶But let no one come into the house of the LORD except the priests and ^gthose of the Levites who serve. They may go in, for they are holy; but all the people shall keep the watch of the LORD. ⁷And the Levites shall surround the king on all sides, every man with his weapons in his hand; and whoever comes into the house, let him be put to death. You are to be with the king when he comes in and when he goes out."

⁸So the Levites and all Judah did according to all that Jehoiada the priest commanded. And each man took his men who were to be on duty on the Sabbath, with those who were going off duty on the Sabbath; for Jehoiada the priest had not dismissed ^hthe divisions. ⁹And Jehoiada the priest gave to the captains of hundreds the spears and the large and small ⁱshields which had belonged to King David, that were in the temple of God. ¹⁰Then he set all the people, every man with his weapon in his hand, from the right side of the temple to the left side of the temple, along by the altar and by the temple, all around the king. ¹¹And they brought out the king's son, put the crown on him, ^jgave him the ¹Testimony, and made him king. Then Jehoiada and his sons anointed him, and said, "Long live the king!"

¹²Now when ^kAthaliah heard the noise of the people running and praising the king, she came to the people in the temple of the LORD. ¹³When she looked, there was the king standing by his pillar at the entrance; and the leaders and the trumpeters were by the king. All the people of the land were rejoicing and blowing trumpets, also the singers with musical instruments, and ^lthose who led in praise. So Athaliah tore her clothes and said, ^m"Treason! Treason!"

¹⁴And Jehoiada the priest brought out the captains of hundreds who were set over the army, and said to them, "Take her outside under guard, and slay with the sword whoever follows her." For the priest had said, "Do not kill her in the house of the LORD."

¹⁵So they seized her; and she went by way of the entrance ⁿof the Horse Gate into the king's house, and they killed her there.

¹⁶Then Jehoiada made a ^ocovenant be-

22:12 Though Athaliah reigned for six years, she was not a descendant of David and therefore was never listed among the kings of Judah. Meanwhile, her grandson Joash remained the sole survivor in the Davidic line.

23:2 The Levites were the religious leaders of the nation; the chief fathers were the civil leaders. Jehoiada needed support and help from both civil and religious leaders to overthrow Athaliah.

23:3 covenant: This was a solemn pledge to restore the throne to Joash and to submit to him as David's rightful heir (see 1 Chr. 29:21-24). he said: The speech was given by Jehoiada, not Joash (vv. 3, 8).

23:4 One-third: Jehoiada was referring to the changing of priests and the Levites for the week to come (see 1 Chr. 24:3). The coming and going of so many men at once would disguise the plot.

23:8 Though one division of priests and Levites would normally replace the other, both divisions remained at the temple so they would have enough men to place Joash, the true heir, on David's throne.

23:9 The temple contained spears and shields that David himself had assembled over 150 years before (9:15, 16; 12:10, 11; see 2 Sam. 8:10, 11; 1 Chr. 18:7, 10, 11; 29:2). Jehoiada distributed these among the soldiers, who could not have carried their own weapons into the area without arousing suspicion.

23:11 The Testimony was a copy of the Law of Moses, part of which outlined the king's covenant privileges and duties (see Deut. 17:18-20; 1 Chr. 29:19). anointed him: An anointing was the sign and seal of the king's appointment by God and a symbol of the Spirit of God upon him (see 1 Sam. 16:13; 1 Kin. 1:39).

23:13 The pillar was probably one of the two that stood in front of the temple (see 3:15).

23:14 not . . . in the house of the LORD: The temple was regarded as a place of sanctuary from violence.

23:15 The Horse Gate in the temple provided access to the royal palace. There was another Horse Gate in the city wall.

tween himself, the people, and the king, that they should be the LORD's people. ¹⁷And all the people went to the ²temple of Baal, and tore it down. They broke in pieces its altars and images, and ³killed Mattan the priest of Baal before the altars. ¹⁸Also Jehoiada appointed the oversight of the house of the LORD to the hand of the priests, the Levites, whom David had ⁴assigned in the house of the LORD, to offer the burnt offerings of the LORD, as it is written in the ⁵Law of Moses, with rejoicing and with singing, as it was established by David. ¹⁹And he set the ⁶gatekeepers at the gates of the house of the LORD, so that no one who was in any way unclean should enter.

²⁰ⁱThen he took the captains of hundreds, the nobles, the governors of the people, and all the people of the land, and brought the king down from the house of the LORD; and they went through the Upper Gate to the king's house, and set the king on the throne of the kingdom. ²¹So all the people of the land rejoiced; and the city was quiet, for they had slain Athaliah with the sword.

Joash Repairs the Temple

24 Joash ^awas seven years old when he became king, and he reigned forty years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Zibiah of Beersheba. ²Joash ^bdid what was right in the sight of the LORD all the days of Jehoiada the priest. ³And Jehoiada took two wives for him, and he had sons and daughters.

⁴Now it happened after this that Joash set his heart on repairing the house of the LORD. ⁵Then he gathered the priests and the Levites, and said to them, "Go out to the cities of Judah, and ^cgather from all Israel money to repair the house of your God from year to year, and see that you do it quickly."

However the Levites did not do it quickly. ⁶^dSo the king called Jehoiada the chief priest, and said to him, "Why have you not required the Levites to bring in from Judah and from Jerusalem the collection, according to the commandment of ^eMoses the servant of the LORD and of the assembly of Israel, for the ^ftabernacle of witness?" ⁷For ^gthe sons of Athaliah, that wicked woman, had broken into the house of God, and had also presented all the ^hdedicated things of the house of the LORD to the Baals.

⁸Then at the king's command ⁱthey made a chest, and set it outside at the gate of the house of the LORD. ⁹And they made a proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem to bring to the LORD ^jthe collection that Moses the servant of God had imposed on Israel in the wilderness. ¹⁰Then all the leaders and all the people rejoiced, brought their contributions, and put them into the chest until all had given. ¹¹So it was, at that time, when the chest was brought to the king's official by the hand of the Levites, and ^kwhen they saw that there was much money, that the king's scribe and the high priest's officer came and emptied the chest, and took it and returned it to its place. Thus they did day by day, and gathered money in abundance.

¹²The king and Jehoiada gave it to those who did the work of the service of the house of the LORD; and they hired masons and carpenters to ^lrepair the house of the LORD, and also those who worked in iron and bronze to restore the house of the LORD. ¹³So the workmen labored, and the work was completed by them; they restored the house of God to its original condition and reinforced it. ¹⁴When they had finished, they brought the rest of the money before the king and Jehoiada; ^mthey made from it articles for the house of the LORD, articles for serving and offering, spoons and vessels of gold and silver. And they offered burnt offerings in the house of the LORD continually all the days of Jehoiada.

Apostasy of Joash

¹⁵But Jehoiada grew old and was full of days, and he died; he was one hundred

23:17 killed Mattan: The Law required that leaders in the worship of false gods be put to death (Deut. 13:6-11). This sort of execution had been carried out before (see 1 Kin. 18:40; 2 Kin. 10:25-28).

23:20 The Upper Gate joined the temple to the royal palace on the north side of the temple (see 27:3).

24:1, 2 Joash could not rule alone at the age of seven, so his uncle Jehoiada acted as his guardian and counselor (see v. 3). As long as Jehoiada was alive, Joash did what was right (but see vv. 17, 18).

24:4 Repairing the house of the LORD was necessary because of the neglect it had suffered during the evil reigns of Jehoram, Ahaziah, and Athaliah (see v. 7).

24:6 the collection: This was the "atonement money" that the Levites collected for the temple and its services (Ex. 30:11-16).

24:7 The dedicated things included gold, silver, and other valuables collected as tribute from defeated enemies and presented to God as spoils of war (2 Sam. 8:10, 11).

24:12 The priests and Levites who supervised various ministries such as music, gatekeeping, and maintenance did the work of the service. They knew best what the needs were, so the king and Jehoiada gave the money to them.

24:14 The people had been so generous (see v. 11) that money remained after all the work had been done. This extra money allowed for a complete restocking of the temple with the gold and silver implements needed for its services. The daily burnt offerings were a sign of spiritual vitality and faithfulness to God. As long as Jehoiada remained alive, Judah enjoyed a revival of the true worship of God.

and thirty years old when he died. ¹⁶And they buried him in the City of David among the kings, because he had done good in Israel, both toward God and His house.

¹⁷Now after the death of Jehoiada the leaders of Judah came and bowed down to the king. And the king listened to them. ¹⁸Therefore they left the house of the LORD God of their fathers, and served ⁿwooden images and idols; and ^owrath came upon Judah and Jerusalem because of their trespass. ¹⁹Yet He ^psent prophets to them, to bring them back to the LORD; and they testified against them, but they would not listen.

²⁰Then the Spirit of God ¹came upon ^qZechariah the son of Jehoiada the priest, who stood above the people, and said to them, “Thus says God: ^r‘Why do you transgress the commandments of the LORD, so that you cannot prosper?’ ^sBecause you have forsaken the LORD, He also has forsaken you.” ²¹So they conspired against him, and at the command of the king they ^tstoned him with stones in the court of the house of the LORD. ²²Thus Joash the king did not remember the kindness which Jehoiada his ²father had done to him, but killed his son; and as he died, he said, “The LORD look on it, and ^urepay!”

Death of Joash

²³So it happened in the spring of the year that ^vthe army of Syria came up against him; and they came to Judah and Jerusalem, and destroyed all the leaders of the people from among the people, and sent all their ³spoils to the king of Damascus. ²⁴For the army of the Syrians ^wcame with a small company of men; but the LORD ^xdelivered a very great army into their hand, because they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers. So they ^yexecuted judgment against Joash.

²⁵And when they had withdrawn from him (for they left him severely wounded), ^zhis own servants conspired against him because of the blood of the ⁴sons of Jehoiada the priest, and killed him on his bed. So he died. And they buried him in the City of David, but they did not bury him in the tombs of the kings.

²⁶These are the ones who conspired against him: ⁵Zabad the son of Shimeath the Ammonitess, and Jehozabad the son of ⁶Shimrith the Moabite. ²⁷Now concerning his sons, and ^athe many oracles about him, and the repairing of the house of God, indeed they are written in the ⁷annals of the book of the kings. ^bThen Amaziah his son reigned in his place.

Amaziah Reigns in Judah

25 Amaziah ^awas twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jehoaddan of Jerusalem. ²And he did what was right in the sight of the LORD, ^bbut not with a loyal heart.

³*c*Now it happened, as soon as the kingdom was established for him, that he executed his servants who had murdered his father the king. ⁴However he did not execute their children, but did as it is written in the Law in the Book of Moses, where the LORD commanded, saying, ^d“The fathers shall not be put to death for their children, nor shall the children be put to death for their fathers; but a person shall die for his own sin.”

The War Against Edom

⁵Moreover Amaziah gathered Judah together and set over them captains of thousands and captains of hundreds, according to their fathers' houses, throughout all Judah and Benjamin; and he numbered them ^efrom twenty years old and above, and found them to be 24:16 Jehoiada was buried among the kings because of his service to God and to Joash.

24:19 The extent of Jehoiada's positive influence on Joash became obvious soon after the priest's death. King Joash became a proponent of idolatry and would not listen to God's rebukes. Because of this, God abandoned the Judeans to their evil ways (v. 20).

24:20, 21 Jesus spoke of “Zechariah, son of Berechiah” as one of a series of prophets who was murdered in the temple court (Matt. 23:34, 35). This could be the Zechariah who wrote the Book of Zechariah (Zech. 1:7), which says nothing about his death. Zechariah the son of Jehoiada also died a martyr in the temple court, as described here. Either (1) the chronicler's Zechariah was actually the grandson of Jehoiada and the son of an unmentioned Berechiah, or (2) the prophet who wrote the Book of Zechariah was also slain in the temple precincts, a fact recorded only in the Gospels.

24:22 killed his son: Besides forgetting all the good Jehoiada had done for him, Joash had killed his own cousin (see 22:11; 24:20).

This once-good king had sunk to the level of his evil grandmother Athaliah (see 22:10), despite decades of past faithfulness to God. The weakness of his own convictions did him in. As long as he received good advice, he did well. But all depended on the quality of that counsel. Once it was gone, he abandoned God.

24:24, 25 God arranged for Israel's defeat and Joash's death in fulfillment of Zechariah's dying cry for justice (v. 22). Judgment for evil does not always come so quickly, but it is just as inevitable no matter how long it is delayed. tombs of the kings: Like his grandfather Jehoram, Joash was excluded from the royal cemetery because he fell far short of the Davidic ideal (see 21:20). Ironically, Jehoiada, who was not a king at all, was buried among the kings because of his faithfulness to God and to God's chosen king (v. 16).

25:4 Amaziah did what was “right in the sight of the LORD” (v. 2) by obeying the Book of Moses with regard to the innocent children of lawbreakers (Deut. 24:16).

three hundred thousand choice men, able to go to war, who could handle spear and shield. ⁶He also hired one hundred thousand mighty men of valor from Israel for one hundred talents of silver. ⁷But a f man of God came to him, saying, “O king, do not let the army of Israel go with you, for the LORD is not with Israel—not with any of the children of Ephraim. ⁸But if you go, be gone! Be strong in battle! Even so, God shall make you fall before the enemy; for God has g power to help and to overthrow.”

⁹Then Amaziah said to the man of God, “But what shall we do about the hundred talents which I have given to the troops of Israel?”

And the man of God answered, h “The LORD is able to give you much more than this.” ¹⁰So Amaziah discharged the troops that had come to him from Ephraim, to go back home. Therefore their anger was greatly aroused against Judah, and they returned home in great anger.

¹¹Then Amaziah strengthened himself, and leading his people, he went to i the Valley of Salt and killed ten thousand of the people of Seir. ¹²Also the children of Judah took captive ten thousand alive, brought them to the top of the rock, and cast them down from the top of the rock, so that they all were dashed in pieces.

¹³But as for the soldiers of the army which Amaziah had discharged, so that they would not go with him to battle, they raided the cities of Judah from Samaria to Beth Horon, killed three thousand in them, and took much l spoil.

¹⁴Now it was so, after Amaziah came from the slaughter of the Edomites, that j he brought the gods of the people of Seir, set them up to be k his gods, and bowed down before them and burned incense to them. ¹⁵Therefore the anger of the LORD was aroused against Amaziah, and He sent him a prophet who said to him, “Why have you sought l the gods of the people, which m could not rescue their own people from your hand?”

¹⁶So it was, as he talked with him, that the king said to him, “Have we made you the king’s counselor? Cease! Why should you be killed?”

Then the prophet ceased, and said, “I know that God has n determined to destroy you, because you have done this and have not heeded my advice.”

Israel Defeats Judah

¹⁷Now o Amaziah king of Judah asked advice and sent to ²Joash the son of Jehoahaz, the son of Jehu, king of Israel, saying, “Come, let us face one another in battle.”

¹⁸And Joash king of Israel sent to Amaziah king of Judah, saying, “The thistle that was in Lebanon sent to the cedar that was in Lebanon, saying, ‘Give your daughter to my son as wife’; and a wild beast that was in Lebanon passed by and trampled the thistle. ¹⁹Indeed you say that you have defeated the Edomites, and your heart is lifted up to p boast. Stay at home now; why should you meddle with trouble, that you should fall—you and Judah with you?”

²⁰But Amaziah would not heed, for q it came from God, that He might give them into the hand of their enemies, because they r sought the gods of Edom. ²¹So Joash king of Israel went out; and he and Amaziah king of Judah faced one another at s Beth Shemesh, which belongs to Judah. ²²And Judah was defeated by Israel, and every man fled to his tent. ²³Then Joash the king of Israel captured

25:6 The king of Israel was Jehoash (or Joash; v. 17). The hiring of Israelite mercenaries here, though judged evil (v. 7), implies that good relations existed between the two kingdoms.

25:7 As the breakaway kingdom that no longer stood within the Davidic covenant, Israel had disqualified itself as the people of the Lord. It was therefore improper for Judah to form alliances with the northern kingdom (see 19:2; 20:36, 37; 22:7). Because Ephraim was the dominant tribe in Israel, the whole kingdom at times was known as Ephraim (see Hos. 4:15–19).

25:8 If this war had been sanctioned by the Lord, victory would have been certain. But Amaziah had made his own decision to go to battle (v. 5) and had no assurance of God’s help.

25:10 Amaziah heeded the prophet’s advice and sent the Israelites back without even demanding the return of the hundred talents of silver he had paid them (v. 9). This greatly aroused the Israelite mercenaries because they thought their share of the spoils would have been much more than that.

25:11 The Valley of Salt probably refers to the desert south of the Dead Sea. The people of Seir were the Edomites (see 20:10). Amaziah wanted to recover Edom as a Judean province, but he only succeeded in part (see 21:8, 10; 26:2).

25:13 The soldiers who attacked and sacked cities of Judah were those from Israel whom Amaziah had hired and then released (vv. 6, 10). Having been denied a part in the spoils of Edom, they set out to get them from Judah.

25:14 Amaziah had listened to the prophet of God, but then he turned around and worshiped the gods of the people of Seir. This is why the chronicler said that Amaziah served God, “but not with a loyal heart” (v. 2).

25:18 The thistle here represents Amaziah, and the cedar Joash. The point is that it was arrogant for the weak, insignificant Amaziah to suppose that he could defeat Joash. The wild beast that passes by and tramples the thistle represents the war that Amaziah was so eager to pursue. Such a war would crush him.

25:20 it came from God: As we find several times in 2 Chronicles, what appears to be a purely human decision or action turns out to be part of God’s plan of blessing or judgment (see 22:7).

25:21 Of the three places named Beth Shemesh, this one was 18 miles west of Jerusalem. The ark of the covenant came here when it returned from Philistia (see 1 Sam. 6:12–14).

25:23 Since Ephraim lay north of Jerusalem, the Gate of Ephraim was probably in the northern wall of the city, perhaps the same

Amaziah king of Judah, the son of Joash, the son of ¹Jehoahaz, at Beth Shemesh; and he brought him to Jerusalem, and broke down the wall of Jerusalem from the Gate of Ephraim to the Corner Gate—four hundred cubits. ²⁴And he took all the gold and silver, all the articles that were found in the house of God with ^uObed-Edom, the treasures of the king's house, and hostages, and returned to Samaria.

Death of Amaziah

²⁵^v Amaziah the son of Joash, king of Judah, lived fifteen years after the death of Joash the son of Jehoahaz, king of Israel. ²⁶Now the rest of the acts of Amaziah, from first to last, indeed are they not written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel? ²⁷After the time that Amaziah turned away from following the LORD, they made a conspiracy against him in Jerusalem, and he fled to Lachish; but they sent after him to Lachish and killed him there. ²⁸Then they brought him on horses and buried him with his fathers in ³the City of Judah.

Uzziah Reigns in Judah

26 Now all the people of Judah took ¹Uzziah, who was sixteen years old, and made him king instead of his father Amaziah. ²He built ²Elath and restored it to Judah, after the king rested with his fathers.

³Uzziah was sixteen years old when he became king, and he reigned fifty-two years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jecholiah of Jerusalem. ⁴And he did what was ^aright in the sight of the LORD,

⁹And Uzziah built towers in Jerusalem at the ^hCorner Gate, at the Valley Gate, and at the corner buttress of the wall; then he fortified them. ¹⁰Also he built towers in the desert. He dug many wells, for he had much livestock, both in the lowlands and in the plains; he also had farmers and vinedressers in the mountains and in ⁴Carmel, for he loved the soil.

¹¹Moreover Uzziah had an army of fighting men who went out to war by companies, according to the number on their roll as prepared by Jeiel the scribe and Maaseiah the officer, under the hand of Hananiah, one of the king's captains. ¹²The total number of ⁵chief officers of the mighty men of valor was two thousand six hundred. ¹³And under their authority was an army of three hundred and seven thousand five hundred, that made war with mighty power, to help the king against the enemy. ¹⁴Then Uzziah as the later Damascus Gate. The Corner Gate was at the east or west end of the north wall. Four hundred cubits was about six hundred feet.

25:24 One reason Joash's forces demolished the north wall was to gain access to the temple and its treasures. Obed-Edom's sons had been put in charge of the storehouse of the temple, probably meaning both the treasuries of the house of the Lord and the treasuries of the dedicated things (see 1 Chr. 26:15, 20). The treasures of the king's house refers not only to the king's private wealth but also to the state coffers, for there was no difference in principle and practice between the two (9:13; see 1 Chr. 29:3). hostages: These might have included Amaziah himself.

25:27 They must refer to those who decried the defection of Amaziah from the Lord and who wanted to restore a godly regime. Thus Amaziah, like his father Joash (24:25), was assassinated. The fact that Amaziah reached the city of Lachish on the border with Philistia, some 25 miles from Jerusalem, suggests that he may have been seeking sanctuary among the Philistines.

25:28 City of Judah: This is an unusual way of speaking of the City of David. Since there is no note that he was buried with his fathers in the royal tombs, he probably was not.

26:2 On the eastern arm of the Red Sea, Elath was technically in Edomite territory (see 8:17) but regularly was under Israel or Judah throughout OT times (20:36; 21:8–10). Some time after Amaziah's death, Uzziah rebuilt Elath.

26:5 The Zechariah named here may have been the son of Jehoia-da (24:20, 21).

26:6 Also known as Jabneel (see Josh. 15:11), Jabneh lay near the Mediterranean coast, less than 10 miles north of Ashdod. The geographical pattern of Uzziah's campaigns suggests that he was trying to gain access to the Mediterranean Sea and neutralize Philistine influence.

26:7 Gur Baal was most likely at present-day Tell Ghurr, about eight miles east of Beersheba. The Meunites were a desert tribe living mainly in Edom, south and west of the Dead Sea (see 1 Chr. 4:39–41).

26:8 The last recorded contact of Judah with Ammon was almost a hundred years earlier, in the days of Jehoshaphat. The Ammonites and Moabites had defeated the Edomites, but then began to fight each other (20:1, 22, 23). Evidently they still had not recovered sufficiently to prevent Uzziah from dominating them and extracting tribute from them.

26:9 The Corner Gate was at one end of the north wall of Jerusalem (see 25:23). The Valley Gate was on the west side of the city near the temple mount (see Neh. 2:13, 15).

26:10 Archaeological research has uncovered many towers in the desert that date from the time of Uzziah. Carmel was a region south of Hebron, not the famous mountain where Elijah confronted the prophets of Baal. David often went to Carmel when he was fleeing from Saul (1 Sam. 25:2, 5, 7).

prepared for them, for the entire army, shields, spears, helmets, body armor, bows, and slings to cast stones.¹⁵ And he made devices in Jerusalem, invented by skillful men, to be on the towers and the corners, to shoot arrows and large stones. So his fame spread far and wide, for he was marvelously helped till he became strong.

The Penalty for Uzziah's Pride

¹⁶But when he was strong his heart was lifted up, to his destruction, for he transgressed against the LORD his God by entering the temple of the LORD to burn incense on the altar of incense.¹⁷ So Azariah the priest went in after him, and with him were eighty priests of the LORD—valiant men.¹⁸ And they withstood King Uzziah, and said to him, “It is not for you, Uzziah, to burn incense to the LORD, but for the priests, the sons of Aaron, who are consecrated to burn incense. Get out of the sanctuary, for you have trespassed! You shall have no honor from the LORD God.”

¹⁹Then Uzziah became furious; and he had a censer in his hand to burn incense. And while he was angry with the priests, leprosy broke out on his forehead, before the priests in the house of the LORD, beside the incense altar.²⁰ And Azariah the chief priest and all the priests looked at him, and there, on his forehead, he was leprous; so they thrust him out of that place. Indeed he also hurried to get out, because the LORD had struck him.

²¹*King Uzziah was a leper until the day of his death*. He dwelt in an isolated house, because he was a leper; for he was cut off from the house of the LORD. Then

Jotham Reigns in Judah

27 Jotham was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was Jerushah the daughter of Zadok.² And he did what was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father Uzziah had done (although he did not enter the temple of the LORD). And the people of Ammon gave him in that year one hundred talents of silver, ten thousand kors of wheat, and ten thousand of barley. The people of Ammon paid this to him in the second and third years also.⁶ So Jotham became mighty, because he prepared his ways before the LORD his God.

26:16 Uzziah, swollen with pride, entered the temple. Uzziah was a descendant of David, but there were strict limits on his role in worship. Evidently Uzziah chafed at the restrictions.

26:17 The Azariah named here may be the same as Azariah the son of Johanan (1 Chr. 6:10).

26:18 the priests, the sons of Aaron: Uzziah sinned when he exercised priestly privileges that were reserved for the Aaronic order (see Num. 16:39, 40).

26:19 Leprosy was any kind of serious skin condition (see Lev. 13:1–14:32). Today, leprosy refers technically to Hansen's disease, a disease not known in Biblical times.

26:20 The urgency of the priests to thrust him out, as well as Uzziah's own haste to leave, came from the strict requirements of the Law (see Lev. 22:2–6; Num. 12:10, 15). The Law viewed leprosy as a breach of God's own holiness; it was a graphic symbol of defilement.

26:21 isolated house: Because of his uncleanness, Uzziah had no access to the temple either as a worshiper or as king. was over the king's house: Control of the temple and the state now passed to Jotham. This implies a coregency. As long as Uzziah lived, Jotham exercised power on his behalf.

26:22 Isaiah was the prophet who wrote the Book of Isaiah (see Is. 1:1). He witnessed the last years of Uzziah but wrote virtually nothing about him in his book that has survived.

26:23 reigned: This simply means that Jotham made the transition from coregent (v. 21) to full and independent king.

27:1 Jotham's sixteen years began 11 years before Uzziah died. This suggests that Uzziah had leprosy for more than a decade before he died.

27:3 The Upper Gate connected the temple and the royal palace (23:20). Jotham repaired or rebuilt it. the wall of Ophel: Ophel was the original Jebusite area of Jerusalem. Its walls dated back hundreds of years and must have required regular maintenance.

27:4 cities . . . fortresses and towers: From the earliest days, the kings of Judah had built defense works and facilities for storing food and supplies (8:2, 4–6; 11:5–12; 14:6, 7; 17:12; 26:9, 10). In Jotham's time the Assyrians and other potential enemies were becoming a threat, so this building was necessary.

27:5 Uzziah had reduced the Ammonite people to tributary status, but evidently they had broken free. Jotham therefore reasserted his control and forced renewed payments. second and third years: After three years the tribute ended, suggesting that Ammon once more regained its independence.

reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem. ⁹/So Jotham ²rested with his fathers, and they buried him in the City of David. Then ⁹Ahaz his son reigned in his place.

Ahaz Reigns in Judah

28 Ahaz ^awas twenty years old when he became king, and he reigned sixteen years in Jerusalem; and he did not do what was right in the sight of the LORD, as his father David had done. ²For he walked in the ways of the kings of Israel, and made ^bmolded images for ^cthe Baals. ³He burned incense in ^dthe Valley of the Son of Hinnom, and burned ^ehis children in the ^ffire, according to the abominations of the nations whom the LORD had ^gcast out before the children of Israel. ⁴And he sacrificed and burned incense on the ¹high places, on the hills, and under every green tree.

Syria and Israel Defeat Judah

⁵Therefore ^hthe LORD his God delivered him into the hand of the king of Syria. They ⁱdefeated him, and carried away a great multitude of them as captives, and brought them to Damascus. Then he was also delivered into the hand of the king of Israel, who defeated him with a great slaughter. ⁶For ^jPekah the son of Remaliah killed one hundred and twenty thousand in Judah in one day, all valiant men, ^kbecause they had forsaken the LORD God of their fathers. ⁷Zichri, a mighty man of Ephraim, killed Maaseiah the king's son, Azrikam the officer over the house, and Elkanah who was second to the king. ⁸And the children of Israel carried away captive of their ^lbrethren two hundred thousand women, sons, and daughters; and they also took away much ²spoil from them, and brought the spoil to Samaria.

Israel Returns the Captives

⁹ But a ^m prophet of the LORD was there, whose name was Oded; and he went out before the army that came to Samaria, and said to them: "Look, ⁿbecause the LORD God of your fathers was angry with Judah, He has delivered them into your hand; but you have killed them in a rage that ^oreaches up to heaven. ¹⁰And now you propose to force the children of Judah and Jerusalem to be your ^pmale and female slaves; but are you not also guilty before the LORD your God?" ¹¹Now hear me, therefore, and return the captives, whom you have taken captive from your brethren, ^qfor the fierce wrath of the LORD is upon you."

¹²Then some of the heads of the children of Ephraim, Azariah the son of Johanan, Berechiah the son of Meshillemoth, Jehizkiah the son of Shallum, and Amasa the son of Hadlai, stood up against those who came from the war, ¹³and said to them, "You shall not bring the captives here, for we already have offended the LORD. You intend to add to our sins and to our guilt; for our guilt is great, and there is fierce wrath against Israel."

¹⁴So the armed men left the captives and the ³spoil before the leaders and all the assembly. ¹⁵Then the men ^rwho were designated by name rose up and took the captives, and from the ⁴spoil they clothed all who were naked among them, dressed them and gave them sandals, ^sgave them food and drink, and anointed them; and they let all the feeble ones ride on donkeys. So they brought them to their brethren at Jericho, ^tthe city of palm trees. Then they returned to Samaria.

Assyria Refuses to Help Judah

¹⁶^u At the same time King Ahaz sent to the ⁵kings of Assyria to help him.

28:1 Ahaz's reign of sixteen years could mean that he came to the throne about four years after the sixteen-year tenure of his father Jotham (see 27:1).

28:3 The Valley of the Son of Hinnom was just outside the western wall of Jerusalem. It was a dumping ground for all kinds of refuse, much of which was burned. The valley itself became a symbol of impurity. It was used as a site of pagan worship, including human sacrifice (see 2 Kin. 23:10; Jer. 7:31, 32; 19:2-6; 32:35). the abominations of the nations: Worshipers of the Ammonite god Molech practiced human and child sacrifice (see Lev. 18:21; 20:2-5; Deut. 12:31).

28:4 every green tree: Canaanite nature cults focused on evergreens, probably as symbols of perpetual fertility.

28:5 king of Syria: Rezin (2 Kin. 16:5).

28:6 Pekah, who assassinated Pekahiah son of Menahem so he could become king of Israel (see 2 Kin. 15:23-25), reigned for 20 years (2 Kin. 15:27). He was murdered in a plot headed by Hoshea, the last king of Israel. because they had forsaken the LORD God: Pekah was not offended by Judah's godlessness and did not himself initiate this purge. Rather, God used Pekah to carry out His judgment.

28:7 The officer over the house was a manager of the palace and all of its staff and activities.

28:9 This prophet Oded is mentioned only here. killed . . . in a rage: God used the Israelite armies to carry out his judgment on Judah (v. 6), but He never intended for the Israelites to enjoy it. Oded condemned their malicious and self-serving attitude.

28:10 The Israelites intended to make the survivors of Judah their slaves, although this was forbidden by the Law of Moses (Lev. 25:39-46).

28:13 offended the LORD: This admission by Israel's leaders applies not only to the outrageous slaughter of their brethren from Judah (v. 6) but also to the whole course of their history until then. The Israelites could see from the rise of the Assyrians and their encroachment on Israel that the end was near. Within ten years, the Assyrians would capture Samaria and deport all of the Israelites. The Israelites brought this judgment on themselves (see 2 Kin. 17:7, 18).

28:15 anointed them: They applied balms and oils to the wounded.

28:16 The kings of Assyria were Tiglath-Pileser III, Shalmaneser V, and Sargon II.

¹⁷For again the ^vEdomites had come, attacked Judah, and carried away captives. ¹⁸^wThe Philistines also had invaded the cities of the lowland and of the South of Judah, and had taken Beth Shemesh, Aijalon, Gederoth, Sochoh with its villages, Timnah with its villages, and Gimzo with its villages; and they dwelt there. ¹⁹For the LORD ^bbrought Judah low because of Ahaz king of ^xIsrael, for he had ^yencouraged moral decline in Judah and had been continually unfaithful to the LORD. ²⁰Also ^zTiglath-Pileser ⁷ king of Assyria came to him and distressed him, and did not assist him. ²¹For Ahaz took part of the treasures from the house of the LORD, from the house of the king, and from the leaders, and he gave it to the king of Assyria; but he did not help him.

Apostasy and Death of Ahaz

²²Now in the time of his distress King Ahaz became increasingly unfaithful to the LORD. This is that King Ahaz. ²³For ^ahe sacrificed to the gods of Damascus which had defeated him, saying, “Because the gods of the kings of Syria help them, I will sacrifice to them ^bthat they may help me.” But they were the ruin of him and of all Israel. ²⁴So Ahaz gathered the articles of the house of God, cut in pieces the articles of the house of God, ^cshut up the doors of the house of the LORD, and made for himself altars in every corner of Jerusalem. ²⁵And in every single city of Judah he made ^dhigh places to burn incense to other gods, and provoked to anger the LORD God of his fathers.

²⁶^d Now the rest of his acts and all his ways, from first to last, indeed they are written in the book of the kings of Judah and Israel. ²⁷So Ahaz ⁹rested with his fathers, and they buried him in the city, in Jerusalem; but they ^edid not bring him into the tombs of the kings of Israel. Then Hezekiah his son reigned in his place.

Hezekiah Reigns in Judah

29 Hezekiah ^abecame king when he was twenty-five years old, and he reigned twenty-nine years in Jerusalem. His mother's name was ¹Abijah the daughter of Zechariah. ²And he did what was right in the sight of the LORD, according to all that his father David had done.

Hezekiah Cleanses the Temple

³In the first year of his reign, in the first month, he ^bopened the doors of the house of the LORD and repaired them. ⁴Then he brought in the priests and the Levites, and gathered them in the East Square, ⁵and said to them: “Hear me, Levites! Now ²sanctify yourselves, ^csanctify the house of the LORD God of your fathers, and carry out the rubbish from the holy place. ⁶For our fathers have trespassed and done evil in the eyes of the LORD our God; they have forsaken Him, have ^dturned their faces away from the ³dwelling place of the LORD, and turned

28:17 The relationship between Judah and the Edomites changed often. Judah usually dominated Edom and was never under its control, but the extent of domination varied from one generation to the next (see 8:17; 20:2, 22, 36; 21:8–10; 25:11; 26:2). Now Edom was independent once again and powerful enough to invade Judah and take prisoners. Ahaz solicited help from Assyria (v. 16).

28:18 lowland: This region between the hill country of Judah and the coastal plain is commonly called the Shephelah. The South was the Negev. Beth Shemesh was 18 miles west of Jerusalem near the Philistine border. Aijalon was in the Aijalon valley seven miles north of Beth Shemesh. Gederoth was possibly the same as Gederah, located about three miles west of Aijalon. Sochoh was in the southern lowlands, about ten miles southwest of Hebron. Gimzo was eight miles northwest of Aijalon. All these places were near valleys that led up to central Judah from the surrounding plains. Control of them meant control of Judah itself. Because Ahaz understood this, he appealed to Assyria.

28:20 Tiglath-Pileser brought Mesopotamian influence over the countries of the eastern Mediterranean to its highest point. He undertook a campaign against Arpad in Syria and terrorized Menahem of Israel so much that Menahem paid him a huge bribe to be left alone (2 Kin. 15:19). Tiglath returned to the west again, and Ahaz scrambled for protection against Syria and Israel (2 Kin. 16:5–7; Is. 7:1, 2). The Assyrians overran Damascus and replaced the assassinated Pekah of Israel with Hoshea (2 Kin. 15:30), but they did not assist Ahaz. The king of Judah's troubles with the Edomites, Philistines, Arameans, and even Israelites (Is. 7:1) were over for the time being, but at great cost.

28:23 King Ahaz's idolatry and unfaithfulness to God (v. 19) led to God's judgment. Rather than repent, Ahaz sought to appease the gods who had defeated him, the gods of Damascus. Not only was he being idolatrous, he was ignoring the fact that Damascus itself had fallen to the Assyrians.

28:24 The account in 2 Kin. 16:10–18 relates how Ahaz, having seen an altar in Damascus, ordered one like it to be built in Jerusalem. On this altar he offered regular burnt offerings. He used the great bronze altar of Solomon as a means of divination. He dismantled the carts supporting the lavers (4:14) and took the great bronze Sea from its pedestals (4:2, 3). These must have been among the articles that he destroyed.

28:25 If destroying high places is a sign of a godly reign (see 14:3, 5; 15:16; 16:6), then constructing them is a clear sign of the opposite. The phrase God of his fathers calls attention to God's covenant relationship with both Israel and Judah.

28:27 The term kings of Israel refers not just to the northern kingdom, but to the entire nation under God.

29:2 Hezekiah was the only king of Judah who was as faithful to the Lord as David had been.

29:3 The first year of Hezekiah's independent rule began in 715 B.C. Hezekiah had ruled alongside Ahaz since 729 B.C. The fact that Hezekiah began his work on the restoration of the temple in his first month testifies to his zeal for God's work. Hezekiah opened the doors of the temple as a step toward spiritual renewal. Ahaz had closed the doors as an expression of hostility to God and the covenant (see 28:24). Hezekiah wasted no time in dealing with the sins of his predecessor.

29:4 The East Square was the courtyard directly in front of the portico of the temple (see 4:9, 10; 6:13; 7:7).

their backs on Him. ^{7e}They have also shut up the doors of the vestibule, put out the lamps, and have not burned incense or offered burnt offerings in the holy place to the God of Israel. ⁸Therefore the ^fwrath of the LORD fell upon Judah and Jerusalem, and He has ^ggiven them up to trouble, to desolation, and to ^hjeering, as you see with your ⁱeyes. ⁹For indeed, because of this ^jour fathers have fallen by the sword; and our sons, our daughters, and our wives are in captivity.

¹⁰“Now it is in my heart to make ^ka covenant with the LORD God of Israel, that His fierce wrath may turn away from us. ¹¹My sons, do not be negligent now, for the LORD has ^lchosen you to stand before Him, to serve Him, and that you should minister to Him and burn incense.”

¹²Then these Levites arose: ^mMahath the son of Amasai and Joel the son of Azariah, of the sons of the ⁿKohathites; of the sons of Merari, Kish the son of Abdi and Azariah the son of Jehallelel; of the Gershonites, Joah the son of Zimmah and Eden the son of Joah; ¹³of the sons of Elizaphan, Shimri and Jeiel; of the sons of Asaph, Zechariah and Mattaniah; ¹⁴of the sons of Heman, Jehiel and Shimeih; and of the sons of Jeduthun, Shemaiah and Uzziel.

cording to the commandment of the king, at the words of the LORD, ^pto cleanse the house of the LORD. ¹⁶Then the priests went into the inner part of the house of the LORD to cleanse it, and brought out all the debris that they found in the temple of the LORD to the court of the house of the LORD. And the Levites took it out and carried it to the Brook ^qKidron.

¹⁷Now they began to ⁵sanctify on the first day of the first month, and on the eighth day of the month they came to the vestibule of the LORD. So they sanctified the house of the LORD in eight days, and on the sixteenth day of the first month they finished.

¹⁸Then they went in to King Hezekiah and said, “We have cleansed all the house of the LORD, the altar of burnt offerings with all its articles, and the table of the showbread with all its articles. ¹⁹Moreover all the articles which King Ahaz in his reign had ^rcast aside in his transgression we have prepared and ⁶sanctified; and there they are, before the altar of the LORD.”

Hezekiah Restores Temple Worship

²⁰Then King Hezekiah rose early, gathered the rulers of the city, and went up to the house of the LORD. ²¹And they brought seven bulls, seven rams, seven lambs, and seven male goats for a ^ssin

29:9 captivity: This could refer to the fall of Samaria and deportation of the northern tribes just seven years earlier (2 Kin. 17:6). But under the wicked leadership of Ahaz, many of the people of Judah had been taken captive by Rezin of Damascus and Pekah of Israel (see 28:5–8). Hezekiah’s reference to Judah and Jerusalem (v. 8) suggests that he might have been referring to this.

(Heb. taher) (29:16; Lev. 14:48; Ps. 51:2, 7; Is. 66:17) Strong’s #2891

This Hebrew term means “to make free from blemish,” almost always in a ritual or spiritual sense (although once the word is used for the wind’s cleaning away of clouds and once for the refiner’s purifying of silver; see Job 37:21; Mal. 3:3). Almost half the occurrences are in Leviticus, where ritual cleansing is related to sanctification and is opposed to the moral filthiness of the Israelites (Lev. 16:19). Objects and people involved in the worship of the Lord—such as the temple, the furniture in the temple, and the Levites—needed cleansing because the Lord is a holy God (Num. 8:5–22; 1 Chr. 23:28). The ritual external cleansing of people was a symbol of internal purity (Gen. 35:2; Zech. 3:3–5). Jeremiah and Ezekiel prophesied of the future cleansing of the people from their sins so that they could truly be God’s people, both outside and inside (Jer. 33:8; Ezek. 36:25, 33; 37:23). The idea of cleansing carries through into the NT. The Book of Revelation pictures the Lamb’s bride—the church—in clean linen which symbolizes the righteous acts of believers (2 Cor. 7:1; Eph. 5:26; 1 John 1:9; Rev. 19:8).

29:10 Hezekiah’s covenant placed him and his people under the authority of God. Hezekiah pledged himself to lead the nation in faithfulness, as the terms of the original Davidic covenant demanded (23:3, 11, 16; see Deut. 17:18–20; 31:9–13; 1 Chr. 28:9).

29:12 Kohathites . . . Merari . . . Gershonites: Hezekiah summoned the leaders of the three major Levitical clans, two leaders from each clan.

29:13, 14 The family of Elizaphan was part of Kohath (1 Chr. 15:8). Asaph was the father of a division of Levitical musicians (see 1 Chr. 25:1, 2). Heman and Jeduthun were musicians (see 1 Chr. 25:1, 3–5). Jeduthun was also known as Ethan (1 Chr. 15:17, 19).

29:15 The phrase at the words of the LORD means that Hezekiah undertook his reformation at God’s direction. His instructions to the nation in this case had unique authority (see 1 Chr. 28:11–19; 29:23, 24).

29:16 The inner part apparently refers to the Most Holy Place, and the term temple may refer also to the larger chamber, the holy place (3:5–7; 4:7, 8). The court was the inner court just outside the temple, the area restricted to the priests and Levites (4:9). The work of temple repair and restoration began in the Most Holy Place and then continued until it reached the courtyard. The Brook Kidron was the wadi just east of Jerusalem where debris was burned (see 15:16).

29:17 The work began on the first day of the first month of Hezekiah’s reign, not of the calendar month (v. 3). The vestibule was a porch across the front of the temple. Sanctify means to “cleanse or purify” or “to set apart for a holy purpose.”

29:19 articles: Ahaz had destroyed some but not all of the temple implements (see 28:24).

29:21 bulls . . . rams . . . lambs: The Law required the sacrifice of these animals for atonement of sin in general (see Lev. 1:3–13). On the other hand, the sacrifice of goats atoned for specific sins (Lev. 4:1–5:13). Here the priests offered seven of each kind to signify the offering for the kingdom, for the sanctuary, and for Judah. Then he commanded the priests, the sons of Aaron, to offer them on the altar of the LORD. ²² So they killed the bulls, and the priests received the blood and ^usprinkled it on the altar. Likewise they killed the rams and sprinkled the blood on the altar. They also killed the lambs and sprinkled the blood on the altar. ²³ Then they brought out the male goats for the sin offering before the king and the assembly, and they laid their ^uhands on them. ²⁴ And the priests killed them; and they presented their blood on the altar as a sin offering ^vto make an atonement for all Israel, for the king commanded that the burnt offering and the sin offering be made for all Israel.

²⁵ ^w And he stationed the Levites in the house of the LORD with cymbals, with stringed instruments, and with harps, ^xaccording to the commandment of David, of ^yGad the king's seer, and of Nathan the prophet; ^zfor thus was the commandment of the LORD by His prophets. ²⁶ The Levites stood with the instruments ^aof David, and the priests with ^bthe trumpets. ²⁷ Then Hezekiah commanded them to offer the burnt offering on the altar. And when the burnt offering began, ^cthe song of the LORD also began, with the trumpets and with the instruments of David king of Israel. ²⁸ So all the assembly worshiped, the singers sang, and the trumpeters sounded; all this continued until the burnt offering was finished. ²⁹ And when they had finished offering, ^dthe king and all who were present with him bowed and worshiped. ³⁰ Moreover King Hezekiah and the leaders commanded the Levites to sing praise to the LORD with the words

³¹ Then Hezekiah answered and said, "Now that you have consecrated yourselves to the LORD, come near, and bring sacrifices and ^ethank offerings into the house of the LORD." So the assembly brought in sacrifices and thank offerings, and as many as were of a ^fwilling heart brought burnt offerings. ³² And the number of the burnt offerings which the assembly brought was seventy bulls, one hundred rams, and two hundred lambs; all these were for a burnt offering to the LORD. ³³ The consecrated things were six hundred bulls and three thousand sheep. ³⁴ But the priests were too few, so that they could not skin all the burnt offerings; therefore ^gtheir brethren the Levites helped them until the work was ended and until the other priests had ^hsanctified themselves, ⁱfor the Levites were ^jmore diligent in ^jsanctifying themselves than the priests. ³⁵ Also the burnt offerings were in abundance, with ^kthe fat of the peace offerings and with ^lthe drink offerings for every burnt offering.

So the service of the house of the LORD was set in order. ³⁶ Then Hezekiah and all the people rejoiced that God had prepared the people, since the events took place so suddenly.

wholeness of their repentance. The kingdom refers to the nation as a political entity, Judah to the people. Both the state and the people needed atonement. The sanctuary refers to the temple itself. 29:24 The repetition of all Israel here suggests that Hezekiah meant to include all twelve tribes, including the northern kingdom (see 30:1-9).

29:25 King David was responsible for religious as well as civil and political matters. He had exercised that responsibility by appointing Levitical musicians and instructing them about their temple ministries (see 1 Chr. 23:2, 27; 25:1-31). He was guided and advised by two of God's faithful prophets, Gad and Nathan.

29:26 The instruments of David were those deemed appropriate for temple worship (see 1 Chr. 25:1, 3, 5, 6).

29:30 The words of David and of Asaph refers to the psalms of David and Asaph (1 Chr. 6:39; 15:17; 16:5), many of them in the Book of Psalms. The people of Judah used these psalms for community worship and private meditation.

29:31 Sometimes called "peace" or "fellowship" offerings, thank offerings celebrated the relationship gained by the offerings of atonement (vv. 21-24; see Lev. 3:1-17; 7:11-36). willing heart: People gave these gifts to God not out of compulsion but as joyful responses to the grace of God.

29:33 The thank offerings included people, priests, and God Himself. In effect, the consecrated things made up a banquet at which everyone gathered before the Lord for fellowship and communion. 29:34 Under Ahaz the priests and Levites had been stripped of their duties. Now, 20 years later, there were not enough priests. Hezekiah had to reconsecrate the older priests and commission new ones. His reforms took place so quickly (v. 3) that the priests received a special dispensation to assign Levites to areas of ministry otherwise closed to them, such as skinning sacrificial animals (see Lev. 1:5, 6).

30:1-3 Though the kingdom of Israel had split more than two centuries before, Hezekiah never lost sight of the fact that God's covenant was made with all twelve tribes and that His promises included them all (see Ezek. 37:15-28). The Passover was ordinarily celebrated in the first month of the religious year (Ex. 12:6, 18). But this year the repair and consecration of the temple was still underway (see 29:1-17). The Law made provision for the Passover to be postponed if a person was absent on an important journey or was ritually defiled (Num. 9:9-12). Hezekiah interpreted this Law to include the priests who had not yet consecrated themselves to ministry (see 29:34). All the people of Israel had not had time to gather together at Jerusalem in any case, so they delayed the celebration until the second month.

leaders and all the assembly in Jerusalem had agreed to keep the Passover in the second ^amonth. ³For they could not keep it ^bat ¹the regular time, ^cbecause a sufficient number of priests had not consecrated themselves, nor had the people gathered together at Jerusalem. ⁴And the matter pleased the king and all the assembly. ⁵So they ²resolved to make a proclamation throughout all Israel, from Beersheba to Dan, that they should come to keep the Passover to the LORD God of Israel at Jerusalem, since they had not done it for a long time in the prescribed manner.

⁶Then the ^drunners went throughout all Israel and Judah with the letters from the king and his leaders, and spoke according to the command of the king: “Children of Israel, ^ereturn to the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel; then He will return to the remnant of you who have escaped from the hand of ^fthe kings of ^gAssyria. ⁷And do not be ^hlike your fathers and your brethren, who trespassed against the LORD God of their fathers, so that He ⁱgave them up to ^jdesolation, as you see. ⁸Now do not be ^kstiff-necked, ³as your fathers were, but yield yourselves to the LORD; and enter His sanctuary, which He has sanctified forever, and serve the LORD your God, ^lthat the fierceness of His wrath may turn away from you. ⁹For if you return to the LORD, your brethren and your children will be treated with ^mcompassion by those who lead them captive, so that they may come back to this land; for the LORD your God is

¹³Now many people, a very great assembly, gathered at Jerusalem to keep the Feast of ^tUnleavened Bread in the second month. ¹⁴They arose and took away the ^ualtars that were in Jerusalem, and they took away all the incense altars and cast them into the Brook ^vKidron. ¹⁵Then they slaughtered the Passover *lamb*s on the fourteenth day of the second month. The priests and the Levites ⁴were ^washamed, and ⁵sanctified themselves, and brought the burnt offerings to the house of the LORD. ¹⁶They stood in their ^xplace ⁶according to their custom, according to the Law of Moses the man of God; the priests sprinkled the blood received from the hand of the Levites. ¹⁷For there were many in the assembly who had not ⁷sanctified themselves; ⁸therefore the Levites had charge of the slaughter of the Passover *lamb*s for everyone who was not clean, to sanctify them to the LORD. ¹⁸For a multitude of the people, ^zmany from Ephraim, Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves, 30:5 The fact that all Israel was included reveals that there were many followers of God left in the northern kingdom, despite more than two hundred years of backsliding and the Assyrian conquest (see 29:24).

30:6 the LORD God of Abraham, Isaac, and Israel: Hezekiah appealed to the nation on the basis of the ancient Abrahamic covenant (see 29:5). Even though the kingdom was divided and many of its people languished in exile far from home, God's promise could not change, and it bound them all together as God's people. They still had time to return to the Lord. the remnant: In some places the word remnant means the godly elect from among the Israelite people as a whole (Is. 46:3; Mic. 2:12; 5:7, 8). Here it means those Israelites who had survived Assyrian slaughter and deportation.

30:8 People who were not priests were not allowed to enter the temple, so enter His sanctuary is a figure of speech for serving the Lord.

30:9 The brethren and children were Israelites who had been carried away into Assyrian captivity. Hezekiah pleaded with the remnant left behind to repent, promising that this would result in better treatment of those in captivity and would guarantee their return to the land. According to the covenant (see Deut. 28–30), obedience would lead to blessing in the land, and disobedience would result in exile.

30:10 Zebulun was probably the northernmost territory of Israel at this time because Naphtali had been taken by Tiglath-Pileser III (2 Kin. 15:29).

30:12 In Judah the reaction to Hezekiah's invitation was totally different from Israel's (vv. 10, 11), because God had put His hand . . . on Judah. God's grace is always a part of a person's efforts to please Him.

30:13 Because the Feast of Unleavened Bread immediately followed the Passover and was connected to it (Lev. 23:4–8), the Feast of Unleavened Bread sometimes referred to the Passover as well (Ezra 6:22). second month: A postponement of the feast from the first month was possible under certain circumstances (see v. 2).

30:14 The debris removed from the temple had already been hauled off to the Brook Kidron for burning (29:16), but the burnt offering and incense altars still remained in Jerusalem until the time of the Passover.

30:16 The Levites killed the animals and then handed the blood over to the priests to apply it. Usually burnt offerings were sacrificed by the individual worshipers who gave the blood to the priests (Lev. 1:4, 5).

30:17 Traditionally the slaughter of the Passover lamb was performed by the head of the family (Ex. 12:3–6). But on this occasion many were not ritually purified, and the Levites acted on their behalf.

30:18–20 not cleansed . . . yet they ate: Those who came from distant parts of Israel were disqualified from sacrificing and did not do so. Still, they ate the Passover meal, in violation of the Law of Moses (see Ex. 12:43–49). They felt it more important to obey the spirit of the Passover than its letter. Hezekiah prayed for them, asking God to observe the desire of their hearts. In response, God healed the people; that is, He healed their relationship with Him.

^ayet they ate the Passover contrary to what was written. But Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, “May the good LORD provide atonement for everyone ¹⁹who ^bprepares his heart to seek God, the LORD God of his fathers, though he is not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary.” ²⁰And the LORD listened to Hezekiah and healed the people.

²³Then the whole assembly agreed to keep the feast ^fanother seven days, and they kept it another seven days with gladness. ²⁴For Hezekiah king of Judah ^ggave to the assembly a thousand bulls and seven thousand sheep, and the leaders gave to the assembly a thousand bulls and ten thousand sheep; and a great number of priests ^hsanctified ⁸themselves. ²⁵The whole assembly of Judah rejoiced, also the priests and Levites, all the assembly that came from Israel, the sojourners ⁱwho came from the land of Israel, and those who dwelt in Judah. ²⁶So there was great joy in Jerusalem, for since the time of ^jSolomon the son of David, king of Israel, there had been nothing like this in Jerusalem. ²⁷Then the priests, the Levites, arose and ^kblessed the people, and their voice was heard; and their prayer

The Reforms of Hezekiah

31 Now when all this was finished, all Israel who were present went out to the cities of Judah and ^abroke the *sa-c*red pillars in pieces, cut down the wooden images, and threw down the ^lhigh places and the altars—from all Judah, Benjamin, Ephraim, and Manasseh—until they had utterly destroyed them all. Then all the children of Israel returned to their own cities, every man to his possession.

²And Hezekiah appointed ^bthe divisions of the priests and the Levites according to their divisions, each man according to his service, the priests and Levites ^cfor burnt offerings and peace offerings, to serve, to give thanks, and to praise in the gates of the ²camp of the LORD. ³The king also appointed a ³portion of his ^dpossessions ⁴for the burnt offerings: for the morning and evening burnt offerings, the burnt offerings for the Sabbaths and the New Moons and the set feasts, as it is written in the ^eLaw of the LORD.

⁴Moreover he commanded the people who dwelt in Jerusalem to contribute ^fsupport ⁵for the priests and the Levites, that they might devote themselves to ^gthe Law of the LORD.

⁵As soon as the commandment was circulated, the children of Israel brought in abundance ^hthe firstfruits of grain and wine, oil and honey, and of all the produce of the field; and they brought in abundantly the ⁱtithe of everything.

Genuine seeking after God is more important than adherence to ritual (see 1 Sam. 15:22).

30:22 taught the good knowledge of the LORD: Because of Ahaz's many years of wicked rule (28:23–25), the people of Judah must have become ignorant of the truths of their faith. The people from the north (v. 18) had virtually no preaching of God's revelation for 200 years, apart from the witness of the prophets such as Hosea and Amos. But the Levites' ministry included teaching (17:8–10; Deut. 17:18; 31:9–13; 33:10), and this great Passover was an opportunity to explain the history and purpose of God's covenant with Israel. The people ate throughout the feast because a meal was the central feature of the thank or peace offerings (see 29:31; Lev. 7:28–36; 9:18).

30:23 Like Solomon before him (7:8–10), Hezekiah found it impossible to limit the festivities to eight days (including the Passover). Their common consent to celebrate another seven days was a sure sign of renewed spiritual vitality.

30:25 The sojourners were aliens who lived in Israel and Judah and who could come to the festivals because they adhered to God and the Law (see Deut. 16:11; 26:11; 29:11; 31:12).

30:27 blessed the people: This may have been the formal blessing of Num. 6:24–26.

31:1 The phrases all Israel and all the children of Israel refer to the entire nation, north and south, Israel and Judah.

31:2 The long interruption (28:24) of Judah's official worship in the time of Ahaz brought chaos to their religious life. They abandoned the system of priestly and Levitical divisions. Just as David had originally organized the Levitical system (see 1 Chr. 23:1–26:28), so now Hezekiah had to reorganize it.

31:3 New Moons: This celebration came at the appearance of the new moon, the beginning of another month (see Num. 28:11–15). Though there were many set feasts by the end of the OT period, the ones in view here were the Passover and Feast of Unleavened Bread (Lev. 23:4–8); the Feast of Firstfruits or Pentecost (Lev. 23:15–22); and the Feast of Tabernacles (Lev. 23:33–43).

31:4 The Law stated clearly that the people were to contribute support by their tithes and offerings so the work of the temple could go on (see Num. 18:8–24).

31:5 The early harvests of grain, particularly barley, were being reaped at this time. The Passover had been held in the second month (30:2) and it was now already the third (v. 7). The firstfruits began appearing at the time of the Feast of Passover and Unleavened Bread—that is, in early April or so, and the harvests were fully gathered in some 50 days later, at the time of the Feast of Weeks or Pentecost (Lev. 23:9–22). the tithe: A tenth of the harvest belonged to the Levites, whose sustenance depended on it (v. 4; see Num. 18:21–24). There were three tithes—two every year and one every third year.

⁷ In the third month they began laying them in heaps, and they finished in the seventh month. ⁸ And when Hezekiah and the leaders came and saw the heaps, they blessed the LORD and His people Israel. ⁹ Then Hezekiah questioned the priests and the Levites concerning the heaps. ¹⁰ And Azariah the chief priest, from the ^khouse of Zadok, answered him and said, ¹⁴ “Since the people began to bring the offerings into the house of the LORD, we have had enough to eat and have plenty left, for the LORD has blessed His people; and what is left is this great ^mabundance.”

¹¹ Now Hezekiah commanded them to prepare ⁿrooms⁶ in the house of the LORD, and they prepared them. ¹² Then they faithfully brought in the offerings, the tithes, and the dedicated things; ^oCononiah the Levite had charge of them, and Shimei his brother was the next. ¹³ Jehiel, Azaziah, Nahath, Asahel, Jerimoth, Jozabad, Eliel, Ismachiah, Mahath, and Benaiah were overseers under the hand of Cononiah and Shimei his brother, at the commandment of Hezekiah the king and Azariah the ^pruler of the house of God. ¹⁴ Kore the son of Imnah the Levite, the keeper of the East Gate, was over the ^qfreewill offerings to God, to distribute the offerings of the LORD and the most holy things. ¹⁵ And under him were ^rEden, Miniamin, Jeshua, Shemaiah, Amariah, and Shecaniah, his faithful assistants in

^s the cities of the priests, to distribute ^talotments to their brethren by divisions, to the great as well as the small.

¹⁶ Besides those males from three years old and up who were written in the genealogy, they distributed to everyone who entered the house of the LORD his daily portion for the work of his service, by his division, ¹⁷ and to the priests who were written in the genealogy according to their father's house, and to the Levites ^ufrom twenty years old and up according to their work, by their divisions, ¹⁸ and to all who were written in the genealogy—their little ones and their wives, their sons and daughters, the whole company of them—for in their faithfulness they ^vsanctified themselves in holiness.

¹⁹ Also for the sons of Aaron the priests, who were in ^vthe fields of the common-lands of their cities, in every single city, there were men who were ^wdesignated by name to distribute portions to all the males among the priests and to all who were listed by genealogies among the Levites.

²⁰ Thus Hezekiah did throughout all Judah, and he ^xdid what was good and right and true before the LORD his God.

²¹ And in every work that he began in the service of the house of God, in the law and in the commandment, to seek his God, he did it with all his heart. So he ^yprospered.

Sennacherib Boasts Against the LORD

32 After ^athese deeds of faithfulness, Sennacherib king of Assyria came and entered Judah; he encamped against the fortified cities, thinking to win them

31:6 The holy things were likely metals and other nonperishables (24:10, 11; see 1 Chr. 29:2, 7, 8) which were consecrated to ... God for use in worship and service.

31:7 The third month was the month after the delayed Passover (30:2) and the time of the early harvest (v. 5). The seventh month was Tishri, the month of the final annual harvest of fruits. The Feast of Tabernacles celebrated the year-end harvest (Lev. 23:39; Deut. 16:13) at this time. There was a continual ingathering from the third to the seventh month, and the people brought their tithes to the temple as an expression of renewed devotion.

31:10 The chief priests from Solomon's time onward were Zadokites (see 1 Kin. 2:27, 35).

31:11 prepare rooms: Places already existed in the temple for storing food supplies and other materials (see 1 Chr. 26:15, 20).

31:14 At the front of the temple the East Gate led to the great courtyard and the Kidron valley beyond (see 1 Chr. 26:14).

31:15 Because most of the priests lived in the cities allotted to them and not in Jerusalem (see 1 Chr. 6:54-60), Kore and his assistants took provisions to them (v. 14).

31:16 three years old: The boys described here were young apprentice priests dedicated to the office by their parents. Samuel had such a ministry (see 1 Sam. 1:24, 28; 2:18).

31:17 All religious personnel had to descend from Levi, but the priests as such had to trace their genealogy specifically to Aaron (see 1 Chr. 6:49-53).

31:18 all who were written in the genealogy: This is an all-inclusive way of designating both priests and Levites. Anyone whose lineage was Levitical could draw upon the tithes and offerings raised for their support.

32:1 In Hezekiah's fourteenth year, Sennacherib invaded Judah and eventually laid siege to Jerusalem (2 Kin. 18:13-17). One of the

The Hebrew word translated tithe is derived from 'aser, the Hebrew number for ten. In Gen. 14:20, Abraham gave the priest Melchizedek a tenth of his wealth. This set the precedent throughout the OT for what was considered an appropriate portion of one's wealth to give to the Lord. According to the Law, Israelites were to set aside a tenth of their annual produce for God (Deut. 14:22-28). Whatever was given to the Lord was considered holy (Lev. 27:30-33) and was to be used to support the ministry of the priests and Levites (Num. 18:21). The prophet Malachi proclaimed that the failure to bring a tithe to God was the equivalent of robbing Him (Mal. 3:8).

Hezekiah taken away His high places and His altars, and commanded Judah and Jerusalem, saying, “You shall worship before one altar and burn incense on ^yit”? ¹³Do you not know what I and my fathers have done to all the peoples of other lands? ^qWere the gods of the nations of those lands in any way able to deliver their lands out of my hand? ¹⁴Who was there among all the gods of those nations that my fathers utterly destroyed that could deliver his people from my hand, that your God should be able to deliver you from my ^rhand? ¹⁵Now therefore, ^sdo not let Hezekiah deceive you or persuade you like this, and do not believe him; for no god of any nation or kingdom was able to deliver his people from my hand or the hand of my fathers. How much less will your God deliver you from my hand?”

¹⁶Furthermore, his servants spoke against the LORD God and against His servant Hezekiah.

¹⁷He also wrote letters to revile the LORD God of Israel, and to speak against Him, saying, ^t“As the gods of the nations of other lands have not delivered their people from my hand, so the God of Hezekiah will not deliver His people from my ^uhand.” ^{18v}Then they called out with a loud voice in ^vHebrew to the people of Jerusalem who were on the wall, to frighten them and trouble them, that they might take the city. ¹⁹And they spoke against the God of Jerusalem, as against the gods of the people of the earth—^wthe work of men’s hands.

Sennacherib’s Defeat and Death

^{20x}Now because of this King Hezekiah and ^ythe prophet Isaiah, the son of most imperialistic of Assyria’s kings, Sennacherib undertook many military campaigns to the west. In his own inscriptions he boasts of having taken many of Judah’s cities, a claim supported by the parallel account in 2 Kings. The fortified cities that he took had first been built and equipped by Solomon (8:2-6), and then rebuilt and enlarged by Solomon’s successors down to the time of Hezekiah (see 11:5-12; 14:6, 7; 17:12; 26:9, 10; 27:4; 32:29).

32:3 With the help of 2 Kin. 20:20 we learn that Hezekiah managed to stop the water by concealing the springs outside the city and then digging a tunnel to bring them to the Pool of Siloam inside the city walls. Hezekiah hid the source of water and made it unavailable to the enemy. The Siloam Inscription describes how workmen constructed the 1,800-foot tunnel connecting the springs of Gihon to the Pool of Siloam.

32:4 The brook was the Wadi Kidron, east of Jerusalem.

32:5 Millo means landfill and refers to extensive terracing that surrounded the ancient hills of Ophel and Mt. Zion. The work of extending the hills of Jerusalem was first undertaken by David (1 Chr. 11:7, 8) and continued by Solomon (1 Kin. 9:15).

32:6 The main city gate was where the population could assemble and where court and other official functions were held (see 6:12; 29:4).

32:7 more with us: This is not Judah’s army; Hezekiah meant the armies of heaven (see 2 Kin. 6:14-17).

32:9 Both the OT and Assyrian inscriptions document the siege against Lachish, an important fortified city west of Jerusalem and near the great coastal route (see 11:9). Its capture by Assyria would cut off access to Jerusalem from the west and would give Assyria control of the coast.

32:10 The siege of Jerusalem had not actually begun, but Sennacherib’s envoys spoke of it as already underway. Jerusalem was under siege psychologically.

32:13 Sennacherib’s messengers tried to destroy the peoples’ faith in God by pointing out that the other nations, despite their many gods and many altars, had been powerless to resist the Assyrians. The Assyrians thought the true God was no different than the gods of the nations they had already subjugated.

32:17 Sennacherib also wrote letters because he wanted to avoid a long and costly siege.

32:18 Aramaic had become the language of international communication and diplomacy. The Judean negotiators wanted the matter discussed in Aramaic because they felt that they deserved to be addressed in regular diplomatic language. The Assyrians continued the dialogue in Hebrew to frighten and trouble the people.

32:20 By now the prophet Isaiah had been involved in public ministry to the kings of Judah for nearly 40 years (see 26:22; Is. 6:1).

Amoz, prayed and cried out to heaven. ²¹ Then the LORD sent an angel who cut down every mighty man of valor, leader, and captain in the camp of the king of Assyria. So he returned ^ashamefaced to his own land. And when he had gone into the temple of his god, some of his own offspring struck him down with the sword there.

²² Thus the LORD saved Hezekiah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem from the hand of Sennacherib the king of Assyria, and from the hand of all others, and ^bguided them on every side. ²³ And many brought gifts to the LORD at Jerusalem, and ^bpresents ⁷ to Hezekiah king of Judah, so that he was ^cexalted in the sight of all nations thereafter.

Hezekiah Humbles Himself

²⁴ In those days Hezekiah was sick and near death, and he prayed to the LORD; and He spoke to him and gave him a sign. ²⁵ But Hezekiah ^edid not repay according to the favor shown him, for ^fhis heart was lifted up; ^gtherefore wrath was looming over him and over Judah and Jerusalem. ²⁶ Then Hezekiah humbled himself for the pride of his heart, he and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, so that the wrath of the LORD did not come upon them ⁱin the days of Hezekiah.

Hezekiah's Wealth and Honor

²⁷ Hezekiah had very great riches and honor. And he made himself treasuries for silver, for gold, for precious stones, for spices, for shields, and for all kinds of desirable items; ²⁸ storehouses for the harvest of grain, wine, and oil; and stalls for all kinds of livestock, and ⁸folds for flocks. ²⁹ Moreover he provided cities for himself, and possessions of flocks and herds in abundance; for ^jGod had given him very much property. ³⁰ This same Hezekiah also stopped the water outlet of Upper Gihon, and ⁹brought the water by tunnel to the west side of the City of David. Hezekiah ^lprospered in all his works.

³¹ However, regarding the ambassadors of the princes of Babylon, whom they ^msent to him to inquire about the wonder that was done in the land, God withdrew from him, in order to ⁿtest him, that He might know all that was in his heart.

Death of Hezekiah

³² Now the rest of the acts of Hezekiah, and his goodness, indeed they are written in ^othe vision of Isaiah the prophet, the son of Amoz, and in the ^pbook of the kings of Judah and Israel. ³³ So Hezekiah ^lrested with his fathers, and they buried him in the upper tombs of the sons of David; and all Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem ^rhonored him at his death. Then Manasseh his son reigned in his place.

Manasseh Reigns in Judah

33 Manasseh ^awas twelve years old when he became king, and he reigned fifty-five years in Jerusalem. ² But he did evil in the sight of the LORD, according to the ^babominations of the nations whom the LORD had cast out before the children of Israel. ³ For he rebuilt the ¹high places which Hezekiah his father had ^cbroken down; he raised up altars for the Baals, and ^dmade wooden images; and he worshiped ^eall ²the host of heaven and served them. ⁴ He also built altars in the house of the LORD, of which the LORD had said, ^f"In Jerusalem shall

He had considerable prestige and was especially important as a counselor of young Hezekiah (see Is. 37:1-7).

32:21 Sennacherib returned shamefaced to his own land, Assyria, and its capital Nineveh. The same Sennacherib who had mocked God's ability to preserve Hezekiah and Judah (vv. 17, 19) now died a violent death while in the very act of worshipping his god. his own offspring: Sennacherib's sons were Adrammelech and Sharezer. His two sons assassinated him 20 years after the siege of Jerusalem and fled for their lives. Then a third son Esarhaddon became king.

32:24 Hezekiah was sick: His sickness struck shortly after Sennacherib's defeat (see 2 Kin. 20:1, 12) and involved affliction with boils (see Is. 38:10-21). a sign: When Isaiah told Hezekiah he would recover, the king wanted confirmation. The sundial moved backward for him ten degrees, adding 40 minutes to the day (Is. 38:8).

32:25 God had given Hezekiah an extraordinary favor—15 additional years of life (2 Kin. 20:6). But his heart was lifted up: Hezekiah had received Babylonian envoys who had come to congratulate him on his recovery and probably to enlist his support in their struggle against Assyria (2 Kin. 20:12-19). Their visit ignited his desire to show off all the treasures of his kingdom. Because of this indulgence in pride, God's wrath was looming. The account in Kings reveals Isaiah's response to Hezekiah's pride. The time would come, the prophet said, when all the wealth that Hezekiah had used to impress his visitors would be seized by the same Babylonians and taken to their distant land (2 Kin. 20:16-18; see Is. 39:6, 7).

32:30 Upper Gihon was a spring in the Kidron valley near the Water Gate. The tunnel meandered from Gihon south and then west for over five hundred yards (see vv. 3, 4). It ended at the Pool of Siloam, then on the southwest side of Jerusalem.

32:31 The test was not for God's benefit, but for Hezekiah's.

32:32 The vision of Isaiah is the prophetic Book of Isaiah (Is. 1:1). 32:33 The term upper tombs probably refers to the royal cemetery where all the godly descendants of David were buried. Others were entombed in the City of David, but not in the same area (see 28:27).

honored: This would include such rites and ceremonies as public lamentation and ritual fires (see 16:14).

33:2 Manasseh was not the only king who lived according to the abominations of the nations. Ahaz did too (see 28:3).

33:3 The host of heaven were the gods of the sun, moon, and stars. The Babylonians especially revered these deities (see Deut. 4:19; Ezek. 8:16).

33:4 In Jerusalem shall My name be: The point was that God had the exclusive right to inhabit the temple, as opposed to the deities Manasseh introduced (v. 5).

My name be forever.”⁵ And he built altars for all the host of heaven^d in the two courts of the house of the LORD.^{6h} Also he caused his sons to pass through the fire in the Valley of the Son of Hinnom; he practicedⁱ soothsaying, used witchcraft and sorcery, and^j consulted mediums and spiritists. He did much evil in the sight of the LORD, to provoke Him to anger.^{7k} He even set a carved image, the idol which he had made, in the³ house of God, of which God had said to David and to Solomon his son,¹⁴ “In this house and in Jerusalem, which I have chosen out of all the tribes of Israel, I will put My name forever; ^{8m} and I will not again remove the foot of Israel from the land which I have appointed for your fathers—only if they are careful to do all that I have commanded them, according to the whole law and the statutes and the ordinances by the hand of Moses.”⁹ So Manasseh seduced Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem to do more evil than the nations whom the LORD had destroyed before the children of Israel.

Manasseh Restored After Repentance

¹⁰ And the LORD spoke to Manasseh and his people, but they would not⁴ listen. ¹¹ⁿ Therefore the LORD brought upon them the captains of the army of the king of Assyria, who took Manasseh with⁵ hooks, ⁶ bound him with⁶ bronze fetters, and carried him off to Babylon. ¹² Now when he was in affliction, he implored the LORD his God, and^p humbled himself greatly before the God of his fathers, ¹³ and prayed to Him; and He^q received his entreaty, heard his supplication, and brought him back to Jerusalem into his kingdom. Then Manasseh^r knew that the LORD was God.

¹⁴ After this he built a wall outside the City of David on the west side of^s Gihon, in the valley, as far as the entrance of the Fish Gate; and it^t enclosed Ophel, and he raised it to a very great height. Then he put military captains in all the fortified cities of Judah. ¹⁵ He took away^u the foreign gods and the idol from the house of the LORD, and all the altars that he had built in the mount of the house of the LORD and in Jerusalem; and he cast them out of the city. ¹⁶ He also repaired the altar of the LORD, sacrificed peace offerings and^v thank offerings on it, and commanded Judah to serve the LORD God of Israel. ¹⁷ ^w Nevertheless the people still sacrificed on the⁷ high places, but only to the LORD their God.

Death of Manasseh

¹⁸ Now the rest of the acts of Manasseh, his prayer to his God, and the words of^x the seers who spoke to him in the name of the LORD God of Israel, indeed they are written in the⁸ book of the kings of Israel. ¹⁹ Also his prayer and how God received his entreaty, and all his sin and trespass, and the sites where he built⁹ high places and set up wooden images and carved images, before he was humbled, indeed they are written among the sayings of¹ Hozai. ²⁰ ^y So Manasseh rested with his fathers, and they buried him in his own house. Then his son Amon reigned in his place.

33:5 In addition to altars inside the temple (v. 4), Manasseh erected altars to his astral deities in the two courts—that is, the court of the priests and Levites and the one open to the public (4:9; see 1 Kin. 7:9–12).

33:6 Valley of the Son of Hinnom: Like Ahaz, Manasseh practiced human sacrifice, going so far as to offer up his own children (28:3). Soothsaying is divination, an attempt to determine the plans and purposes of the gods so as to avert their hostility or take advantage of their favors. Witchcraft and sorcery attempt to bring about desired results by employing magical or mystical rituals. Mediums are those who claim to contact and consult with the dead. The witch of En Dor appears to have done this, for she feared for her life when she realized that Saul had condemned necromancers to death (see 1 Sam. 28:3, 9). spiritists: These are “knowing ones” whose specialty also is communication with the dead in the hope of acquiring information inaccessible to the living. All such practices were common among Canaanite and other pagan religions and were to be strictly avoided by God’s people (see Deut. 13:1–6; 18:9–14).

33:8 God’s ancient promise never to remove the people of Israel from the land they had inherited was conditioned on their obedience to all the covenant stipulations—law, statutes, and ordinances—to which they had sworn (see Gen. 17:7, 8; Lev. 26:27–35, 46). Manasseh’s behavior had greatly jeopardized the presence of the people in the land.

33:11 For some time Babylon had been part of the Assyrian Empire, though it had broken free on occasion, especially under the leadership of Berodach-Baladan, Hezekiah’s contemporary (see 2 Kin. 20:12). Ashurbanipal brought Babylon back under Assyrian domination. He was the king who took Manasseh to Babylon as a prisoner.

33:14 The term City of David originally referred to Mt. Zion alone (see 1 Chr. 11:5) but eventually designated the entire city including Mt. Ophel, the original Jebusite settlement. Gihon was the spring that was the main source of water for Jerusalem (see 32:3, 4, 30). It was in the Kidron valley near the northeastern brow of Mt. Zion. The Fish Gate was in the center of the wall north of the temple. Manasseh’s construction began at Gihon and went north past Mt. Ophel to the northeast corner of the temple mount. Then it went west to the Fish Gate. This was a total distance of about 750 yards. These fortified cities were the same ones that had been captured by Sennacherib.

33:15 Manasseh took away the old idols—a sign of true conversion and devotion to God (v. 13).

33:17 The sin of worshiping at high places was in their association with paganism (see Deut. 12:2, 3). The temple represented the dwelling place of God among His people. At this time, God wanted all worship by the people as a community to take place there. This is what is meant by the exclusiveness of the central sanctuary (see Deut. 12:5–28).

33:20 in his own house: Manasseh had truly converted (v. 13), but his prior sin had been so heinous that he was denied burial in the royal cemetery (see 32:33).

Amon's Reign and Death

^{21z} Amon was twenty-two years old when he became king, and he reigned two years in Jerusalem. ²² But he did evil in the sight of the LORD, as his father Manasseh had done; for Amon sacrificed to all the carved images which his father Manasseh had made, and served them. ²³ And he did not humble himself before the LORD, ^a as his father Manasseh had humbled himself; but Amon trespassed more and more.

^{24b} Then his servants conspired against him, and ^c killed him in his own house. ²⁵ But the people of the land executed all those who had conspired against King Amon. Then the people of the land made his son Josiah king in his place.

Josiah Reigns in Judah

34 Josiah ^a was eight years old when he became king, and he reigned thirty-one years in Jerusalem. ² And he did what was right in the sight of the LORD, and walked in the ways of his father David; he did not turn aside to the right hand or to the left.

³ For in the eighth year of his reign, while he was still ^b young, he began to ^c seek the God of his father David; and in the twelfth year he began ^d to purge Judah and Jerusalem ^e of the ¹ high places, the wooden images, the carved images, and the molded images. ^{4f} They broke down the altars of the Baals in his presence, and the incense altars which were above them he cut down; and the wooden images, the carved images, and the molded images he broke in pieces, and made dust of them ^g and scattered it on the graves of those who had sacrificed to them. ⁵ He also ^h burned the bones of the priests on

Hilkiah Finds the Book of the Law

^{8k} In the eighteenth year of his reign, when he had purged the land and the ³ temple, he sent ^l Shaphan the son of Azaliah, Maaseiah the ^m governor of the city, and Joah the son of Joahaz the recorder, to repair the house of the LORD his God. ⁹ When they came to Hilkiah the high priest, they delivered ⁿ the money that was brought into the house of God, which the Levites who kept the doors had gathered from the hand of Manasseh and Ephraim, from all the ^o remnant of Israel, from all Judah and Benjamin, and which they had brought back to Jerusalem. ¹⁰ Then they put it in the hand of the foremen who had the oversight of the house of the LORD; and they gave it to the workmen who worked in the house of the LORD, to repair and restore the house. ¹¹ They gave it to the craftsmen and builders to buy hewn stone and timber for beams, and to floor the houses which the kings of Judah had destroyed. ¹² And the men did the work faithfully. Their overseers were Jahath and Obadiah the Levites, of the sons of Merari, and Zechariah and Meshullam, of the sons of the Kohathites, to supervise. Others of the Levites, all of whom were skillful with instruments of music, ¹³ were ^p over the burden bearers and were overseers of 33:22 The carved images were in addition to the wooden images he had made (v. 3). The images were representations of deity carved from wood or stone. The carved image to which Amon sacrificed had been set up in the temple as an idol (v. 7). It was later removed from the city (v. 15) but apparently not destroyed, since Amon set it up again.

33:25 At this time people of the land was a technical term that indicated a certain level of leadership, perhaps a council of elders. In crises like the assassination of Amon they could assume interim powers until proper government could be restored (see 22:1; 26:1; 36:1).

34:3 The wooden images were poles dedicated to Asherah, the Canaanite fertility goddess (see 33:3). The molded images were like the carved images except that they were made of molded metal (see Ex. 32:4, 8; Is. 42:17; Hos. 13:2).

34:4 Josiah's destruction of the altars and idols built by his grandfather Manasseh and father Amon recall Moses' grinding up the golden calf and scattering its dust upon the waters (Ex. 32:20).

34:5 burned the bones of the priests: This act of Josiah, which took place at Bethel, fulfilled the words of the prophet of Judah in the days of Jeroboam I, king of Israel (see 1 Kin. 13:1, 2; 2 Kin. 23:15, 16). The prophet had mentioned Josiah by name three hundred years before.

34:6 Josiah's purge of the idolatrous cults was not limited to Judah and Bethel but extended from the south—Simeon—to the north—Naphtali. Israel had been subject to Assyria for a century, and new religious movements such as that of the Samaritans had gained a foothold in the region (see 2 Kin. 17:24–31; 23:19).

34:8 Shaphan was a scribe or secretary of the king (v. 15). He was responsible for state records that must have included the original temple plans and specifications. The temple was repaired strictly according to its original pattern. The office of governor was like that of the modern mayor (see 18:25). A recorder kept the royal diaries. Official happenings were duly noted and recorded for posterity. The work of men like Joah provided sources for later historians such as the author of Chronicles (see 1 Chr. 18:15).

34:9 Hilkiah was probably the high priest of the genealogy of 1 Chr. 6:13 (see Ezra 7:1).

34:11 Josiah's work of restoring what was destroyed included not only repairs to the temple and related buildings, but repairs to the fortifications (see 15:8; 24:5; 28:24; 29:6, 7; 32:5).

34:12 The sons of Merari and the Kohathites were two of the three clans of Levi (see 1 Chr. 6:1, 16; 23:6).

all who did work in any kind of service. ⁹And some of the Levites were scribes, officers, and gatekeepers.

¹⁴Now when they brought out the money that was brought into the house of the LORD, Hilkiah the priest ^rfound the Book of the Law of the LORD given by Moses. ¹⁵Then Hilkiah answered and said to Shaphan the scribe, “I have found the Book of the Law in the house of the LORD.” And Hilkiah gave the ^sbook to Shaphan. ¹⁶So Shaphan carried the book to the king, bringing the king word, saying, “All that was committed to your servants they are doing. ¹⁷And they have ⁴gathered the money that was found in the house of the LORD, and have delivered it into the hand of the overseers and the workmen.” ¹⁸Then Shaphan the scribe told the king, saying, “Hilkiah the priest has given me a book.” And Shaphan read it before the king.

²²So Hilkiah and those the king had appointed went to Huldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum the son of ⁶Tokhath, the son of ⁷Hasrah, keeper of the wardrobe. (She dwelt in Jerusalem in the Second Quarter.) And they spoke to her to that effect.

²³Then she answered them, “Thus says the LORD God of Israel, ‘Tell the man who sent you to Me, ²⁴“Thus says the LORD: ‘Behold, I will ^bbring calamity on this place and on its inhabitants, all the curses that are written in the ^wbook which they have read before the king of Judah, ²⁵because they have forsaken Me and burned incense to other gods, that they might provoke Me to anger with all the works of their hands. Therefore My wrath will be poured out on this place, and not be quenched.’” ²⁶But as for the king of Judah, who sent you to inquire of the LORD, in this manner you shall speak to him, ‘Thus says the LORD God of Israel: “Concerning the words which you have heard— ²⁷because your heart was tender, and you humbled yourself before God when you heard His words against this place and against its inhabitants, and you humbled yourself before Me, and you tore your clothes and wept before Me, I also have heard you,” says the ^xLORD. ²⁸“Surely I will gather you to 34:16 Shaphan delivered the scroll because he was the king’s scribe. He would know how to assess the authenticity of the text and tell the king whether it was important.

34:21 Josiah knew that the scroll contained the Book of the Law of the Lord, but he did not know what to do about the words of wrath and judgment that it contained. our fathers have not kept . . . all that is written: Josiah wanted to know what God demanded of him because he fully intended to comply.

34:22 Huldah the prophetess is one of four female prophets named in the OT, the other three being Miriam (Ex. 15:20), Deborah (Judg. 4:4), and Noadiah (Neh. 6:14). Shallum’s job was to supervises the storage and distribution of garments worn by the priests and Levites in the course of their duties. The Second Quarter was probably a suburb of Jerusalem near the Fish Gate north of the city (Zeph. 1:10).

34:23 Thus says the LORD indicates that Huldah’s words were a prophecy.

34:24 written in the book: Both Deuteronomy and Leviticus have long lists of blessings and curses attached to the covenant with Israel (see Deut. 28; 29).

34:28 gather you to your fathers: In the context of the whole message, this was a promise that Josiah would die and be buried

The Book of the Law of the LORD

Hilkiah’s discovery of “the Book of the Law of the LORD” began a great revival in Israel (34:14). King Josiah’s response to the book inspired him to initiate a reformation and refocus attention on Jerusalem as the center of worship (see 2 Kin. 23:4–20). It was one of the nation’s greatest moments.

What was this “Book of the Law of the LORD”? The reforms that Josiah introduced reflect many of the themes of Deuteronomy, so it seems clear that Josiah’s book must have included at least Deuteronomy. But the law that was “given by Moses” (see 34:14) technically includes the whole Pentateuch, the first five books of the Bible (Ex. 24:4), and there seems no reason to doubt that this was the case in Josiah’s day.

This copy of the Law somehow survived the long period of religious suppression under Manasseh and Amon. We may never know who put it in the temple or why, but God saw to its preservation and discovery.

King Josiah’s humble, obedient response to the book was and remains a model of how all people should respond to God’s revealed Word. Josiah listened to the Scripture, allowed its words of truth to judge him, and humbly confessed that he had neglected God’s commands (34:18, 19). After learning more about its truths (34:21), he shared the Scripture with others and led them in following it. He had the book read before the entire nation and led the Israelites in recommitting their lives to the Lord (34:29–33).

your fathers, and you shall be gathered to your grave in peace; and your eyes shall not see all the calamity which I will bring on this place and its inhabitants.””” So they brought back word to the king.

Josiah Restores True Worship

²⁹” Then the king sent and gathered all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem. ³⁰ The king went up to the house of the LORD, with all the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem—the priests and the Levites, and all the people, great and small. And he ²read in their hearing all the words of the Book of the Covenant which had been found in the house of the LORD. ³¹ Then the king ^astood in ^bhis place and made a ^ccovenant before the LORD, to follow the LORD, and to keep His commandments and His testimonies and His statutes with all his heart and all his soul, to perform the words of the covenant that were written in this book. ³² And he made all who were present in Jerusalem and Benjamin take a stand. So the inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers. ³³ Thus Josiah removed all the ^dabominations from all the country that belonged to the children of Israel, and made all who were present in Israel ^edil-

Josiah Keeps the Passover

35 Now ^aJosiah kept a Passover to the LORD in Jerusalem, and they slaughtered the Passover lambs on the ^bfourteenth day of the first month. ² And he set the priests in their ^cduties and ^dencouraged them for the service of the house of the LORD. ³ Then he said to the Levites ^ewho taught all Israel, who were holy to the LORD: ^f“Put the holy ark ^gin the house which Solomon the son of David, king of Israel, built. ^h*It shall no longer be a burden on your shoulders.* Now serve the LORD your God and His people Israel. ⁴ Prepare yourselves ⁱaccording to your fathers’ ^jhouses, according to your divisions, following the ^kwritten instruction of David king of Israel and the ^lwritten instruction of Solomon his son. ⁵ And ^lstand in the holy place according to the divisions of the fathers’ houses of your brethren the lay people, and according to the division of the father’s house of the Levites. ⁶ So slaughter the Passover offerings, ^mconsecrate yourselves, and prepare them for your brethren, that they may do according to the word of the LORD by the hand of Moses.”

among his own people, not in a foreign land. Huldah’s promise that Josiah would die in peace meant that he would be spared the calamity by which Judah would be judged. Josiah died in a time of war (see 35:23, 24), but that war was not the time of calamity. The calamity came later when Babylonian forces captured Jerusalem (see 36:17–20).

34:30 The term Book of the Covenant refers to the Book of the Law of the Lord (v. 14), the Pentateuch. Josiah was about to lead the community in renewing the covenant. His reading of the scroll was part of his duties as king (see Deut. 17:18–20).

34:31 Very few of the kings of Judah promised to follow the LORD as Josiah did. After David, only Joash, Hezekiah, and Josiah made such public commitments (see 23:3; 29:10; 1 Chr. 17:7–14). They stand head and shoulders above the other kings of Judah and Israel. The terms commandments, testimonies, and statutes were all technical terms referring to the covenant (see Deut. 4:40, 45; 5:31; 6:1, 17).

34:33 We know that Josiah’s commitment to the Lord was real because he removed all the abominations. This included any and all idols that had been introduced by earlier kings.

35:3 Josiah’s command to put the holy ark in the house means that the ark of the covenant had been removed from the temple. Who removed it and when is not known, but there were plenty of wicked kings who could have done so. no longer . . . on your shoulders: The only proper way for transporting the ark was by means of poles thrust through corner rings of the ark and borne on the shoulders of the Levites (see Num. 4:5, 6; 1 Chr. 15:2). The fact that they were carrying it about shows that it had no regular place of storage. Manasseh’s vehement opposition to God must have kept the ark in constant jeopardy. But once the temple had been cleansed and repaired, the ark could be returned to its place.

35:4 In preparation for the Passover the priests and Levites had to organize themselves by their assignments within divisions. The divisions were determined by the genealogical registers (see 1 Chr. 6:1–30). David set up the divisions before the temple was built (see 1 Chr. 23:3—26:32) and Solomon confirmed them (8:14).

35:5 The term holy place here refers to the whole temple area. The lay people could not enter the area where the great bronze altar stood, so the Levites represented them there by tribe, clan, and family units. In former times the heads of families offered their own Passover lambs and thus had access to the altar (Ex. 12:3), but by Josiah’s time the responsibility for slaughter rested upon the Levites alone (see 30:15–20).

35:6 prepare them for your brethren: The Levites were standing in for the people in the sacrifice of the Passover lambs. This became the tradition from that time on, with the result that the priests gained influence and power.

Passover

(Heb. pesach) (30:1, 35:1; Ex. 12:11, 43; Ezek. 45:21) Strong’s #6453

The name Passover is derived from the Hebrew word meaning “to pass” or “to leap over.” The festival was named in this way because it commemorated the time when God spared the firstborn of the Israelites, who sprinkled the blood from the Passover lamb on their doorposts. The Lord “passed over” the families so designated, not visiting their households with death (Ex. 12). So that the Israelites would not forget God’s mercy on them, the Law of Moses prescribed in detail the ritual for commemorating the Passover (see Lev. 23:5–8; Num. 28:16–25; Deut. 16:1–8). King Hezekiah’s great Passover signaled spiritual renewal in Judah, including the removal of sin and impurity (30:14), joyful praise for God’s pardon (30:21, 22), and a prolonged celebration of God’s blessing (30:23–26). Later Jesus celebrated this feast with His disciples (Matt. 26:2, 18), and in His death and resurrection He became its fulfillment, the ultimate Passover Lamb for our sins (John 1:29, 1 Cor. 5:7; 1 Pet. 1:19).

⁷Then Josiah ⁿgave the lay people lambs and young goats from the flock, all for Passover offerings for all who were present, to the number of thirty thousand, as well as three thousand cattle; these were from the king's ^opossessions. ⁸And his ^pleaders gave willingly to the people, to the priests, and to the Levites. Hilkiah, Zechariah, and Jehiel, rulers of the house of God, gave to the priests for the Passover offerings two thousand six hundred from the flock, and three hundred cattle. ⁹Also ^qConaniah, his brothers Shemaiah and Nethanel, and Hashabiah and Jeiel and Jozabad, chief of the Levites, gave to the Levites for Passover offerings five thousand from the flock and five hundred cattle.

¹⁰So the service was prepared, and the priests ^rstood in their places, and the ^sLevites in their divisions, according to the king's command. ¹¹And they slaughtered the Passover offerings; and the priests ^tsprinkled the blood with their hands, while the Levites ^uskinned the animals. ¹²Then they removed the burnt offerings that they might give them to the divisions of the fathers' houses of the lay people, to offer to the LORD, as it is written ^vin the Book of Moses. And so they did with the cattle. ¹³Also they ^wroasted the Passover offerings with fire according to the ordinance; but the other holy offerings they ^xboiled in pots, in caldrons, and in pans, and divided them quickly among all the lay people. ¹⁴Then afterward they prepared portions for themselves and for the priests, because the priests, the sons of Aaron, were busy in offering burnt offerings and fat until night; therefore the Levites prepared portions for themselves and for the priests, the sons of Aaron. ¹⁵And the singers, the sons of Asaph, were in their places, according to the ^ycommand of David, Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun the king's seer. Also the gatekeepers ^zwere at each gate; they did not have to leave their position, because their brethren the Levites prepared portions for them.

¹⁶So all the service of the LORD was prepared the same day, to keep the Passover and to offer burnt offerings on the altar of the LORD, according to the command of King Josiah. ¹⁷And the children of Israel who were present kept the Passover at that time, and the Feast of ^aUnleavened Bread for seven days. ¹⁸^bThere had been no Passover kept in Israel like that since the days of Samuel the prophet; and none of the kings of Israel had kept such a Passover as Josiah kept, with the priests and the Levites, all Judah and Israel who were present, and the inhabitants of Jerusalem. ¹⁹In the eighteenth year of the reign of Josiah this Passover was kept.

Josiah Dies in Battle

²⁰^cAfter all this, when Josiah had prepared the temple, Necho king of Egypt came up to fight against ^dCarchemish by the Euphrates; and Josiah went out against him. ²¹But he sent messengers to him, saying, "What have I to do with you, 35:7 Normally the people provided the Passover lambs and young goats from their own flocks (Ex. 12:3, 5), but Josiah was being generous (see 30:24). That Josiah gave thirty thousand of them means that the total number of people must have been 150,000 or more, as each household offered its own lamb or goat. The cattle were for the burnt offerings that went with this particular Passover (v. 12).

35:8 Hilkiah was the chief priest under Josiah (see 34:9).

35:11 The way the priests and Levites prepared the animals was in accord with Moses' instructions (Ex. 12:4, 8, 9, 21, 22).

35:12 This particular Passover included a time of fellowship and praise. The cattle were used for burnt offerings (vv. 7-9) for the celebration of the thank or peace offerings (see Lev. 3:1-5). The offerer, his family, and the priests and Levites could all eat any Passover animals and burnt offerings that were sacrificed as thank offerings. The Passover of Josiah was an occasion for recalling the deliverance of Israel from Egypt (Ex. 12:24-27), and a time of great festive celebration of God's goodness in bringing reformation and renewal. The Book of Moses was probably the scroll that Hilkiah found in the temple (34:14, 15); Josiah's desire to conduct the Passover sprang from the discovery and reading of the book.

35:13 The other holy offerings, distinguished from the Passover offerings, were the cattle slaughtered for thank or peace offerings (v. 7).

35:14 Themselves refers to the Levites, who had helped the priests.

35:15 Asaph, Heman, and Jeduthun headed up the Levitical musical divisions in the days of David (see 1 Chr. 15:17; 25:1). The day-long Passover celebration was accompanied by music.

35:16 It was most unusual to have such a combination of festivals and offerings all on the same day.

35:17 The Passover was held on the fourteenth day of the month Nisan (see v. 1) and was followed for the next seven days by the Feast of Unleavened Bread, up through the twenty-first day of Nisan (see 30:21-23; Lev. 23:4-8; Num. 28:16-25; Deut. 16:1-8).

35:18 It had been almost four hundred years since the days of Samuel the prophet (see 1 Sam. 7:15-17). None of the kings had held so great a Passover in all that time (30:26).

35:19 Josiah was 26 years old (see 34:8) in the eighteenth year of his reign.

35:20 Located on the upper Euphrates River, Carchemish was one of the last strongholds of Assyria to resist the onslaught of the rising neo-Babylonian kingdom. The Babylonians and Medes were on their way to subdue Haran and Carchemish. Necho, more afraid of the Babylonians than the Assyrians, was hoping to get to Carchemish in time to assist his Assyrian allies in their time of peril. Josiah was an ally of Babylon, so he went to Megiddo (v. 22) to intercept the Egyptians and allow for the Babylonians to attack Haran and Carchemish without Egyptian interference.

35:21 The house is a reference to the Babylonians. God commanded me: God sometimes spoke to pagan rulers about a course of action He wanted them to take (36:22; see Gen. 20:6; 41:25; Dan. 2:28). Necho did not know that the source of his divine leading was the God of Israel and not one of his own Egyptian deities. But God did direct him, displaying His sovereignty over even the wicked and unbelieving powers of this world (see Is. 44:28-45:1).

Egypt's Pharaohs

The pharaohs of Egypt had a long history with the Jews. During this time, Necho succeeded his father as pharaoh in 610 B.C. Recognizing the growing menace of Babylon, he marched through Canaan to help the Assyrians fight this common enemy. King Josiah tried to stop him at Megiddo, but Necho defeated him and continued on his march. Nebuchadnezzar destroyed the Egyptian army at Carchemish on the Euphrates River in 605 B.C., but Necho escaped, captured the new king of Judah, and made Judah a buffer state between Babylon and Egypt. When Nebuchadnezzar attacked Judah in 601 B.C., Egypt was able to stop him temporarily. Pharaoh Apries encouraged King Jehoiakin to resist the Babylonian intruders. But Nebuchadnezzar succeeded in capturing Jerusalem in 586 B.C. and carried its people into exile.

The Reign and Captivity of Jehoahaz

36 Then ^athe people of the land took Jehoahaz the son of Josiah, and made him king in his father's place in Jerusalem. ²¹Jehoahaz was twenty-three years old when he became king, and he reigned three months in Jerusalem. ³Now the king of Egypt deposed him at Jerusalem; and he imposed on the land a tribute of one hundred talents of silver and a talent of gold. ⁴Then the king of Egypt made ²Jehoahaz's brother Eliakim king over Judah and Jerusalem, and changed his name to Jehoiakim. And Necho took ³Jehoahaz his brother and carried him off to Egypt.

The Reign and Captivity of Jehoiakim

^{5b}Jehoiakim was twenty-five years old when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. And he did ^eevil in the sight of the Lord his God. ^{6d}Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon came up against him, and bound him in ⁴bronze fetters to ^ecarry him off to Babylon.

Jer. 36:30 ⁴ chains

35:22 The major route from Egypt to the upper Euphrates was the Via Maris or the Way of the Sea. This route went up the coast of Palestine before turning inland through the mountain pass at Megiddo. It crossed the Plain of Jezreel or Esdraelon, crossed the Jordan near the Sea of Galilee, and passed through Damascus where it joined the north-south route to upper Syria. Josiah's objective was to control the pass at Megiddo and dictate the movement of traffic through that vital point. 35:24 As a godly successor of David, Josiah was buried with full honors in the royal tombs of his fathers in the City of David (see 32:33). 35:27 The book of the kings of Israel and Judah may have been the canonical book of 1 and 2 Kings. 36:1 The people of the land was a technical term that referred to a body of leaders such as a council of elders or a kind of informal parliament (see 33:25). This group acted in time of crisis, such as the death of Josiah in battle. His loss was made worse by the fact that he had at least four sons who could succeed him. Josiah may not have made his choice of successor clear. Johanan was the oldest son, followed by Jehoiakim, Zedekiah, and Shallum (1 Chr. 3:15). Shallum was the same as Jehoahaz (see Jer. 22:11). 36:3 The king of Egypt was Necho (see 35:20). After Assyria's defeat at Haran and Carchemish, the Egyptian army withdrew south of the Euphrates to dominate Syria and Palestine. Judah became an Egyptian vassal state, which explains why Necho could depose Jehoahaz and require tribute. Judah had become a poor and weak nation, smaller by far than at any other time in its history. Josiah left them richer spiritually, but poorer financially. 36:4 Necho required the change of name in order to display his power over Eliakim. 36:6 Nebuchadnezzar was the son of Nabopolassar, founder of the Neo-Babylonian or Chaldean Empire. He was leading a campaign against Carchemish when he succeeded his father. He drove Egypt out of Syria and Palestine and took some Jewish captives, including Daniel, back to Babylon (see Dan. 1:1). At the same time, Jehoiakim changed his loyalty from Necho to Nebuchadnezzar and remained a trusted vassal for three years (see 2 Kin. 24:1). But then ^{7f}Nebuchadnezzar also carried off some of the articles from the house of the LORD to Babylon, and put them in his temple at Babylon. ⁸Now the rest of the acts of Jehoiakim, the abominations which he did, and what was found against him, indeed they are written in the book of the kings of Israel and Judah. Then ⁵Jehoiachin his son reigned in his place.

The Reign and Captivity of Jehoiachin

^{9g}Jehoiachin was ⁶eight years old when he became king, and he reigned in Jerusalem three months and ten days. And he did evil in the sight of the LORD. ¹⁰At the turn of the year ^hKing Nebuchadnezzar summoned him and took him to Babylon, ⁱwith the costly articles from the house of the LORD, and made ^jZedekiah, ⁷⁸*Jehoiakim's* brother, king over Judah and Jerusalem.

Zedekiah Reigns in Judah

^{11k}Zedekiah was twenty-one years old when he became king, and he reigned eleven years in Jerusalem. ¹²He did evil in the sight of the LORD his God, and ^ldid not humble himself before Jeremiah the prophet, who spoke from the mouth of the LORD. ¹³And he also ^mrebelled against King Nebuchadnezzar, who had made him swear an oath by God; but he ⁿstiffened his neck and hardened his heart against turning to the LORD God of Israel. ¹⁴Moreover all the leaders of the priests and the people transgressed more and more, according to all the abominations of the nations, and defiled the house of the LORD which He had consecrated in Jerusalem.

The Fall of Jerusalem

^{15o}And the LORD God of their fathers sent warnings to them by His messengers, rising up early and sending them, because He had compassion on His people and on His dwelling place. ¹⁶But ^pthey mocked the messengers of God, ^qdespised His words, and ^rscoffed at His prophets, until the ^swrath of the LORD arose against His people, till there was no remedy.

^{17t}Therefore He brought against them the king of the Chaldeans, who ^ukilled their young men with the sword in the house of their sanctuary, and had no compassion on young man or virgin, on the aged or the weak; He gave them all into his hand. ^{18v}And all the articles from the house of God, great and small, the treasures of the house of the LORD, and the treasures of the king and of his leaders, all these he took to Babylon. ^{19w}Then they burned the house of God, broke down the wall of Jerusalem, burned all its palaces with fire, and destroyed all its precious possessions. ²⁰And ^xthose who escaped from the sword he carried away to Babylon, ^ywhere they became servants to him and his sons until the rule of the kingdom of Persia, ²¹to fulfill the word of the LORD by the mouth of ^zJeremiah, until the land ^ahad enjoyed her Sabbaths. As long as she lay desolate ^bshe kept Sabbath, to fulfill seventy years.

The Proclamation of Cyrus

^{22c}Now in the first year of Cyrus king of Persia, that the word of the LORD by the mouth of ^dJeremiah might be fulfilled, the LORD stirred up the spirit of Jehoiakim rebelled against Babylon, and in about 602 B.C. Nebuchadnezzar returned to Jerusalem to punish him. Nebuchadnezzar bound Jehoiakim to carry him off to Babylon. He did not actually take him away, since Jehoiakim reigned until about 598 B.C. and died of natural causes in Jerusalem (see 2 Kin. 24:6; Jer. 22:18, 19).

36:7 Nebuchadnezzar . . . carried off: The Babylonian king looted the temple of much of its treasure, fulfilling the prophecy made to Hezekiah a century earlier (see 32:31; 2 Kin. 20:17). His temple was the Esagila, the temple of Babylon's patron god Marduk.

36:10 Zedekiah was the youngest of the four sons of Josiah and the third to rule over Judah (see v. 1). He became king by Nebuchadnezzar's appointment, showing Judah's status as a Babylonian vassal (see v. 3).

36:12 Jeremiah was the famous prophet who composed the Book of Jeremiah, which includes his words to Zedekiah (Jer. 21:3-7; 32:5).

36:13 By 588 B.C. Zedekiah rebelled against King Nebuchadnezzar and, like his brother and nephew before him, invited swift Babylonian retribution. Nebuchadnezzar captured Jerusalem after a two-year siege (see 2 Kin. 25:1-3).

36:14 The abominations of the nations refers primarily to idolatry and all the immorality and perversity that went with it. God's covenant with Israel required them to be different from the nations in this key respect (see Ex. 23:24; Lev. 26:1; Deut. 4:15-20, 25-28; 18:9-14; 27:14, 15).

36:15 God's messengers were the prophets He had sent from the beginning of Israel's history.

36:17 The king of the Chaldeans (Babylonians) was Nebuchadnezzar, who reigned from 605 to 562 B.C. He became an instrument of God's judgment all through Judah's last years and well into the Exile (see Dan. 2:37, 38; 5:18, 19).

36:20 until the rule of the kingdom of Persia: Cyrus conquered Babylon in 539 B.C. and allowed the Jews to return to Jerusalem the following year.

36:21 In two places (Jer. 25:12; 29:10), Jeremiah predicted the Exile and its length (see Dan. 9:2). Sabbaths: According to the Law of Moses the land was to lie fallow every seventh year (Lev. 25:4). This became known as the sabbatical year. Judah's exile in Babylon allowed the land to enjoy the Sabbaths it had missed (see Lev. 26:33-35).

36:22 The first year of Cyrus refers to his first year of rule over Babylon, not his first year over Media and Persia. He began to rule Media and Persia in 550 B.C. Twelve years later he brought Babylon under his control and issued his famous decree, known from the OT (here and Ezra 1:2-4) and from the Cylinder of Cyrus. This was his first year of involvement with the Jewish people. Jeremiah's 70 years were from about 609 to 539 B.C. The LORD stirred up: Cyrus was both a mighty monarch and the instrument by whom God delivered His people from exile, returned them to their land, and rebuilt the temple (see Is. 44:28-45:1).

^eCyrus king of Persia, so that he made a proclamation throughout all his kingdom, and also put it in writing, saying,

LORD God of heaven has given me. And He has commanded me to build Him a ^ghouse at Jerusalem which is in Judah. Who is among you of all His people? May the LORD his God be with him, and let him go up!

36:23 the LORD God . . . has given me: According to his own account on the Cylinder of Cyrus, the god who called and blessed Cyrus was Marduk, chief deity of the Babylonian pantheon of gods. Since that document was for Babylonian readers, his reference to Marduk is understandable. The Bible attributes his success to the living Lord. It was God Himself who gave Cyrus sovereignty, who commanded him to rebuild the Jerusalem temple, and who had inspired him to release the Jews to their own country. It is not likely that Cyrus was a convert to Judaism. Like Nebuchadnezzar (see Dan. 2:47; 3:28, 29; 4:34–37) and Darius the Mede (Dan. 6:26, 27), Cyrus was willing to include Israel's God among the gods he recognized and extolled. The temple and the holy city lay in ruins, but God was not done yet. He was about to bring His people back to the land and to revive His promises to save and restore them.

THE BOOK OF EZRA

THE BOOK OF EZRA is a remarkable witness to God's faithfulness to His people. Together with Nehemiah, Ezra describes the events leading to the return of the Judeans from captivity in Babylon and the discouraging experiences of that small community in the harsh world of the Promised Land. But through every experience God proved Himself faithful. Through the leadership of Ezra and Zerubbabel, God fulfilled His promises announced by His prophets to restore His people from Babylon, to rebuild the temple at Jerusalem, and to renew their hope that the Davidic kingdom would be restored.

Author and Composition The Book of Ezra does not name its author, but Jewish tradition ascribes the book to Ezra along with the books of Chronicles and Nehemiah. Modern scholars generally agree with this tradition. Despite some dissimilarities, Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah form a connected work. The themes of the temple and the Levites, and the focus on lists, appear in all three books. In the Hebrew Bible, Ezra and Nehemiah are together as one book. Thus it seems that one author compiled all three books.

The fact that Ezra is the principal character of major sections of Ezra lends some credibility to his authorship of this book. Ezra participates in the events described in the second half of Ezra (chs. 7–10), as well as in events described in a portion of the Book of Nehemiah (chs. 8–10). Both passages are written in the first person and provide detailed descriptions. Such vivid descriptions point to an eyewitness as the author. It is generally agreed that these chapters at least were drawn directly from Ezra's memoirs.

On the other hand, the first half of Ezra records events that occurred nearly 60 years before Ezra returned to Judah. If Ezra compiled the book, he had to consult other sources for those passages. In fact, much of the Book of Ezra consists of information obtained from other official sources: (1) the decree of Cyrus (1:2–4), (2) the list of the articles of the temple (1:9–11), (3) the list of those who returned to Jerusalem (2:2–58), (4) the letter to Artaxerxes (4:11–16), (5) the reply of Artaxerxes (4:17–22), (6) the report of Tattenai (5:7–17), (7) the decree of Cyrus (6:2–5), (8) the reply of Darius (6:6–8), (9) the genealogy of Ezra (7:1–5), (10) the authorization of Artaxerxes (7:12–26), (11) the list of the heads of the clans (8:1–14), and (12) the list of those involved in mixed marriages (10:18–44). Over half of the Book of Ezra consists of official documents and lists. Moreover, the book is written in two languages. Most of the royal correspondence in the book is written in Aramaic, the international language of the Persian world, while the narrative sections are in Hebrew. In conclusion, the Book of Ezra is the work of a compiler, and that compiler certainly could have been the scribe Ezra.

Historical Setting In 539 B.C., Cyrus of Persia defeated the Babylonian Empire. Unlike the Babylonian kings before him, Cyrus allowed captive peoples to return to their homelands and live by their traditions and reestablish the worship of their respective gods. At the same time, all these peoples remained an integral part of the Persian Empire, subject to the emperor.

The Jewish people had been exiled to Babylon in three stages, and they returned with the permission of the Persians in three stages. Zerubbabel led the first group of returning Israelites (538 B.C.) and started to rebuild the temple (chs. 1–6). The priest Ezra led the second group (458 B.C.) and instituted a number of reforms (chs. 7–10). Finally, Nehemiah led the third group (444 B.C.) and rebuilt the wall around Jerusalem (Neh. 1–6).

Work on the restoration of the temple began in the reign of Cyrus (536 B.C.), extended through the time of Cambyses, and was completed in the sixth year of Darius I (515 B.C.). The reforming careers of Ezra and Nehemiah spanned the reigns of Artaxerxes Longimanus (464–424 B.C.) and Darius II (423–405 B.C.).

Return from Exile

Restoration of the Jewish exiles began under Cyrus (559–530 B.C.), who allowed them to return to Judah with the captured temple treasures. The temple was consecrated in 516 B.C. by official permission of Darius I (522–486).

Ezra won the approval of Artaxerxes I (465–424 B.C.) to return with additional exiles and to promote obedience to the law; Nehemiah, to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem.

Babylon and vicinity long retained a large and prosperous Jewish community, as clay tablets from the Murashu archives at Nippur testify.

The map shows the Persian Empire, including the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, the Mediterranean Sea, the Red Sea, and the Arabian Desert. Key cities marked include Haran, Aleppo, Nineveh, Tiphshah, Byblos, Tyre, Samaria, Ashdod, Jerusalem, Damascus, Babylon, Nippur, Achmetha, and Shushan (Susa). Three return routes are highlighted: First (orange arrow) from Babylon to Jerusalem, Second (yellow arrow) from Babylon to Jerusalem, and Third (blue arrow) from Babylon to Jerusalem.

Content The Books of Ezra and Nehemiah are one work in the Hebrew Bible, and should be studied together for a better understanding of the return of the Babylonian exiles to Jerusalem. The combined narrative presents the story of the exiles' return in two time periods, each marked by two prominent leaders: rebuilding the temple, under Zerubbabel and Joshua the priest (538–515 B.C.); and restoring the worship of God and rebuilding Jerusalem's walls, under Ezra and Nehemiah (458–420 B.C.).

Yet the Book of Ezra is not simply a string of historical facts about the returning exiles. Instead, the narrative shows how God fulfilled His promises announced by the prophets. He brought His people back from Babylon, rebuilt the temple at Jerusalem, restored the patterns of true worship, and even preserved the re-assembled community from fresh relapses into heathen customs and idolatrous worship. Through the prophets and leaders He had called, the Lord had preserved and cultivated a small group of returning exiles, the remnant of Israel.

The extraordinary reality of God's promised restoration of His people (Jer. 27:22) is recorded in detail in the Book of Ezra. The remnant did not merely return to the devastated ruins of Jerusalem; they came back with a hope, placed in their hearts by God, to rebuild the nation. With godly determination, they rebuilt the temple. Then the Lord sent Ezra and Nehemiah to exhort them to obey His law wholeheartedly. While the people were rebuilding Jerusalem's walls, God was rebuilding their hearts so that they would truly obey and worship Him. The restoration of the remnant was a complete restoration. The message for Ezra's day—as well as for our own—is that the God of Israel is faithful to His promises. He will completely restore His people when they come back to Him.

CHRIST IN THE SCRIPTURES

Ezra reveals God's continued fulfillment of His promise to keep David's descendants alive. Zerubbabel, the grandson of Jeconiah, is part of Jesus' earthly genealogy (1 Chr. 3:17–19; Matt. 1:12, 13). It may seem insignificant that the remnant of David's extended family had to return to Jerusalem, but it isn't. The positive turn of events sets up the good fortune that will give way to the Good News of Jesus. Without access to the original "land of promise," Jesus couldn't have been born in Bethlehem, which was a requirement for the Messiah (Mic. 5:2). As Ezra documents the return from Babylon, the soundtrack of forgiveness and restoration plays in the background. It is a melody line that will accompany the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus. It is music to God's ears to hear His people confess and repent (10:1).

BIBLE TIMES & CULTURE NOTES

Cyrus, King of Persia

Cyrus the Great was the founder of the Persian Empire and the Achaemenid dynasty. More than a century before Cyrus was born, Isaiah prophesied—and named Cyrus in his prophecy—that he would issue a decree allowing the Israelites to return to their homeland from exile. Josephus, a first-century Jewish historian, would later assert that Cyrus was shown the prophecy of Isaiah recorded in Is. 44:28–45:1 and “an earnest desire and ambition seized upon [Cyrus] to fulfill what was written” (Antiquities 11.1). If this story is true, it is possible that Daniel was the one who showed Cyrus Isaiah’s prophecy (see Dan. 6:28; 9:1, 2; 10:1). Certainly Cyrus’s decrees might have been part of a clever military strategy. At this point, he had not yet conquered Egypt. A strong settlement of loyal people between him and the Egyptians would have been wise. This was a novel political policy; for the first time in hundreds of years, a king permitted a subjected people to return to their homeland. But the important point is that God worked through this powerful ruler of the ancient world.

1:1 The first year of Cyrus is the first year of his rule over Babylon. In 539 B.C. Cyrus the Great, founder of the greater Persian Empire, conquered Babylon without a struggle. He ruled as king of Persia from 559–530 B.C. the word of the LORD by . . . Jeremiah: Jeremiah had prophesied that the Babylonian captivity would last 70 years (see Jer. 25:11; 29:10), after which the Lord would judge Babylon (see Jer. 25:12–14). Cyrus’s proclamation was probably shouted by heralds in the principal towns of the empire and posted in public. put it in writing: The proclamation was also preserved in the official records in Persia (6:1).

1:2 the LORD God of heaven: After the destruction of Jerusalem, God was no longer identified with the temple as the One who dwelt between the cherubim (see 1 Sam. 4:4; 2 Sam. 6:2). The Persians could understand that there was a particular “God of Israel,” but they would have recognized Him as simply one god among others. However, the phrase God of heaven indicates that the Lord is not just another god, but that only He is God. The fact that Cyrus used this title for the Lord suggests that He was prompted by Jewish advisors. He has commanded me to build Him a house at Jerusalem: Over one hundred years before Cyrus issued this decree, Isaiah prophesied that the king would make such an order (see Is. 44:28; 45:1).

1:3 He is God: It is likely that Cyrus was speaking as a polytheist who merely recognized that the God of Israel should be worshiped in Jerusalem.

1:4 let the men of his place help him: The assistance that the Israelites were to receive from their non-Jewish neighbors in rebuilding the temple is reminiscent of the help an earlier generation received from the Egyptians before the Exodus (see Ex. 12:35, 36). In a sense, the return to Jerusalem to rebuild the temple was a second Exodus (see Is. 43:14–21; 48:20, 21).

1:5 Moved here translates the same Hebrew word as stirred in v. 1. The verb means “to rouse” or “to stir up” (see Is. 45:13; Hag. 1:14; Zech. 4:1).

1:6 All those who were around included non-Jewish neighbors (v. 3) as well as Jews who wanted to stay in Babylon.

1:7 King Cyrus also brought: The people who returned to Jerusalem were helped not only by their neighbors, but by the king himself. Cyrus ordered the return of the temple articles that had been taken by Nebuchadnezzar (see 2 Kin. 24:1–7, 11–13; 25:8–17; 2 Chr. 36:5–7, 9, 10, 13–19; Dan. 1:2).

1:8 Mithredath the treasurer: not the same as the Mithredath in 4:7. The name Sheshbazzar occurs only in two passages (vv. 8–11; 5:14–16), both related to official Persian actions. On the ⁱSheshbazzar the prince of Judah. ⁹This is the number of them: thirty gold platters, one thousand silver platters, twenty-nine knives, ¹⁰thirty gold basins, four hundred and ten silver basins of a similar kind, and one thousand other articles. ¹¹All the articles of gold and silver were five thousand four hundred. All these Sheshbazzar took with the captives who were brought from Babylon to Jerusalem.

The Captives Who Returned to Jerusalem

2 Now ^athese are the people of the province who came back from the captivity, of those who had been carried away, ^bwhom Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon had carried away to Babylon, and who returned to Jerusalem and Judah, everyone to his own city.

²Those who came with Zerubbabel were Jeshua, Nehemiah, ¹Seraiah, other hand, the name Zerubbabel is used in passages related to Jewish activity. Ezra 5:2, 16 appear to identify Sheshbazzar and Zerubbabel. It is possible that Sheshbazzar was a name by which Zerubbabel was known in Persian circles. There are two other possibilities: (1) some suggest that Sheshbazzar died and his work was continued by Zerubbabel; (2) some suggest that Sheshbazzar is another name for Shenazzar (1 Chr. 3:18), an uncle of Zerubbabel. The prince of Judah means he was in the Davidic royal line. Zerubbabel was the grandson of King Jehoiakim. In 1 Chr. 3:17-19 he is called the son of Pedaiah instead of Shealtiel. It may be that Shealtiel died childless and his brother Pedaiah married his widow, following the custom of levirate marriage (see Deut. 25:5-10; 1 Chr. 3:18).

1:9-11 The separate items listed in vv. 9, 10 total 2,499. However, the total for all the articles given in v. 11 is 5,400. Probably vv. 9, 10 list only the larger and more important items that were transported back to Jerusalem.

2:1 The people of the province refers to the Jewish people of Judah (see 5:8; Neh. 1:2, 3; 11:3). The use of this phrase probably indicates that the register of ch. 2 was compiled in Babylon. Nehemiah's list in Neh. 7:4-73 would have been compiled after he arrived in Jerusalem, which could account for some of the differences between the two registers. His own city means the city where a person's family had lived.

2:2 The men listed in this verse were the leaders of the expedition. Jeshua was Joshua the high priest (see Hag. 1:1; Zech. 3:1). Nehemiah, listed as a leader here, was not the same man who rebuilt the wall of Jerusalem 90 years later. Mordecai was not the man of the same name who figures so prominently in the Book of Esther. Nehemiah gives a similar list (Neh. 7:7), with some differences of spelling and an extra leader Nahamani on the list. Those who returned to Jerusalem are called the people of Israel and not Judah, because all twelve tribes of Israel were represented.

⁴²The sons of the gatekeepers: the sons of Shallum, the sons of Ater, the sons of Talmon, the sons of Akkub, the sons of Hatita, and the sons of Shobai, one hundred and thirty-nine in all.

⁴³^jThe Nethinim: the sons of Ziha, the sons of Hasupha, the sons of Tabbaoth, ⁴⁴the sons of Keros, the sons of ²Siaha, the sons of Padon, ⁴⁵the sons of Lebanah, the sons of Hagabah, the sons of Akkub, ⁴⁶the sons of Hagab, the sons of Shalmal, the sons of Hanan, ⁴⁷the sons of Giddel, the sons of Gahar, the sons of Reaiah, ⁴⁸the sons of Rezin, the sons of Nekoda, the sons of Gazzam, ⁴⁹the sons of Uzza, the sons of Paseah, the sons of Besai, ⁵⁰the sons of Asnah, the sons of Meunim, the sons of ³Nephusim, ⁵¹the sons of Bakbuk, the sons of Hakupha, the sons of Harhur, ⁵²the sons of ⁴Bazluth, the sons of Mehida, the sons of Harsha, ⁵³the sons of Barkos, the sons of Sisera, the sons of Tamah, ⁵⁴the sons of Nezhiah, and the sons of Hatipha.

⁵⁵The sons of ^kSolomon's servants: the

2:3–20 These verses contain the names and numbers of the families who returned to Jerusalem. It may be that these were the people whose homes were in the city of Jerusalem itself.

2:21–35 These verses list the returnees according to their cities. Note that Jerusalem is not listed. Perhaps the registry dealt first with the inhabitants of Jerusalem (vv. 2–20) and then focused on those outside Jerusalem.

2:36–39 The total number of priests listed is 4,289. This was about ten percent of the returning remnant.

2:40 The Levites assisted the priests in the temple and in teaching the people the Law (see Neh. 8:7–9). Compared to the number of priests who returned to Jerusalem (vv. 36–39), it is striking how few Levites were with them (other Levites are included in the special lists of vv. 41, 42). According to 1 Chr. 23:4, 24,000 Levites were involved in the worship of God during the time of David.

2:41 The singers were Levites who had the responsibility of praising God with music (see 1 Chr. 15:16). Though only 128 singers returned to Jerusalem, at one time there had been as many as four thousand people who “praised the LORD with musical instruments” in Solomon’s temple (1 Chr. 23:5).

2:42 The gatekeepers, who were also Levites (see 1 Chr. 26:1–19), prevented unauthorized people from entering the restricted area of the temple. There were 139 gatekeepers in the return to Jerusalem under Zerubbabel; compare that figure to the four thousand gatekeepers who guarded the temple during the time of Solomon (see 1 Chr. 23:5).

2:43–50 Nethinim means “Given Ones” or “Dedicated Ones.” In 1 Chr. 9:2, the Nethinim are distinguished from the priests and the Levites. Jewish tradition identifies the Nethinim with the Gibeonites who had been assigned by Joshua to assist the Levites in more menial tasks (see Josh. 9:27).

2:55 The sons of Solomon’s servants are linked with the Nethinim (v. 43). The numbers of the two groups are totaled together (see v. 58; Neh. 7:60). The sons of Solomon’s servants were probably descendants of the inhabitants of Canaan at the time of Solomon—that is, descendants of the Amorites, Hittites, Perizzites, Hivites, and Jebusites whom Solomon had hired to build the temple (see 1 Kin. 5:13).

sons of Sotai, the sons of ¹Sophereth, the sons of ⁵Peruda, ⁵⁶the sons of Jaala, the sons of Darkon, the sons of Giddel, ⁵⁷the sons of Shephatiah, the sons of Hat-til, the sons of Pochereth of Zebaim, and the sons of ⁶Ami. ⁵⁸All the ^mNethinim and the children of ⁿSolomon's servants were three hundred and ninety-two.

⁵⁹And these were the ones who came up from Tel Melah, Tel Harsha, Cherub, ⁷Addan, and Immer; but they could not ⁸identify their father's house or their ⁹genealogy, whether they were of Israel: ⁶⁰the sons of Delaiah, the sons of Tobiah, and the sons of Nekoda, six hundred and fifty-two; ⁶¹and of the sons of the priests: the sons of ^oHabaiah, the sons of ¹Koz, and the sons of ^pBarzillai, who took a wife of the daughters of Barzillai the Gileadite, and was called by their name. ⁶²These sought their listing among those who were registered by genealogy, but they were not found; ^qtherefore they were excluded from the priesthood as defiled. ⁶³And the ²governor said to them that they ^rshould not eat of the most holy things till a priest could consult with the ^sUrim and Thummim.

⁶⁴^rThe whole assembly together was forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty, ⁶⁵besides their male and female servants, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven; and they had two hundred men and women singers. ⁶⁶Their horses were seven hundred and thirty-six, their mules two hundred and forty-five, ⁶⁷their camels four hundred and thirty-five, and their donkeys six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

Worship Restored at Jerusalem

3 And when the ^aseventh month had come, and the children of Israel were in the cities, the people gathered together as one man to Jerusalem. ²Then ¹Jeshua the son of ^bJozadak ²and his brethren the priests, ^cand Zerubbabel the son of ^dShealtiel and his brethren, arose and built the altar of the God of Israel, to offer burnt offerings on it, as it is ^ewritten in the Law of Moses the man of God. ³Though fear had come upon them because of the people of those countries, they set the altar on its ³bases; and they offered ^fburnt offerings on it to the LORD, both the morning and evening burnt offerings. ⁴^gThey also kept the Feast of Tabernacles, ^has it is written, and ⁱoffered the daily burnt offerings in the number required by ordinance for each day. ⁵Afterwards they offered the ^jregular burnt offering, and those for New Moons and for all the appointed feasts of the LORD that were consecrated, and those of everyone who willingly offered a freewill offering to the 2:59-63 Although these people could not prove their Jewish origin, they were permitted to return to Jerusalem. But without genealogies they were excluded from the priesthood, according to the Law of Moses (see Num. 16:1-40). The governor Zerubbabel was careful to follow the Law by declaring that the would-be priests should not eat of the most holy things, meaning that they should not participate in priestly functions. The Urim and Thummim were sacred lots that were used to determine God's will (see Ex. 28:30).

2:64 forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty: The individual numbers listed in ch. 2 add up to only 29,818. It is possible that the larger total includes women, who are not named in the lists.

2:65 The singers listed here were not the temple choir of v. 41. These were professional singers employed for banquets, feasts, and funerals (see 2 Chr. 35:25; Eccl. 2:7, 8). Their presence could be an indication of luxury (see 2 Sam. 19:35). It appears that many of the Jewish people had achieved some prosperity while living in Babylon. The Jews had not been enslaved in exile; they had only been restricted from returning to their land.

2:66 The large number of horses listed here also suggests affluence among those who returned to Jerusalem. Prior to this time, horses in Israel had been used only for war and ceremonies. Only the very rich and well-armed owned horses. The rich also rode mules, for they were scarce in Israel.

2:67 The beasts of burden were camels and donkeys. Camels were expensive; the poorer classes rode donkeys.

2:68 when they came to the house of the LORD: The first thing that many of the returnees did when they reached Jerusalem was to contribute to the rebuilding of the temple. Offerings were brought even before the people settled in their houses (v. 70).

2:69 Ezra records the amount of gold, silver, and garments given for the rebuilding of the temple, as does Nehemiah (see Neh. 7:70-72). However, the two sets of figures do not match. Apparently Ezra's list rounds off the figures, while Nehemiah's list presents them in more precise detail. It is also possible that the two lists give totals from different times of collection—perhaps in Babylon and then later in Jerusalem. Drachmas were Persian gold coins that weighed about two-tenths of an ounce, the weight of a quarter. Five thousand minas were about 6,300 pounds of silver.

3:1 The seventh month was sacred to the Jewish people. The first day of the month was the Feast of Trumpets (see Num. 29:1-6), the tenth day was the Day of Atonement (see Num. 29:7-11), and the fifteenth day was the Feast of Tabernacles (see Num. 29:12-38). as one man: The people had come with the common desire of worshiping God (v. 9).

3:2, 3 Jeshua was the same person as the priest Joshua (see Hag. 1:1; Zech. 3:1); his father's name Jozadak was also spelled Jehozadak (see 1 Chr. 6:14; Hag. 1:1).

3:4 In obedience to God's Word, the Israelites observed the Feast of Tabernacles or Booths, which commemorated the earlier generation's wanderings in the wilderness (see Num. 29:13-38).

Zerubbabel's Temple

Construction of the second temple was started in 536 B.C. on the Solomonic foundations leveled a half-century earlier by the Babylonians. People who remembered the earlier temple wept at the comparison (Ezra 3:12). Not until 516 B.C., the 6th year of the Persian emperor Darius I (522–486), was the temple finally completed at the urging of Haggai and Zechariah (Ezra 6:13–15).

Archaeological evidence confirms that the Persian period in the Holy Land was a comparatively impoverished one in terms of material culture. Later Aramaic documents from Elephantine in Upper Egypt illustrate the official process of gaining permission to construct a Jewish place of worship and the opposition engendered by such a project.

Of the temple and its construction, little is known. Consequently, all art reconstructions of it are tentative. Among the few contemporary buildings, the Persian palace at Lachish and the Tobiad monument at Iraq al-Amir may be compared in terms of technique.

Unlike the more famous structures razed in 586 B.C. and A.D. 70, the temple begun by Zerubbabel suffered no major hostile destruction, but was gradually repaired and reconstructed over a long period of time. Eventually it was replaced entirely by Herod's magnificent edifice.

LORD. ⁶From the first day of the seventh month they began to offer burnt offerings to the LORD, although the foundation of the temple of the LORD had not been laid. ⁷They also gave money to the masons and the carpenters, and ^hfood, drink, and oil to the people of Sidon and Tyre to bring cedar logs from Lebanon to the sea, to ⁱJoppa, ^maccording to the permission which they had from Cyrus king of Persia.

Restoration of the Temple Begins

⁸Now in the second month of the second year of their coming to the house of

3:7 When Solomon built the first temple, he purchased materials from Sidon and Tyre, had them shipped to Joppa, and paid for them with grain, wine, and oil (see 2 Chr. 2:10–16).

3:8 The construction of Solomon's temple had begun in the second month of the year (see 1 Kin. 6:1). Likewise, construction of the second temple began in the second month. from twenty years old and above: The Law had required that Levites be at least 30 years old before they entered into service (Num. 4:1–3). Later, the minimum age was reduced to 25 (see Num. 8:24). Finally, David lowered the minimum age to 20 (see 1 Chr. 23:24, 27). The lower minimum age allowed more Levites to enter into temple service. This provision was vital in view of the small number of Levites who made the trip back to Jerusalem (2:40).

3:10, 11 The returnees to Jerusalem celebrated laying the temple's foundation in almost the same way that the previous generation had celebrated the first temple (see 2 Chr. 5:13). Two choruses were sung responsively. One group sang For He is good; the other group responded with For His mercy endures forever (see Neh. 12:31).

dation of the temple of the LORD, ^pthe ⁶priests stood in their apparel with trumpets, and the Levites, the sons of Asaph, with cymbals, to praise the LORD, according to the ^qordinance⁷ of David king of Israel. ¹¹r And they sang responsively, praising and giving thanks to the LORD:

^s“For He is good,

^tFor His mercy endures forever toward Israel.”

Then all the people shouted with a great shout, when they praised the LORD, because the foundation of the house of the LORD was laid.

¹²But many of the priests and Levites and ^uheads of the fathers’ houses, old men who had seen the first temple, wept with a loud voice when the foundation of this temple was laid before their eyes. Yet many shouted aloud for joy, ¹³so that the people could not discern the noise of the shout of joy from the noise of the weeping of the people, for the people shouted with a loud shout, and the sound was heard afar off.

Resistance to Rebuilding the Temple

4 Now when ^athe ¹adversaries of Judah and Benjamin heard that the descendants of the captivity were building the temple of the LORD God of Israel, ²they came to Zerubbabel and the heads of the fathers’ houses, and said to them, “Let us build with you, for we seek your God as you do; and we have sacrificed to Him ^bsince the days of Esarhaddon king of Assyria, who brought us here.” ³But Zerubbabel and Jeshua and the rest of the heads of the fathers’ houses of Israel said to them, ^c“You may do nothing with us to build a ²house for our God; but we alone will build to the LORD God of Israel, as ^dKing Cyrus the king of Persia has commanded us.” ⁴Then ^ethe people of the land tried to discourage the people of Judah. They troubled them in building, ⁵and hired counselors against them to frustrate their purpose all the days of Cyrus king of Persia, even until the reign of ^fDarius king of Persia.

Rebuilding of Jerusalem Opposed

⁶In the reign of Ahasuerus, in the beginning of his reign, they wrote an accusation against the inhabitants of Judah and Jerusalem.

⁷In the days of ^gArtaxerxes also, ³Bishlam, Mithredath, Tabe, and the rest of their companions wrote to Artaxerxes king of Persia; and the letter was written in ^hAramaic script, and translated into the Aramaic language. ⁸Rehum the commander and Shimshai the scribe wrote a letter against Jerusalem to King Artaxerxes in this fashion:

3:12 Solomon’s temple had been destroyed in 586 B.C., and this scene took place 50 years later. The old men could remember the grandeur of the first temple, and they wept.

4:1 The adversaries of Judah were the Samaritans. Esarhaddon (v. 2), who ruled Assyria from 681–669 B.C., had transported the conquered people of the northern kingdom to other lands. He then brought people from other lands into Palestine. These foreigners intermarried with the Hebrews who were left in the land. Their offspring became the Samaritans. Judah and Benjamin: The southern kingdom of Judah is called the nation of Judah and Simeon. The southern kingdom also included land from Benjamin, in which Jerusalem was located.

4:2 we seek your God as you do: The Samaritans did not use the proper name for God—that is, Yahweh—perhaps suggesting that their understanding of the Lord was still quite poor. As a result, they presented the threat of syncretism, or mixing true worship of God with the worship of false gods. This was the sin that had led to the deportation of the Israelites in the first place.

4:3 You may do nothing with us is not a rude rebuff; it is a righteous refusal. The people offering help were not friends, but adversaries (v. 1). They may have sacrificed to the Lord, but they were idolatrous at the same time (see 2 Kin. 17:29–35).

4:4, 5 The people of the land is another way of referring to the Samaritans, who became active enemies of Israel’s rebuilding program for the next several years. The Samaritans troubled the Jewish people, perhaps with threats and attempts to cut off their supplies. The Samaritans then hired counselors, or lawyers, probably to represent them against the Jewish community at the Persian court. The Samaritans persisted in these attacks until the reign of Darius as much as 14 years later.

4:6 When Darius I died (486 B.C.), his son Ahasuerus reigned (485–465 B.C.). Ahasuerus’s Greek name was Xerxes. He is the same king who appears in the Book of Esther. At the beginning of his reign, the Samaritans wrote him a letter hoping to stop the Jews from completing work on the temple. Apparently nothing was accomplished by the letter.

4:7 Artaxerxes Longimanus (464–424 B.C.) succeeded his father Xerxes. He too received a letter from the Samaritans against the Jews (v. 6). The letter was written in Aramaic script, and translated, or read aloud in Aramaic. Like the Samaritans’ letter to Ahasuerus, this letter evidently was ignored.

4:9, 10 The point of these two verses is that the Samaritan letter reflected the views of the whole province. The beginning of the letter, filled with rhetoric and flourish, was designed to bring political pressure on the Persian king. Osnapper was probably another name for Ashurbanipal, the king of Assyria (669–626 B.C.) who completed the transplanting begun by Esarhaddon (v. 2). The River is the Euphrates.

¹¹ (This is a copy of the letter that they sent him)

To King Artaxerxes from your servants, the men of the region beyond the River, ⁹and so forth:

¹² Let it be known to the king that the Jews who came up from you have come to us at Jerusalem, and are building the ¹rebellious and evil city, and are finishing its ^mwalls and repairing the foundations. ¹³ Let it now be known to the king that, if this city is built and the walls completed, they will not pay ⁿtax, tribute, or custom, and the king's treasury will be diminished. ¹⁴ Now because we receive support from the palace, it was not proper for us to see the king's dishonor; therefore we have sent and informed the king, ¹⁵ that search may be made in the book of the records of your fathers. And you will find in the book of the records and know that this city is a rebellious city, harmful to kings and provinces, and that they have incited sedition within the city in former times, for which cause this city was destroyed.

¹⁶ We inform the king that if this city is rebuilt and its walls are completed, the result will be that you will have no dominion beyond the River.

and to the remainder beyond the River:

Peace, ¹and so forth.

¹⁸ The letter which you sent to us has been clearly read before me. ¹⁹ And ²I gave the command, and a search has been made, and it was found that this city in former times has revolted against kings, and rebellion and sedition have been fostered in it. ²⁰ There have also been mighty kings over Jerusalem, who have ^oruled over all the region ^pbeyond the River; and tax, tribute, and custom were paid to them. ²¹ Now ³give the command to make these men cease, that this city may not be built until the command is given by me.

²² Take heed now that you do not fail to do this. Why should damage increase to the hurt of the kings?

²³ Now when the copy of King Artaxerxes' letter was read before Rehum, Shimshai the scribe, and their companions, they went up in haste to Jerusalem against the Jews, and by force of arms made them cease. ²⁴ Thus the work of the house of God which is at Jerusalem ceased, and it was discontinued until the second year of the reign of Darius king of Persia.

Restoration of the Temple Resumed

5 Then the prophet ^aHaggai and ^bZechariah the son of Iddo, prophets, prophesied to the Jews who were in Judah and Jerusalem, in the name of the God

4:11 Your servants is a technical term for vassals. By including this term in the introduction of the letter, the men were assuring the king of their allegiance and were reporting the rebellion of the Jewish people. And so forth may mean "and now" (v. 10).
4:12 the rebellious and evil city: The rebellion to which the Samaritans referred was the long period of siege the armies of Babylon were compelled to undertake against Israel. finishing its walls: The Jews perhaps had begun construction on the walls but were nowhere near completing them. They were not finished until many years later (see Neh. 6).
4:14, 15 The Samaritans suggested that the king search his official records to see if Jerusalem had been destroyed in the past because of rebellion. Indeed it had. Nebuchadnezzar had conquered Jerusalem years before because it had rebelled against him.
4:16 The Samaritan letter concluded with a warning that if the king did not stop the Jews, he would lose not only income, but also dominion over Jerusalem and the region beyond the Euphrates River.
4:17 In this context, the word peace is used of the treaty relationship that existed between the king and his vassals (5:7).
4:19 A search of the king's official records confirmed the Samaritans' allegation of rebellion and sedition on the part of the people of Jerusalem, no doubt referring to the revolts under Jehoiakim, Jehoiachin, and Zedekiah (see 2 Kin. 24:1–20). The fact that these revolts were against the Babylonians and not against the Persians was not important. The Persians had become the heirs of the Babylonian Empire, and they would take such a report seriously.

4:20 The Persian king also found out that Jewish kings had ruled over a large region. David and Solomon had both possessed a great sphere of rule. Subsequent kings had aspired to the former glory of David and Solomon.
4:21, 22 The Persian king Artaxerxes ordered the Jewish people to cease their work on the temple. However, he left open the possibility of a future change in policy. Years later at the request of Nehemiah the decision was reviewed (see Neh. 2:1–8).
4:23 By force may suggest that the enforcers of the king's edict demolished the part of the wall that had been repaired. This would have been part of the rubble that Nehemiah discovered when he arrived in Jerusalem (see Neh. 2:12–16).
5:1 Haggai, who wrote the OT book that bears his name, began his ministry in August, 520 B.C. (see Hag. 1:1). Zechariah, the prophet who also wrote an OT book, began his prophetic ministry in October or November of the same year (see Zech. 1:1). The Jews had been forced to stop working on the temple (4:24). Now years later, God revived His work. He instructed His prophets to prophesy, and He expected His people to respond in faith and action. The phrase who was over them is a reminder of the sovereignty of God. No king other than the Lord Himself commanded His people.

of Israel, who was over them. ²So ^cZerubbabel the son of Shealtiel and Jeshua the son of ¹Jozadak rose up and began to build the house of God which is in Jerusalem; and ^dthe prophets of God were with them, helping them.

³At the same time ^eTattenai the governor of the region beyond ²the River and Shethar-Boznai and their companions came to them and spoke thus to them: ^f“Who has commanded you to build this ³temple and finish this wall?” ^{4g}Then, accordingly, we told them the names of the men who were constructing this building. ⁵But ^hthe eye of their God was upon the elders of the Jews, so that they could not make them cease till a report could go to Darius. Then a ⁱwritten answer was returned concerning this matter. ⁶This is a copy of the letter that Tattenai sent:

The governor of the region beyond the River, and Shethar-Boznai, ^jand his companions, the Persians who were in the region beyond the River, to Darius the king.

⁷(They sent a letter to him, in which was written thus)

To Darius the king:

All peace.

⁸ Let it be known to the king that we went into the province of Judea, to the ⁴temple of the great God, which is being built with ⁵heavy stones, and timber is being laid in the walls; and this work goes on diligently and prospers in their hands.

⁹ Then we asked those elders, and spoke thus to them: ^k“Who commanded you to build this temple and to finish these walls?” ¹⁰We also asked them their names to inform you, that we might write the names of the men who were chief among them.

¹¹ And thus they returned us an answer, saying: “We are the servants of the God of heaven and earth, and we are rebuilding the ⁶temple that was built many years ago, which a great king of Israel built ^land completed. ¹²But ^mbecause our fathers provoked the God of heaven to wrath, He gave them into the hand of ⁿNebuchadnezzar king of Babylon, the Chaldean, who destroyed this temple and ^ocarried the people away to Babylon. ¹³However, in the first year of ^pCyrus king of Babylon, King Cyrus issued a decree to build this ⁷house of God. ¹⁴Also, ^qthe gold and silver articles of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar had taken from the temple that was

5:2 Zerubbabel the civil governor and Jeshua (also known as Joshua) the high priest led the people once again in rebuilding the temple. The prophets Haggai and Zechariah joined in this call to action.

5:3 When the temple rebuilding resumed, resistance renewed. Tattenai was a regional governor. Since there were only 20 regional governors called satraps in the Persian Empire (8:36), it may be assumed that Tattenai was a very powerful man. Zerubbabel, as governor of the small district of Judah, was under the authority of Tattenai (1:8). The position of Shethar-Boznai is not described, but he was probably an aide or a secretary to Tattenai. The regional governor and his staff personally visited Jerusalem.

5:4 The official delegation of Tattenai asked who had commanded the work on the temple to be done (v. 3). The answer in this verse gives the names of the men who were constructing the temple, but not the name of the one who commanded the work to be done.

5:5 The eye of their God is a way of speaking of the sovereignty and providence of God (v. 1): God was protecting and watching over those who obeyed His command. The governor decided that he would not stop the work on the temple until an answer was returned from the king. In other words, Tattenai checked out the Jewish leaders' version of what was taking place.

5:6 The governor sent his inquiring letter to King Darius (who ruled from 521–486 B.C.). The fact that Tattenai contacted the emperor shows that despite his own considerable power, he still had to proceed under the process of Persian custom and law.

5:7, 8 The walls described in Tattenai's letter were the walls of the temple, not the walls of the city. Timber was used for the beams of the temple floor and roof. Most of the temple construction was done with massive stones, but beams and slats were also used.

5:11 In his report to Darius, Tattenai indicated that he had learned a great deal from the Jews about their history and destiny, including a reference to a great king, that is, Solomon.

5:12 Though the Jewish people acknowledged that Nebuchadnezzar destroyed the first temple, they traced the cause not to his power, but to their sin and ultimately to God's judgment. Tattenai's use of the title God of heaven is perhaps an unwitting acknowledgment of the reality and sovereignty of God.

5:13–16 This portion of Tattenai's letter to King Cyrus describes the events that led to the official Persian decree to rebuild the temple (1:1–4). Note that the delay described in ch. 4 is not mentioned here. Sheshbazzar may have been the Persian name for Zerubbabel. Alternatively he may have been the Jewish prince who was first appointed to lead the temple rebuilding efforts, but who did not survive and was replaced by Zerubbabel (see 1:8).

Jews

(Heb. yehudaye) (5:1; 6:7; Dan. 3:8) Strong's #3062

The name Jew is popularly associated with the verb yadah (meaning “to praise” or “to give thanks”) on the basis of Jacob's blessing upon his son Judah in Gen. 49:8: “Judah, you are he whom your brothers shall praise.” Thus a Jew may be a person from the tribe of Judah (Num. 10:14). Later the name Jew was applied directly to those Israelites living in the geographical region known as Judah (see Jer. 7:30). The use of the name Jew for the Israelites as a people group became prominent during the postexilic period. This use is found in the NT as well: Jesus is called “King of the Jews” (Matt. 27:29). In his letter to the Romans, Paul states that the true Jew is a person marked by “circumcision . . . of the heart” (Rom. 2:28, 29).

in Jerusalem and carried into the temple of Babylon—those King Cyrus took from the temple of Babylon, and they were given to ¹one named Sheshbazzar, whom he had made governor. ¹⁵And he said to him, ‘Take these articles; go, carry them to the temple site that is in Jerusalem, and let the house of God be rebuilt on its former site.’ ¹⁶Then the same Sheshbazzar came and ¹⁷laid the foundation of the house of God which is in Jerusalem; but from that time even until now it has been under construction, and ¹⁸it is not finished.”

¹⁷ Now therefore, if it seems good to the king, ¹⁸let a search be made in the king’s treasure house, which is there in Babylon, whether it is so that a decree was issued by King Cyrus to build this house of God at Jerusalem, and let the king send us his pleasure concerning this matter.

The Decree of Darius

6 Then King Darius issued a decree, ^aand a search was made in the ¹archives, where the treasures were stored in Babylon. ²And at ²Achmetha, in the palace that is in the province of ^bMedia, a scroll was found, and in it a record was written thus:

³ In the first year of King Cyrus, King Cyrus issued a ^cdecree concerning the house of God at Jerusalem: “Let the house be rebuilt, the place where they offered sacrifices; and let the foundations of it be firmly laid, its height sixty cubits and its width sixty cubits, ^{4d}with three rows of heavy stones and one row of new timber. Let the ^eexpenses be paid from the king’s treasury. ⁵Also let ^fthe gold and silver articles of the house of God, which Nebuchadnezzar took from the temple which is in Jerusalem and brought to Babylon, be restored and taken back to the temple which is in Jerusalem, each to its place; and deposit them in the house of God”—

⁶ Now therefore, Tattenai, governor of the region beyond the River, and Shethar-Boznai, and your companions the Persians who are beyond the River, keep yourselves far from there. ⁷Let the work of this house of God alone; let the governor of the Jews and the elders of the Jews build this house of God on its site.

¹¹ Also I issue a decree that whoever alters this edict, let a timber be pulled from his house and erected, and let him be hanged on it; ⁱand let his house be made a refuse heap because of this. ¹²And may the God who causes His ^jname to dwell there destroy any king or people who put their hand to alter it, or to destroy this ⁴house of God which is in Jerusalem. 5:17 Apparently the king’s treasure house contained the official records as well as the treasury. Tattenai’s request to find the original decree issued by King Cyrus delayed the rebuilding. The trip from Jerusalem to Babylon (7:9) took eight months. The search for official documents also took time. The entire process could have taken as long as a year.
6:1, 2 At the suggestion of Tattenai and his aides (5:17), King Darius ordered his staff to search the official records in the archives, or “house of the books,” to see whether Cyrus had authorized the rebuilding of the temple at Jerusalem. Apparently nothing was found in Babylon, and the search moved on to Achmetha, the summer residence of the Persian kings.
6:3–5 King Darius began his reply to Tattenai by quoting from the decree of King Cyrus. Cyrus’s public proclamation can be found in 1:2–4. its height sixty cubits and its width sixty cubits: Though the complete dimensions are not given, it is likely that the second temple was built on the foundation stones that were still in place from the time of Solomon (see 1 Kin. 6:2). The three rows of heavy stones and one row of new timber describes the construction of the wall of the inner court (see 1 Kin. 6:36). The heavy stones that had aroused Tattenai’s suspicion (5:8) were expressly authorized.

6:6, 7 therefore: Based on the discovery of the decrees of Cyrus, King Darius issued an order of his own. He concluded that what the Jewish people were doing was legal and that the regional government should stop opposing them.
6:8–10 Moreover: King Darius endorsed Cyrus’ order and added his own decree. taxes on the region beyond the River: Not only could Tattenai not stop reconstruction of the temple, he also had to fund its completion.
6:11, 12 Also I issue a decree: To ensure obedience, Darius decreed that violation of his order would be punished by death. Hanged does not mean hanged by the neck from a rope. It refers to impaling the dead body of the condemned on a pole as a public display and a grim warning to others.

The Temple Completed and Dedicated

¹³Then Tattenai, governor of the region beyond the River, Shethar-Boznai, and their companions diligently did according to what King Darius had sent. ¹⁴^kSo the elders of the Jews built, and they prospered through the prophesying of Haggai the prophet and Zechariah the son of Iddo. And they built and finished it, according to the commandment of the God of Israel, and according to the ⁵command of ^lCyrus, ^mDarius, and ⁿArtaxerxes king of Persia. ¹⁵Now the temple was finished on the third day of the month of Adar, which was in the sixth year of the reign of King Darius. ¹⁶Then the children of Israel, the priests and the Levites and the rest of the descendants of the captivity, celebrated ^othe dedication of this ⁶house of God with joy. ¹⁷And they ^poffered sacrifices at the dedication of this house of God, one hundred bulls, two hundred rams, four hundred lambs, and as a sin offering for all Israel twelve male goats, according to the number of the tribes of Israel. ¹⁸They assigned the priests to their ^qdivisions and the Levites to their ^rdivisions, over the service of God in Jerusalem, ^sas it is written in the Book of Moses.

The Passover Celebrated

¹⁹⁷And the descendants of the captivity kept the Passover ^ton the fourteenth day of the first month. ²⁰For the priests and the Levites had ^upurified themselves; all of them were ^vritually clean. And they ^vslaughtered the Passover lambs for all the descendants of the captivity, for their brethren the priests, and for themselves. ²¹Then the children of Israel who had returned from the captivity ate together with all who had separated themselves from the ^wfilth⁸ of the nations of the land in order to seek the LORD God of Israel. ²²And they kept the ^xFeast of Unleavened Bread seven days with joy; for the LORD made them joyful, and ^yturned the heart ^zof the king of Assyria toward them, to strengthen their hands in the work of the house of God, the God of Israel.

The Arrival of Ezra

⁷Now after these things, in the reign of ^aArtaxerxes king of Persia, Ezra the ^bson of Seraiah, ^cthe son of Azariah, the son of ^dHilkiah, ²the son of Shallum, the son of Zadok, the son of Ahitub, ³the son of Amariah, the son of Azariah, the son of Meraioth, ⁴the son of Zeremiah, the son of Uzzi, the son of Bukki, ⁵the son of Abishua, the son of Phinehas, the son of Eleazar, the son of Aaron the chief priest—⁶this Ezra came up from Babylon; and he was ^ea skilled scribe in the Law of Moses, which the LORD God of Israel had given. The king granted him all

6:13 Tattenai diligently carried out the king's orders. There is no indication that Tattenai mistreated the Jews in any way.

6:14 and they prospered: God blessed the people because they listened to the prophets and the preaching of the Word of God. Artaxerxes (464–424 B.C.) did assist the rebuilding of the temple, although it was completed years before Artaxerxes came to power. Artaxerxes contributed to the welfare of the temple by issuing a decree regarding its maintenance (7:15, 21).

6:15 The temple was completed in 515 B.C. in Adar, the month of February–March.

6:16 celebrated . . . with joy: Some people have suggested that Ps. 145–148 was used to celebrate the completion of the rebuilding of the temple.

6:17 As was the case with the dedication of the first temple, this dedication was celebrated with an abundance of sacrifices. Although there were more than 200 times as many sheep and oxen offered in Solomon's dedication (see 1 Kin. 8:63), it should be noted there were more people—and more wealthy people—participating in Solomon's dedication.

6:18 The Law laid down the duties of the priests and Levites (see Num. 18). Later the divisions of priests and Levites were instituted by David.

6:19 This celebration of the Passover must have been exceptionally memorable; it was the first time since the captivity that the people were able to celebrate according to the Law—with sacrifices offered in the temple (v. 20).

6:20 The priests and the Levites . . . purified themselves so that they could perform the duties of their office. The Levites slaughtered the Passover lambs for themselves and others. Originally the Passover lamb was killed by the head of each household (see Ex. 12:6). In the days of Hezekiah, the Levites killed the Passover lambs for everyone who was not clean (see 2 Chr. 30:17). In the days of Josiah, the Levites killed all of the Passover lambs for everyone (see 2 Chr. 35:10–14). Thus the observance of Passover was slightly modified over the years, though it was still observed on the original day (compare Ex. 12:6 with 6:19).

6:21 The nations of the land evidently refers to the people who had been transplanted into Palestine by the Assyrians (4:4). Those who had separated themselves were Israelites who had remained in the land during the captivity. The filth from which they separated themselves was the idolatry practiced by the pagans and perhaps their intermarriages with foreigners.

6:22 The Feast of Unleavened Bread immediately followed the Feast of Passover. The king of Assyria is a reference to Darius. Even though he was actually the king of Persia, Darius could be called the king of Assyria because he was the ruler of the former realm of Assyria. The title God of Israel was probably effective in helping the Jewish people recapture a sense of their true heritage and rekindle their true hope.

7:1–5 after these things: The events of ch. 6 took place during the reign of King Darius; more specifically the temple was completed and dedicated in 515 B.C. Chapter 7 jumps forward many years to the reign of Artaxerxes (464–424 B.C.), for Ezra returned around 458 B.C. Thus between chs. 6 and 7 there is a gap of approximately 60 years. During this period, the events of the Book of Esther took place. Ezra, the leader of the second return to Jerusalem, is introduced with a long genealogy, demonstrating that he was from a priestly family—the family of Aaron. Seraiah saw the fall of Jerusalem (see 2 Kin. 25:18), and his son Jehozadak went into exile (see 1 Chr. 6:15). The phrase son of Seraiah indicates Ezra's line of descent rather than the name of his father.

7:6 Ezra was not only from a priestly family, he was also a skilled scribe—one who copied and studied the Law. After the Exile, the office of scribe came into prominence, in some ways replacing the his request,^f according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him. ^{7g}Some of the children of Israel, the priests, ^hthe Levites, the singers, the gatekeepers, and ⁱthe Nethinim came up to Jerusalem in the seventh year of King Artaxerxes. ⁸And Ezra came to Jerusalem in the fifth month, which was in the seventh year of the king. ⁹On the first day of the first month he began his journey from Babylon, and on the first day of the fifth month he came to Jerusalem, ^jaccording to the good hand of his God upon him. ¹⁰For Ezra had prepared his heart to ^kseek ^lthe Law of the LORD, and to do it, and to ^lteach statutes and ordinances in Israel.

prophet in importance, and eventually eclipsing even the role of the priest. The Law of Moses actually refers to God’s law. Moses may have been the person most closely associated with the Law, but it was the Law that the LORD God of Israel had given. The latter is by far the more significant designation (see John 1:17). The phrase according to the hand of the LORD his God upon him is used repeatedly throughout this chapter and the next one (7:9, 28; 8:18, 22, 31; Neh. 2:8, 18). The phrase depicts God’s grace working on Ezra’s behalf.

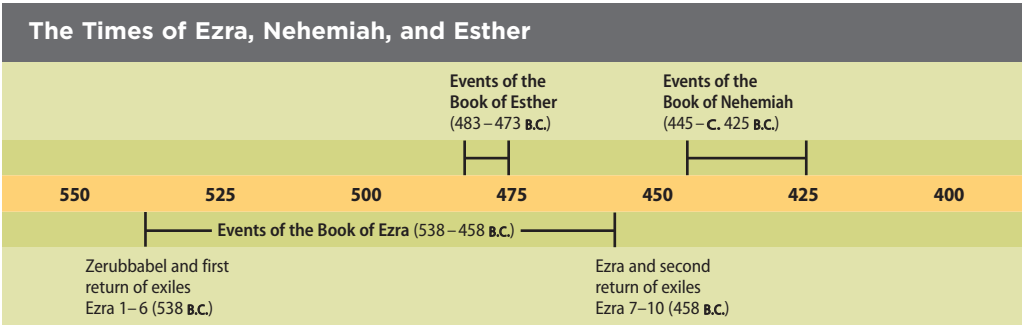

7:8, 9 The first month is March–April; the fifth month is July–August. The route traveled by Ezra was dangerous because a rebellion had broken out in Egypt and spring was the time when ancient armies began their campaigns.

7:10 Throughout his life, Ezra had concentrated fully on the study, practice, and communication of the Word of God. Heart indicates the whole of one’s being. Ezra diligently searched the Scriptures so that he could live by them and teach them to Israel. Because of this, the gracious hand of God empowered him (v. 9).

7:11 the priest, the scribe, expert: These words describe Ezra with exceptional praise. Ezra is referred to as “the scribe’s scribe” or the teacher of scribes.

7:12 Ancient Middle Eastern monarchs commonly took self-aggrandizing titles such as king of kings (see Ezek. 26:7; Dan. 2:37). The Persian kings were literally kings over many kings because the Persian Empire included many conquered kingdoms. Perfect peace describes a treaty relationship between the Persian emperor and the vassal state of Judah.

7:15, 16 Three sources of offerings for the temple are listed: (1) the silver and gold of the king and his counselors, (2) the silver and gold of the people of Babylon, and (3) the freewill offering of the Jewish people who remained in Babylon. Note that God accepts the gifts of those who do not know Him, as well as the gifts of those who know and serve Him in truth. The only gifts God rejects are those given by people who appear to know Him but whose hearts are far from Him (see Is. 1:10–15). The dwelling of God in Jerusalem is a reference to the temple.

Servants for the Temple

¹⁵Now I gathered them by the river that flows to Ahava, and we camped

7:20 And whatever more may be needed: Ezra had what amounted to a royal blank check.

7:21–23 The decree of Artaxerxes included an order to the provincial treasurers to allow Ezra to claim extra supplies from them. However, there were limits on the supplies. Ezra could take no more than one hundred talents of silver (nearly four tons), one hundred kors of wheat (about 625 bushels), and one hundred baths each of wine and oil (about 600 gallons each).

7:24 All temple officials were exempt from every form of tax. Artaxerxes, like Cyrus (1:2–4) and Darius (6:1–10) before him, wanted to win the goodwill and avoid the wrath of the gods that were worshipped throughout the empire.

7:25, 26 Ezra was given authority to set up a judicial system with the power to punish. Although the magistrates and judges had authority over only Jewish people, their authority extended beyond

Jerusalem to Syria, Phoenicia, and Palestine. Ezra later used his authority to punish sin in the community (10:8).

7:27, 28 To beautify the house of the LORD is a reference to the reestablishment of moral, spiritual, and religious life. I was encouraged: With renewed vigor, Ezra gathered leading men of Israel to return to Jerusalem with him.

8:1 These are the heads of their fathers' houses: The list of people who returned to Jerusalem recalls the list of the men for war at the time of the anticipated conquest of the land of Canaan (see Num. 1; 26).

8:2–14 In this list, 12 families are represented by their chiefs and the number of males in each family is given. The total number of the heads of families who accompanied Ezra back to Jerusalem was 1,496.

8:15 Ezra discovered that there were no sons of Levi among the there three days. And I looked among the people and the priests, and found none of the ^esons of Levi there. ¹⁶Then I sent for Eliezer, Ariel, Shemaiah, Elnathan, Jarib, Elnathan, Nathan, Zechariah, and ^fMeshullam, leaders; also for Joarib and Elnathan, men of understanding. ¹⁷And I gave them a command for Iddo the chief man at the place Casiphia, and ⁵I told them what they should say ⁶to Iddo and his brethren the Nethinim at the place Casiphia—that they should bring us servants for the house of our God. ¹⁸Then, by the good hand of our God upon us, they ⁸brought us a man of understanding, of the sons of Mahli the son of Levi, the son of Israel, namely Sherebiah, with his sons and brothers, eighteen men; ¹⁹and ^hHashabiah, and with him Jeshaiiah of the sons of Merari, his brothers and their sons, twenty men; ²⁰also of the Nethinim, whom David and the leaders had appointed for the service of the Levites, two hundred and twenty Nethinim. All of them were designated by name.

Fasting and Prayer for Protection

²¹Then I ^jproclaimed a fast there at the river of Ahava, that we might ^khumble ourselves before our God, to seek from Him the ^lright way for us and our little ones and all our possessions. ²²For ^mI was ashamed to request of the king an escort of soldiers and horsemen to help us against the enemy on the road, because we had spoken to the king, saying, ⁿ“The hand of our God is upon all those for ^ogood who seek Him, but His power and His wrath ^pare against all those who ^qfor-sake Him.” ²³So we fasted and entreated our God for this, and He ^ranswered our prayer.

Gifts for the Temple

²⁴And I separated twelve of the leaders of the priests—Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and ten of their brethren with them—²⁵and weighed out to them ^sthe silver, the gold, and the articles, the offering for the house of our God which the king and his counselors and his princes, and all Israel who were present, had offered. ²⁶I weighed into their hand six hundred and fifty talents of silver, silver articles weighing one hundred talents, one hundred talents of gold, ²⁷twenty gold basins worth a thousand drachmas, and two vessels of fine polished bronze, precious as gold. ²⁸And I said to them, “You are ^tholy ⁷ to the LORD; the articles are ^uholy also; and the silver and the gold are ^vholy also; and the silver and the gold are a freewill offering to the LORD God of your fathers. ²⁹Watch and keep them until you weigh them before the leaders of the priests and the Levites and ^wheads of the fathers’ houses of Israel in Jerusalem, in the chambers of the house of the LORD.” ³⁰So the priests and the Levites received the silver and the gold and the articles by weight, to bring them to Jerusalem to the house of our God.

The Return to Jerusalem

³¹Then we departed from the river of Ahava on the twelfth day of the first month, to go to Jerusalem. And ^wthe hand of our God was upon us, and He delivered us from the hand of the enemy and from ambush along the road. ³²So we ^xcame to Jerusalem, and stayed there three days.

returnees who accompanied him back to Jerusalem. Zerubbabel had faced a similar problem. Over four thousand priests returned with him to Jerusalem, but only 74 Levites were among the returnees (2:36–42).

8:17 The location and significance of Casiphia is uncertain. It has been suggested that this is Ctesipon on the Tigris River, near modern Baghdad. The Hebrew word for the place, a synonym for the holy place (see Deut. 12:5), may mean that there was a Jewish sanctuary or temple in Casiphia.

8:21 On the road to Jerusalem, the large Jewish caravan would have been an easy target for robbers. Knowing that the returnees needed the Lord’s help, Ezra proclaimed a fast as a symbol of their submission to God.

8:22 To persuade the king to let him return to Jerusalem, Ezra had told him about the power and wrath of God. So when Ezra received the king’s permission to return, he was ashamed to ask for an armed escort. Later Nehemiah would accept a military escort for his return to Jerusalem (see Neh. 2:7–9).

8:24–30 Before the returnees departed, Ezra entrusted the load of valuables to 12 people. Although v. 24 reads as though Sherebiah, Hashabiah, and their brethren were priests, v. 18 indicates that they were Levites. Verse 30 confirms that the treasure was entrusted to priests and Levites. Ezra followed the Law, which taught that the priests were to handle the sacred objects and the Levites were to carry them (see Num. 3:8, 31, 45). the silver, the gold, and the articles: One talent was about 75 pounds (7:22). The 650 talents of silver weighed nearly 25 tons. The one hundred talents of gold weighed over three tons. These figures do not include the numerous other valuable objects of exquisite artistry.

8:31 According to 7:9, the returnees began their journey on the first day of the first month. According to v. 15, the returnees camped at the river for three days. Yet this verse speaks of the departure on the twelfth day of the first month. These time discrepancies may be explained as follows: The people began to assemble at the river on the first day of the first month. During the course of the first three days, Ezra discovered that there were no Levites among the travelers. During the next eight days, Ezra enlisted Levites (vv. 15–20), entreated the Lord (vv. 21–23), and entrusted the travelers’ considerable load to the priests and Levites (vv. 24–30). The returnees then departed from the river on the twelfth day. So from their point of view, the journey to Jerusalem began on the first day of the first month, when the people left their homes in Babylon. The group departed from the river on the twelfth day of the first month.

8:32 The returnees arrived in Jerusalem on the first day of the fifth month (7:9). The trip took about three and a half months (compare 7:9 with 8:31).

³³Now on the fourth day the silver and the gold and the articles were ^aweighed in the house of our God by the hand of Meremoth the son of Uriah the priest, and with him was Eleazar the son of Phinehas; with them were the Levites, ²Jozabad the son of Jeshua and Noadiah the son of Binnui, ³⁴with the number and weight of everything. All the weight was written down at that time.

³⁵The children of those who had been ^acarried away captive, who had come from the captivity, ^boffered burnt offerings to the God of Israel: twelve bulls for all Israel, ninety-six rams, seventy-seven lambs, and twelve male goats ^aas a sin offering. All this was a burnt offering to the LORD.

³⁶And they delivered the king's ^corders to the king's satraps and the governors in the region beyond ^dthe River. So they gave support to the people and the ^ehouse of God.

zites, the Jebusites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, the Egyptians, and the Amorites. ²For they have ^ctaken some of their daughters as wives for themselves and their sons, so that the ^dholy seed is ^emixed with the peoples of those lands. Indeed, the hand of the leaders and rulers has been foremost in this ^ftrespass. ³So when I heard this thing, ¹I tore my garment and my robe, and plucked out some of the hair of my head and beard, and sat down ^gastonished. ⁴Then everyone who ^htrembled at the words of the God of Israel assembled to me, because of the transgression of those who had been carried away captive, and I sat astonished until the ⁱevening sacrifice.

⁵At the evening sacrifice I arose from my fasting; and having torn my garment and my robe, I fell on my knees and ^jspread out my hands to the LORD my God. ⁶And I said: "O my God, I am too ^kashamed and humiliated to lift up my face to You, my God; for ^lour iniquities have risen higher than our heads, and our guilt has ^mgrown up to the heavens. ⁷Since the days of our fathers to this day ⁿwe have been very guilty, and for our iniquities ^owe, our kings, and our priests have been delivered into the hand of the kings of the lands, to the ^psword, to captivity, to plunder, and to ^qhumiliation, ²

8:33, 34 After three days' rest, the returnees deposited their treasury in the temple (see Neh. 2:11). Four men—two priests and two Levites—counted and weighed everything. A written inventory was then put on file.

8:35 The sin offering, which consisted of twelve male goats, one for each tribe of Israel, was for the atonement for sins. The burnt offerings signified the surrender of the entire nation to the service of the Lord.

8:36 The king's orders were the authorization for Ezra to administer the Jewish law among the Jewish people of the province. Satraps, or "protectors of the realm," were highly placed individuals who ruled under the emperor in various regions of his empire (5:3).

9:1 When these things were done: These words seem to imply that the leaders came to Ezra immediately after the events of ch. 8. Actually, over four months passed between the events of ch. 8 and those of ch. 9. Ezra arrived on the first day of the fifth month (7:9) and he deposited the treasure in the temple on the fourth day of the fifth month (8:33). The assembly that took place soon after the leaders' report occurred on the twentieth day of the ninth month (10:9). The delivery of the royal orders to the regional governor (8:36) may have taken weeks or even months. It was after Ezra had delivered the decree and returned to Jerusalem that he received the report from the leaders. The people . . . have not separated themselves from the peoples of the lands: Both the leaders and the people of Israel had failed to remain separate from the Gentiles who lived in the land. The same kind of problem existed in Zerubbabel's day (6:21). the abominations of the Canaanites: The language here reflects that of the Law (see Gen. 15:16, 19–21; Deut. 18:9–12). The term abominations occurs often in the first five books of the Bible (see Deut. 17:1; 18:12; 22:5; 23:18) and in the Prophets (see Jer. 7:10; 44:22).

9:2 The Jewish returnees were marrying the pagan peoples of the land, a practice that the Law of Moses expressly prohibited (see Ex. 34:16; Deut. 7:3).

9:5 knees . . . hands: Physical postures of prayer are often described in the Bible. Kneeling is a sign of humble respect. Raising one's hands is a sign of openness to God and recognizing that all gifts are from the Lord's hand.

9:6 ashamed and humiliated: Ezra felt an overwhelming sense of shame. His prayer was one of confession. Though Ezra had not participated in this sin himself, he identified with the sins of the people.

9:7 Ezra further acknowledged that the people's sinful actions were part of their history. The whole nation—kings and priests, as well as the people—had sinned in the past, and they had suffered for it at the hand of the kings of the lands. This suffering had included the sword, loss of life; captivity, loss of freedom; plunder, loss of property; and humiliation, loss of honor.

(Heb. sha'ar) (9:8, 15) Strong's #7604

To be a remnant means "to remain" or "to be left over." A remnant is what survives after a catastrophe. In Ezra, the word frequently refers to those Israelites who survived the Exile and returned to resettle the Promised Land (9:8). The prophets use the word to speak not only of a group of Israelites who survived a particular calamity but to those Israelites who remained faithful to God (Amos 5:14, 15). The concept of the remnant is central to Isaiah, who prophesies that the Root of Jesse, the Messiah, would one day gather the remnant of Israel from all the nations, even attracting some Gentiles to Himself (Is. 11:10, 11, 16). The remnant therefore becomes a powerful OT theme of covenant faithfulness and salvation, for in sparing His people God maintained a nation through whom all the world would be blessed (Gen. 12:3).

as it is this day. ⁸And now for a little while grace has been shown from the LORD our God, to leave us a remnant to escape, and to give us a peg in His holy place, that our God may ⁷enlighten our eyes and give us a measure of revival in our bondage. ⁹For we were slaves. ¹⁰Yet our God did not forsake us in our bondage; but ¹¹He extended mercy to us in the sight of the kings of Persia, to revive us, to repair the house of our God, to rebuild its ruins, and to give us ¹²a wall in Judah and Jerusalem. ¹³And now, O our God, what shall we say after this? For we have forsaken Your commandments, ¹⁴which You commanded by Your servants the prophets, saying, ‘The land which you are entering to possess is an unclean land, with the ¹⁵uncleanness of the peoples of the lands, with their abominations which have filled it from one end to another with their impurity. ¹⁶Now therefore, ¹⁷do not give your daughters as wives for their sons, nor take their daughters to your sons; and ¹⁸never seek their peace or prosperity, that you may be strong and eat the good of the land, and ¹⁹leave it as an inheritance to your children forever.’ ²⁰And after all that has come upon us for our evil deeds and for our great guilt, since You our God ²¹have punished us less than our iniquities deserve, and have given us such deliverance as this, ²²should we ²³again break Your commandments, and ²⁴join in marriage with the people committing these abominations? Would You not be ²⁵angry with us until You had ²⁶consumed us, so that there would be no remnant or survivor? ²⁷O LORD God of Israel, ²⁸You are righteous, for we are left as a remnant, as it is this day. ²⁹Here we are before You, ³⁰in our guilt, though no one can stand before You because of this!”

weeping, and bowing down ^bbefore the house of God, a very large assembly of men, women, and children gathered to him from Israel; for the people wept very ^cbitterly. ²And Shechaniah the son of Jehiel, ^done of the sons of Elam, spoke up and said to Ezra, “We have ^etrespassed¹ against our God, and have taken pagan wives from the peoples of the land; yet now there is hope in Israel in spite of this. ³Now therefore, let us make ^fa covenant with our God to put away all these wives and those who have been born to them, according to the advice of my master and of those who ^gtremble at ^hthe commandment of our God; and let it be done according to the ⁱlaw. ⁴Arise, for this matter is your responsibility. We also are with you. ⁵Be of good courage, and do it.”

⁵Then Ezra arose, and made the leaders of the priests, the Levites, and all Israel ^jswear an oath that they would do according to this word. So they swore an oath. ⁶Then Ezra rose up from before the house of God, and went into the chamber of Jehohanan the son of Eliashib; and ^kwhen he came there, he ^late no bread and drank no water, for he mourned because of the guilt of those from the captivity.

⁷And they issued a proclamation throughout Judah and Jerusalem to all the descendants of the captivity, that they must gather at Jerusalem, ⁸and that whoever would not come within three days, according to the instructions of the leaders and elders, all his property would be confiscated, and he himself would be separated from the assembly of those from the captivity.

⁹So all the men of Judah and Benjamin gathered at Jerusalem within three days. ¹⁰It was the ninth month, on the twentieth of the month; and ¹¹all the people sat in the open square of the house of God, trembling because of this matter and because of heavy rain. ¹²Then Ezra the priest stood up and said to them,

9:8, 9 a peg in His holy place: This metaphor refers to a peg in the wall on which a utensil is hung (see Eccl. 12:11). God’s mercy had permitted the remnant to be fixed in the place God had chosen. enlighten: God had given the light of His will to those who were in the darkness of sin. bondage: The people were no longer slaves; they were free. repair the house of our God: The temple had been rebuilt. wall: The people had a wall of protection in the form of the king’s decree (7:12–26).

9:10–12 Ezra confessed the sins of the nation by referring to what the prophets had preached. The prophets (Moses is called a prophet in Deut. 18:15; 34:10; Hos. 12:13) prohibited intermarriage with Gentiles (see Deut. 7:1–3; 23:7; Mal. 2:10–16).

9:13–15 Ezra ended his prayer not by asking for forgiveness, but by declaring that God was righteous (see Deut. 32:4; Ps. 119:137; Zeph. 3:5). Israel was guilty and deserved whatever justice God gave them. God would have been just in consuming them, even to the point that there was no remnant or survivor.

10:1 Many people in Israel were concerned about the sin in their midst. So while Ezra wept, prayed, and confessed, these people gathered around him and wept very bitterly.

10:3 Making a covenant with God means binding oneself by an oath to God to do something. It was the most binding form of commitment a person could make.

10:4 Arise: Shechaniah (v. 2) reminded Ezra that it was his responsibility to teach Israel the law of God (7:25).

10:7, 8 within three days: This was a reasonable demand because Bethel (2:28), Lod (2:33), and Jericho (2:34) were some of the more distant Jewish cities, and they were all within three days’ journey. According to the Law, the money from the sale of confiscated property went into the temple treasury (see Lev. 27:28, 29, where devoted means “confiscated”).

10:9 The ninth month (Chislew; see Neh. 1:1) is November–December.

"You have ²transgressed and ³have taken pagan wives, adding to the guilt of Israel. ¹¹Now therefore, ^mmake confession to the LORD God of your fathers, and do His will; ⁿseparate yourselves from the peoples of the land, and from the pagan wives."

¹²Then all the assembly answered and said with a loud voice, "Yes! As you have said, so we must do. ¹³But there are many people; it is the season for heavy rain, and we are not able to stand outside. Nor is this the work of one or two days, for there are many of us who have transgressed in this matter. ¹⁴Please, let the leaders of our entire assembly stand; and let all those in our cities who have taken pagan wives come at appointed times, together with the elders and judges of their cities, until ^othe fierce wrath of our God is turned away from us in this matter." ¹⁵Only Jonathan the son of Asahel and Jahaziah the son of Tikvah opposed this, and ^pMeshullam and Shabbethai the Levite gave them support.

¹⁶Then the descendants of the captivity did so. And Ezra the priest, with certain ^qheads of the fathers' households, were set apart by the fathers' households, each of them by name; and they sat down on the first day of the tenth month to examine the matter. ¹⁷By the first day of the first month they finished questioning all the men who had taken pagan wives.

Pagan Wives Put Away

¹⁸And among the sons of the priests who had taken pagan wives the following were found of the sons of ^rJeshua the son of ^sJozadak, and his brothers: Maaseiah, Eliezer, Jarib, and Gedaliah. ¹⁹And they ^sgave their promise that they would put away their wives; and being ^tguilty, they presented a ram of the flock as their ^utrespass offering.

⁴⁴All these had taken pagan wives, and some of them had wives by whom they had children.

10:13, 14 The people faced two problems: (1) There were too many of them for the investigation to be done in a day or even two days. (2) The weather would not permit them to stay in Jerusalem. The people who had traveled from a distance could not stay in the city, living and sleeping in the open air, during the cold, rainy period. Therefore they requested that the investigation be organized by their officials.

10:15 Two men, with the support of two Levites, opposed Ezra's plan. The reasons for their opposition are not given. Apparently their objections had no effect (vv. 16–18). Meshullam is likely the same man who was part of the group of learned teachers that Ezra had recruited (8:16); however, he is not the same man who is mentioned among the repentant offenders in v. 29.

10:18–44 The list of those who had taken pagan wives included 113 men: 17 priests, 10 Levites, and 86 others.

10:19 They gave their promise may also be translated "they gave their hand." The symbol of raising a hand to take an oath is still practiced in many cultures. With this sign, the Israelites agreed to put away their unlawful wives and offer a sacrifice according to the requirements of Lev. 5:14–19. Although this promise and sacrifice are mentioned only in connection with the priests, it is likely that everyone on the list fulfilled these requirements.

10:25–44 Others of Israel refers to the people, as opposed to the leaders.

10:44 Even though some had had children with their pagan wives, they still separated themselves from them.

THE BOOK OF

NEHEMIAH

TIMES OF TRIAL require godly leadership. This book is principally the story of such gifted leadership in the person of Nehemiah. Facing criticism and opposition, Nehemiah resolutely led the small Israelite community as they rebuilt the walls of Jerusalem for its physical protection. But he also did not hesitate to guide the Israelites spiritually. By demanding that the Israelites obey God's law, Nehemiah pursued their spiritual as well as their physical welfare.

Author Many readers naturally conclude that the book was written by Nehemiah because of the words of the first verse, "The words of Nehemiah the son of Hachaliah." In fact, it is widely believed that Nehemiah originated the following passages: 1:1—7:5; 12:27–43; 13:4–31. But there are two different views about the authorship of the rest of Nehemiah. Some believe that Nehemiah wrote the whole book, relying on his own memories. Others believe that Ezra wrote the book, using Nehemiah's memoirs, for the passages listed above. As evidence for the second view, it is noted that Neh. 7:5–73 and Ezra 2:1–70 are almost identical.

The similarities of Nehemiah and Ezra can be explained partly by the fact that they are only one book in the Hebrew Bible (see the Introduction for Ezra). In fact, many scholars argue that Chronicles, Ezra, and Nehemiah were compiled by the same person. All these books exhibit similar themes, such as a focus on the Levites, the temple, and extensive lists. With such priestly interests, the one who masterminded this long document may well have been a priest—like Ezra (see the Introduction to 1 Chronicles).

Historical Background The historical setting of Nehemiah is the setting of the second half of the Hebrew book of Ezra–Nehemiah (458–420 B.C.). During this period, the Persian Emperor Artaxerxes I Longimanus allowed the Jews to return to their land and rebuild Jerusalem.

At that time Nehemiah occupied a prominent position in the emperor's court: He was the trusted cupbearer of Artaxerxes I. In Artaxerxes's twentieth year on the throne (444 B.C.), he allowed Nehemiah to go to Jerusalem and rebuild its walls. Nehemiah stayed in Jerusalem for 12 years and then returned to Persia in Artaxerxes's thirty-second year (432 B.C.). Around 425 B.C., Nehemiah left Persia and returned to Jerusalem for the last time (13:6). Nehemiah's memoirs could not have been completed until after his second visit to Jerusalem. Thus the earliest that the Book of Nehemiah could have been completed would be around 425 B.C.

The Order of Ezra and Nehemiah There has been considerable discussion of the question of the order of the returns of Ezra and Nehemiah to Jerusalem. The Bible clearly presents the return of Ezra as preceding that of Nehemiah: Ezra returned in the seventh year of the reign of Artaxerxes (Ezra 7:8) while Nehemiah returned in the twentieth year (2:1). However, based on the way the revival of Ezra appears in the middle of the story of Nehemiah (chs. 8–10), many have argued that Nehemiah returned before Ezra.

The arguments for reversing Ezra and Nehemiah in this way are generally not convincing. Nevertheless, the inclusion of part of the Ezra story in the middle of the Nehemiah memoirs still needs explanation. It could be that Nehemiah's rebuilding the walls of the city was only part of the reconstruction needed among God's people. Even more necessary was the reinstitution of the Law. Certainly Ezra had used the Law previously in his dealings with the people, but at this time the great priest and scribe Ezra partnered with Nehemiah in order to thoroughly teach the people God's law (8:9). Apparently, the compiler of Nehemiah wanted to show that the wall of the city would mean nothing without the wall of the Law surrounding the people.

Purpose In His covenant with Israel, God had spoken of a place where He would establish His name. In fact, Moses had told the Israelites to “seek the place where the LORD your God chooses, out of all your tribes, to put His name for His dwelling place” (Deut. 12:5). Later, it was revealed that this place was Jerusalem. When the temple was built during Solomon's reign, Jerusalem was at the height of its glory. Its fame helped to spread the glory of God's name throughout the nations. But God allowed Jerusalem to be destroyed because of the faithlessness of the Israelites. Even though Jerusalem lay in ruins during Nehemiah's time, it was still God's purpose to establish His name there.

The Book of Nehemiah records the restoration of Jerusalem under the leadership of Nehemiah. In the book, the returning Jews showed spiritual lethargy and a coldhearted indifference toward God. This problem continued, for the Book of Malachi denounces the Israelites for the same attitudes. It took a determined, godly leader like Nehemiah to motivate this group to act on God's promises and rebuild Jerusalem's walls.

However, the completion of Jerusalem's walls is only half the story of Nehemiah. The walls are rebuilt by chapter 6, but the book has seven more chapters. These last chapters record a revival and describe the repopulation of the city. The subject of the book is not merely the rebuilding of the walls, but the complete restoration of the people of Jerusalem.

The Book of Nehemiah makes it clear that God did not restore His people only one time; rather, He repeatedly, constantly, and continually restored His people. He sent a number of prophets and leaders to teach, motivate, and guide the people into righteousness. Zerubbabel led a group of exiles to Jerusalem and began to rebuild the temple (see Ezra 1–6). Then Ezra led a second group of exiles back to Jerusalem and helped restore the people to obedience to the Mosaic law (see Ezra 7–10). Then Nehemiah returned and motivated the people to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem (chs. 1–6). Finally, Nehemiah returned a second time and exhorted the people to adhere closely to God's law (ch. 13). The pattern is clear: God continually restored His people. In spite of their unfaithfulness, God accomplished His will. The restored walls of Jerusalem, the repopulation of Jerusalem, and the repeated reformation of the Israelites were clearly God's work. In the end, His name would be glorified.

CHRIST IN THE SCRIPTURES

Like Jesus, Nehemiah gives up a high position in order to identify with the plight of his people. Like Jesus, he comes with a specific mission and accomplishes it. And like Jesus, Nehemiah's life is punctuated by his prayerful dependence on God (1:5; Luke 6:12). His purpose is not just to get the Jews back to Jerusalem; his ultimate goal is restoration! The temple is rebuilt. The city walls are repaired. Jerusalem is reconstructed. The covenant is renewed. The people are reformed. According to the apostle Paul, Jesus came into our world for exactly the same reasons: reconciliation and renewal (2 Cor. 5:18, 19).

1:1 Nehemiah, whose name means “The Lord Comforts,” was a highly placed statesman associated with Ezra in the work of reestablishing the people of Judah in the Promised Land. The month of Chislev corresponds to our November–December (see Ezra 10:9). The twentieth year refers to the twentieth year of the rule of Artaxerxes I Longimanus (464–424 B.C.)—that is, 444 B.C. Artaxerxes was the same Persian king who had commissioned Ezra to return to Jerusalem (see Ezra 7:1). Shushan the citadel was about 150 miles north of the Persian Gulf, in present-day Iran. The citadel, or the fortified royal palace, was built on an acropolis. The city served as a winter residence for the monarchs of Persia. Shushan is also notable in biblical history as the place where Daniel received his vision of the rams and goats (see Dan. 8:2), and as the home of Mordecai and Esther (see Esth. 1:2).

1:2 Nehemiah's brother Hanani (7:2) had visited Jerusalem and returned to Shushan. This journey, which covered nearly a thousand miles one way, would probably have taken at least four months. It had taken Ezra and his caravan four months to make a similar round trip from Babylon to Jerusalem (see Ezra 7:9). Nehemiah was concerned about the Jewish people and Jerusalem.

1:3 Life was difficult for the people in Jerusalem. This difficulty was due in large part to the condition of Jerusalem's wall. In the ancient Middle East, a city wall provided protection for the inhabitants. The condition of a city wall was also seen as an indication of the strength of the people's gods. The ruined condition of the wall of Jerusalem reflected badly on God's name.

1:4 wept . . . mourned: Nehemiah was deeply disturbed. Without a wall, Jerusalem was vulnerable to attack. The riches of the temple treasury (see Ezra 8:15–36) would have been quite a temptation for Israel's enemies. God of heaven: This title for God is used frequently in the books of Ezra and Nehemiah.

1:5 LORD: Nehemiah called on God by using His covenant name (see Ex. 6:2–9). Nehemiah's use of this title is similar to our use of the phrase “in Jesus' name” in our prayers. God of heaven: Nehemiah acknowledged God's government of the world, including His sovereignty over the pagan king who was over Nehemiah, the Jewish people, and the city of Jerusalem. covenant and mercy: By using these two words together, Nehemiah was holding God to His promises. The Lord had staked His character on His loyalty to His covenant with His people. According to the terms of the Mosaic covenant (see Deut. 28; 29), God made His covenant blessings available to those who kept His commandments.

1:6 let Your ear be attentive and Your eyes open: Nehemiah asked God to look at him and listen to him as he prayed. These words were designed to encourage the one praying, for God does not turn His ears from or close His eyes to His people (see Ex. 2:23–25). the children of Israel: By using this ancient name for the Jewish people, Nehemiah indicated the continuity of the Jewish people of his day with the Israelites of the past: Nehemiah then confessed the sins of his father's house as well as his own. His confession was national, communal, and personal. His own sin was part of the whole.

1:7 Israel had sinned against the Lord and against His commandments. By using the word we, Nehemiah included himself among the sinful people. commandments . . . statutes . . . ordinances: These words describe the totality of God's law (9:13, 14).

1:8 Remember: After confessing his sin and the sin of the people, Nehemiah reminded God of what He Himself had said. I will scatter you among the nations: This is an allusion to God's covenant in Lev. 26:27–45 and Deut. 30:1–5. Nehemiah himself was born in Persia, a distant nation, because of God's fulfillment of this promise.

1:9 The Lord had promised that if the nation of Israel would return to Him in obedience, He would gather them to their land. Nehemiah addressed the Lord as a covenant-keeping God. He confessed his and the people's sin because the Law demanded confession (see Lev. 16:21). Then he held God to His covenant to return Israel to the land. bring them to the place which I have chosen as a dwelling for My name: The ultimate intent of God's covenant was not just to return the people, but to return them to the place where God had established His name. For that to be accomplished, much needed to be done. So while it was true that some people had returned to the land and that the temple had been rebuilt, the fact remained that Jerusalem's wall was in ruins and the people

(Heb. yadah) (1:6; Lev. 5:5; Num. 5:7; Ps. 92:1; 106:47) Strong's #3034

This Hebrew verb conveys two distinct meanings. The first is related to the offering of thanksgiving or praise to God (2 Chr. 5:13; Ps. 92:1; 106:47). The second is that of confession, such as the confession of God's greatness (1 Kin. 8:33, 35) and the confession of sin before God (1:6; 9:2; Dan. 9:4). The basic meaning of the word yadah is “to throw” or “to cast off.” In one sense, confession is the “casting off” of sin by acknowledging our transgressions of God's commandments for holy living (Ps. 32:5; Prov. 28:13). In another sense, confession of sin is thanksgiving because it recognizes that forgiveness of sin is accomplished only by the grace and goodness of God (2 Chr. 30:22; Dan. 9:4).

from there, and bring them to the place which I have chosen as a dwelling for My name.¹⁰ Now these are Your servants and Your people, whom You have redeemed by Your great power, and by Your strong hand.¹¹ O Lord, I pray, please let Your ear be attentive to the prayer of Your servant, and to the prayer of Your servants who desire to fear Your name; and let Your servant prosper this day, I pray, and grant him mercy in the sight of this man.”

For I was the king’s cupbearer.

Nehemiah Sent to Judah

2 And it came to pass in the month of Nisan, in the twentieth year of King Artaxerxes, when wine was before him, that I took the wine and gave it to the king. Now I had never been sad in his presence before. 2 Therefore the king said to me, “Why is your face sad, since you are not sick? This is nothing but sorrow of heart.”

So I became dreadfully afraid, 3 and said to the king, “May the king live forever! Why should my face not be sad, when the city, the place of my fathers’ tombs, lies waste, and its gates are burned with fire?”

4 Then the king said to me, “What do you request?”

So I prayed to the God of heaven. 5 And I said to the king, “If it pleases the king, and if your servant has found favor in your sight, I ask that you send me to Judah, to the city of my fathers’ tombs, that I may rebuild it.”

6 Then the king said to me (the queen also sitting beside him), “How long will your journey be? And when will you return?” So it pleased the king to send me; and I set him a time.

7 Furthermore I said to the king, “If it pleases the king, let letters be given to me for the governors of the region beyond the River, that they must permit me to pass through till I come to Judah, 8 and a letter to Asaph the keeper of the king’s forest, that he must give me timber to make beams for the gates of the citadel which pertains to the temple, for the city wall, and for the house that I will occupy.” And the king granted them to me according to the good hand of my God upon me.

9 Then I went to the governors in the region beyond the River, and gave them the king’s letters. Now the king had sent captains of the army and horsemen with were under reproach (5:9). In that sense, Jerusalem had not yet been restored.

1:10 Your servants and Your people: By using this phrasing, Nehemiah was suggesting to the Lord that the time was right, the people were right, and the task was right to restore Jerusalem. Your strong hand is one of the phrases associated with God’s deliverance of Israel from Egypt (see Ex. 6:1; 13:14; 15:6; Deut. 6:21).

1:11 Your servant . . . Your servants: Nehemiah and the godly people of Israel shared common concerns before God. let Your servant prosper: Nehemiah requested permission to return to Jerusalem, rebuild the wall, and restore the community. He enjoyed the comfort and convenience of a royal palace and a position of honor and responsibility. There were many compelling reasons for him to stay where he was, but he asked for permission to do God’s work. As the king’s cupbearer, Nehemiah held an honored position. His constant proximity to the king of Persia made him privy to the state secrets and personal affairs of the king.

2:1 Nisan corresponds to March–April. sad in his presence: Four months after hearing the report from his brother concerning Jerusalem, Nehemiah was still grieving over the conditions in Jerusalem.

2:2 The king noticed Nehemiah’s sad expression and concluded that it was caused by sorrow of heart rather than physical illness.

I became dreadfully afraid: Persian monarchs believed that just being in their presence would make any person happy. Yet, Nehemiah was about to request the emperor’s permission to go to Jerusalem, suggesting that he would rather be somewhere other than in the emperor’s presence. On top of that, it was Artaxerxes himself who had ordered the work on the wall to be stopped (see Ezra 4:21–23). Nehemiah had reason to be afraid.

2:3 live forever: Addressing the king with proper respect, Nehemiah related the burden of his heart. the place of my fathers’ tombs: It is possible that this phrase was designed to catch the king’s attention. In many Asian cultures, a connection with the burial places of one’s ancestors was a matter of great importance.

2:4 I prayed: Even though Nehemiah had come into the presence of the king, he had never left the presence of the true King of kings.

2:5 After his silent prayer (v. 4), Nehemiah spoke boldly, asking for permission to leave the king’s palace to travel to Jerusalem to rebuild the wall. Again Nehemiah spoke of his fathers’ tombs (v. 3). Though this was not his principal concern, it must have been something he thought would be important to the king.

2:6 How long will your journey be . . . when will you return: In responding to Nehemiah’s request (v. 5), the king might have had Nehemiah executed on the spot; or he might have dismissed Nehemiah with a laugh. However, his questions implied that the request was already granted. I set him a time: The fact that Nehemiah responded quickly to the king’s request for specific details indicates that he had been planning the trip. it pleased the king to send me: The king not only sent Nehemiah to Jerusalem, he made him governor (5:14). With the possibility of unrest in Egypt and in Cyprus, the king might have decided that Jerusalem needed a wall after all (see Ezra 4:21).

2:7 Nehemiah knew that he needed safe passage for his journey to Judah, so he requested letters from the king to show to the governors of the region beyond the Euphrates River.

2:8 Nehemiah’s plans were detailed. He asked the king for permission to go to Jerusalem (v. 5), for letters to ensure safe passage (v. 7), and also for provisions. Nehemiah requested a letter addressed to Asaph, the man in charge of the king’s forest, to enable him to obtain supplies of lumber for three projects: (1) the gates of the citadel, (2) the city wall, and (3) his personal house. Jerusalem had plenty of limestone for building projects. But timber, necessary for making roofs and other parts of large building projects, was scarce. The citadel was a fortress situated just northwest of the temple. It overlooked and protected the temple area. according to the good hand of my God: The king graciously granted Nehemiah all that he had requested, but Nehemiah knew that the ultimate source of his provisions was God.

2:9 captains of the army and horsemen: Nehemiah had a military escort to Jerusalem. In 458 B.C. Ezra had journeyed to Jerusalem with 1,800 people carrying valuable treasures, and had refused a military escort (see Ezra 8:22). Fourteen years later, Nehemiah made the same trip with a smaller company and no valuables, but the king sent an escort with him.

Sanballat

The name Sanballat means “the god Sin has given life.” A leading opponent of the Jews after their return from the captivity, he tried to hinder Nehemiah in his work of rebuilding the walls of Jerusalem. Sanballat’s designation as “the Horonite” probably indicates the town of his origin, possibly Horonaim of Moab (Is. 15:5; Jer. 48:3, 5, 34) or Beth Horon in Ephraim near Jerusalem (2 Chr. 8:5). In papyri found at the Jewish settlement in Elephantine, Egypt, Sanballat is called the governor of Samaria. His daughter married “one of the sons of Joiada, the son of Eliashib the high priest” (Neh. 13:28). Nehemiah viewed such a “mixed marriage” as a defilement of the priesthood, so he drove Joiada away. Sanballat’s opposition to Nehemiah’s work may have stemmed from jealousy; he may have felt that his authority was threatened by the reawakening of the land of Judah.

¹⁷Then I said to them, “You see the distress that we are in, how Jerusalem lies ²waste, and its gates are burned with fire. So they said, “Let us rise up and build.” Then they ^uset³ their hands to this good work.

¹⁹But when Sanballat the Horonite,

2:10 Sanballat was the governor of Samaria. Horonite refers to Sanballat’s city Beth-Horon. Tobiah was probably Sanballat’s secretary and confidential advisor. Ammonite: At the time of Nehemiah, the Ammonites (see Gen. 19:38) had pushed west into the land vacated by Judah. The prospect of a strong Jewish community in newly fortified Jerusalem would have seemed threatening to the Ammonite power.

2:12–15 Since Nehemiah had arrived in Jerusalem from the north, he would have seen that side of the wall as he approached the city. If he lived in the southwestern part of the city, he would have had ample time for viewing the western wall. Nehemiah seems to have been concerned with inspecting the southern and eastern walls of Jerusalem. With a few servants, he passed through the Valley Gate into the Valley of Hinnom. He then traveled along the south wall. When the piles of stone and heaps of rubble obstructed his passage, he dismounted his animal and continued on foot up the Kidron valley in order to view the eastern wall.

2:16 the officials did not know: The only people who knew Nehemiah’s plans were the few men who had made the secret night ride with him (v. 12).

2:17 we: Nehemiah encouraged all of the people to assist in rebuilding the city’s walls.

2:18 Nehemiah emphasized that it was not just his idea to rebuild the wall of Jerusalem. Rather, the idea had come to him from the Lord (vv. 8, 12). In response to Nehemiah’s challenge, the people replied, Let us rise up and build.

2:19 In v. 10, Nehemiah here mentioned two men who were unhappy about his coming—Sanballat and Tobiah. Here the opposition grows to three. Geshem was the leader of a company of Arab troops maintained by Sanballat. In v. 10, Nehemiah’s opponents were grieved; here they laughed. They accused Nehemiah of false motives, of plotting rebellion against the king. The same charge had been directed against the Jewish people in Zerubbabel’s time (see Ezra 4).

Tobiah the Ammonite official, and Geshem the Arab heard of it, they laughed at us and despised us, and said, “What is this thing that you are doing? ^vWill you rebel against the king?”

²⁰ So I answered them, and said to them, “The God of heaven Himself will prosper us; therefore we His servants will arise and build, ^wbut you have no heritage or right or memorial in Jerusalem.”

2:20 Nehemiah ignored his opponents' accusation that he was rebelling against the king. He asserted that God was involved in what he was doing. Nehemiah's motive was not rebellion against the king, but submission to God. you have no heritage: Nehemiah indicated that Samaritans and foreign people had no place in Jerusalem (see Ezra 4:3).

3:1 Eliashib the high priest and the other priests were the first people to start rebuilding Jerusalem's walls. At this point in Israel's history, the priests were the leaders. There were no kings or judges, so the people looked to the priests for leadership. It is significant that the high priest and the priests built the Sheep Gate. The Sheep Gate was on Jerusalem's northeast side, just north of the temple and was used for bringing sheep to the temple for sacrifice. They . . . consecrated it: The priests dedicated the repaired gate, wall, and tower to the Lord. They knew that unless God blessed the city with His presence, no walls and gates would keep the people safe (see Ps. 127:1).

3:2 Next to: The idea here is that the people worked together—not just in the same place, but in cooperation.

3:8–13 These verses detail the rebuilding of the western portion of Jerusalem's wall.

3:8 The Broad Wall was probably built in the seventh century B.C. by Hezekiah to accommodate the influx of refugees from the fall of Samaria in 722 B.C. (see 2 Chr. 32:5).

3:14 This verse describes the rebuilding of the southern portion of Jerusalem's wall.

3:15–32 These verses detail the rebuilding of the eastern portion of Jerusalem's wall.

3:15 The Fountain Gate probably faced the En Rogel spring. The Pool of Shelah is also known as the Pool of Siloam or Shiloah.

The Wall Defended Against Enemies

4 But it so happened, ^awhen Sanballat heard that we were rebuilding the wall, that he was furious and very indignant, and mocked the Jews. ²And he spoke before his brethren and the army of Samaria, and said, "What are these feeble Jews doing? Will they fortify themselves? Will they offer sacrifices? Will they complete it in a day? Will they revive the stones from the heaps of rubbish—stones that are burned?"

³Now ^bTobiah the Ammonite was beside him, and he said, "Whatever they build, if even a fox goes up on it, he will break down their stone wall."

⁶So we built the wall, and the entire wall was joined together up to half its height, for the people had a mind to work.

⁷Now it happened, ^fwhen Sanballat, Tobiah, ^gthe Arabs, the Ammonites, and the Ashdodites heard that the walls of Jerusalem were being restored and the ¹gaps were beginning to be closed, that they became very angry, ⁸and all of them

3:28 In the easternmost part of the city, the Horse Gate was the gate leading to the Kidron valley.

3:32 Goldsmiths and merchants also labored on the wall. They were not bricklayers, but they worked just the same.

4:1 furious . . . indignant: These two words together mean "burning with rage."

4:2 Sanballat gathered men from the army of Samaria, his local militia, and then mocked the Jewish people with sarcastic questions. these feeble Jews: The verb from which the adjective feeble is derived is used of a woman who is no longer able to bear children (1 Sam. 2:5), of a fisherman whose trade fails (Is. 19:8), and of the inhabitants of a defeated land (Hos. 4:3). fortify . . . offer sacrifices . . . complete it in a day . . . revive the stones: Sanballat poured contempt on the Jewish people and on their God. The reference to reviving the stones came from the fact that the stones of the former wall had been burned. When limestone is subjected to intense heat, it becomes unsuitable for building.

4:3 Tobiah, the aide of Sanballat (2:10, 19), carried Sanballat's jest (v. 2) even further. Tobiah declared that if a small creature like a fox jumped on the wall, the wall would collapse because of its flimsy construction.

4:4, 5 Nehemiah did not respond to his opponents (vv. 2, 3). Instead, he prayed that the Lord would not forgive them. Nehemiah believed that when the people of God were involved in the work of God, any assault on them was an assault on God. In this case, to despise the Jewish workers was to despise God Himself.

4:7, 8 When their ridicule did not stop the work on the wall, Nehemiah's opponents tried a threat of attack. The opposition against Nehemiah had started with two people (2:10) and had grown to three (2:19). Here it had become a multitude, one which surrounded Jerusalem. Sanballat was a Samaritan; Samaria was north of Jerusalem. The Arabs were to the south, the Ammonites to the east and the Ashdodites to the west.

(Heb. charah) (3:20; Ex. 32:10; Jon. 4:1) Strong's #2734

The Hebrew verb translated carefully here usually means "to burn with anger" (Gen. 39:19; Jon. 4:1) and depicts anger as a burning fire. This is the type of intense anger the Lord displayed when the Israelites worshiped a worthless idol of a calf instead of their Deliverer (see Ex. 32:10, where the word is translated "burn hot"). In the present passage, the word denotes burning with zeal, not anger. In other words, Baruch earnestly wanted to repair the walls of Jerusalem because he knew it was God's city and God's work. His repairs were for the glory of the living Lord.

^hconspired together to come and attack Jerusalem and create confusion. ⁹Nevertheless ⁱwe made our prayer to our God, and because of them we set a watch against them day and night.

¹⁰Then Judah said, “The strength of the laborers is failing, and there is so much rubbish that we are not able to build the wall.”

¹¹And our adversaries said, “They will neither know nor see anything, till we come into their midst and kill them and cause the work to cease.”

¹²So it was, when the Jews who dwelt near them came, that they told us ten times, “From whatever place you turn, they will be upon us.”

¹³Therefore I positioned men behind the lower parts of the wall, at the openings; and I set the people according to their families, with their swords, their spears, and their bows. ¹⁴And I looked, and arose and said to the nobles, to the leaders, and to the rest of the people, ^j“Do not be afraid of them. Remember the Lord, ^kgreat and awesome, and ^lfight for your brethren, your sons, your daughters, your wives, and your houses.”

¹⁵And it happened, when our enemies heard that it was known to us, and ^mthat God had brought their plot to nothing, that all of us returned to the wall, everyone to his work. ¹⁶So it was, from that time on, that half of my servants worked at construction, while the other half held the spears, the shields, the bows, and wore armor; and the leaders ²were behind all the house of Judah. ¹⁷Those who built on the wall, and those who carried burdens, loaded themselves so that with one hand they worked at construction, and with the other held a weapon. ¹⁸Every one of the builders had his sword girded at his side as he built. And the one who sounded the trumpet was beside me.

¹⁹Then I said to the nobles, the rulers, and the rest of the people, “The work is great and extensive, and we are separated far from one another on the wall. ²⁰Wherever you hear the sound of the trumpet, rally to us there. ⁿOur God will fight for us.”

²¹So we labored in the work, and half of ³the men held the spears from day-break until the stars appeared. ²²At the same time I also said to the people, “Let each man and his servant stay at night in Jerusalem, that they may be our guard by night and a working party by day.” ²³So neither I, my brethren, my servants, nor the men of the guard who followed me took off our clothes, except that everyone took them off for washing.

Nehemiah Deals with Oppression

5 And there was a great ^aoutrage of the people and their wives against their

4:9 Prior to this verse the prayers recorded in the Book of Nehemiah are individual prayers. This one was a group prayer. Nehemiah's spirit had affected the entire group of workers. They not only prayed, but they set a watch and did what was humanly possible to protect themselves from attack.

4:10 Under the circumstances, some of the workers became discouraged. The wall was half finished (v. 6), but the task was taking its toll. The words of the fatigued laborers appear as a song or poem in the Hebrew text.

4:11, 12 While the Jewish workers became discouraged (v. 10), the opposition intensified. The adversaries began a whispering campaign among the Jewish people to stop the building of the wall. These enemies used fear as a weapon, and they used the Jewish people to do their dirty work.

4:13 I positioned men: Because there was no Jewish army, the people had to defend themselves. Nehemiah placed men strategically on the wall. From the high places on the wall, men could see the approaching enemy. Other men defended the low places of the wall.

4:14, 15 nobles . . . leaders . . . rest of the people: Nehemiah's strategy was to address both leaders and laypeople. In this way, all the community would have “ownership” of the same ideals. fight for your brethren: Nehemiah reminded the Jewish people that they were not mercenary soldiers earning a salary or hoping for loot. Not only were their own lives at stake, but so were the lives of their loved ones. God answered Nehemiah's prayers. The people were inspired by his wise words and returned to their tasks.

4:16–18 Nehemiah armed the workers and divided his own servants into two groups. Half of them worked on the wall and half of them stood guard. Since the builders needed both hands to work, their swords were hung on their sides. Those who carried baskets of debris on their heads held their weapons in one hand and supported the load with the other.

4:19, 20 Nehemiah instituted an alarm system for those who worked on the wall. Apparently the workers were scattered all over the wall and separated so far from each other that some were beyond the reach of the human voice. For that reason, a trumpeter with a ram's horn stood near Nehemiah wherever he went. If the wall was attacked, the alarm would gather all of the people quickly to the danger spot. Our God will fight for us: These words evoked the spirit of the Exodus (see Num. 10:1–10). God had fought for their ancestors, and now God would fight for them.

4:21–23 Nehemiah instituted a 24-hour work and watch program. The people worked during the day and stood guard at night. Workers living out of town were asked to remain in the city rather than return home. Except for washing, Nehemiah and his men never took off their clothes. They worked day and night.

5:1–5 The prolonged period of working, watching, fear, and wear-awesome

(Heb. yare') (1:5; 4:14; Gen. 32:11) Strong's #3372

The Hebrew word translated awesome is derived from the Hebrew verb meaning “to fear.” In this context, the word does not mean “frightening.” Rather it suggests the quality that inspires reverence or godly fear. In some Bible passages, “fearing” and godly living are so closely related that they are almost synonymous (Lev. 19:14; 25:17; Deut. 17:19; 2 Kin. 17:34). Thus while ordinary fear paralyzes a person, godly fear leads to submission and obedience to God. The person who properly fears God avoids evil (Job 1:1) and walks in God's ways (Ps. 128:1).

^bJewish brethren. ²For there were those who said, “We, our sons, and our daughters are many; therefore let us get grain, that we may eat and live.”

³There were also some who said, “We have mortgaged our lands and vineyards and houses, that we might buy grain because of the famine.”

⁴There were also those who said, “We have borrowed money for the king’s tax on our lands and vineyards. ⁵Yet now our flesh is as the flesh of our brethren, our children as their children; and indeed we ^dare forcing our sons and our daughters to be slaves, and some of our daughters have been brought into slavery. It is not in our power to redeem them, for other men have our lands and vineyards.”

⁶And I became very angry when I heard their outcry and these words. ⁷After serious thought, I rebuked the nobles and rulers, and said to them, ^e“Each of you is ¹exacting usury from his brother.” So I ²called a great assembly against them. ⁸And I said to them, “According to our ability we have ^fredeemed our Jewish brethren who were sold to the nations. Now indeed, will you even sell your brethren? Or should they be sold to us?”

Then they were silenced and found nothing to say. ⁹Then I said, “What you are doing is not good. Should you not walk ^gin the fear of our God ^hbecause of the reproach of the nations, our enemies? ¹⁰I also, with my brethren and my servants, am lending them money and grain. Please, let us stop this ³usury! ¹¹Restore now to them, even this day, their lands, ¹²So they said, “We will restore it, and will require nothing from them; we will do as you say.”

Then I called the priests, ⁱand required an oath from them that they would do according to this promise. ¹³Then ^jI shook out ⁴the fold of my garment and said, “So may God shake out each man from his house, and from his property, who does not perform this promise. Even thus may he be shaken out and emptied.”

And all the assembly said, “Amen!” and praised the LORD. ^kThen the people did according to this promise.

The Generosity of Nehemiah

¹⁴Moreover, from the time that I was appointed to be their governor in the land of Judah, from the twentieth year ^luntil the thirty-second year of King Artaxerxes, twelve years, neither I nor my brothers ^mate the governor’s provisions. ¹⁵But the former governors who were before me laid burdens on the people, and took from them bread and wine, besides forty shekels of silver. Yes, even their servants bore rule over the people, but ⁿI did not do so, because of the ^ofear of God. ¹⁶Indeed, I also continued the ^pwork on this wall, and ⁵we did not buy any land. All my servants were gathered there for the work.

¹⁷And ^qat my table were one hundred and fifty Jews and rulers, besides those ness inevitably led to trouble among the people in Jerusalem. There were three groups of complainers, each introduced with the phrase there were those who said. The first group had large families, and did not have enough food to eat. The second group had large mortgages to pay and could not buy food. The third group had large taxes to pay and had been forced to mortgage their land and even to sell their children. The people’s basic problem is pinpointed in the words against their Jewish brethren. The people were not complaining merely about poverty and high taxes; they were grumbling about each other. In v. 1 the people refers to the poor; the brethren refers to the rich rulers (v. 7). In short, this was a class conflict. The poor people had mortgaged their lands and vineyards and houses. They had borrowed money and even had sold their sons and daughters into slavery. From the perspective of the Law, there were two problems here: (1) usury, lending money and charging interest, and (2) slavery. It was not wrong for a Jewish person to lend money with interest to a non-Jewish person (see Deut. 23:19, 20), nor was it wrong for a Jewish person to lend money to a fellow Jew. However, the Law did prohibit usury (see Ex. 22:25). Also, a Jewish person could hire himself out to someone, but not as a slave (see Lev. 25:35–40).

5:6 I became very angry: Nehemiah’s first response to the sins of the Jewish people was anger. Deliberate disobedience to the Word of God ought to make a person indignant toward the sin—but not toward the sinner.

5:7–10 After getting angry at the sins of the Jewish people (v. 6), Nehemiah spent some time in serious thought. He then confronted the guilty people. rebuked: This term is used often by the prophets to speak of legal cases brought against guilty persons (13:11). After rebuking the guilty parties privately, Nehemiah confronted them in public with the same charges. not good: Two issues were at stake here—fear of God (1:5) and the reproach of the nations. When Israel, a nation called by the Lord, stopped honoring and obeying Him, it became a scandal because God’s name was being dishonored.

5:11 Nehemiah challenged the lenders to restore what they had taken with interest. The hundredth of the money is probably a reference to the interest they had been charging.

5:13 Nehemiah shook his garment as if he were getting rid of what he was carrying. In doing so, he dramatized what God would do if the people broke their promise. God would shake them loose from their houses and their possessions.

5:14 During his 12-year administration (444–432 B.C.), Nehemiah did not collect taxes from the people, although as governor he had that right.

5:15 Several former governors had paid their own expenses with the people’s taxes. laid burdens: The former governors had made life difficult for the people. Rule here indicates an arbitrary, oppressive rule—the abuse of power through extortion.

5:16 Nehemiah had not acquired mortgages on land. As governor, he could easily have acquired real estate and sold it at great profit. But instead of making money for themselves, Nehemiah and his servants worked on the wall of Jerusalem for the protection of the people and the glory of God.

who came to us from the nations around us. ¹⁸Now that ^rwhich was prepared daily was one ox and six choice sheep. Also fowl were prepared for me, and once every ten days an abundance of all kinds of wine. Yet in spite of this ^sI did not demand the governor's provisions, because the bondage was heavy on this people.

¹⁹*r*Remember me, my God, for good, according to all that I have done for this people.

Conspiracy Against Nehemiah

6 Now it happened ^awhen Sanballat, Tobiah, ¹Geshem the Arab, and the rest of our enemies heard that I had rebuilt the wall, and that there were no breaks left in it ^b(though at that time I had not hung the doors in the gates), ²that Sanballat and ²Geshem ^csent to me, saying, “Come, let us meet together ³among the villages in the plain of ^dOno.” But they ^ethought to do me harm.

³So I sent messengers to them, saying, “I am doing a great work, so that I cannot come down. Why should the work cease while I leave it and go down to you?”

⁴But they sent me this message four times, and I answered them in the same manner.

⁵Then Sanballat sent his servant to me as before, the fifth time, with an open letter in his hand. ⁶In it was written:

It is reported among the nations, and ⁴Geshem says, that you and the Jews plan to rebel; therefore, according to these rumors, you are rebuilding the wall, ^fthat you may be their king. ⁷And you have also appointed prophets to proclaim concerning you at Jerusalem, saying, “There is a king in Judah!” Now these matters will be reported to the king. So come, therefore, and let us consult together.

⁸Then I sent to him, saying, “No such things as you say are being done, but you invent them in your own heart.”

⁹For they all were trying to make us afraid, saying, “Their hands will be weakened in the work, and it will not be done.”

Now therefore, O God, strengthen my hands.

5:19 Nehemiah’s motives were pure. He was not doing good for the praise of men, but to please God. His prayer is repeated at the end of the book (13:31).

6:2 Nehemiah’s enemies, realizing that open opposition had not worked and that the wall was close to being finished, suggested a conference. The plain of Ono was about 20 miles northwest of Jerusalem. Somehow, perhaps by a word from the Lord, Nehemiah was warned of his enemy’s intent.

6:7 The evidence that was used to accuse Nehemiah of rebellion was the assertion that prophets were proclaiming Nehemiah to be king. Zechariah had prophesied that a king was coming (see Zech.

9:9). With all the activity of the rebuilding of the wall, people were probably talking about what Zechariah had said. Nehemiah’s enemies threatened to take the matter to the king of Persia. They used this threat as leverage to force Nehemiah to attend their proposed meeting. Although they had no real intention of going to the king (v. 9), they hoped their threats would ruin Nehemiah’s reputation so that the workers would lose their resolve.

6:8, 9 Nehemiah would not allow himself to get sidetracked. Instead, he committed his enemy’s accusations to the Lord (see Ps. 31:13, 14). His enemies wanted to weaken his hands, so he prayed for the Lord to strengthen him.

How Nehemiah Handled Opposition
As leader of the effort to rebuild the walls of Jerusalem, Nehemiah faced resistance of almost every variety.
Resistance	Nehemiah's Response	Reference
Sanballat and Tobiah angrily ridiculed Nehemiah.	Nehemiah and the people prayed and renewed their commitment to work.	4:1–6
Sanballat, Tobiah, and a coalition of Arabs, Ammonites, and Ashdodites threatened an attack.	Nehemiah and the people prayed and appointed an around-the-clock guard.	4:7–9
The Israelites became discouraged and fearful.	Nehemiah spoke words of reassurance and armed all the workers.	4:10–23
Some of the Jewish officials took advantage of the poor by charging exorbitant interest rates and seizing their property.	Nehemiah rebuked these opportunists and ordered them to return the seized assets.	5:1–13
Sanballat, Tobiah, and Geshem tried to distract Nehemiah with offers to meet and talk.	Nehemiah refused the offers and kept his focus on the goal of finishing the walls.	6:1–4
Sanballat spread slanderous reports that Nehemiah intended to make himself king.	Nehemiah denied the accusation and prayed for strength.	6:5–9
Shemaiah, a subordinate of Tobiah and Sanballat, tried to convince Nehemiah to be a coward and break God's law by hiding in the temple.	Nehemiah discerned the trick and prayed for strength and justice.	6:10–14

¹⁰Afterward I came to the house of Shemaiah the son of Delaiah, the son of Mehetabel, who was a secret informer; and he said, “Let us meet together in the house of God, within the ⁵temple, and let us close the doors of the temple, for they are coming to kill you; indeed, at night they will come to kill you.”

¹¹And I said, “Should such a man as I flee? And who is there such as I who would go into the temple to save his life? I will not go in!” ¹²Then I perceived that God had not sent him at all, but that ⁸he pronounced this prophecy against me because Tobiah and Sanballat had hired him. ¹³For this reason he was hired, that I should be afraid and act that way and sin, so that they might have cause for an evil report, that they might reproach me.

¹⁴^hMy God, remember Tobiah and Sanballat, according to these their works, and the ⁱprophetess Noadiah and the rest of the prophets who would have made me afraid.

The Wall Completed

¹⁵So the wall was finished on the twenty-fifth day of Elul, in fifty-two days. ¹⁶And it happened, ^jwhen all our enemies heard of it, and all the nations around us saw these things, that they were very disheartened in their own eyes; for ^kthey perceived that this work was done by our God.

¹⁷Also in those days the nobles of Judah sent many letters to Tobiah, and the letters of Tobiah came to them. ¹⁸For many in Judah were pledged to him, because he was the ^lson-in-law of Shechaniah the son of Arah, and his son Jehohanan had married the daughter of ^mMeshullam the son of Berechiah. ¹⁹Also they reported his good deeds before me, and reported my ⁶words to him. Tobiah sent letters to frighten me.

⁷Then it was, when the wall was built and I had ^ahung the doors, when the gatekeepers, the singers, and the Levites had been appointed, ²that I gave the charge of Jerusalem to my brother ^bHanani, and Hananiah the leader ^cof the ¹citadel, for he was a faithful man and ^dfeared God more than many.

³And I said to them, “Do not let the gates of Jerusalem be opened until the sun is hot; and while they stand guard, let them shut and bar the doors; and appoint guards from among the inhabitants of Jerusalem, one at his watch station and another in front of his own house.”

⁴Now the city was large and spacious, but the people in it were ^efew, and the houses were not rebuilt. ⁵Then my God put it into my heart to gather the nobles, the rulers, and the people, that they might be registered by genealogy. And I found a register of the genealogy of those

6:10 Evidently Shemaiah was a priest. When Nehemiah visited him, Shemaiah proposed that they enter the holy place to be safe from assassins. Shemaiah's suggestion was for Nehemiah to flee into the sanctuary. It was lawful for an Israelite to seek refuge at the altar outside the temple (see Ex. 21:13, 14), but only a priest could enter the holy place. Nehemiah's enemies were subtly tempting him. If they could trap him in sin, this would discredit him and the work. Then the people would cease to follow him, and the work on the wall would stop.

6:11–14 God gave Nehemiah the wisdom to discern the error in Shemaiah's counsel. Tobiah and Sanballat were the principal instigators behind Shemaiah. Nehemiah indignantly rejected Shemaiah's counsel for two reasons. First, a man such as himself should not flee. Nehemiah was the governor, a leader of the people. He was responsible to the king and ultimately to the King of kings. A man in his position should not run and hide out of fear. Second, Nehemiah refused to go to the temple to save his life. The Law prohibited him from entering the Most Holy Place under penalty of death (see Num. 18:7).

6:17–19 Here is a postscript. It turns out that during the building of the wall, a number of personal letters had been exchanged between some of the nobles of Judah and Tobiah. Tobiah and his son Jehohanan had married Jewish women. Some of the nobles sang Tobiah's praises to Nehemiah and then reported back to Tobiah everything they learned from the governor. With these letters, they hoped either to entrap Nehemiah in his own words or to intimidate him.

7:1 The Levites were assistants to the priests (Num. 18:1–4) and guarded and cleaned the sanctuary. Nehemiah appointed the Levites to their duties in the temple. The gatekeepers and singers were numbered among the Levites. The gatekeepers kept watch over the house of God and opened and closed the gates of the temple court (see 1 Chr. 9:17–19; 26:12–19). The singers led the people in their musical worship of God. The number of Levites, gatekeepers, and singers is given in vv. 43–45.

7:2 Nehemiah appointed two guards over the city as municipal officers in charge of security, each guard responsible for half of Jerusalem (3:9–12). One of the guards was Nehemiah's brother Hanani, who had visited Jerusalem and brought back a bleak report to Nehemiah in Shushan (1:2). The other guard was Hananiah. Nehemiah put him over the citadel because he was faithful and because he feared God.

7:3 Nehemiah not only established guards over Jerusalem (v. 2), he also established guidelines for protecting the city. The gates of a city normally opened at sunrise, but Nehemiah ordered Jerusalem's gates to be kept closed until the sun was high. This extra precaution would have discouraged enemies from mounting a surprise attack at sunrise. Gates were critical to the defense of an ancient city. Nehemiah also ordered the citizens of Jerusalem to organize a civil defense, with people taking turns standing guard at night outside their own houses. This was a clever strategy. The people would have been more alert in guarding their own homes than they would have been in guarding a general part of the city.

7:4 For the size of the city, Jerusalem was underpopulated. Even though it was 90 years since people had returned under Zerubbabel to live there, there was still much undeveloped space within the walls renewed by Nehemiah.

7:5 my God put it into my heart: Nehemiah attributed to the Lord the idea of a census that would show the distribution of the population. If he knew the population pattern in the capital and the countryside, he could then determine which districts could best afford to lose a portion of their inhabitants to Jerusalem.

7:6-73 Nehemiah discovered a list, recorded by families, of the names of the Jewish people who came from Persia to Judah in 536 B.C. under Zerubbabel. This long list consisted of the names of leaders (v. 7), people by families (vv. 8-25), people by cities (vv. 26-38), priests (vv. 39-42), Levites (vv. 43-45), Nethinim or temple servants (vv. 46-56), Solomon's servants (vv. 57-60), returnees without a genealogy (vv. 61-65), the total number of people (vv. 66, 67), their animals (vv. 68, 69), and the gifts given for the support of the work (vv. 70-72). ⁶⁴ These sought their listing among those who were registered by genealogy, but it was not found; therefore they were excluded from the priesthood as defiled. ⁶⁵ And the ² governor said to them that they should not eat of the most holy things till a priest could consult with the Urim and Thummim.

⁶⁶ Altogether the whole assembly was forty-two thousand three hundred and sixty, ⁶⁷ besides their male and female servants, of whom there were seven thousand three hundred and thirty-seven; and they had two hundred and forty-five men and women singers. ⁶⁸ Their horses were seven hundred and thirty-six, their mules two hundred and forty-five, ⁶⁹ their camels four hundred and thirty-five, and donkeys six thousand seven hundred and twenty.

⁷³ So the priests, the Levites, the gatekeepers, the singers, some of the people, the Nethinim, and all Israel dwelt in their cities.

Ezra Reads the Law

^a When the seventh month came, the children of Israel were in their cities.

⁸ Now all ^a the people gathered together as one man in the open square that was ^b in front of the Water Gate; and they told Ezra the ^c scribe to bring the Book of 7:70 One thousand gold drachmas would weigh about nine pounds.

8:1 The phrase all the people indicates that people gathered together from the cities and the countryside of Judah. The open square was presumably located between the southeast part of the temple and the eastern wall. The leader—in this case, the reader—was Ezra. This is the first time Ezra is mentioned in the Book of Nehemiah. The people instructed Ezra to get the Book of the Law, which Ezra had brought to Jerusalem as much as 13 years before. What had been confined to private study among learned men was made public to everyone.

the Law of Moses, which the LORD had commanded Israel. ²So Ezra the priest brought ^dthe Law before the assembly of men and women and all who could hear with understanding ^eon the first day of the seventh month. ³Then he ^fread from it in the open square that was in front of the Water Gate ¹from morning until midday, before the men and women and those who could understand; and the ears of all the people were attentive to the Book of the Law.

⁴So Ezra the scribe stood on a platform of wood which they had made for the purpose; and beside him, at his right hand, stood Mattithiah, Shema, Anaiah, Urijah, Hilkiah, and Maaseiah; and at his left hand Pedaiah, Mishael, Malchijah, Hashum, Hashbadana, Zechariah, and Meshullam. ⁵And Ezra opened the book in the sight of all the people, for he was standing above all the people; and when he opened it, all the people ^gstood up. ⁶And Ezra blessed the LORD, the great God.

Then all the people ^hanswered, “Amen, Amen!” while ⁱlifting up their hands. And they ^jbowed their heads and worshiped the LORD with their faces to the ground.

⁷Also Jeshua, Bani, Sherebiah, Jamin, Akkub, Shabbethai, Hodijah, Maaseiah, Kelita, Azariah, Jozabad, Hanan, Pelaiah, and the Levites, ^khelped the people to understand the Law; and the people ^lstood in their place. ⁸So they read distinctly from the book, in the Law of God; and they gave the sense, and helped them to understand the reading.

⁹^m And Nehemiah, who was the ²governor, Ezra the priest and scribe, and the Levites who taught the people said to all the people, ⁿ“This day is holy to the LORD your God; ^odo not mourn nor weep.” For all the people wept, when they heard the words of the Law.

¹⁰Then he said to them, “Go your way, eat the fat, drink the sweet, ^pand send portions to those for whom nothing is prepared; for this day is holy to our Lord. Do not sorrow, for the joy of the LORD is your strength.”

¹¹So the Levites quieted all the people, saying, “Be still, for the day is holy; do not be grieved.” ¹²And all the people went their way to eat and drink, to ^qsend portions and rejoice greatly, because they ^runderstood the words that were declared to them.

The Feast of Tabernacles

¹³Now on the second day the heads of the fathers’ houses of all the people, with the priests and Levites, were gathered to Ezra the scribe, in order to understand the words of the Law. ¹⁴And they found written in the Law, which the LORD had commanded by Moses, that the children of Israel should dwell in ^sbooths³ during the feast of the seventh month, ¹⁵and ^tthat they should announce and proclaim in all their cities and ^uin Jerusalem, say-

8:2 In Scripture, women are often presumed to be present in group gatherings; here they are mentioned explicitly. Everyone who could hear with understanding—that is, older children as well as adults—gathered on the first day of the seventh month. The wall had been completed on the twenty-fifth day of the sixth month (6:15) so this event took place just a few days after the completion of the wall.

8:3 morning until midday: This would have been a period of about six hours.

8:5 As Ezra unrolled the scroll, the people stood, signifying their reverence for the Word. This gesture later became characteristic of the Jewish people in synagogue services.

8:6 Before reading the Book of the Law, Ezra led the people in prayer. Blessed here indicates identifying God as the source of the blessing of the people (see Ps. 103:1). The people answered Amen and lifted their hands, indicating their participation with Ezra in prayer. Then they bowed their heads and worshiped the LORD with their faces to the ground, indicating their willing submission to their Lord and Creator.

8:8 they read distinctly: The Levites explained fully the meaning of the Law of God. they gave the sense: The Levites explained the Law so that the people got the sense and insight of what was being read.

8:9-11 Once the people understood the Word of God, they wept. They had heard the high standard of the Law and recognized their low standing before the LORD, and were convicted. Nehemiah, Ezra, and the Levites were undoubtedly glad to see the people’s conviction. However, they urged the people to stop crying and reminded them that this day was holy to the LORD. The first day of the seventh month (v. 2) was the Feast of Trumpets. It was not a time to weep, but to celebrate. The people were instructed to celebrate the feast with eating, drinking, and sharing. The joy of the LORD could refer to the joy that God has, but the context indicates that this is something the people also experienced. It is a God-given gladness found when we are in communion with God. When our goal is to know more about the LORD, the byproduct is His joy. Strength here means “place of safety,” a “refuge,” or “protection.” The people’s refuge was God: They had built a wall and they carried spears and swords, but He was their protection.

8:12 The people went to their houses to eat and drink, to share and rejoice, because they took to heart the words of Nehemiah, Ezra, and the Levites (vv. 1-9). They obeyed the Word of the LORD and celebrated the Feast of Trumpets.

8:13 The heads of families, the priests, and the Levites came back the next day to hear more teaching from God’s Word. understand: Even the leaders gathered to gain the sense of the Scriptures and how they should act.

8:14 By this time, the reading of the Law had advanced to Lev. 23. The listeners discovered that they were to observe the Feast of Tabernacles from the fifteenth to the twenty-second day of the seventh month. During this time, the people were to live in booths made of fresh branches of fruit and palm trees. The booths would be set up in courts, streets, public squares, and housetops. No secular work was to be done during this festival. This feast was observed in memory of the their ancestors’ living in booths—that is, tents—after the Exodus (see Lev. 23:40). The booth was not a symbol of misery, but of protection, preservation, and shelter.

ing, “Go out to the mountain, and ^vbring olive branches, branches of oil trees, myrtle branches, palm branches, and branches of leafy trees, to make booths, as it is written.”

¹⁶Then the people went out and brought them and made themselves booths, each one on the ^wroof of his house, or in their courtyards or the courts of the house of God, and in the open square of the ^xWater Gate ^yand in the open square of the Gate of Ephraim. ¹⁷So the whole assembly of those who had returned from the captivity made ⁴booths and sat under the booths; for since the days of Joshua the son of Nun until that day the children of Israel had not done so. And there was very ^zgreat gladness. ¹⁸Also ^aday by day, from the first day until the last day, he read from the Book of the Law of God. And they kept the feast ^bseven days; and on the ^ceighth day there was a sacred assembly, according to the prescribed manner.

The People Confess Their Sins

⁹Now on the twenty-fourth day of ^athis month the children of Israel were assembled with fasting, in sackcloth, ^band with ¹dust on their heads. ²Then ^cthose of Israelite lineage separated themselves from all foreigners; and they stood and ^dconfessed their sins and the iniquities of their fathers. ³And they stood up in their place and ^eread from the 8:16 The people observed the Feast of Tabernacles according to the Law. Those who lived in cities built their booths on the flat tops of their houses or in their courtyards. The priests and Levites built their booths in the courts of the temple. The people from the country constructed huts in the street before the Water Gate and the Gate of Ephraim.

8:17 since the days of Joshua . . . the children of Israel had not done so: The reference here is to the construction of booths. The people of Israel had certainly celebrated the Feast of Tabernacles since the days of Joshua. In fact, those who had returned with Ezra kept the feast the first year of their return (see 1 Kin. 8:65; 2 Chr. 7:9; see especially Ezra 3:4).

8:18 The reading of the Law was required during the celebration of the Feast of Tabernacles, which occurred on the Sabbath year (see Deut. 31:10, 11).

9:1 the twenty-fourth day of this month: The people’s public worship had begun on the first day of the seventh month (8:2). More than three weeks later, the people were still engaged in public worship. Fasting, sackcloth, and dust were traditional signs of mourning; here these signs were preparation for the confession of the people’s sin (v. 2).

9:2 Of Israelite lineage means “the seed of Israel.” The separation from all foreigners was a sacred separation from foreign persons who worshiped other gods and whose practices might have brought harm to the integrity of the Lord’s worship by His people. their sins and the iniquities of their fathers: The confession of the people’s own sins was for personal and corporate forgiveness; the confession of their fathers’ sins was for remembrance, that they might not continue in past evil actions and attitudes.

9:3 As in 8:5, the people stood in reverence at hearing the reading of the Scriptures. one-fourth of the day: Approximately three hours (compare 8:3) were spent in public reading and three hours were spent in corporate worship. confessed: When this word is used with God as its object, as in this verse, it refers to the praise of God.

9:5 Stand up and bless the LORD your God: These words were shouted by the Levites. Forever and ever: The Lord of Hosts will be praised through all eternity. Your glorious name: The importance of the name of God can scarcely be overestimated. This psalm is solidly based on the theology of the Law (the books of Moses) as would be expected following the three-week reading of the Scriptures (8:1, 2). Thus this poem’s exaltation of the Lord’s name is based on God’s own revelation of His name recorded in the Book of Exodus (see Ex. 3:14). The prophet Isaiah also praised the Lord’s “glorious name” (Is. 63:14).

9:6 One of the fundamental teachings of Scripture is that God is not one among many; He alone is the living God (see Deut. 6:4). heaven . . . earth . . . seas: God alone has made all things, and He alone preserves all things. Therefore, worship is due Him. The first section of this psalm (vv. 5, 6) establishes the mood for the whole poem: God is incomparable (see Num. 23:8, 9; Deut. 4:32–40; Ps. 113:4–6).

9:7, 8 You are the LORD God: The word order of the Hebrew text is striking: “You are He, Yahweh (the) God.” The use of the definite article on the word God marks Him as “the true God.” Abraham: The story of the election of Abraham begins in Gen. 12:1–3. The point here is to emphasize God’s grace. You found his heart faithful: None of the people of biblical history was without sin except Jesus. Still, there were some whose faithfulness to God was constant. Among them were Abraham and Sarah (see Heb. 11). The subsequent history of the people of Israel was not marked by the steady faithfulness seen in Abraham, much to the displeasure of the Lord. The Promised Land, the land of the Canaanites, was populated by diverse groups of people who had all lost their right to the land because of their sinfulness (see Gen. 15:18–21; Ex. 3:8, 17; 23:23; 33:2; Deut. 7:1; Josh. 3:10). You have performed Your words: This is the essence of the psalm. God’s faithfulness to His people cannot be challenged. You are righteous: One of the greatest reasons to celebrate the character of God is His conformity to His own standard of perfection (v. 33).

9:9 The Book of Exodus tells about the plight of the Israelites in Egypt and their complaint to the Lord for deliverance. It then speaks of God’s mercy in His response to the people’s need. This verse suggests that before the people expressed their hurt, the Lord was already aware of their troubles.

9:10 The signs and wonders were the ten plagues of Ex. 7–12. These great acts of God were directed primarily against Pharaoh. acted proudly: In Ex. 18:11, Jethro, the father-in-law of Moses, used this same phrase to describe the presumptuous actions of the Egyptians. It was the proud actions of the Egyptians that brought God’s judgment on them.

9:11, 12 You divided the sea refers to God’s acts of deliverance at the Red Sea (see Ex. 14; 15). Note the simile of Pharaoh’s troops sinking as a stone (compare Ex. 15:5). cloudy pillar . . . pillar of fire: The continued presence of God in the lives of His people was indicated by these symbols (see Ex. 13:21, 22; Num. 10:11, 34; Deut. 1:33).

9:14 The significance of the Sabbath in God’s law for Israel is celebrated here (see Ex. 20:8–11; 23:10–13; 31:12–18). By the hand of Moses: The Law came from the Lord, but it was given by the agency of Moses (see John 1:17).

9:15 The gifts of bread, or manna (see Ex. 16:9–35), and water (see Ex. 17:1–7) demonstrated God’s care for His people in their journey to the Promised Land.

9:16, 17 But they: These words stand in shocking contrast to the description of God’s actions in vv. 9–15. The sin of the Israelites was

The Levites’ Psalm

The ninth chapter of Nehemiah is one of the most eloquent recitals of God’s marvelous acts in Israel’s history. Along with Moses’ “Song of the Sea” (Ex. 15), “The Song of Moses” (Deut. 32), “Deborah’s Song” (Judg. 5), “Hannah’s Song” (1 Sam. 2), and David’s “Song of the Bow” (2 Sam. 1), this poem is one of the great psalms in Scripture.

Interestingly enough, the occasion for this grand psalm was not an official feast day. The twenty-fourth day of Tishri was two days after the celebration of the Feast of Tabernacles, the joyous celebration of God’s provision for the Israelites in the wilderness. Apparently, Ezra and the Levites saw the need for the people to confess their sins more fully in light of the reading of God’s law (8:7, 8). Thus in the spirit of the Day of Atonement, which occurred on the tenth day of that month, the people gathered to praise God, confess their sins, and renew their commitment to the covenant. King Josiah had led a similar covenant renewal ceremony after reading God’s law (2 Chr. 34:29–32).

The Levites led the confession with the psalm recorded here. Similar to Psalms 78, 105, and 106, this psalm vividly rehearses the story of the nation of Israel with a glorious focus on God’s gracious action among His people. Ultimately, this was the history of God’s saving works. The poem has four parts: (1) glorification of God’s name (vv. 5, 6); (2) recital of God’s faithfulness to His people despite their checkered history (vv. 7–31); (3) acknowledgment of God’s righteousness (vv. 32–35); and (4) confession (vv. 36, 37). This psalm about the history of Israel’s salvation evoked a response: The Israelites humbled themselves before their Lord and recommitted themselves to His covenant.

A true understanding of God’s merciful work on our behalf always leads to confession, worship, and renewal. Psalms like this one can help us restore a true picture of the gracious Lord we worship.

that they acted proudly—that is, they behaved toward God in the same way that the people of Egypt had behaved toward them. The primary reference here is to the rebellion of Israel against the Lord at Kadesh (see Num. 13; 14). The people's rebellion went so far that they appointed a leader to take them back to Egypt. But You: These words contrast the words “But they” at the beginning of v. 16 (see Ex. 34:6). Ready to pardon means abounding in forgiveness. Slow to anger: This phrase translates a Hebrew idiom (“long of nose”) that has the same meaning as the English expression “to have a long fuse.” Kindness, from a word that means “loyal love,” is used often in the Book of Psalms (see Ps. 13:5). Because of God's loyalty and steadfastness, He did not forsake His people.

9:18–21 In these verses, the poet describes the faithfulness of God to the Israelites in the wilderness despite their wretched behavior. Molded calf is a reference to the act of rebellion described in Ex. 32. Manifold mercies describes deep feelings like those of a mother for her child. You did not forsake them is repeated from v. 17. God would have been justified in abandoning His people because of their extreme sinfulness and wicked rebellion; yet He was compelled by His character not to do so. You also gave Your good Spirit: God not only gave gifts to His people, He made Himself known in their midst. Forty years: The wilderness experience (see Deut. 2:7) is viewed in two ways in the Bible: (1) as a period of prolonged punishment because of rebellion; and (2) as a period of continued mercy because of God's unchanging character. clothes . . . feet: God's provisions were daily experiences of divine miracles (see Deut. 8:4; 29:5).

9:22–25 The poet describes the mercies of God in Israel's conquest of the Promised Land and in God's continuing provision for them. kingdoms and nations: The Bible celebrates the conquest of the land east of the Jordan, as well as the conquest of Canaan itself. as the stars: The miraculous growth of the people is described in this familiar hyperbole (see Gen. 15:5; 22:17). the people went in: The conquest of the land as described in the Book of Joshua is indicated here. strong cities . . . rich land . . . houses: With few exceptions, the people of Israel conquered the inhabitants of Canaan in such a way that they were able to move into the Canaanites' undamaged homes and cities. The Israelites were also able to enjoy crops and wells for which they did not have to work. All of this is testimony to God's great goodness.

9:26–29 The rebellion of the people was expressed during the period of the judges and throughout the period of the kings. Cast Your law behind their backs is a graphic metaphor for rebellion. killed Your prophets: Jesus also directed this charge against the rebellious people (see Matt. 23:31). You delivered them into the hand of their enemies refers to the experiences of the Israelites during the period described by the Book of Judges. he shall live by them: Salvation in any period is only by grace through faith

(see Eph. 2:8, 9). Keeping the Law was never a means of salvation, but a guide for living a life that pleases the Lord.

9:30, 31 God continued to be faithful to His disobedient people. For many years refers to the history of the people of Israel from Saul to the last of the kings. Your Spirit in Your prophets speaks of God's work in inspiring the words of the prophets of Israel (see Jer. 1:9). You gave them into the hand of the peoples of the lands refers to the captivity of Israel. nor forsake them: For the time in this psalm (vv. 17, 19), this reality is affirmed.

9:32 Now refers to the time of the great revival under Ezra (8:1, 2). covenant and mercy: God's covenant loyalty is unbreakable (see Heb. 6:17, 18). Do not let all the trouble seem small: In view of the unspeakable wonder of God, the hardship of His people might seem too small a matter to be noticed. kings . . . people: The effects of Israel's trouble were all-inclusive. From the days of the kings of Assyria: The incursions of the Assyrians, beginning with Tiglath-Pileser III, began a period of oppression for the Jewish people. 9:33 You are just: The poet affirms the righteousness of God. You have dealt faithfully . . . we have done wickedly: This is the basic reality not only of this chapter, but of the history of God and His people.

9:36, 37 Servants is used as a term of irony here. The people of Israel had been called to be the servants of God (see Lev. 25:55), but here they were servants of foreign rulers. The produce of the land did not belong to them; it went to kings. The people were taxed by Persians for the produce of the land that was God's gift to them.

9:38 The psalm ends in action, not just sentiment. The intent was changed behavior. The pledge was to mirror God's faithfulness. The

2 Chr. 24 ⁿ Num. 28; 29

The Covenant That Was Sealed

^{28d} Now the rest of the people—the priests, the Levites, the gatekeepers, the singers, the Nethinim, ^eand all those who had separated themselves from the peoples of the lands to the Law of God, their wives, their sons, and their daughters, everyone who had knowledge and understanding— ²⁹these joined with their brethren, their nobles, ^fand entered into a curse and an oath ^gto walk in God’s Law, which was given by Moses the servant of God, and to observe and do all the commandments of the LORD our Lord, and His ordinances and His statutes: ³⁰We would not give ^hour daughters as wives to the peoples of the land, nor take their daughters for our sons; ³¹ⁱ if the peoples of the land brought ²wares or any grain to sell on the Sabbath day, we would not buy it from them on the Sabbath, or on a holy day; and we would forego the ^jseventh year’s produce and the ^kexacting ³of every debt.

³² Also we made ordinances for ourselves, to exact from ourselves yearly ^lone-third of a shekel for the service of the house of our God: ³³for ^mthe showbread, for the regular grain offering, for the ⁿregular burnt offering of the Sabbaths, the New Moons, and the set feasts; for the holy things, for the sin offerings to make atonement for Israel, and all the work of the house of our God. ³⁴We cast new covenant community desired to demonstrate the faithfulness of Abraham and Sarah.

10:1 The way someone “signed” a document in the ancient world was similar to the use of a wax seal in more recent times. A distinctive seal was pressed into soft clay. The pattern of the seal showed what authority issued that document.

10:2-8 The priests who sealed the covenant are listed here. Some of these names appear in a later list as heads of priestly houses (12:11-20). Twenty-one priests who were heads of households signed the agreement in the name of the houses and families of their respective classes. Ezra’s name does not appear, perhaps indicating that he was not the head of a household.

10:9-13 The Levites also signed the covenant. Some of these names appear later as heads of the orders of Levites (12:8).

10:14-27 Forty-four leaders also signed the covenant. In contrast to the religious leaders, these were the political leaders of the Jewish community (compare 7:4-63; Ezra 2).

10:28 Not only leaders, but laypeople signed the covenant. The Nethinim were temple servants who did menial work in the sanctuary (see Ezra 2:43). Those who had separated themselves from the peoples of the lands were the descendants of those Israelites who had been left in the land and who joined the returning remnant. Men, women, and children of sufficient age signed the covenant.

10:29 entered into a curse: The phrase points to the penalties for failure to comply with the covenant. The people took an oath to live by the Word of God. God’s Law: The Law was a gift of God, given by Moses. The Israelites swore that they would observe the law of God. commandments . . . ordinances . . . statutes: This is a way of speaking of the whole law of God (1:7).

10:30 The Israelites’ decision to obey the Word of God in every area of their lives (v. 29) was not just a general statement. The people specifically vowed to obey the Word of God in their marriage relationships. Marriage with non-Jewish people was clearly forbidden in the Scriptures (see Ex. 34:12-16; Deut. 7:3; Josh. 23:12; Judg. 3:6).

We would not give our daughters . . . nor take their daughters: The parents of Israel decided that they would not permit their children to marry non-Jews. In the ancient world, marriages usually were arranged by the parents.

10:31 Other areas of life were included in the people’s dedication to God’s law. This verse deals with Sabbath observance. Three particulars regarding the Sabbath are mentioned. First, the people promised to stop all buying and selling from foreigners on the Sabbath. Second, they pledged to observe the Sabbatical year—that is, to leave their fields uncultivated during every seventh year (see Lev. 25:1-7). Third, they decided not to collect debts during the Sabbatical year (see Deut. 15:1-6). The people were dedicating themselves to observe the Word of God in their business life.

10:32-39 The remainder of the chapter covers the people’s promise to obey the Word of God concerning the temple. In this area, the people made four promises: (1) They promised to pay a temple tax to defray the expenses of the worship services in God’s sanctuary. Verse 33 lists the objects that the tax would supply. (2) They promised to provide a wood offering. The Law prescribed that wood should be constantly burning on the altar (see Lev. 6:12, 13). Nehemiah made this the business of the congregation. (3) They promised to offer their firstfruits at the temple. The firstfruits of the ground were given to the Lord as an acknowledgment of His status as landowner (see Ex. 23:19; 34:26; Deut. 26:2). The people promised the firstfruits of all trees, which means that they were going beyond the requirements of the Law. The firstborn of the animals also belonged to the Lord (see Num. 18:15, 17-19). (4) They promised to pay the priests.

lots among the priests, the Levites, and the people, ^ofor bringing the wood offering into the house of our God, according to our fathers' houses, at the appointed times year by year, to burn on the altar of the LORD our God ^pas it is written in the Law.

³⁵And we made ordinances ^qto bring the firstfruits of our ground and the firstfruits of all fruit of all trees, year by year, to the house of the LORD; ³⁶to bring the ^rfirstborn of our sons and our cattle, as it is written in the Law, and the firstborn of our herds and our flocks, to the house of our God, to the priests who minister in the house of our God; ³⁷to bring the firstfruits of our dough, our offerings, the fruit from all kinds of trees, the new wine and oil, to the priests, to the storerooms of the ⁴house of our God; and to bring ^tthe tithes of our land to the Levites, for the Levites should receive the tithes in all our farming communities. ³⁸And the priest, the descendant of Aaron, shall be with the Levites ^uwhen the Levites receive tithes; and the Levites shall bring up a tenth of the tithes to the house of our God, to ^vthe rooms of the storehouse.

³⁹For the children of Israel and the children of Levi ^wshall bring the offering of the grain, of the new wine and the oil, to the storerooms where the articles of the sanctuary are, where the priests who minister and the gatekeepers ^xand the singers are; and we will not ^yneglect the house of our God.

The People Dwelling in Jerusalem

11 Now the leaders of the people dwelt at Jerusalem; the rest of the people cast lots to bring one out of ten to dwell in Jerusalem, ^athe holy city, and nine-tenths were to dwell in other cities. ²And the people blessed all the men who ^bwillingly offered themselves to dwell at Jerusalem.

³These are the heads of the province who dwelt in Jerusalem. (But in the cities of Judah everyone dwelt in his own possession in their cities—Israelites, priests, Levites, ^dNethinim, and ^edescendants of Solomon's servants.) ⁴Also ^fin Jerusalem dwelt some of the children of Judah and of the children of Benjamin.

The children of Judah: Athaiah the son of Uzziyah, the son of Zechariah, the son of Amariah, the son of Shephatiah, the son of Mahalalel, of the children of ^gPerez; ⁵and Maaseiah the son of Baruch, the son of Col-Hozeh, the son of Hazaiah, the son of Adaiah, the son of Joiarib, the son of Zechariah, the son of Shiloni. ⁶All the sons of Perez who dwelt at Jerusalem were four hundred and sixty-eight valiant men.

⁷And these are the sons of Benjamin: Sallu the son of Meshullam, the son of Joed, the son of Pedaiiah, the son of Kolaiah, the son of Maaseiah, the son of Ithiel, the son of Jeshaiiah; ⁸and after him Gabbai and Sallai, nine hundred and twenty-eight. ⁹Joel the son of Zichri was their overseer, and Judah the son of ⁱSenuah was second over the city.

¹⁰^hOf the priests: Jedaiah the son of Joiarib, and Jachin; ¹¹Seraiah the son of Hilkiah, the son of Meshullam, the son of Zadok, the son of Meraioth, the son of Ahitub, was the leader of the house of God. ¹²Their brethren who did the work of the house were eight hundred and twenty-two; and Adaiah the son of Jeroham, the son of Pelaliah, the son of Amzi, the son of Zechariah, the son of Pashhur, the son of Malchijah, ¹³and his brethren, heads of the fathers' houses, were two hundred and forty-two; and Amashai the son of Azarel, the son of Ahzai, the son of Meshillemoth, the son of Immer, ¹⁴and their brethren, mighty men of valor, were one hundred and twenty-eight. Their overseer was Zabdiel ²the son of one of the great men.

¹⁵Also of the Levites: Shemaiah the son of Hasshub, the son of Azrikam, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Bunni; ¹⁶ⁱShabbethai and ^jJozabad, of the heads of the Levites, had the oversight of ^kthe business outside of the ³house of God; ¹⁷Mattaniah the son of ⁴Micha, the son of Zabdi, the son of Asaph, the leader who began the thanksgiving with prayer; Bakbukiah, the second among his brethren; and Abda the son of Shammua, the son of Galal, the son of Jeduthun. ¹⁸All the Levites in ^lthe holy city were two hundred and eighty-four.

11:1 Nehemiah cast lots to repopulate Jerusalem. Here the casting of lots was to determine God's will. Solomon wrote, "The lot is cast into the lap, but its every decision is from the LORD" (Prov. 16:33). one out of ten: This was the proportion demanded in order to bring the population of Jerusalem to the level deemed necessary for its strength and viability.

11:4-9 Four hundred and sixty-eight men from the tribe of Judah lived in Jerusalem; nine hundred and twenty-eight men from the tribe of Benjamin also lived there. According to 1 Chr. 9:3, descendants of Ephraim and Manasseh also made their home in Jerusalem.

11:12 The work of the house refers to the work of the temple—specifically, attending the sacrifices of the temple.

11:14 Mighty men of valor refers to the men who guarded the city of Jerusalem.

11:16 The oversight of the business outside of the house of God refers to the maintenance of the temple, including repairs.

¹⁹Moreover the gatekeepers, Akkub, Talmon, and their brethren who kept the gates, were one hundred and seventy-two.

²⁰And the rest of Israel, of the priests and Levites, were in all the cities of Judah, everyone in his inheritance. ²¹*m* But the Nethinim dwelt in Ophel. And Zihai and Gishpa were over the Nethinim.

²²Also the overseer of the Levites at Jerusalem was Uzzi the son of Bani, the son of Hashabiah, the son of Mattaniah, the son of Micha, of the sons of Asaph, the singers in charge of the ⁵service of the ⁶house of God. ²³For ⁿ*it was* the king's command concerning them that a ⁷certain portion should be for the singers, a quota day by day. ²⁴Pethahiah the son of Meshezabel, of the children of ^oZerah the son of Judah, was ^pthe ⁸king's deputy in all matters concerning the people.

The People Dwelling Outside Jerusalem

²⁵And as for the villages with their fields, some of the children of Judah dwelt in ^qKirjath Arba and its villages, Dibon and its villages, Jekabzeel and its villages; ²⁶in Jeshua, Moladah, Beth Pelet, ²⁷Hazar Shual, and Beersheba and its villages; ²⁸in Ziklag and Meconah and its villages; ²⁹in En Rimmon, Zorah, Jarmuth, ³⁰Zanoah, Adullam, and their villages; in Lachish and its fields; in Azekah and its villages. They dwelt from Beersheba to the Valley of Hinnom.

³¹Also the children of Benjamin from Geba dwelt in Michmash, Aija, and Bethel, and their villages; ³²in Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah; ³³in Hazor, Ramah, Gittaim; ³⁴in Hadid, Zeboim, Neballat; ³⁵in Lod, Ono, and ^rthe Valley of Craftsmen. ³⁶Some of the Judean divisions of Levites were in Benjamin.

These were the heads of the priests and their brethren in the days of ^eJeshua.

⁸Moreover the Levites were Jeshua, Binnui, Kadmiel, Sherebiah, Judah, and Mattaniah ^f*who led* the thanksgiving psalms, he and his brethren. ⁹Also Bakbukiah and Unni, their brethren, stood across from them in their duties.

²²During the reign of Darius the Persian, a record was also kept of the Levites and priests who had been ^hheads of their fathers' houses in the days of Eliashib, Joiada, Johanan, and Jaddua. ²³The sons of Levi, the heads of the fathers' houses until the days of Johanan the son of Eliashib, were written in the book of the ⁱchronicles.

²⁴And the heads of the Levites were Hashabiah, Sherebiah, and Jeshua the son of Kadmiel, with their brothers across from them, to ^jpraise and give thanks, ^kgroup ⁷alternating with group, ^laccording to the command of David the man of God. ²⁵Mattaniah, Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Meshullam, Talmon, and Akkub were 11:19 The gatekeepers were also defenders of the city.

11:22 The overseer of the Levites: Uzzi was a principal administrator of the temple.

11:24 The king's deputy was the representative of the people. This individual may have received and forwarded petitions and complaints to the king.

11:25-36 These verses record the residents outside Jerusalem—namely the tribes of Judah (vv. 25-30) and Benjamin (vv. 31-36). The people of Judah lived in 17 towns and their surrounding villages. The descendants of Benjamin occupied 15 sites.

11:25 Kirjath Arba is another name for Hebron.

12:1 The return of Zerubbabel is recorded in Ezra 1-6. Jeshua is Joshua the priest. Ezra: This is not the priest who wrote the book of the same name (see Ezra 7:1).

12:9 stood across from them: The singing was conducted with two choirs standing opposite each other.

12:10, 11 The listing of the descendants of Eliashib all the way to Jaddua may indicate that someone who lived after Ezra and Nehemiah added some of these names.

12:12-21 In vv. 1-7, the names of 22 priests are listed. Here only 20 names are recorded. Hattush (v. 2) and Maadiah (v. 5) are not mentioned in this list.

12:22 Darius refers to Darius II (Nothus), who ruled Persia from 423 to 405 B.C.

12:23 The book of the chronicles was not the biblical book, but an official record of the heads of the fathers' houses.

gatekeepers keeping the watch at the storerooms of the gates. ²⁶These lived in the days of Joiakim the son of Jeshua, the son of ^gJozadak, and in the days of Nehemiah ^mthe governor, and of Ezra the priest, ⁿthe scribe.

Nehemiah Dedicates the Wall

²⁷Now at ^othe dedication of the wall of Jerusalem they sought out the Levites in all their places, to bring them to Jerusalem to celebrate the dedication with gladness, ^pboth with thanksgivings and singing, with cymbals and stringed instruments and harps. ²⁸And the sons of the singers gathered together from the countryside around Jerusalem, from the ^qvillages of the Netophathites, ²⁹from the house of Gilgal, and from the fields of Geba and Azmaveth; for the singers had built themselves villages all around Jerusalem. ³⁰Then the priests and Levites ^rpurified themselves, and purified the people, the gates, and the wall.

³¹So I brought the leaders of Judah up on the wall, and appointed two large thanksgiving choirs. ^s*One* went to the right hand on the wall ^ttoward the Refuge Gate. ³²After them went Hoshaiiah and half of the leaders of Judah, ³³and Azariah, Ezra, Meshullam, ³⁴Judah, Benjamin, Shemaiah, Jeremiah, ³⁵and some of the priests' sons ^uwith trumpets—Zechariah the son of Jonathan, the son of Shemaiah, the son of Matthaniah, the son of Michaiah, the son of Zaccur, the son of Asaph, ³⁶and his brethren, Shemaiah, Azarel, Milalai, Gilalai, Maai, Nethanel, Judah, and Hanani, with ^vthe musical ^winstruments of David the man of God. And Ezra the scribe went before them. ³⁷^xBy the Fountain Gate, in front of them, they went up ^ythe stairs of the ^zCity of David, on the stairway of the wall, beyond the house of David, as far as ^athe Water Gate eastward.

⁴³Also that day they offered great sacrifices, and rejoiced, for God had made them rejoice with great joy; the women and the children also rejoiced, so that the joy of Jerusalem was heard ^kafar off.

Temple Responsibilities

⁴⁴¹And at the same time some were appointed over the rooms of the storehouse for the offerings, the firstfruits, and the ^mtithes, to gather into them from the fields of the cities the portions specified by the Law for the priests and Levites; for Judah rejoiced over the priests and Levites who ³ministered. ⁴⁵Both the singers and the gatekeepers kept the charge of their God and the charge of the purification, ⁿaccording to the command of David and Solomon his son. ⁴⁶For in the days of David ^oand Asaph of old there were chiefs of the singers, and songs of praise and thanksgiving to God. ⁴⁷In the days of Zerubbabel and in the days of Nehemiah all Israel gave the portions for the singers and the gatekeepers, a portion for ^peach day. ^qThey also ⁴consecrated holy things for the Levites, ^rand the Levites consecrated them for the children of Aaron.

12:27–29 After the completion of Jerusalem's wall (ch. 6), a revival of the people broke out (see chs. 8–10). After the revival, Nehemiah took steps to repopulate the city (see 7:4, 5; 11:1, 2). These two factors explain why the dedication of the wall was delayed. The people celebrated the dedication of the wall with gladness, referring not only to their festivity but to the worship of God. Thanksgivings, a term commonly found in the Book of Psalms (see Ps. 147:7), means "public acknowledgment," "to declare aloud, in public, to another." This word, along with singing and instruments, suggests the use of the Psalms in musical settings with words of praise and instrumental accompaniment.

12:30 The method of purification is not stated, but the order is—the priests and Levites, followed by the people, the gates, and the wall. Those who bore the vessels of the Lord had to be cleansed first.

12:36 The association of the name David with musical instruments was a reference to Israel's glorious past.

12:43 The sacrifices offered at the dedication of the wall probably were not burnt offerings, but peace offerings in which the people shared a common meal. The dedication was an occasion for great rejoicing. Everyone, including wives and children, took part.

12:44–47 After the dedication of the wall, the people took steps to provide for the priests, Levites, singers, and gatekeepers who served in the temple. The joy of the Lord should produce service for the Lord. In this case, the people's joy overflowed into providing for the temple. Men were appointed as custodians of the firstfruits and tithes. the days of David and Asaph: The times of the great music of Israel were never forgotten; they served as a model for the days still to come.

Principles of Separation

13 On that day ^athey read from the Book of Moses in the hearing of the people, and in it was found written ^bthat no Ammonite or Moabite should ever come into the assembly of God, ²because they had not met the children of Israel with bread and water, but ^chired Balaam against them to curse them. ^dHowever, our God turned the curse into a blessing. ³So it was, when they had heard the Law, ^ethat they separated all the mixed multitude from Israel.

The Reforms of Nehemiah

⁴Now before this, ^fEliashib the priest, having authority over the storerooms of the house of our God, was allied with ^gTobiah. ⁵And he had prepared for him a large room, ^hwhere previously they had stored the grain offerings, the frankincense, the articles, the tithes of grain, the new wine and oil, ⁱwhich were commanded to be given to the Levites and singers and gatekeepers, and the offerings for the priests. ⁶But during all this I was not in Jerusalem, ^jfor in the thirty-second year of Artaxerxes king of Babylon I had returned to the king. Then after certain days I obtained leave from the king, ⁷and I came to Jerusalem and discovered the evil that Eliashib had done for Tobiah, in ^kpreparing a room for him in the courts of the ^lhouse of God. ⁸And it grieved me bitterly; therefore I threw all the household goods of Tobiah out of the room. ⁹Then I commanded them to ^lcleanse the rooms; and I brought back into them the articles of the house of God, with the grain offering and the frankincense.

¹⁰I also realized that the portions for the Levites had ^mnot been given them; for each of the Levites and the singers who did the work had gone back to ⁿhis field. ¹¹So ^oI contended with the rulers, and said, ^p“Why is the house of God forsaken?” And I gathered them together and set them in their place. ¹²^qThen all Judah brought the tithe of the grain and the new wine and the oil to the storehouse. ¹³^rAnd I appointed as treasurers over the storehouse Shelemiah the priest and Zadok the scribe, and of the Levites, Pedaiiah; and next to them was Hanan the son of Zaccur, the son of Mattaniah; for they were considered ^sfaithful, and their task was to distribute to their brethren.

¹⁴^tRemember me, O my God, concerning this, and do not wipe out my good deeds that I have done for the house of my God, and for its services!

¹⁵In those days I saw people in Judah treading wine presses ^uon the Sabbath, and bringing in sheaves, and loading donkeys with wine, grapes, figs, and all kinds of burdens, ^vwhich they brought into Jerusalem on the Sabbath day. And I warned them about the day on which they were selling provisions. ¹⁶Men of Tyre dwelt there also, who brought in fish and all kinds of goods, and sold them on the Sabbath to the children of Judah, and in Jerusalem.

¹⁷Then I contended with the nobles of Judah, and said to them, “What evil thing is this that you do, by which you profane the Sabbath day? ¹⁸^wDid not your fathers do thus, and did not our God bring all this disaster on us and on this city? Yet you bring added wrath on Israel by profaning the Sabbath.”

¹⁹So it was, at the gates of Jerusalem, as it ^xbegan to be dark before the 13:1-3 The first area of backsliding for the people was their relationship with foreigners. Even though 9:2 states that “those of Israelite lineage separated themselves from all foreigners,” the people once again allowed foreigners into the congregation. Relationships between the Jewish people and the foreigners in the land had caused them to violate God’s command (see also 1 Cor. 15:33).

13:4-9 The second major area of backsliding dealt with in this chapter (vv. 1-3) was that the high priest was allowing God’s enemy to live in God’s house. Eliashib was the high priest (vv. 4, 28). Tobiah was one of the men who had tried to stop the building of the wall (2:10, 19; 4:3; 6:10-12, 17, 19). Eliashib allowed Tobiah to stay in the large room of the temple that had previously been used for storing grain and the like. In fact, Tobiah had been given access to several rooms of the temple.

13:8, 9 When Nehemiah returned to Jerusalem, he immediately initiated reforms. He removed Tobiah’s furniture from the chamber and then ordered that the room be cleansed. When the washing, scouring, and sprinkling with blood were completed, the chamber was once again filled with grain and the other items that had been there before.

13:10, 11 Contended is a term used often in the prophets to refer to God bringing a legal case against His errant people (see Jer. 2:9). Nehemiah was acting like a prophet, bringing a legal case against an apostate person. He contended for what was right. Note the pointed question he asked: Why is the house of God forsaken?

13:12, 13 Then all Judah brought the tithe: The gifts that should have been brought earlier were finally being brought by the people. treasurers: Nehemiah chose faithful men (see 7:2; 1 Cor. 4:2; 2 Tim. 2:2) to make sure the gifts were distributed properly.

13:14 Normally prayer is offered to the Lord before or during an event. In this case, Nehemiah’s prayer followed his good deeds. Nehemiah was saying, “What I did, I did in accordance with Your will; now preserve it and protect me.”

13:15-22 Another difficulty that Nehemiah faced concerned the Sabbath. The Jewish people in Judah were working on Saturday. People were buying and selling produce in Jerusalem. Men of Tyre brought fish and other things to be sold both in Judah and Jerusalem. These were all violations of Ex. 20:8-11 and of the people’s own oath (10:31). The people had put their business ahead of obedience to God’s command concerning their day of rest.

13:19-22 I commanded the gates to be shut: Nehemiah took charge, ordering the gates to be closed from Friday evening to Saturday evening and even posting his own servants as guards. When the merchants set up outside the wall, Nehemiah warned them that if they stayed around again on the Sabbath, he would himself attack them. Awed by the threat of the one-man army, the merchants left.

Sabbath, that I commanded the gates to be shut, and charged that they must not be opened till after the Sabbath. ¹⁹Then I posted some of my servants at the gates, so that no burdens would be brought in on the Sabbath day. ²⁰Now the merchants and sellers of all kinds of ²wares ³lodged outside Jerusalem once or twice.

²¹Then I warned them, and said to them, “Why do you spend the night ⁴around the wall? If you do so again, I will lay hands on you!” From that time on they came no more on the Sabbath. ²²And I commanded the Levites that ⁵they should cleanse themselves, and that they should go and guard the gates, to sanctify the Sabbath day.

Remember me, O my God, concerning this also, and spare me according to the greatness of Your mercy!

²³In those days I also saw Jews who ⁶had married women of ⁷Ashdod, Ammon, and Moab. ²⁴And half of their children spoke the language of Ashdod, and could not speak the language of Judah, but spoke according to the language of one or the other people.

Yet among many nations there was no king like him, ¹¹who was beloved of his God; and God made him king over all Israel. ¹²Nevertheless pagan women caused even him to sin. ²⁷Should we then hear of your doing all this great evil, ¹²transgressing against our God by marrying pagan women?”

²⁸And one of the sons ¹³of Joiada, the son of Eliashib the high priest, was a son-in-law of ¹³Sanballat the Horonite; therefore I drove him from me.

²⁹¹⁴Remember them, O my God, because they have defiled the priesthood and ¹⁴the covenant of the priesthood and the Levites.

³⁰¹⁵Thus I cleansed them of everything pagan. I also ¹⁵assigned duties to the priests and the Levites, each to his service, ³¹and to bringing ¹⁶the wood offering and the firstfruits at appointed times.

¹⁶Remember me, O my God, for good!

13:23, 24 The problem of Jews marrying foreigners had been dealt with 30 years before by Ezra (see Ezra 9:1–4). The people had then made a covenant, vowing that they would not do this (10:30). In this case Nehemiah found children of the mixed marriages who could not speak Hebrew, the language of Scripture. Without knowing Hebrew, these children could not learn the Law in their homes or worship in the holy temple. The Jews were raising children who did not know or worship the living God.

13:25–27 Nehemiah’s attack on the Jews who had married non-Jews was confrontational, direct, and even brutal. contended . . . cursed . . . struck . . . pulled out their hair: It is unnerving to read this list of verbs and imagine the scene. These were not the dispassionate remarks of someone giving a seminar. Nehemiah used everything he could, including his hands, to enforce obedience to the Law. made them swear: Nehemiah forced them to comply to the will of God in this matter. After all, this was the principal issue that had led to Israel’s captivity in the beginning. Nehemiah simply could not allow such a disaster to happen again. Solomon: Despite his greatness and God’s love for him, even Solomon had sinned greatly in this regard (see 1 Kin. 11:4–8). How then, with the great lessons of the past so clearly before them, could the people repeat these sins?

13:28, 29 I drove him from me: This action was taken against the most prominent offender, the grandson of the high priest Eliashib. This young man had married the daughter of Sanballat (2:10), the governor of Samaria and the archenemy of the Jewish people. The marriage was particularly offensive because it formed a treasonable alliance with Israel’s enemies and compromised the purity of the high priesthood (ch. 12). Because of the seriousness of this offense, Nehemiah took dramatic action. He expelled the young man from the community, praying that God would remember those who had defiled the priesthood.

13:30, 31 I cleansed them of everything pagan: Nehemiah’s testimony was that he had done everything he knew how to bring about righteousness in the priesthood and among the Levites, including their offerings and service. Nehemiah’s last recorded words (see 5:19), remember me, O my God, for good, would serve well as the last words of any person of faith.

THE BOOK OF ESTHER

THE BOOK OF ESTHER has all the elements of a great novel. There is the beautiful young orphan girl who rises from obscurity to become queen. She even hides a secret that could bring about her demise. Then there is the ambitious villain whose passion is to destroy the innocent. Finally the story line involves a power struggle, romantic love, and a startling exposé. But in the end, the point of this true story is clear: Once again the Israelites' God miraculously saves His people from certain destruction.

Author and Date The identity of the author of Esther is unknown. However the writer was probably Jewish and lived in Persia. A strong Jewish spirit pervades the book, particularly evident in the account of the establishment of the Jewish festival Purim. Moreover, the author was acquainted with Persian culture, as the extensive descriptions of the palace complex at Shushan (also called Susa) and the domestic details about the reign of King Ahasuerus indicate. For these reasons, some Jewish rabbis have ascribed the authorship of the book to Mordecai, one of its principal characters.

Whoever the author was, the Book of Esther was probably written shortly after the reign of Ahasuerus, no earlier than 465 B.C. The author writes of the rule of Ahasuerus and the deeds of Mordecai (10:2) in the past tense, indicating the book was not composed during Ahasuerus's reign. Yet the fact that Greek words do not appear in the book rules out a date after about 300 B.C. when the Greek language became more prominent in the ancient Middle East. On the other hand, the numerous words of Persian origin in the book point to its being composed during the latter half of the fifth century B.C. For example, the book calls Xerxes by the Hebrew name Ahasuerus, a spelling derived from the Persian Khshayarsha. If it had been written after 300 B.C. a spelling closer to the Greek form Xerxes would be expected.

Historical Accuracy Some critical scholars question the historical accuracy of Esther on various counts. One difficulty is the passage that describes the royal feast (1:3–5). The passage appears to indicate that the feast lasted a particularly long time: "one hundred and eighty days in all" (1:4). However, a better interpretation is that this long period of time was the period of preparation for the military campaign in Greece, during which Ahasuerus displayed his power and wealth to his officials. The feast itself lasted seven days—a lengthy time for a feast, but not an incredible period (1:5).

Another difficulty is that neither Vashti nor Esther is mentioned outside the Bible. However, historians do note that following his unsuccessful campaign against Greece (482–479 B.C.), Ahasuerus sought refuge in his harem. This coincides with the elevation of Esther (2:17). Furthermore, the word translated "queen" (1:9; 2:22) may refer merely to a principal wife rather than to a woman who ruled beside the king. Thus the obscurity of Esther and Vashti would be understandable. Even so, some still balk at the idea that a Persian ruler would marry a Jewish woman rather than choosing someone from the aristocratic Persian families. However, the Book of Esther makes it clear that Esther initially hid her Jewish identity. She used her Persian name Ishtar or Esther instead of her Hebrew name Hadassah. The climax of the story involves her surprising revelation that she was a Jew.

Importance in the Canon The Book of Esther has held an important place in the canon due to its strong testimony to God's providence and protection of His people. However, the book has been challenged by some. One of the main points in the dispute is the remarkable fact that neither the word God nor God's name Yahweh is found in the book. There are two explanations that may account for this. First, it may be a result of the author's chosen point of view. The author might have viewed the Jewish people who remained in Persia and did not return to the land of Israel (Ezra 1:1) as a people cut off from the principal blessings of God. Thus the absence of God's name in the book might be a way of expressing God's distance from the exiles. At the same time, the book clearly reveals God's surprising protection of them.

Second, the author may have written the book in the form of a Persian state chronicle in order to explain to the Persians the Jewish celebration of Purim. In accordance with this style, the author emphasizes the king's name, titles, and lists, but writes about the Jewish people in a detached tone. This could help explain why the Book of Esther is the only book in the Bible that does not directly mention God.

Themes Through the twists and turns of the Book of Esther's story line, the author weaves an underlying story about God's character. The narrative demonstrates God's providence and sovereignty in a situation that seemed hopeless. The Israelites were living among foreigners who did not fear God and who did not care about them. An implacable enemy of the Israelites had gained power at court and was laying a plan to destroy the Jews. But at a time when God seemed so distant, He was actually preparing to deliver His people. God was in control of every event—even the sleeplessness of a foreign king (6:1).

Thus in the Persian capital, God demonstrated His covenant loyalty to the Israelites. Long ago, God had promised Abraham that He would curse any individual who cursed the Israelites (Gen. 12:2, 3). The downfall of Haman dramatically illustrated God's faithfulness to His promise. Even to the Israelites who remained in a foreign land, God remained true to His word, for they were still His people. Thus the author of Esther clearly illustrates what the Israelites were celebrating at the Feast of Purim: God's faithful protection of His people.

CHRIST IN THE SCRIPTURES

Esther puts herself in harm's way for her people as she attempts to be an advocate. The similarities to Jesus' mission on our behalf are staggering. Esther's rise to power was orchestrated by God "for such a time as this" (4:14), the apostle Paul describes Jesus' entrance into our world as something that occurred "when the fullness of the time had come" (Gal. 4:4).

Another remarkable similarity between Esther's story and Jesus is the satanic attempt to destroy the divine plot of redemption God set in motion. But in both cases, God brings about His purpose by preserving His people in spite of opposition and danger.

1:1 The kingdom of Ahasuerus extended from India (the region drained by the Indus River) to Ethiopia (Cush, or northern Sudan). provinces: The Persian kingdom under Ahasuerus was divided into small areas called provinces and larger divisions called satrapies. 1:2 The capital of ancient Elam, Shushan (or Susa) was one of four royal residences for the Persian emperors. Shushan was 150 miles north of the Persian Gulf. It was the location of one of Daniel's visions (Dan. 8:2), and it was where Nehemiah served as cupbearer to King Artaxerxes I (see Neh. 1:1, 2). citadel: The capital city had a palace fortress on the highest point of the city, the acropolis. 1:3–5 In the third year of his reign, Ahasuerus displayed the riches of his kingdom for six months. made a feast: There is some uncertainty about whether the king gave one feast or two. It is possible that v. 3 introduces the idea of the grand banquet and v. 5 records the specifics of what turned out to be a seven-day festival. It is not likely that the feasting itself extended for 180 days. Persia and Media: Previously the Medes had been the stronger of the two nations. Beginning with the reign of Cyrus, the Persians dominated the kingdom. Together they established a powerful empire (see Dan. 5:28). 1:6, 7 white and blue: These were the royal colors of the Persians. The Persian custom was to recline on couches at the table. 1:8 The monarch ordered that guests could drink as much or as little as they pleased. This differed from the usual Persian custom by which people at a banquet were required to drink each time the king raised his cup. 1:9 Vashti: The queen gave a separate banquet for the women guests.

¹⁰On the seventh day, when the heart of the king was merry with wine, he commanded Mehuman, Biztha, ⁱHarbona, Bigtha, Abagtha, Zethar, and Carcas, seven eunuchs who served in the presence of King Ahasuerus, ¹¹to bring Queen Vashti before the king, wearing her royal crown, in order to show her beauty to the people and the officials, for she was beautiful to behold. ¹²But Queen Vashti refused to come at the king's command brought by his eunuchs; therefore the king was furious, and his anger burned within him.

¹⁶And Memucan answered before the king and the princes: "Queen Vashti has not only wronged the king, but also all the princes, and all the people who are in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus. ¹⁷For the queen's behavior will become known to all women, so that they will ⁿdespise their husbands in their eyes, when they report, 'King Ahasuerus commanded Queen Vashti to be brought in before him, but she did not come.' ¹⁸This very day the noble ladies of Persia and Media will say to all the king's officials that they have heard of the behavior of the queen. 2 After these things, when the wrath of King Ahasuerus subsided, he remembered Vashti, ^awhat she had done, and what had been decreed against her. ²Then the king's servants who attended him said: "Let beautiful young virgins be sought for the king; ³and let the king appoint officers in all the provinces of his kingdom, that they may gather all the beautiful young virgins to ¹Shushan the ²citadel, into the women's quarters, under the custody of ³Hegai the king's eunuch, custodian of the women. 1:10 Castrated men, or eunuchs, were assigned to act as harem attendants and as agents of communication between the king and his harem (6:14). Because of the level of trust these men could attain, they might also function as administrators in the kingdom as well. Harbona plays a significant role later in the story (see 7:9).

1:13 men who understood the times: Court astrologers and magicians gave advice and predicted the future on the basis of what they pretended to know about the supernatural. The prophets often looked upon such charlatans with derisive scorn (see Is. 44:24, 25).

1:14 The seven counselors of Ezra 7:14 were probably the same group of men. These men enjoyed the unusual privilege of speaking personally with the king.

1:16–18 Acting as spokesman for the others, Memucan responded shrewdly by enlarging the offense beyond a personal affront to the king.

1:18 contempt: The Hebrew word used occurs only here in the OT. It is related to the verb translated despise in v. 17.

1:19 royal decree: Memucan urged the king to take immediate action against Vashti. The queen would be given what amounted to a divorce. This would have the effect of demoting her from her privileged position as the chief wife of the king.

1:22 sent letters: The Persians were known for their excellent postal system. speak in the language of his own people: This suggests the respect that was held for local languages and dialects in the Persian Empire.

2:3 It was customary for the virgins of the king's harem to spend a year in beauty treatments and purification rites before going to see the king (see v. 12). Again we see the exaggerated sense of power of the king contrasted with the fragile status of women. Beautiful young virgins were seen to exist merely to bring pleasure to the king.

2:5 The name Mordecai is related to the name of Marduk, the principal Babylonian deity. The phrase a certain Jew, along with the genealogy and the tribal name Benjamite, prepares us for the upcoming conflict with Haman in ch. 3. Shimei may refer to the man from the family of Saul who cursed David (see 2 Sam. 16:5–13). Kish may be the father of Saul (see 1 Sam. 9:1, 2). If these figures are the ones intended, they are Mordecai's remote ancestors from the tribe of Benjamin.

Shushan

The palace at Shushan (also called Susa) was built by Darius I, Ahasuerus's father. Archaeologists have found in its dedication inscription (housed at the Louvre in Paris), a confirmation of its lavish appointments and ornamentation. Excavation has determined that the king received visitors in a large hall separated from his private living quarters by a courtyard. The hall contained 36 columns and was flanked on three sides by porticoes, each having two rows of six columns. The remains of colorfully glazed decorative brick, which formed large mosaics of human figures, winged lions and bulls, sphinxes, and winged sun disks have also been unearthed at Susa. The foundation charter describes the materials used to build the royal compound (cedar, gold, ivory, lapis lazuli, turquoise, and marble) as tribute coming from all parts of the Persian Empire.

10 ^g Esth. 2:20 ² Revealed the identity of

2:6 This verse is difficult to interpret, as the Hebrew text does not indicate the subject of the verb had been carried away. The subject could not be Mordecai. If he had been among those carried away into captivity, he would not likely have lived until the time of Ahasuerus. The subject might be Mordecai's ancestor Kish, understood to be a different person than the father of Saul. It is also possible that the original phrasing merely means that Mordecai and his family were among those descended from the captives who were taken to Babylon in the days of Nebuchadnezzar. In this case, the person who was brought to Babylon is not specifically mentioned; only the more well-known ancestors are noted.

2:7 Hadassah is a Hebrew name that means "Myrtle." Esther is a Persian name meaning "Star." Like the name of her cousin Mordecai, the name Esther was related to that of a local deity, the goddess Ishtar. Jewish people in antiquity customarily had two names when they lived in regions distant from Israel. One would be their secular name, a name understandable in their adopted culture, and the other would be their sacred name given in Hebrew. lovely and beautiful: The two words complement each other to mean "supremely lovely" or "exceedingly beautiful."

2:8 We cannot determine whether Esther went willingly or reluctantly to the king's palace. She was brought into the palace complex, but not yet into the living quarters of the king. As custodian of the king's harem, Hegai was a eunuch (2:3).

2:9 obtained his favor: This phrase characterizes Esther's relationships with all who knew her, including the king (see v. 17). Esther found favor with many, as is demonstrated throughout the chapter. The Hebrew word for favor is a term used regularly in the Bible to describe the character of God. This word may be translated "loyal love." The frequency of this concept with regard to Esther in this book may be a subtle way of suggesting the presence of the Lord without actually mentioning His name. her allowance: Hegai made certain that Esther received choice food in liberal portions. He also gave her seven personal attendants and the most desirable place to live within the quarters of the harem.

2:10 Many reasons have been suggested concerning Esther's hesitation to reveal her national origin. The time does come when Esther would identify herself and her people (see ch. 8). In fact, her self-disclosure would come at the point when the danger to her person was highest.

2:14 concubines: These women lived unfortunate, though highly pampered, lives. If the king never called for them again, they were destined to live as though they were widows for the remainder of their years (see 2 Sam. 20:3). The point made here emphasizes how courageous Esther was when she later made her appearance before Ahasuerus (see 4:11; 5:1).

dy of Shaashgaz, the king's eunuch who kept the concubines. She would not go in to the king again unless the king delighted in her and called for her by name.

¹⁵Now when the turn came for Esther ^hthe daughter of Abihail the uncle of Mordecai, who had taken her as his daughter, to go in to the king, she requested nothing but what Hegai the king's eunuch, the custodian of the women, advised. And Esther ⁱobtained favor in the sight of all who saw her. ¹⁶So Esther was taken to King Ahasuerus, into his royal palace, in the tenth month, which is the month of Tebeth, in the seventh year of his reign. ¹⁷The king loved Esther more than all the other women, and she obtained grace and favor in his sight more than all the virgins; so he set the royal ^jcrown upon her head and made her queen instead of Vashti. ¹⁸Then the king ^kmade a great feast, the Feast of Esther, for all his officials and servants; and he proclaimed a holiday in the provinces and gave gifts according to the ³generosity of a king.

Mordecai Discovers a Plot

¹⁹When virgins were gathered together a second time, Mordecai sat within the king's gate. ²⁰*Now* Esther had not revealed her family and her people, just as Mordecai had charged her, for Esther obeyed the command of Mordecai as when she was brought up by him.

²¹In those days, while Mordecai sat within the king's gate, two of the king's eunuchs, ⁴Bigthan and Teresh, doorkeepers, became furious and sought to lay hands on King Ahasuerus. ²²So

the matter became known to Mordecai, ^mwho told Queen Esther, and Esther informed the king in Mordecai's name. ²³And when an inquiry was made into the matter, it was confirmed, and both were hanged on a gallows; and it was written in ⁿthe book of the chronicles in the presence of the king.

Haman's Conspiracy Against the Jews

3 After these things King Ahasuerus promoted Haman, the son of Hammedatha the ^aAgagite, and ^badvanced him and set his seat above all the princes who were with him. ²And all the king's servants who were ^cwithin the king's gate bowed and paid homage to Haman, for so the king had commanded concerning him. But Mordecai ^dwould not bow or pay homage. ³Then the king's servants who were within the king's gate said to Mordecai, "Why do you transgress the ^eking's command?" ⁴Now it happened, when they spoke to him daily and he would not listen to them, that they told it to Haman, to see whether Mordecai's words would stand; for Mordecai had told them that he was a Jew. ⁵When Haman saw that Mordecai ^fdid not bow or pay him homage, Haman was ^gfilled with wrath. ⁶But he disdained to lay hands on Mordecai alone, for they had told him of the people of Mordecai. Instead, Haman ^hsought to destroy all the Jews who were throughout the whole kingdom of Ahasuerus—the people of Mordecai.

⁷In the first month, which is the month of Nisan, in the twelfth year of King Ahasuerus, ⁱthey cast Pur (that is, the lot), before Haman ¹to determine the

2:15 Again we see the providence of God at work. Esther found favor with everyone she encountered. Here we learn her father's name, Abihail (see 2:7).

2:16 Esther became the principal wife of the king four years after Vashti was divorced. The month Tebeth corresponds to our December–January.

2:17 The king apparently was so delighted with Esther that he made her queen right away. The nouns grace and favor together mean "abundant favor."

2:19 sat within the king's gate: This phrase has a special significance; it means that Mordecai had an official position. Shortly after Esther became queen, she gave Mordecai a position within the king's gate where official business took place (see Deut. 22:13–15).

2:21, 22 Mordecai learned of a plot by two angry eunuchs to take the king's life. Mordecai not only used this information to save the king, but eventually his own people.

3:1 Some believe Agagite is a reference to the historical district of Agag within the Persian Empire. Others believe this term more likely linked Haman's descent with the Amalekites. These people, descendants of Esau (see Gen. 36:12), were ancient enemies of the Hebrews (see Ex. 17:8). Agag, a king of the Amalekites, was captured by King Saul (see 1 Sam. 15:8). If Mordecai descended from Saul, and Haman from the Amalekites (as many rabbis believe), then what follows is the continuation of a long-standing hostility between their families.

3:2 All the officials of the king were on duty within the king's gate.

Mordecai would not bow or pay homage: To comprehend the force of this verse, we need to look at v. 4. There Mordecai reportedly told the king's servants that he was a Jew. It is not known whether the bowing was required as an act of worship to the king's man or merely as an overt sign of deep respect. The Hebrew verbs in this passage usually describe the worship of God. There were occasions when Hebrews bowed before kings or high officials (1 Sam. 24:8) without any violation of the prohibitions of false worship. It may be that in Mordecai's case also, the bow was not to be a religious act, but one of honor. As a Jew, Mordecai may not have been able to bring himself to show this sign of respect to one who was an ancestral enemy.

3:5, 6 Mordecai's daily refusal to bow down to Haman filled the official with such rage that he sought to kill all Jewish people in the Persian Empire. Haman's Amalekite ancestry would account for his deep hatred.

3:7 Nisan: This, the first month of the ancient lunar calendar, corresponds to March–April. The twelfth year of the king's reign was 474 B.C. they cast Pur: The word pur was the basis for the name of the Feast of Purim in ch. 9. The casting of lots was common in ancient times. The fact that the lot was cast at the beginning of the year to determine the best time to destroy the Jewish people fits with the culture of the day. The Babylonian religion maintained that the gods gathered at the beginning of each year to establish the destiny of human beings.

day and the ²month, ³until it fell on the twelfth month, which is the month of Adar.

⁸Then Haman said to King Ahasuerus, “There is a certain people scattered and dispersed among the people in all the provinces of your kingdom; ^jtheir laws are different from all other people’s, and they do not keep the king’s laws. Therefore it is not fitting for the king to let them remain. ⁹If it pleases the king, let a decree be written that they be destroyed, and I will pay ten thousand talents of silver into the hands of those who do the work, to bring it into the king’s treasuries.”

¹²ⁿThen the king’s scribes were called on the thirteenth day of the first month, and a decree was written according to all that Haman commanded—to the king’s satraps, to the governors who were over each province, to the officials of all people, to every province ^oaccording to its script, and to every people in their language. ^pIn the name of King Ahasuerus it was written, and sealed with the king’s signet ring. ¹³And the letters were ^qsent by couriers into all the king’s provinces, to destroy, to kill, and to annihilate all the Jews, both young and old, little children and women, ^rin one day, on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month of Adar, and ^sto plunder their ^tpossessions. ¹⁴^tA copy of the document was to be issued as law in every province, being published for all people, that they should be ready for that day. ¹⁵The couriers went out, hastened by the king’s command; and the decree was proclaimed in ⁵Shushan the ⁶citadel. Esther Agrees to Help the Jews

4 When Mordecai learned all that had happened, ¹he ^atore his clothes and put on sackcloth ^band ashes, and went out into the midst of the city. He ^ccried out with a loud and bitter cry. ²He went as far as the front of the king’s gate, for no one ^dmight enter the king’s gate clothed with sackcloth. ³And in every province where the king’s command and decree arrived, ^ethere was great mourning among the Jews, with fasting, weeping, and wailing; and many lay in sackcloth and ashes.

⁴So Esther’s maids and eunuchs came and told her, and the queen was deeply distressed. Then she sent garments to clothe Mordecai and take his sackcloth away from him, but he would not accept them. ⁵Then Esther called Hathach, one of the king’s eunuchs whom he had appointed to attend her, and she gave him a command concerning Mordecai, to learn what and why this was. ⁶So Hathach went out to Mordecai in the city square that was in front of the king’s gate. ⁷And Mordecai told him all that had happened to him, and ^dthe sum of money that Haman had promised to pay into the king’s treasuries to destroy the Jews. ⁸He also gave him ^ea copy of the written

3:8 Haman did not identify the people at first. He may have played on the Persian emperor’s native sense of superiority to other peoples. Haman acted as if his motive were no more than proper concern for the welfare of the king. He implied that this unnamed group was rebellious, a present danger to the king.

3:10 The king’s signet ring symbolized his authority. When he gave this ring to Haman, he was passing to him a symbol of his own royal person. This meant that Haman could proceed with his plan.

3:11 It might seem that the king was refusing to accept the money. However, this is difficult to harmonize with Mordecai’s words to Esther in 4:7 and her comments about being “sold” in 7:4. More likely, the king was engaging in the common method of bargaining (Gen. 23:7–18).

3:12 scribes: The king had secretaries who put into writing the official documents. This verse gives us a picture of the comprehensiveness of the decree. It was given to officials in the provinces, making sure it was distributed everywhere. It was also written in the language of each people group within the realm. The mark of a signet ring was similar to an official signature in our own day (1 Kin. 21:8).

3:13 The couriers were royal messengers stationed at various spots along the main roads who would carry messages on horseback. The plot to kill the Jewish people included the slaughter of those of all age groups and both sexes. The month Adar: This corresponds to February–March (3:7; 8:12).

3:15 The contempt of the king and Haman who sat down to drink while this message was being delivered cannot help but strike a responsive chord of empathy for the Jewish people among the readers of this book. The text notes that even the people in the city of Shushan were perplexed.

4:1, 2 In the ancient Middle East sackcloth and ashes were used as a visible sign of mourning, indicating a sense of desolation.

4:3 In this book fasting connotes a strong but veiled appeal to God to intervene in a time of severe crisis. In v. 16 Esther commanded a three-day fast among Shushan’s Jews. The queen herself, along with her maids, undertook a fast at this time before she approached the king. Even the Feast of Purim, which was established to commemorate the Jewish people’s deliverance, incorporated fasting (see 9:31).

4:4 The verb distressed is strong, suggesting the idea of writhing in severe pain or anguish. Certainly Esther was deeply disturbed by Mordecai’s appearance and agony, though she did not as yet understand what had happened (see v. 5).

4:5, 6 city square: Many events took place in the plaza of a city, including gatherings, proclamations, and public lamentation.

4:7 If Mordecai had not been appointed as a high official at the king’s gate, it is unlikely that he would have known about Haman’s bribe to the king. He was providentially placed by God in an exalted position in a foreign government, as were Joseph (see Gen. 41), Daniel (see Dan. 2:48), and Nehemiah (see Neh. 1:11). This is one of the many ways God used the descendants of Abraham to be a blessing to the nations (see Gen. 12:2).

4:8 Mordecai recognized the decree as a threat to the very existence decree for their destruction, which was given at ²Shushan, that he might show it to Esther and explain it to her, and that he might command her to go in to the king to make supplication to him and plead before him for her people. ⁹So Hathach returned and told Esther the words of Mordecai.

¹⁰Then Esther spoke to Hathach, and gave him a command for Mordecai: ¹¹“All the king’s servants and the people of the king’s provinces know that any man or woman who goes into ⁷the inner court to the king, who has not been called, ⁸*he has* but one law: put all to death, except the one ^hto whom the king holds out the golden scepter, that he may live. Yet I myself have not been ⁱcalled to go in to the king these thirty days.” ¹²So they told Mordecai Esther’s words.

¹³And Mordecai told them to answer Esther: “Do not think in your heart that you will escape in the king’s palace any more than all the other Jews. ¹⁴For if you remain completely silent at this time, relief and deliverance will arise for the Jews from another place, but you and your father’s house will perish. Yet who knows whether you have come to the kingdom for such a time as this?”

¹⁵Then Esther told them to reply to Mordecai: ¹⁶“Go, gather all the Jews ¹⁷So Mordecai went his way and did according to all that Esther commanded ⁴him.

Esther’s Banquet

5 Now it happened ^aon the third day that Esther put on her royal robes and stood in ^bthe inner court of the king’s palace, across from the king’s house, while the king sat on his royal throne in the royal house, facing the entrance of the ¹house. ²So it was, when the king saw Queen Esther standing in the court, that ^cshe found favor in his sight, and ^dthe king held out to Esther the golden scepter that was in his hand. Then Esther went near and touched the top of the scepter.

³And the king said to her, “What do you wish, Queen Esther? What is your request? ^eIt shall be given to you—up to half the kingdom!”

of his people, so he boldly commanded Esther to intercede for her people before the king, knowing that this could only be at the risk of her life (see v. 11). If she was not identified as a Hebrew woman, she might possibly escape the fate of her people—but only if her association with Mordecai (see 2:7, 15) was not remembered by their enemies. In any event, she would be in a most risky position. make supplication: The word means to ask for a gracious response. It is a term that often is used of coming to the Lord for deliverance; here it is used of coming to a king for mercy.

4:10, 11 Esther understood that Mordecai was asking her to risk her life. She was understandably fearful. Her fear was compounded by the fact that the king had not summoned her for thirty days, implying that she had not been enjoying the king’s favor recently. Who knew if he would still have regard for her at all?

4:14 This verse constitutes the classic reference to the providence of God in the book. Mordecai, by his confidence that relief and deliverance would come from another place, was strongly asserting his faith in God and His promised protection of the Jewish people. God controls all that happens in His world and would intervene with or without Esther. If she refused to help, she would perish, along with her father’s house. Mordecai may be referring to divine judgment here. In the closing appeal, Mordecai suggested a providential reason for her becoming queen at this precise time in history; that is, Esther was acting as God’s agent in delivering the Jewish people.

4:15, 16 Esther agreed to intervene with the king on behalf of her people. The fasting for three days implies a period of earnestly seeking God in prayer at this critical juncture. But even at this point, the narrator did not use the name of God—something that is most remarkable. Esther was also looking for the support of the Jewish community by asking them to join in this fast. Esther understood fully that she was breaking the law of the land and that she might have to suffer the ultimate consequence; she might perish.

5:2 she found favor in his sight: Again we are struck by the providence of God, demonstrated by the king’s response to Esther. To indicate his approval, the king held out the golden scepter to her.

5:3 The king, knowing that Esther must have had an unusual reason for daring to approach him, asked her what she wanted. He promised her up to half his kingdom. A similar promise was given to the daughter of Herodias by King Herod in Mark 6:23. Perhaps the phrase was a common form of exaggeration among royalty. Although it probably was exaggerated, the statement certainly showed the king’s favorable attitude toward her.

5:4 If it pleases the king: This expression is found frequently fasting

(Heb. tsum) (4:16; 2 Sam. 12:23) Strong’s #6684

The Hebrew root word simply means “to abstain from food.” At times fasting meant abstaining from drinking, bathing, anointing with oil, or sexual intercourse as well. In essence, fasting acknowledges human frailty before God and appeals to His mercy. Fasting was a common practice in the ancient world, associated with mourning for the dead (2 Sam. 12:21, 22), intercessory prayer (4:3, 16), repentance and contrition for sin (Jer. 36:9; Jon. 3:5), and times of distress (Judg. 20:26; Neh. 1:4). Fasting was required for the Day of Atonement (see the phrase “afflict your souls” in Lev. 16:31). There were also four fast days that commemorated the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians (Zech. 8:19). Fasts varied in length from one day (1 Sam. 14:24; Dan. 6:18) to seven days (1 Sam. 31:13) and could even last up to 40 days on extraordinary occasions (Ex. 34:28). The strict fasts lasted from sunset to sunset, whereas the more lenient fasts lasted from sunrise to sunset. But no matter what type of fasting was performed, the prophet Isaiah admonished his people to participate in acts of righteousness and social justice with their fasting (Is. 58:3–9).

⁵Then the king said, “Bring Haman quickly, that he may do as Esther has said.” So the king and Haman went to the banquet that Esther had prepared.

⁶At the banquet of wine ^fthe king said to Esther, ^g“What is your petition? It shall be granted you. What is your request, up to half the kingdom? It shall be done!”

⁷Then Esther answered and said, “My petition and request is this: ⁸If I have found favor in the sight of the king, and if it pleases the king to grant my petition and ²fulfill my request, then let the king and Haman come to the ^hbanquet which I will prepare for them, and tomorrow I will do as the king has said.”

Haman's Plot Against Mordecai

⁹So Haman went out that day ⁱjoyful and with a glad heart; but when Haman saw Mordecai in the king's gate, and ^jthat he did not stand or tremble before him, he was filled with indignation against Mordecai. ¹⁰Nevertheless Haman ^krestrained himself and went home, and he sent and called for his friends and his wife Zeresh. ¹¹Then Haman told them of his great riches, ^lthe multitude of his children, everything in which the king had promoted him, and how he had ^madvanced him above the officials and servants of the king.

¹²Moreover Haman said, “Besides, Queen Esther invited no one but me to come in with the king to the banquet that she prepared; and tomorrow I am again invited by her, along with the king. ¹³Yet all this avails me nothing, so long as I see

And the thing pleased Haman; so he had ^pthe gallows made.

The King Honors Mordecai

6 That night ¹the king could not sleep. So one was commanded to bring ^athe book of the records of the chronicles; and they were read before the king. ²And it was found written that Mordecai had told of ²Bigthana and Teresh, two of the king's eunuchs, the doorkeepers who had sought to lay hands on King Ahasuerus. ³Then the king said, “What honor or dignity has been bestowed on Mordecai for this?”

And the king's servants who attended him said, “Nothing has been done for him.”

⁴So the king said, “Who is in the court?” Now Haman had just entered ^bthe outer court of the king's palace ^cto suggest that the king hang Mordecai on the gallows that he had prepared for him.

⁵The king's servants said to him, “Haman is there, standing in the court.”

And the king said, “Let him come in.”

⁶So Haman came in, and the king asked him, “What shall be done for the man whom the king delights to honor?”

Now Haman thought in his heart, “Whom would the king delight to honor throughout the book. It was a formula of polite address. Esther made her initial request; she invited the king and Haman to come to her banquet that same day.

5:6–8 The king continued examining Esther for the real request. She delayed and asked the two back for a second banquet the following day. One may ask why Esther waited instead of disclosing what was on her mind. The delay providentially allowed time for the king's sleepless night and the events that followed (ch. 6).

5:9 Haman's good spirits on the way home from the banquet were from the wine he had drunk and from the honor of being invited along with the king to the feast at Esther's table. However, his mood changed quickly when he encountered Esther's cousin. This time Mordecai did not even rise in his presence. Further, Mordecai showed no sign of fear before him, despite the death decree against the Jewish people.

5:11, 12 Haman's vanity matched that of the king he served. He bragged to his wife and friends about his wealth, his sons, and his status in the kingdom. It was considered a great blessing among ancient Semitic peoples to have many sons. In Persia, the man with the most sons would receive presents from the king himself.

5:14 gallows: This word is the usual word for wood, the material the gallows were made of (2:23). Its height, fifty cubits, was about 75 feet.

6:1 This verse marks the turning point of the book. Within this chapter we observe a series of events that unmistakably point to God's sovereign hand controlling all events. Only because of his sleepless night did the king learn of Mordecai's past bravery on his behalf. the book of the records of the chronicles: This would be the official record of the events of the Persian Empire. It is referred to in 2:23 and again in 10:2. Ezra 4:15 also mentions such a work. Apparently the chronicles were read before the king for an extended period. 6:2, 3 The king might have been aware to some extent of Mordecai's deed when it originally occurred. In 2:23 the author says that the events were written down “in the presence of the king.” Now the Lord led the king to this very text. It was customary for the Persian kings to reward promptly those who performed some noteworthy act of service. There are records of Darius and Ahasuerus bestowing such honors on deserving recipients. The two nouns honor and dignity mean “great honor.”

6:4, 5 Again we see the hand of God sovereignly at work on behalf of His people. No sooner had Mordecai's reward been discussed than Haman appeared in the king's court. Ironically, Haman, who knew nothing of the recent discussion, was coming to recommend that Mordecai be hanged.

6:6–11 One cannot miss the irony and humor of this turn of events. In his arrogance, Haman presumed that the king desired to honor him. He suggested a course of action that he would most enjoy, a royal parade through the city plaza so that everyone could see and hear about the king's delight in him. The king obliged, but was planning the reward for a man Haman regarded as his enemy. Worst of all, it was Haman who had to lead Mordecai through the square and proclaim the king's pleasure in Mordecai.

more than ^d me?" ⁷ And Haman answered the king, "For the man whom the king delights to honor, ⁸ let a royal robe be brought which the king has worn, and ^e a horse on which the king has ridden, which has a royal ³ crest placed on its head. ⁹ Then let this robe and horse be delivered to the hand of one of the king's most noble princes, that he may array the man whom the king delights to honor. Then ⁴ parade him on horseback through the city square, ^f and proclaim before him: 'Thus shall it be done to the man whom the king delights to honor!'"

¹⁰ Then the king said to Haman, "Hurry, take the robe and the horse, as you have suggested, and do so for Mordecai the Jew who sits within the king's gate! Leave nothing undone of all that you have spoken."

¹² Afterward Mordecai went back to the king's gate. But Haman ^g hurried to his house, mourning ^h and with his head covered. ¹³ When Haman told his wife Zeresh and all his friends everything that had happened to him, his wise men and his wife Zeresh said to him, "If Mordecai, before whom you have begun to fall, is of Jewish descent, you will not prevail against ⁱ him but will surely fall before him."

¹⁴ While they were still talking with him, the king's eunuchs came, and hastened to bring Haman to ^j the banquet which Esther had prepared.

Haman Hanged Instead of Mordecai

7 So the king and Haman went to dine with Queen Esther. ² And on the second day, ^a at the banquet of wine, the king again said to Esther, "What is your petition, Queen Esther? It shall be granted you. And what is your request, up to half the kingdom? It shall be done!"

³ Then Queen Esther answered and said, "If I have found favor in your sight, O king, and if it pleases the king, let my life be given me at my petition, and my people at my request. ⁴ For we have been ^b sold, my people and I, to be destroyed, to be killed, and to be annihilated. Had we been sold as ^c male and female slaves, I would have held my tongue, although the enemy could never compensate for the king's loss."

⁵ So King Ahasuerus answered and said to Queen Esther, "Who is he, and where is he, who would dare presume in his heart to do such a thing?"

⁶ And Esther said, "The adversary and ^d enemy is this wicked Haman!"

So Haman was terrified before the king and queen.

⁷ Then the king arose in his wrath from the banquet of wine and went into the palace garden; but Haman stood before Queen Esther, pleading for his life, for he saw that evil was determined against him by the king. ⁸ When the king returned from the palace garden to the place of the banquet of wine, Haman had fallen across ^e the couch where Esther was. Then the king said, "Will he also assault the queen while I am in the house?"

As the word left the king's mouth, they ^f covered Haman's face. ⁹ Now ^g Harbonah, one of the eunuchs, said to the 6:8 The royal crest on the head of the horse was a crown that formed from the forelock of the horse. Stone carvings of horses with this type of crest have been found at Persepolis, another Persian capital (1:2).

6:10 The term Jew, derived from Judah, came into use during the Exile because the people were principally from the southern kingdom of Judah.

6:13 The issue of the ongoing survival of the Jewish people is the point of this verse. Haman's wife and friends told Haman that he would not prevail, for the very reason of Mordecai's Jewish descent. The Hebrew wording is quite strong: the meaning is that he will most certainly fall.

6:14 The role of eunuchs as royal messengers is portrayed again in this verse (1:10). They were the ones who came to take Haman briskly to Esther's second banquet.

7:3, 4 Esther repeated her address of 5:8 and now added her request. let my life be given: Esther asked the king to spare her life and the lives of her people. This latter appeal was an impassioned plea to the king in which she also disclosed her true identity to him for the first time. Esther told the king that she and her fellow Jewish people have been sold, referring to Haman's bribe to the king in 3:9.

7:5 Esther's speech had a dramatic effect on the king. She had aroused more than his curiosity. He was angry. The life of his own queen was in danger because of a plot by one of his trusted men.

The phrase dare presume in his heart reflects the depths of the king's passion here.

7:6 Esther finally exposed the culprit. It was none other than Haman, the adversary and enemy, "the fierce enemy." It is no wonder that Haman was terrified before Esther and the king. In his evil plan to kill his enemy, he had unwittingly threatened the queen's life.

7:7 The king was astonished and furious. He left the room and went out to the palace garden. This must have been a very unusual act for an autocrat. Usually, he would be expected to respond immediately and rashly. However, this time he was so taken aback by the turn of events that he needed time to think. The king's enraged response alerted Haman to the precariousness of his situation.

7:8 Haman was draped over the queen's couch in a compromising position. Presumably, he was grasping at her with a desire to implore her favor. The king, on discovering this outrageous situation, wondered aloud if Haman intended to ravage the queen. The Persians had strict rules about contact with the harem by any male other than the king. The eunuchs were the only persons who had access to the rooms of these women. Haman was in danger merely by being near her. This sight enraged the king. As he spoke, they covered Haman's face. It is likely that it was the eunuchs who came and did this. The covering of his face signified that he was condemned to death.

7:9 Harbonah: This eunuch, first mentioned in 1:10, spoke at a king, “Look! ^hThe ¹gallows, fifty cubits high, which Haman made for Mordecai, who spoke ⁱgood on the king’s behalf, is standing at the house of Haman.”

Then the king said, “Hang him on it!”
¹⁰So ^jthey ^khanged Haman on the gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai. Then the king’s wrath subsided.

Esther Saves the Jews

8 On that day King Ahasuerus gave Queen Esther the house of Haman, the ^aenemy of the Jews. And Mordecai came before the king, for Esther had told ^bhow he was related to her. ²So the king took off ^chis signet ring, which he had taken from Haman, and gave it to Mordecai; and Esther appointed Mordecai over the house of Haman.

³Now Esther spoke again to the king, fell down at his feet, and implored him with tears to counteract the evil of Haman the Agagite, and the scheme which he had devised against the Jews. ⁴And ^dthe king held out the golden scepter toward Esther. So Esther arose and stood before the king, ⁵and said, “If it pleases the king, and if I have found favor in his sight and the thing seems right to the king and I am pleasing in his eyes, let it be written to revoke the ^eletters devised by Haman, the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, which he wrote to annihilate the Jews who are in all the king’s provinces. ⁶For how can I endure to see ^fthe evil that will come to my people? Or how can I endure to see the destruction of my countrymen?”

⁷Then King Ahasuerus said to Queen Esther and Mordecai the Jew, “Indeed, ^gI have given Esther the house of Haman, and they have hanged him on the gallows because he tried to lay his hand on the Jews. ⁸You yourselves write a decree concerning the Jews, ¹as you please, in the king’s name, and seal it with the king’s signet ring; for whatever is written in the king’s name and sealed with the king’s signet ring ^hno one can revoke.”

⁹ⁱSo the king’s scribes were called at that time, in the third month, which is the month of Sivan, on the twenty-third day; and it was written, according to all that Mordecai commanded, to the Jews, the satraps, the governors, and the princes of the provinces ^jfrom India to Ethiopia, one hundred and twenty-seven provinces in all, to every province ^kin its own script, to every people in their own language, and to the Jews in their own script and language. ¹⁰^lAnd he wrote in the name of King Ahasuerus, sealed it with the king’s signet ring, and sent letters by couriers on horseback, riding on royal horses ²bred from swift steeds.

¹¹By these letters the king permitted the Jews who were in every city to ^mgather together and protect their lives—to ⁿdestroy, kill, and annihilate all the forces of any people or province that would assault them, both little children and women, and to plunder their possessions, ¹²^oon one day in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus, on the thirteenth day of the twelfth month, which is the month of ³Adar. ¹³^pA copy of the document was to be issued as a decree in every province and published for all people, so that the Jews would be ready on that day to avenge themselves on their enemies. ¹⁴The couriers who rode on royal horses went out, hastened and pressed on by the king’s command. And the decree was issued in ⁴Shushan the ⁵citadel.

critical moment to the ruler. He disclosed the story of the gallows which Haman had prepared for Mordecai and told the king where it was located. He reminded the monarch of Mordecai’s bravery on behalf of the king. Ahasuerus took Harbonah’s cue and commanded his servants to hang Haman on those very gallows.

8:1 On the same day as Haman’s execution, the king gave his queen the house of Haman. The term house here refers to his estate. This was in keeping with Persian law, which put the estate of a traitor into the custody of the crown.

8:2 Mordecai was given Haman’s position as the prime minister. He received the full authority of the king, as evidenced by the transfer of the signet ring to him. Esther also put Mordecai in charge of Haman’s estate, which gave him great wealth.

8:3–6 Esther, knowing that danger still lurked ahead for her people, pleaded passionately for their lives before the king. The queen continued to receive the blessing of the monarch as he again extended the golden scepter to her. Courageously Esther implored the king to revoke Haman’s hateful decree against all the Jews in the empire. The parallel statements in v. 6 reinforce Esther’s poignant and personal plea to her king. The queen, by speaking in the first person, demonstrated her deep attachment to her people.

8:7 Mordecai had heard Esther’s entire presentation to the king.

Ahasuerus, by reiterating what he already had done, communicated his support for Esther and her people.

8:8 In the Persian Empire, a royal decree could not be altered, but a second one could invalidate it. Thus the king instructed Mordecai and Esther to write a second decree. The second decree would carry all the weight of the former one—but would reverse the expected results.

8:9 Sivan: This would be May–June. The date would give the Jewish people approximately eight months of preparation for any attack (see 3:13).

8:11 Some commentators understand this verse to mean that the Jewish people were given permission to slaughter even the wives and children of any people that would attack them. Another view is that the Jewish people may not have carried out what was permitted, but killed only the men who attacked them (see 9:6). There is another possibility that the verse refers to the women and children of the Jews. That is, the assault mentioned in the verse was expected to be directed against the men, women, children, and possessions of the Jews. Against such assault, the Jews were to arm themselves and make proper defenses (see 9:5, 6). plunder their possessions: This concluding phrase could be a citation of Haman’s decree (see 3:13). If so, it would explain why the Jewish people did not take any plunder (see 9:10), but simply defended themselves against their enemies.

¹⁵ So Mordecai went out from the presence of the king in royal apparel of ⁶blue and white, with a great crown of gold and a garment of fine linen and purple; and ⁷the city of ⁷Shushan rejoiced and was glad. ¹⁶ The Jews had ^rlight and gladness, joy and honor. ¹⁷ And in every province and city, wherever the king's command and decree came, the Jews had joy and gladness, a feast ^sand a holiday. Then many of the people of the land ^tbecame Jews, because ^ufear of the Jews fell upon them.

The Jews Destroy Their Tormentors

9 Now ^ain the twelfth month, that is, the month of Adar, on the thirteenth day, ^bthe time came for the king's command and his decree to be executed. On the day that the enemies of the Jews had hoped to overpower them, the opposite occurred, in that the Jews themselves ^coverpowered those who hated them. ² The Jews ^dgathered together in their cities throughout all the provinces of King Ahasuerus to lay hands on those who ^esought their harm. And no one could withstand them, ^fbecause fear of them fell upon all people. ³ And all the officials of the provinces, the satraps, the governors, and all those doing the king's work, helped the Jews, because the fear of Mordecai fell upon them. ⁴ For Mordecai ^{was} great in the king's palace, and his fame spread throughout all the provinces; for this man Mordecai ^gbecame increasingly prominent. ⁵ Thus the Jews defeated all their enemies with the stroke of the sword, with slaughter and destruction, and did what they pleased with those who hated them.

⁶ And in ^hShushan ⁱthe ²citadel the Jews killed and destroyed five hundred

¹¹ On that day the number of those who were killed in ⁴Shushan the ⁵citadel ⁶was brought to the king. ¹² And the king said to Queen Esther, "The Jews have killed and destroyed five hundred men in Shushan the citadel, and the ten sons of Haman. What have they done in the rest of the king's provinces? Now ^kwhat is your petition? It shall be granted to you. Or what is your further request? It shall be done."

¹⁴ So the king commanded this to be done; the decree was issued in Shushan, and they hanged Haman's ten sons.

The Feast of Purim

¹⁸ But the Jews who ^{were} at ⁹Shushan

8:15, 16 Mordecai, dressed in royal attire, received a joyful welcome from the city of Shushan, which included both Gentiles and Jews. The residents of this city rejoiced that Mordecai had been appointed as prime minister. The word light conveys the sense of happiness.

8:17 Note the marked contrast of the reaction of the Jewish people to this second decree as compared to the first one (see 4:3). The reality of their deliverance influenced the Gentiles in the empire as well. became: This is the only place in the OT that this Hebrew word is used of conversion to Judaism. The unexpected turn of events in favor of the Jewish people greatly moved their neighbors.

9:2 The Jewish people assembled throughout the kingdom to lay hands on or kill (see 2:21) their foes. The enemies of the Jewish people could not succeed in their assault against them due to a fear of them. This may have included a fear of the God of the Jewish people.

9:3, 4 In addition to a fear of the Jewish people, there was also a fear of Mordecai among the leaders, which caused them to assist the Jewish people. Their motive may have been to protect themselves politically in light of Mordecai's power and popularity.

9:5, 6 The defense of the Jewish people against their enemies was strong and certain. They killed five hundred of their enemies in Shushan alone.

9:7-10 The patterns of reprisal and vengeance were so deeply ingrained in the cultures of the ancient Middle East that the survival of even one of these sons might mean trouble for the next generation of Jewish people. By listing each of the vanquished sons of their mortal enemy, the Jewish people celebrated the fact that the victory was complete.

9:11-14 Esther renewed her original request (8:11) for the Jews to have the authority to protect themselves against attack. The king assented. He also ordered Haman's ten sons to be exposed on the gallows. The men were already dead (v. 10). Their bodies were displayed as a warning to anyone who planned evil toward the Jews.

9:16 In Deut. 25:17-19, Moses linked the people's continued rest from their enemies with the command to "blot out the remembrance of Amalek from under heaven." In this chapter, the blessing of rest for the Jewish people is associated with the destruction of their enemies (vv. 18, 22). This similarity with Deuteronomy reinforces the argument that Haman was a descendant of the Amalekites. This group may have been quite large by the time of King Ahasuerus.

9:18, 19 These verses summarize the days of deliverance for the assembled together ^ron the thirteenth day, as well as on the fourteenth; and on the fifteenth of ¹the month they rested, and made it a day of feasting and gladness. ¹⁹Therefore the Jews of the villages who dwelt in the unwall'd towns celebrated the fourteenth day of the month of Adar ^swith gladness and feasting, ^tas a holiday, and for ^usending presents to one another.

²⁰And Mordecai wrote these things and sent letters to all the Jews, near and far, who were in all the provinces of King Ahasuerus, ²¹to establish among them that they should celebrate yearly the fourteenth and fifteenth days of the month of Adar, ²²as the days on which the Jews had rest from their enemies, as the month which was turned from sorrow to joy for them, and from mourning to a holiday; that they should make them days of feasting and joy, of ^vsending presents to one another and gifts to the ^wpoor. ²³So the Jews accepted the custom which they had begun, as Mordecai had written to them, ²⁴because Haman, the son of Hammedatha the Agagite, the enemy of all the Jews, ^xhad plotted against the Jews to annihilate them, and had cast Pur (that is, the lot), to consume them and destroy them; ²⁵but ^ywhen ²Esther came before the king, he commanded by letter that ³this wicked plot which Haman had devised against the Jews should ^zreturn on his own head, and that he and his sons should be hanged on the gallows.

²⁶So they called these days Purim, after the name ⁴Pur. Therefore, because of all the words of ^athis letter, what they had seen concerning this matter, and what had happened to them, ²⁷the Jews established and imposed it upon themselves and their descendants and all who would

(Heb. pur) (3:7; 9:24, 26) Strong's #6332

Pur, originally a Babylonian word meaning "lot" or "fate," is used in the Book of Esther as a synonym for the normal Hebrew word for "lot." Lot casting, similar to rolling dice, was a common way to make a random selection (Neh. 11:1) or to discern the will of a god (Jon. 1:7). Believing that his gods controlled the fall of the pur, Haman cast lots to determine the right day to destroy the Jews (see 3:7). What he failed to realize was that God is sovereign and cannot be manipulated by superstition (see Prov. 16:33). By casting lots, Haman inadvertently chose the day of the Jews' deliverance—a day that is still celebrated in the Festival of Purim (9:28).

March; see 3:7, 12). The Jewish people in the remainder of the Persian provinces fought for one day and fasted on the fourteenth day of that month.

9:20–25 In light of the difference of timing between the Jews in Shushan and Jews in the rest of the kingdom, Mordecai told the people by letter that they should designate both the fourteenth and the fifteenth of Adar as annual holidays. These verses summarize the events of the book.

9:26–28 Purim: This verse explains the name of the two-day festival. The name is derived from the word pur, meaning "lot," the lot that was cast to determine the day of the Jewish people's death. Purim reminds the Jews of God's deliverance from their day of destruction. The feast was established as an annual festival.

10:1 tribute: This word may refer both to taxation and forced labor that the king imposed on all his territory.

10:2, 3 The Book of Esther concludes with high praise of Mordecai, whose deeds were recorded in the official chronicles of the Persian Empire. Mordecai held the second highest rank in the land, a note that recalls Joseph's ascendancy in Egypt (Gen. 41:37–45).

THE BOOK OF JOB

AT ONE TIME OR ANOTHER, almost everyone has felt like Job. While going through trials and times of suffering, we are often overwhelmed by self-pity. We want an explanation for why God allows trials to happen to us. The Book of Job records the troubling questions, the terrifying doubts, and the very real anguish of a sufferer. The Book of Job can help us in the time when we are surrounded with troubles by giving us a glimpse of God's perspective on our suffering.

Historical Setting Numerous details in the Book of Job indicate a patriarchal setting for its events: (1) Job's wealth is measured in livestock (1:3; 42:12), the same way Abraham and Jacob's wealth is measured (Gen. 12:16; 13:2; 30:43; 32:5). (2) The Sabeans and Chaldeans are portrayed as nomadic marauders (1:15, 17), indicating an early date. (3) The Hebrew word for "piece of silver" in Job (42:11) is otherwise found only in conjunction with the patriarch Jacob (Gen. 33:19; Josh. 24:32). (4) Without a priesthood or a sanctuary, Job offers sacrifices to God in a patriarchal fashion (1:5). (5) Job's longevity is consistent with the life spans of the patriarchs (42:16). (6) The preference in the poetic sections of the book for the divine name Shaddai over the divine name Yahweh may indicate a period before the Exodus (see Ex. 3:14, 15).

The text indicates that the events of Job occurred in the land of Uz (1:1), but the location of Uz is unknown. That Job was the greatest among the people of the East (1:3) indicates that Job lived east of the Jordan River. Some have concluded that Uz was located in Syria or northwest Mesopotamia. However, most writers think Uz was located near Edom, because many of the proper names in the Book of Job occur in the genealogy of Esau, the father of the Edomites (see Gen. 36).

Author and Date There is no consensus about who wrote the Book of Job or when it was written. Suggestions for an author include Job, Elihu, Solomon, and even Moses.

As for the time of writing, there is strong literary evidence that the Book of Job was compiled and written during the time of Solomon, when wisdom literature flourished. The mention of iron tools and weapons (19:24; 20:24; 40:18) and even mining (28:2) implies a date during the Iron Age (after 1200 B.C.). Moreover, the description of a horse in a military context (39:19–25) may indicate the mounted warhorse, which was used at the earliest around the tenth century B.C. Furthermore, at least two passages in Job may allude to biblical passages from the Solomonic era (compare 7:17, 18 with Ps. 8:4; compare 28:28 with Prov. 3:7; 9:10). These various strands of evidence may indicate that Job was written around Solomon's reign.

Structure The basic structure of the Book of Job consists of a prose framework in the prologue (chs. 1; 2) and epilogue (42:7–17) enclosing the poetic body of the book (3:1—42:6). There are significant differences between the poetic body and the prologue and epilogue. The prologue and epilogue present Job as a patient "saint" who righteously endured suffering. On the other hand, the poetic body presents Job as despairing of fair treatment by God (9:1–3, 13–21). According to some critics, these differences indicate that the two sections are separate works by different authors. According to this view, the compiler of Job simply failed to reconcile the "two Jobs."

"Your hands have made me and fashioned me, an intricate unity; yet You would destroy me. Remember, I pray, that You have made me like clay. And will You turn me into dust again?" (Job 10:8, 9).

The apparent contradictions within Job should not be considered an indication of poor editing, but the deliberate work of an accomplished author. The tension between the "patient" Job and the "impatient" Job contributes to the overall message of the book. It shows Job as a real person. He was no "plaster saint," who suffered stoically. Instead, he struggled with his emotions and feelings as we do today. The Book of Job teaches that it is not wrong for a person to ask the question why, as Job did repeatedly (see ch. 3). But these questions must not grow into accusations against the sovereign Lord.

Themes The Book of Job explores all the traditional Middle Eastern explanations of the problem of the "righteous sufferer." These include: (1) the inherent sinfulness of the human race (5:6, 7; 15:14, 16); (2) the accusation that God is unjust (9:22–24); and (3) the limitations of human understanding (11:7–9). But the main difference between the Book of Job and other ancient texts that address this same problem is God's direct intervention in Job's life. Thus the uniqueness of the Book of Job is not in its approach to the problem of suffering, but in its revelation of the sovereign God to whom everyone must properly relate. Sufferer and nonsufferer alike must humbly trust in God's sovereign grace. Because Job and his friends were ignorant of Satan's challenge to God, the Book of Job contains much bad theology and misapplied truth. It is important to read passages in the Book of Job in light of the message and purpose of the entire book. The only proper response to the omnipotent God is submission and faith.

The Book of Job repeatedly emphasizes the sovereignty and omnipotence of God. For instance, the Hebrew divine name Shaddai, usually translated as "Almighty," is employed by all characters in the book. Eliphaz describes the Almighty as controlling the destiny of everyone (5:17–20) and as independent of humanity (22:2, 3). Bildad argues that the Almighty is just (8:3, 4) and sovereign in His rule over the universe (25:2, 3). Finally Zophar describes the ways of the Almighty as beyond human comprehension (11:7–10). Hence, Job's friends use the name Shaddai to speak of God's transcendence, as well as His sovereign power.

This emphasis on the sovereignty of God refutes a simplistic understanding of divine retribution, which assumes that there is an automatic connection between one's spirituality and prosperity on earth. Such was the basis of Satan's accusation in the prologue that Job served God only for his own profit (1:9–11). Moreover, it is the basis for Eliphaz and Bildad's advice to Job. Both claimed that Job's suffering pointed to a hidden sin in Job's life, because God certainly would not punish an upright person (4:7–11; 8:11–22; 18:5–21). But God's answer to Job refuted this false belief (38:1—39:30). The Lord declares Himself completely sovereign. He is not obligated to bless those who obey Him. All His actions are based on His gracious nature and His own free will.

In this way, the Book of Job is an extended refutation of Satan's challenge that prosperity is connected to people's goodness, and consequently that people's suffering is connected to their sin.

In this way, the Book of Job teaches that the Lord is not bound to anyone's preconceived theological system. Elihu's speech on God's greatness and His sovereign majesty over nature (36:1—37:24) serves as a prelude to the climax of the book: the Lord's answer to Job (38:1—42:6). In His speech, God lowers Himself to Job's level in order to answer Job's questions. In the process, He reveals to all people that He is completely free but also truly good. He is the sovereign and benevolent Creator who continues to determine the course of the universe according to His own hidden plan. Just like Job, we must learn to submit to the Almighty God and accept by faith that He has a good plan for us.

Although Jesus is not named in the Book of Job, He is the only Redeemer Job could have been referring to when he says, "For I know that my Redeemer lives, and He shall stand at last on the earth" (19:25). No one else can be called our Redeemer who came to earth as a human being to die for us. No other book in the Bible includes such graphic detail of the problems and questions that believers wrestle with and skeptics ask. In this book are found the wide range of human hurts that Jesus identified with in His earthly life, as well as the ones He empathizes with as He intercedes for us in heaven (Heb. 4:15).

Job was a great man with thousands of animals, including sheep, camels, oxen, and donkeys. The animals and servants were the first things taken from Job (Job 1:14–17).

Job and His Family in Uz

There was a man ^ain the land of Uz, whose name was ^bJob; and that man was ^cblameless and upright, and one who ^dfeared God and ^eshunned evil. ²And seven sons and three daughters were born to him. ³Also, his possessions were seven thousand sheep, three thousand camels, five hundred yoke of oxen, five hundred female donkeys, and a very large household, so that this man was the greatest of all the ²people of the East.

⁴And his sons would go and feast in their houses, each on his appointed day, and would send and invite their three sisters to eat and drink with them. ⁵So it was, when the days of feasting had run their course, that Job would send and ³sanctify them, and he would rise early in the morning ^eand offer burnt offerings according to the number of them all. For Job said, “It may be that my sons have sinned and ^fcursed ^dGod in their hearts.” Thus Job did regularly.

Satan Attacks Job's Character

⁶Now ⁹there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the LORD, and ⁵Satan also came among them. ⁷And the LORD said to ⁶Satan, “From where do you come?”

So Satan answered the LORD and said, “From ^hgoing to and fro on the earth, and from walking back and forth on it.”

⁸Then the LORD said to Satan, “Have you ⁷considered My servant Job, that there is none like him on the earth, a blameless and upright man, one who fears God and ⁸shuns evil?”

⁹So Satan answered the LORD and said, “Does Job fear God for nothing? ¹⁰*i* Have You not ⁹made a hedge around him, around his household, and around all that he has on every side? ^jYou have blessed the work of his hands, and his possessions have increased in the land. ¹¹*k* But now, stretch out Your hand and touch all that he has, and he will surely ^lcurse ¹You to Your face!”

¹²And the LORD said to Satan, “Behold,

1:1 The dramatic events of the prologue of the Book of Job set the stage for the intricate dialogues of the main body (3:1—42:6). Uz: The precise location is unknown but may have been near Edom. Two aspects of Job's character and actions are highlighted. Blameless and upright, meaning “straightforward,” and “ethically straight,” emphasize his spotless character. Like Daniel (see Dan. 6:4), Job was blameless before his human critics, but not completely sinless before God. He later testified of his personal integrity (31:5, 6). Job feared God and shunned evil, an indication that his right relationship with God motivated him to turn away from evil. This descriptive phrase indicates that Job was the epitome of wisdom (28:28; Prov. 3:7; 14:16; see also Prov. 1:7; 9:10). 1:2 Job had an ideal family consisting of seven sons and three daughters. The number seven was the biblical number of completeness. In the ancient Middle East, having many children was generally considered a sign of God's blessing (Ps. 127:3-5). 1:4 Each of Job's sons would participate in a feast with his siblings on his appointed day. The term could refer to a birthday celebration. However, the context of v. 5 may indicate a regular, perhaps weekly or seasonal, cycle of celebration and feasting. 1:5 When Job undertook to sanctify his children through burnt offerings, he performed an intercessory role that corresponds to what he did when he prayed for his friends in the epilogue (42:10).

cursed God: The Hebrew text has “blessed God,” which is probably a euphemism—a reverent substitution of a milder word by a Hebrew scribe because he could not bear to have the word cursed next to the divine name. 1:6 The sons of God are celestial beings or angels who were created by Him and who serve Him (4:18; Ps. 103:20, 21) as his “holy ones” (5:1). The imagery seemingly indicates a heavenly council over which the Lord sits as Supreme King (Ps. 89:5-7; Dan. 7:9, 10). Strictly speaking, Satan may be a title rather than the personal name of the leader of all evil forces. The Hebrew word was not clearly used as a proper name until 1 Chr. 21:1, chronologically one of the last OT books written. Nevertheless, the characteristics of the “Adversary” in the Book of Job imply that he was in fact Satan. He answered God's questions in an antagonistic manner and accused Job of ulterior motives. That Satan came among the hosts of heaven at this time suggests that Satan still had access to God's court, and that his final banishment was still in the future. 1:7 The Hebrew word Yahweh, usually translated the LORD, is the personal name of the true God of the OT (see Ex. 3:14, 15). It is the particular name of God in covenantal relations with His people Israel (see Ex. 6:1-6; 19:3-8). This indicates that though Job was not an Israelite, he had a relationship with the true God (see v. 21 where the Lord's name is employed). From where do you come: God's inquiry does not imply an ignorance of Satan's behavior but was part of the conversation with Satan. See the similar function of the question posed to Adam after the Fall (Gen. 3:9). 1:8 My servant refers to the proper relationship every person should have with God—that is, a joyful and reverent trust in God. Job was a model of this type of relationship with the Lord in the prologue and the epilogue (see 2:3; 42:7). 1:9 Satan, always “the adversary,” questioned Job's motives for fearing and serving God. The expression for nothing is emphatic in the Hebrew text. The question may be paraphrased, “Is Job really free of ulterior motives?” 1:10 God had placed a hedge of protection around Job and his household. No harm could come to him unless the Lord permitted it (v. 12; see 2:4-6). Believers today should take great comfort from the biblical teaching that the Lord protects His people—whether by a cloud (Ex. 14:19, 20), or by a wall of fiery hosts (2 Kin. 6:17), or through guardian angels (Heb. 1:14). 1:11 Satan ignored customary court etiquette that would not permit him to address God directly as You, or use the personal references Your hand or Your face. Such irreverence was part of his

(Heb. tam) (1:1, 8; 8:20; 9:21; Ps. 37:37; Prov. 29:10) Strong's #8535

The verbal root of this Hebrew word means “to be complete.” Thus this word signifies an individual's integrity—a wholeness and wholesomeness. The word is used as a term of endearment for the Shulamite bride in the Song of Solomon (see “perfect” in Song 5:2; 6:9). In the OT, the blameless are frequently associated with the upright (1:1, 8; 2:3; Ps. 37:37; Prov. 29:10) and contrasted with the wicked (9:22; Ps. 64:2-4). Job's claim to be blameless agrees with God's assessment of him, but it is not a claim to absolute perfection (1:8; 9:21; 14:16, 17). The psalmist writes that the future of the blameless man is peace—as was the case for Job (42:10-12; Ps. 37:37).

So Satan went out from the presence of the LORD.

Job Loses His Property and Children

¹³ Now there was a day ^m when his sons and daughters were eating and drinking wine in their oldest brother's house; ¹⁴ and a messenger came to Job and said, “The oxen were plowing and the donkeys feeding beside them, ¹⁵ when the ³Sabeans ⁴raided them and took them away—indeed they have killed the servants with the edge of the sword; and I alone have escaped to tell you!”

constant strategy to demean God. curse: The sin of cursing God is a pivotal issue for the Book of Job. Job feared that his children might think or speak irreverently of God (v. 5). But Satan asserted that Job would surely curse God if his prosperity and blessings were removed. Even Job's wife would urge him to “curse God and die” (2:9). 1:12 That Satan must receive permission from the Lord to lay a hand on Job (see v. 11) indicates that God limits Satan's power. Believers can find strength and assurance from the fact that Satan's actions are limited by God's sovereign control. After the prologue, Satan is never mentioned directly again in the Book of Job; he is only a minor character compared to the Lord of the universe.

1:13–19 In one day Job plummeted from the pinnacle of prosperity to the pit of poverty. He must have felt that all heaven and earth had turned against him. The four rapid disasters that struck him came alternately from earth and heaven. First was the raiding of his livestock and servants; then from heaven, the fire of God; then again from earth, the loss of his camels and servants; and then the climactic blow again from heaven, a great wind that demolished his house and killed his children.

1:15 The Sabeans were nomadic raiders from Sheba. They were probably the people of the queen of Sheba (see 1 Kin. 10:1–13). Her homeland was probably southwestern Arabia, present-day Yemen.

1:17 The Chaldeans were part of various west Semitic marauding tribes active in the middle Euphrates from the twelfth to the ninth century B.C. They migrated eastward into Assyria and then into Babylonia, and were the forerunners of the Chaldean or neo-Babylonian dynasty established by Nebuchadnezzar's father.

1:20 Finally the spotlight focuses on Job's reaction to his trials. Did he serve God for profit as Satan had alleged (1:9)? Job passed the first test with a model response. He showed intense grief according to the accepted custom of his day (v. 20). Then he humbly accepted God's will without complaining or blaming God for his tragedies. Job acknowledged God's sovereign control over all circumstances when he fell to the ground and worshiped. The context indicates that Job's fall was not an involuntary reflex of despair but a deliberate act of humility before God. Job's initial response was an ideal example of how to respond in time of crisis. Job is not only an ancient biblical hero but also an example for us when we face trials that test the mettle of each person's faith (see 1 Pet. 1:6, 7).

1:21 Job gave a realistic appraisal of his status: just as he came into

Satan: The Accuser

While the Book of Job teaches us much about human suffering, we also learn a great deal about Satan and his relationship to God. The first two chapters of Job demonstrate that although Satan is in rebellion, he is still accountable to God.

Originally an angel of God, Satan became corrupt through his own pride (2 Pet. 2:4; Jude 6). Ever since his rebellion against God, Satan has been God's enemy as well as ours. In fact, the Hebrew word for Satan means “Adversary.” In the story of Job, Satan remained true to his name by accusing Job and afflicting him with all kinds of suffering. However Satan's power is not equal to God's. Although Satan attempts to hamper God's work, he is limited by God. As much as he may wish to be a god, Satan still remains answerable to God.

In addition to being accountable to God (1:6), Satan, as a created being, is finite. He is not all-powerful, and he can only be in one place at one time (1:7). Therefore, his fellow fallen angels must aid him in his evil work. Of course, Satan can tempt us, but he cannot know what is in our minds or foretell our future (1:9–11). Most important, he can do nothing without God's permission (1:6–12). Because God actively restrains Satan (1:12; 2:6) and promises that He will not allow us to be tempted beyond what we can bear (1 Cor. 10:13), we can be confident that with God's power we can overcome Satan. Although we live in a fallen world, Satan does not have free reign to do whatever evil he wishes. God is still, and always will be, sovereign.

It was Satan who planned and implemented Job's suffering. God may have allowed Satan to test Job for a time. But in His time God Himself delivered Job from suffering, restored him, and blessed him even more than before (42:10). Even through Satan's evil plan, God had accomplished His good purposes. The relationship between Job and God was tested, and it withstood the test. God's love had won; Satan's accusations were answered. It was finally clear to all that God was both sovereign and compassionate. Through the experience, Job learned to appreciate God's gifts to him even more (42:1–6).

acknowledged the control of the Lord over all circumstances. The name Yahweh is used three times in this verse to emphasize Job's dependence on the true God. Except for 12:9, this is the only place where Job mentions the covenantal name of God. Though Job was not an Israelite, having lived in Uz centuries before the nation of Israel came out of Egypt, he worshiped the God of Israel.

2:3 The first sentence of this verse repeats 1:8 verbatim, emphasizing that Job's character had remained flawless despite Satan's assaults. In the second sentence the Lord affirms that Job had maintained his integrity (the same Hebrew root as blameless in 1:1, 8), although Satan had incited Him to destroy Job without cause.
“Without cause” translates the same Hebrew word Satan had used in insinuating that Job did not serve God “for nothing” (1:9). Now the Lord throws it back in his face.

2:4 The origin of the proverb skin for skin utilized by Satan is disputed. Some think it may have originated from the practice of bartering animal skins. Others believe that the phrase is similar to the proverb “life for life, eye for eye, tooth for tooth” (Ex. 21:23–25).
In the last half of the verse Satan charges that Job would be willing to lose his possessions or even his family, as long as his life was spared.

2:6 When the Lord placed Job into Satan's hand, it is extraordinary that He commanded Satan to spare his life. Ironically, the word spare normally refers to God's role in His providential care of people (see 29:2).

2:7 The disease that afflicted Job with painful boils from head to toe is difficult to identify. The term for boils was used to describe the plague of boils in Egypt (Ex. 9:9–11). The same phrase painful boils, as one of the covenant curses for the disobedient (see Deut.

28:35), denoted an incurable illness.

2:9 The words of Job's wife—curse God and die—were probably Job's most severe trial. Ironically, her question do you still hold fast to your integrity employs almost exactly the same wording the Lord had used (see v. 3). The wording emphasizes Job's perseverance, which his wife misconstrued as religious fanaticism—she thought he was blindly refusing to face the reality of his desperate situation.

2:10 Job's response to the second test, the loss of his health and alienation from his wife, was once again commendable. His rhetorical question, urging the acceptance of both good and adversity from God, anticipates one of the central messages of the Book of Job: The person of faith will trust in God through prosperity or adversity, even while unable to understand why bad things happen.

2:11 Eliphaz the Temanite was apparently an Edomite from Teman in northern Edom (Gen. 36:11). The term Shuhite may refer to Bildad's ancestry, or more likely to his geographical origin, since the other two friends seem to be identified by their home towns.
Zophar the Naamathite may have come from Naameh, a mountainous area in northwestern Arabia.

2:12, 13 These friends truly cared for Job because they wept and stayed close by him for seven days and seven nights. Yet later they would fail Job miserably by not listening to him (see 8:4–6; 13:5–13).

3:1 When Job . . . cursed the day of his birth, he came close to blasphemy. The Hebrew word for cursed, meaning “to hold in contempt,” is elsewhere employed of cursing God (Ex. 22:28; Lev.
24:15) or cursing one's parents (Ex. 21:17). Job's pain had driven him to express a very strong malediction against the day of his birth

- 3 “May^a the day perish on which I was born,
And the night in which it was said,
‘A male child is conceived.’
4 May that day be darkness;
May God above not seek it,
Nor the light shine upon it.
5 May darkness and ^bthe shadow of death claim it;
May a cloud settle on it;
May the blackness of the day terrify it.
6 As for that night, may darkness seize it;
May it not ²rejoice among the days of the year,
May it not come into the number of the months.
7 Oh, may that night be barren!
May no joyful shout come into it!
8 May those curse it who curse the day,
Those ^cwho are ready to arouse Leviathan.
9 May the stars of its morning be dark;
May it look for light, but have none,
And not see the ³dawning of the day;
10 Because it did not shut up the doors of my mother’s womb,
Nor hide sorrow from my eyes.
11 “Why^d did I not die at birth?
Why did I not ⁴perish when I came from the womb?
12 ^eWhy did the knees receive me?
Or why the breasts, that I should nurse?
13 For now I would have lain still and been quiet,
I would have been asleep;
Then I would have been at rest

Who ^fbuilt ruins for themselves,
15 Or with princes who had gold,
Who filled their houses with silver;

Like infants who never saw light?

BIBLE TIMES & CULTURE NOTES

Miscarriage

Sensing he was about to lose family, health, and possessions, Job wished that he had been “hidden like a stillborn child, like infants who never saw light” (3:16). Just as in our day, not all women in Bible times were able to carry the fetus long enough to give birth. Although the tragedy of miscarriage was probably whispered about in the women’s circles, the people’s sense of good taste probably kept them from discussing it openly.

The women in Bible times might trace the problem to a food that had been eaten or something that had been drunk. For example, during the days of the prophet Elisha, the women in Jericho were convinced that the water from the nearby spring was causing them to miscarry (2 Kin. 2:19, 20). Sometimes miscarriage was caused by accident. A pregnant woman might be jostled or kicked by an animal. She might get caught between two men who were fighting. According to Mosaic Law, the person who inflicted the blow was fined if the mother miscarried. If the miscarriage caused complications and the woman died as a result, the Law exacted the death penalty (Ex. 21:22, 23).

- And there the ⁵weary are at ^hrest.
18 There the prisoners ⁶rest together;
ⁱThey do not hear the voice of the oppressor.
19 The small and great are there,
And the servant is free from his master.
20 “Why^j is light given to him who is in misery,
And life to the ^kbitter of soul,
21 Who ^llong⁷ for death, but it does not come,
And search for it more than ^mhidden treasures;
22 Who rejoice exceedingly,
And are glad when they can find the ⁿgrave?
23 Why is light given to a man whose way is hidden, ^oAnd whom God has hedged in?

and the night of his conception, which were personified as those responsible for his existence (see vv. 3–6). However, Job did not commit blasphemy. He did not curse the Chaldeans or Sabeans, much less God. Neither did he express thoughts of suicide.

3:3–10 Job’s wish that he had never been born because his life was full of sorrow (vv. 3, 10) reflects a serious misunderstanding about the basic meaning of human existence. The Bible teaches that the purpose of life is not happiness but the praise of God’s glory (Eph. 1:3–14).

3:8 Job employed two separate Hebrew words translated curse, different from the Hebrew term in v. 1. He wished that the popular magicians who cast spells on the day for their clients could have cast a spell on his day so that he would never have been born. Job’s belief in one God (see 31:26–28) indicates that he was speaking poetically and dramatically. He was not endorsing any kind of pagan magic, but employing vivid and forceful language to express the intensity of his agony and despair.

3:20–22 Even though Job longed for death, he was not considering suicide. The context of other passages indicates that Job merely wished that the Lord would let him die (see 7:15–21; 10:18–22).

3:23 Job bemoaned that God had hedged him in so that he could not die. The irony is that Job perceived God’s protective hedge around him as keeping him from a desirable death. This is a typical feeling of those who suffer.

24 For my sighing comes before ⁸I eat,
And my groanings pour out like water.
25 For the thing I greatly ^pfeared has come upon me,
And what I dreaded has happened to me.
26 I am not at ease, nor am I quiet;
I have no rest, for trouble comes.”

Eliphaz: Job Has Sinned

4 Then Eliphaz the Temanite answered and said:

2 “If one attempts a word with you, will you become weary?
But who can withhold himself from speaking?
3 Surely you have instructed many,
And you ^ahave strengthened weak hands.
4 Your words have upheld him who was stumbling,
And you ^bhave strengthened the ¹feeble knees;
5 But now it comes upon you, and you are weary;
It touches you, and you are troubled.
6 Is not ^cyour reverence ^dyour

And the integrity of your ways your hope?
7 “Remember now, ^ewho ever perished being innocent?
Or where were the upright ever cut off?
8 Even as I have seen,
^fThose who plow iniquity
And sow trouble reap the same.
9 By the blast of God they perish,
And by the breath of His anger they are consumed.

Who are crushed before a moth?
20 ^lThey are broken in pieces from morning till evening;
They perish forever, with no one regarding.
21 Does not their own excellence go away?
They die, even without wisdom.”

4:1 Since Eliphaz the Temanite spoke first, he was probably the oldest and therefore presumably the wisest of the three. Eliphaz was a little more courteous to Job than were his other two friends. However, his observations were distorted. Eliphaz firmly believed that God would never punish the righteous and would not preserve the sinner. He concluded that since Job was suffering, he must be a sinner (see 22:4–11, 21–30).
4:2–6 Though Eliphaz seems surprised at Job’s response (ch. 3), his initial remarks are complimentary and courteous. The content of vv. 7–11 suggests that v. 6 probably contains at least a mild rebuke.
4:5 The phrase you are weary translates one word in the original Hebrew and repeats the same root word found in the phrase “will you become weary” in v. 2. This repetition indicates that Eliphaz had already recognized the apparent contradiction between the patient Job of the prologue and the impatient Job of the dialogue.
4:7–9 Eliphaz highlights the retribution doctrine—that is, God supports the righteous but abandons the wicked—with two rhetorical questions. He supports his belief by an appeal to his experience; that is, “you reap what you sow.” Because the word trouble is the same word used by Job to describe his own plight as full of “sorrow” (3:10) and “misery” (3:20), Eliphaz may be equating Job with the wicked who plow iniquity.

4:10, 11 To the reader it may seem that Eliphaz suddenly adds illustrations of God’s retribution on animals. But probably these are proverbial sayings with a double meaning. Eliphaz may have been implying that Job’s “groanings” or “roaring” made him comparable to the old lion, symbolizing the wicked, whose sins were now being repaid with suffering.
4:12–17 Eliphaz appeals to a vision to authenticate his theology. He claims that he heard a voice that told him that no one was righteous compared to God, implying that Job was not righteous. But contrast the Lord’s unqualified commendation of Job in the prologue (see 1:1, 8; 2:3).
4:19, 20 The description of people as living in houses of clay with their foundation . . . in the dust emphasizes the mortality and fragility of human existence. Like the temporary houses they live in, people can perish without anyone knowing. Elsewhere Job uses the same two Hebrew words in parallel to describe the fragility of the human body. Since the body is fashioned from clay, God the potter who fashioned it can easily turn it back to dust (see 10:8, 9; 33:6).
4:21 The Hebrew word for the phrase their own excellence may mean “tent cord.” Thus the text may be stating that humanity’s existence is as precarious as a tent in the midst of a windstorm.

- 5 “Call out now;

Hear it, and know for yourself.”

5:1 Eliphaz’s warning against appealing to holy ones or angels anticipates Job’s later desire for a “mediator” (see 9:33).

5:3-7 Eliphaz begins another appeal to personal observation and experience. Eliphaz uses a play on the words ground and man, along with the repetition of the word trouble, to aid his argument that Job’s trouble did not come out of nowhere—that is, spring from the ground.

5:7 The word sparks may allude to the Ugaritic god of the underworld who was supposedly responsible for plagues and lightning. A reference like this to mythology does not imply or endorse a belief in other gods. Eliphaz is saying “just as a plague springs up from the demonic forces of hell, so does trouble come from a person’s nature.”

5:17 Eliphaz insinuates that since Job’s suffering was a result of God’s chastening for his sin, he should not despise or reject what God was trying to teach him. Though it is true that God sometimes disciplines people for their sin through pain and suffering (32:1—37:24; Prov. 3:11; Heb. 12:7), Eliphaz was wrong to suggest that this was necessarily so in Job’s case. The divine title Shaddai, translated Almighty, is used in Job 31 times, but only 17 times in all the rest of the OT.

5:18-21 Eliphaz states that God is the author of both pain and healing. God would heal the wounds he inflicted for discipline. When God does allow pain to come into our lives, it is not to harm us, but to make us better.

5:23 The presence of stones in a field could make land impossible to farm (see 2 Kin. 3:19, 25). Thus the expression covenant with the stones of the field would mean being at peace and harmony with even the destructive forces of nature—including the beasts of the field (see v. 22).

6:1 When Job answered, he did not respond directly to Eliphaz. This may be the reason the text does not specify a name here. Job usually responded to all three of his friends, not to one individually (see 6:24–30). His friends in turn did not respond point-by-point to what Job said. Consequently the dialogue is not so much a conversation between friends as it is a speech contest in which one speaker tries to win a debate and impress his audience with his rhetoric.

6:4 Job’s suffering was so intense that he portrayed it as caused by arrows of the Almighty that were dipped in poison. The arrows of the Lord are generally symbolic of His judgment (Deut. 32:23, 42) or wrath (Ps. 38:1, 2). Job also assumed that God was required to reward the obedient and punish the guilty in this life, and he may have presumed that the Lord was punishing him unjustly.

6:10 Though the exact translation is disputed, the overall context of this verse seems to indicate that Job was more concerned to preserve his relationship to the Holy One than to have God remove his pain and anguish through death (vv. 8, 9).

6:14 The exact meaning of the Hebrew word translated afflicted is disputed. It may mean “to melt”; thus the idea could be “failing” or “despairing.” Verse 14 seems to be transitional, linking Job’s despair of vv. 8–13 with his disappointment of vv. 15–21.

6:15 Since the friends are called my brothers, Job apparently at one time had a close relationship with them. This only intensified his feelings of disappointment. He compares them to the streams of the brooks, the torrents of water that fill the ravines during the rainy season and pass away in the summer.

6:18 The word paths in this verse concludes the imagery of empty ravines left by the seasonal streams called “wadis” (vv. 15–18) and links this section to the next (see v. 19).

6:19, 20 Job compares his intense disappointment with his friends to the thirsty caravans of Tema and the travelers of Sheba, whose hopes for water were dashed by reaching the dry stream beds. Tema was located in northern Arabia and Sheba in southwestern Arabia. These caravans and travelers would have been familiar to his friends, since the story of Job most likely occurred near Edom in northern Arabia.

6:21 When Job hoped to receive help from his three friends, they offered nothing. This was like a desert wadi, a seasonal stream that vanishes in the time of greatest need.

6:24–26 Job pleads with his would-be counselors to have understanding rather than an argumentative spirit. The friends’ demeanor degenerates into arguments and reproofs as they overreact to Job’s words, which even Job admits belonged to the wind. A counselor must be willing to make allowances for overreaction in someone who suffers and not respond with similar emotion. The sufferer often needs someone to be a friend who will listen with understanding, rather than a judge who simply wishes to give reproof.

- 25 How forceful are right words!
But what does your arguing prove?
- 26 Do you intend to rebuke my words,
And the speeches of a desperate one,
which are as wind?
- 27 Yes, you overwhelm the fatherless,
And you ^pundermine your friend.
- 28 Now therefore, be pleased to look at me;
For I would never lie to your face.
- 29 ^qYield now, let there be no injustice!
Yes, concede, my ^rrighteousness ³still stands!
- 30 Is there injustice on my tongue?
Cannot my ⁴taste discern the unsavory?

6:29, 30 The repeated word injustice in these verses is the same term used by Eliphaz in 5:16. Eliphaz argued that God “saves the needy” from the unscrupulous tactics of the wicked (5:12–15), so that “the poor have hope and injustice shuts her mouth.” Job responds by implying that the words of Eliphaz deal injustice to him in his time of need (see 6:14–21) by assuming that he is not righteous.

7:1, 2 Job argues that his own lot is worse than the hard service of the hired laborer or the common slave. Job’s use of the word servant is an ironic indicator that his life as God’s servant (see the same Hebrew term in 1:8) has now become full of drudgery and slavery rather than joyous trust in the Lord.

7:3 Although the Book of Job does not record how long Job suffered, the phrase months of futility implies that it was a considerable time.

7:6 Job’s choice of the word hope in the context of the weaver’s shuttle may convey a double meaning (see also 11:18). The Hebrew word for hope sounds like the Hebrew word that means “thread” or “cord” (see Josh. 2:18, 21). Not only did Job believe his days were without hope but that he had not even a thread of hope left. As if he were regarding a thread in a weaver’s shuttle, Job could not see the design that God had for his life through the suffering that he was experiencing. Though sometimes we may question the Lord as Job did, we must realize that the great Weaver has a design that we may not be able to see until He is finished with our lives.

7:9, 10 Job describes the grave (sometimes rendered Sheol) as a place from which one shall never return (see 10:21). The focus here is on death. Though the dead person would never return to his house on earth, there was a belief in a meeting “house” in the underworld for those who had been on earth (see 30:23).

7:11 Job speaks frankly with God as he begins to pour out his anguish and to complain in bitterness. He had no fear that the Lord would misinterpret him as his human counselors had. The Lord did not reprimand Job for this but instead commended Job for speaking “what is right” (see 42:7).

7:12 The sea and its terrifying inhabitant the sea serpent symbolized chaos and the forces of evil and were even considered gods in the pagan religions of the ancient world. Once again Job employs mythological imagery to express his frustration and deep anguish. Although Job interprets the Lord’s guard as an invasion of privacy (vv. 13, 14, 17–20), God has designed it for a benevolent purpose (see 3:23).

7:15 Job is not considering suicide when he states that he would choose strangling and death rather than to live in his body (see 3:20–22). Strangling may refer to the symptoms of his disease, such as coughing or choking, that he wishes God would use to kill him.

7:17, 18 These verses sound similar to Ps. 8:4. Whereas the psalmist marvels that God should “visit him,” Job uses the same word in a negative sense to complain that He should visit him all the time.

18 That You should ⁴visit him every morning,
And test him every moment?
 19 How long?
 Will You not look away from me,
 And let me alone till I swallow my saliva?
 20 Have I sinned?
 What have I done to You, ⁹O watcher of men?
 Why ⁷have You set me as Your target,
 So that I am a burden ⁵to myself?
 21 Why then do You not pardon my transgression,
 And take away my iniquity?
 For now I will lie down in the dust,
 And You will seek me diligently,
 But I will no longer be.”

Bildad: Job Should Repent

8 Then Bildad the Shuhite answered and said:

2 “How long will you speak these things,
 And the words of your mouth be like a strong wind?

 Or does the Almighty pervert justice?
 4 If ^byour sons have sinned against Him,

 5 ^cIf you would earnestly seek God
 And make your supplication to the Almighty,
 6 If you were pure and upright,

 And prosper your rightful dwelling place.

7:20, 21 Job appeals to God to show him what he has done to deserve being made a target for God’s persecution. When Job calls God the watcher of men, he employs a participle that normally describes God in a positive role as one who preserves His people (Ps. 31:23).

8:2 Bildad twists Job’s words of 6:26. Job had acknowledged that he had overreacted with words that belonged to the wind. To paraphrase Bildad’s sarcastic response: “Yes, you’re right, Job! All your words are like a mighty wind; you are full of hot air!”

8:3 Bildad argues that God could never pervert justice. The only possible conclusion was that Job and his children received what they deserved as sinners (see vv. 4–7, 20).

8:4–6 The repetition of the word if in these three successive verses illustrates the presumptive nature of Bildad’s statements (vv. 8–22). In his zeal to defend orthodox doctrine, he fails to listen to Job’s pain.

8:5, 6 Bildad admonishes Job to seek God now so that God will restore Job’s prosperity, rather than talking about how God will seek him unsuccessfully once he is dead (7:21). Bildad uses the words pure and upright, the same words the Lord has already employed in affirming Job’s blameless character (see 1:8; 2:3).

8:7 The advice that Job’s latter end would increase abundantly anticipates Job’s restoration in the epilogue (42:10–17), though it came about in a way quite different from what Bildad envisioned.

8:11–19 Bildad uses illustrations from nature to support his belief that God punishes only the wicked and always rewards the righteous in this life. He falsely deduces that one can always determine the cause by looking at the effect. Oversimplification resulting in pat, inadequate answers is a common error of Job’s counselors.

8:14, 15 The metaphor of the spider’s web implies that Job had trusted in his house and riches, which were no more permanent than the web.

8:20, 21 Bildad’s dogmatic statement about how God will not cast away the blameless is undermined by the fact that he uses the word blameless in the same way the Lord used it in the prologue (1:1, 8; 2:3) to describe Job.

- 22 Those who hate you will be ⁿclothed with shame,
And the dwelling place of the wicked
⁷will come to nothing.”

9:3 The verb to contend indicates that Job was considering the idea of entering a legal case against God. The prophets often used this word when speaking of God bringing a legal case against Israel (Is. 1:2; Mic. 6:1). Job’s legal dilemma before the Lord, who served simultaneously as Job’s judge and legal adversary (see 13:20–28), underscores the urgency and hopelessness of Job’s call for a mediator to hear his case (v. 33). Job calculates that the chances of answering God’s interrogation are very slim, one in a thousand—something God later verifies (see 38:1—42:6). The legal term answer means to respond to an accusation in court, particularly under cross-examination.

9:8 spreads out the heavens: Job attributes this phenomenon to God alone. The fact that the Lord treads on the waves of the sea shows His unique control over the alleged forces of evil (see 38:8–12). The word waves emphasizes that the Lord treads the supposed sea god Yamm under his feet (see also v. 13). This verse emphasizes that the sea is merely a natural force under the control of the omnipotent God.

9:9, 10 the Bear, Orion . . . the Pleiades: God’s creation of the wonders of the heavens is also celebrated by Amos (see Amos 5:8). Indeed, these words come back on Job’s head (38:31–33). great things . . . wonders: The works of God are so amazing and numerous that the human mind simply cannot comprehend them.

9:17 This verse teems with possible ironic innuendoes. Job’s statement that God crushes him with a tempest anticipates the appearance of the Lord “out of the whirlwind” in 38:1, but with a different result. Job blames God for crushing and wounding him without cause, when actually it was Satan who had sought to destroy him without cause (2:3). The Hebrew word translated crushes in this verse is translated bruise in Gen. 3:15 and describes the conflict between Satan and humanity.

9:21 The phrase I do not know myself means “I do not care for myself” according to the clarification given in the rest of the verse.

(Heb. rahab) (9:13; 26:12; Is. 30:7) Strong’s #7293

The verbal root of this word means “to act stormily” or “to behave tempestuously.” The derived proper noun designates a mythological, primeval sea monster. Later it became a designation for Egypt. Isaiah reports the Lord Himself calling Egypt by this name (Is. 30:7); elsewhere Isaiah uses the word in a context that suggests a double reference—to both the sea monster and Egypt (Is. 51:9). When referring to the sea monster, this word is always couched in language depicting God’s cosmic power (9:1–13; 26:12, 13; Ps. 89:8–12; Is. 51:6–11). The ancient Middle East had many mythological tales of powerful primeval sea monsters. The Bible uses this image of Rahab, not to endorse mythology but to demonstrate the Lord’s supremacy over all powers—even the ones in people’s imagination.

Soapwort

Before the manufacture of soap as we know it today, people in Palestine used a crude form of soap made from the ashes of the roots of the soapwort, mixed with olive oil. The Hebrew words for these soap plants—bor and borith—literally meant “that which cleanses.” For making soap, the Hebrews used several types of scrubby alkaline plants that grew in the area of the Dead Sea and the Mediterranean. They often used this soft soap for bathing (9:30; Jer. 2:22). Generally, Hebrew women used the root of the soapwort for washing linens because they believed it would not make them shrink. Men used the ashes of the glasswort and the saltwort to make potash for smelting metals (Is. 1:25; Mal. 3:2).

Job: I Would Plead with God

10 “My ^asoul loathes my life;
I will ¹give free course to my complaint,
^bI will speak in the bitterness of my soul.
2 I will say to God, ‘Do not condemn me;
Show me why You contend with me.
3 Does it seem good to You that You should oppress,
That You should despise the work of Your hands,
And smile on the counsel of the wicked?
4 Do You have eyes of flesh?
Or ^cdo You see as man sees?
5 Are Your days like the days of a mortal man?
Are Your years like the days of a mighty man,
6 That You should seek for my iniquity
And search out my sin,
7 Although You know that I am not wicked,
And there is no one who can deliver from Your hand?
8 ‘Your ^dhands have made me and fashioned me,
An intricate unity;
Yet You would ^edestroy me.

9:22–24 Job contradicts Bildad’s claims of 8:3, 20 by accusing God of unjustly destroying both the blameless and the wicked (see 8:20, 21). Thus Job accuses God of being an unjust Judge who blindfolds earthly judges (v. 24).
9:28 Job desires to stand before God as an innocent man—not absolutely sinless, but innocent of any sin comparable to his suffering.
9:32, 33 Job complains that God is not a man who would go to court with Him (see 9:3). Neither does Job have an impartial mediator between God and himself—a mediator who can present his case before God. The desire for a mediator between God and humanity is a key theme in Job (see 16:19; 19:25), and it anticipates the NT emphasis on Jesus as the true Mediator between God and all of humanity (see 1 Tim. 2:5).

10:2 Show me: Job dares to speak to God as an equal. Again using legal language (see 9:3), Job demands that God give him a fair trial through proper court protocol. Here Job comes close to unjustified indignation at God’s sovereign will for his life.
10:7 This verse serves as a transition from Job’s complaint (vv. 1–6) to his brief description of how God had lovingly created him (vv. 8–12). Job knows that he is not wicked, and he thinks that God is unjust in oppressing him. Yet Job also realizes that there is no one who can deliver him from God’s hand.
10:8–17 In these verses, Job paints a portrait of the apparently contradictory nature of God, contrasting His loving character with His judgment. Job wonders how the God who had so carefully fashioned him in the womb can turn against him like a fierce

- 9 Remember, I pray, ^fthat You have made me like clay.

lion. This is the desperate cry of a sufferer blind to the fact that God is working good out of all the tragic events of his life (see 42:12).

10:15, 16 Not being able to lift up his head expresses Job’s shame and disgrace (see Judg. 8:28; Lam. 2:10). Job’s misery was so deep that although he believed he was innocent, he felt like a criminal with no self-esteem or dignity.

10:17 The phrase You renew Your witnesses against me is a legal metaphor that may refer to each new aspect of Job’s illness. In the equivalent war metaphor, the Lord was sending changes or troop reinforcements against him.

10:18–22 Job asks why he was ever born (vv. 18, 19; see 3:3–10). Then, he wishes the Lord would leave him alone to die (vv. 20–22; see 3:20–26; 7:16–21). In contrast to 3:17–19, where the grave is described as a place of rest and freedom, the grave here is the land of darkness lacking any order. Job amplifies his wish that he could have gone straight from the womb to the tomb by linking the darkness of the grave with the dark day of his birth (3:3–9).

Four different words for darkness in vv. 21, 22 stress the gloom and dreariness of the grave.

11:1–20 Zophar the Naamathite (see 2:11) was even more rude than Bildad (vv. 2–6; 8:1–13). He was a brash dogmatist who based his arguments on misapplied theology coupled with simplistic reasoning.

11:4 Zophar exaggerates what Job has said about his innocence (see 9:14–21) to make Job look foolish. Job never stated that his doctrine was pure.

11:7–9 When Zophar interrogates Job about the impossibility of comprehending the deep things of God, he employs for search out the same term Job used to describe God’s wonders as beyond “finding out” (9:10). Thus Zophar may be trying to turn Job’s words against him by saying that Job’s actions are inconsistent with his theology. Since these verses anticipate portions of the Lord’s speeches (see 38:16–18, 34–38), Zophar’s doctrine is correct, but the application is wrong. Biblical truth misapplied perverts the intent of the Scriptures and misleads.

10^d If He passes by, imprisons, and gathers to judgment,
Then who can ⁵hinder Him?
11 For ^eHe knows deceitful men;
He sees wickedness also.
Will He not then consider it?
12 For an ^fempty-headed man will be wise,
When a wild donkey's colt is born a man.

13^g If you would ^gprepare your heart,
And ^hstretch out your hands toward Him; 14 If iniquity were in your hand, and you put it far away,
And ⁱwould not let wickedness dwell in your tents;

18 ^m Lev. 26:5, 6; Ps. 3:5; Prov. 3:24

15 ^j Then surely you could lift up your face without spot;
Yes, you could be steadfast, and not fear;
16 Because you would ^kforget your misery,
And remember it as waters that have passed away,
17 And your life ^lwould be brighter than noonday.
Though you were dark, you would be like the morning.
18 And you would be secure, because there is hope;
Yes, you would dig around you,
and ^mtake your rest in safety.

11:10–12 Zophar’s rhetorical question about God, who can hinder Him, echoes Job’s sentiments in 9:12 verbatim. However, Zophar denies Job’s allegation that God does not know the difference between the righteous and the wicked (v. 11; see 9:22). As a retort to Job’s rhetorical question (6:5) in which he compared his own cries to the braying of the “wild donkey,” Zophar employs what may be a proverbial statement about the wild donkey. He could be implying that Job’s “empty talk” indicates that he is empty-headed (vv. 3, 12).
11:13, 14 stretch out your hands: Stretching out the hands was a posture of prayer as well as of praise (see Ps. 134:2). Assuming that Job is suffering because of his iniquity, Zophar rudely repudiates Job’s assertion that he has no “injustice” on his tongue (6:30) by alleging that, in fact, it is Job’s tents that are full of wickedness or injustice. The implication may be that Job had acquired his wealth by wrong means or had tolerated evil in his household.

11:16 as waters . . . passed away: This is similar to our expression “water under the bridge.”
11:18, 19 The phrase dig around you is a literal rendition of a Hebrew root that may mean “to look carefully about” with “eagle eye” scrutiny (see the usage of the same Hebrew term in 39:29).

Job’s Counseling Sessions
Name	Explanation for Suffering	Advice to Job	Job’s Reply
Job’s wife		“Curse God and die!” (2:9)	“Shall we indeed accept good from God, and shall we not accept adversity?” (2:10)
Eliphaz	“Those who plow iniquity and sow trouble reap the same.” (4:8)	“Do not despise the chastening of the Almighty.” (5:17)	“I loathe my life . . . let me alone.” (7:16)
Bildad	Does God subvert judgment? Or does the Almighty pervert justice?” (8:3)	“Seek God . . . make your supplication . . . [be] pure and upright.” (8:5, 6)	“I am blameless.” (9:21); “Show me why You contend with me.” (10:2)
Zophar	“For He knows deceitful men; He sees wickedness also. Will He not then consider it?” (11:11)	“Prepare your heart . . . stretch out your hands toward Him; put [iniquity] far away.” (11:13, 14)	“You are all worthless physicians.” (13:4); “I desire to reason with God.” (13:3)
Eliphaz 2	“The wicked man writhes with pain all his days.” (15:20)	“Your own mouth condemns you.” (15:6)	“Miserable comforters are you all!” (16:2); “Surely even now my witness [of my innocence] is in heaven.” (16:19)
Bildad 2	“The light of the wicked indeed goes out.” (18:5)	“[Listen to us and] gain understanding.” (18:2)	“You have wronged me.” (19:3); “Have pity on me.” (19:21)
Zophar 2	“The triumphing of the wicked is short.” (20:5)		“The wicked live and become old.” (21:7)
Eliphaz 3	“Is not your wickedness great, and your iniquity without end?” (22:5)	“Acquaint yourself with Him . . . receive, please, instruction from His mouth . . . return to the Almighty.” (22:21–23)	“Oh . . . that I might . . . present my case before Him.” (23:3, 4)
Bildad 3	“How then can man be righteous before God?” (25:4)		“Far be it from me that I should say you are right; till I die I will not put away my integrity from me.” (27:5)
Elihu	“In this you are not righteous . . . Why do you contend with Him?” (33:12, 13)	“Obey and serve Him.” (36:11); “Cry for help.” (36:13)
The Lord	“Who is this who darkens counsel by words without knowledge?” (38:2)	“I will question you.” (38:3); The Lord asked Job more than 70 questions that reveal His power and sovereignty.	“I abhor myself, and repent in dust and ashes.” (42:6)

12:4 mocked by his friends: The verb Job uses is also found in a similar negative context in Ps. 2:4. In those contexts, the verb indicates ridicule. But in other passages, this word expresses joy and laughter (Gen. 21:6).

12:22 God’s reversal of darkness to light was precisely what Job needed (see 10:21, 22).

12:24, 25 God’s coming reversal of human wisdom is desired by all who presently suffer the arrogance of people who prate their knowledge with no fear of the living God (see Prov. 1:7).

13:3, 4 Job desires to reason or argue his cause before God. He rejects the incompetent counsel of his three friends who, like worthless physicians, have made a wrong diagnosis concerning the cause of his disease and suffering. In fact they were forgers of lies, literally “falsehood-plasterers.” Job’s friends were smearing his sores with a sham concoction of dogma. Instead of piously accusing their unfortunate friend, they should have been praying with him. 13:5–13 In response to Zophar’s derisive question concerning Job’s words (11:3), Job expresses the desire that his friends would be absolutely silent. Indeed, that would have been the friends' wisest action (Prov. 17:28). Job's sarcasm reflects his earlier words to them in 12:2. Using the vocabulary of a wisdom teacher, Job explains his reason for insisting on silence. He wants them to hear and pay attention to his words. He urges them to listen diligently to his words instead of trying to defend God. Their pious platitudes are as worthless as proverbs composed of ashes.

13:14 The latter half of the verse seems to clarify take my flesh in my teeth to mean risking loss of one's life like an animal who tries to defend itself while carrying its prey in its mouth.

13:15 trust Him: While this verse is widely known as a powerful statement of Job's trust in God, it is not without difficulties. The Hebrew word translated Him is similar in sound to the Hebrew word for no. Thus some have translated the verse as follows: "Behold, He will slay me; I have no hope." Yet the positive translation of the verse as it is here seems preferable because it follows the flow of the section (vv. 13–19), which has other positive elements (see vv. 16, 19). It also makes wonderful sense within the verse. Job believes that God is in the process of slowly taking his life. But in a bold declaration of faith, Job declares his absolute trust in God, for when he would be brought into God's presence, he would plead his cause directly with God. And then, if not before, Job would rediscover what he had never really lost: God's love and salvation (v. 16).

13:20–28 Since Job is still in this life of pain (see v. 15), he turns to God as best he can and appeals his case directly to Him. Job requests that God, as plaintiff, list the specific charges He has against him rather than continue being his Judge.

13:24 The Hebrew terminology resembles vv. 20, 21. Job asks why does God hide His face, a Hebrew idiom indicating the absence of God's favor and blessing.

13:27 In a portrait of God's "malevolent activities," Job uses the verb watch. The word normally describes God's benevolent care over a person's life, but in the Book of Job it depicts the role God gives to Satan (in 2:6).

14:1–6 Job agrees with Eliphaz's assessment that a person is born for trouble. He stresses life's misery and brevity through two vivid metaphors: a fading flower and a fleeing shadow.

14:5 That God has determined the length of a person's life (see Ps. 90:10) emphasizes God's sovereign power and wisdom, and conversely the impotence of human beings, who are under divinely set limits.

You have appointed his limits, so that he cannot pass.

Eliphaz Accuses Job of Folly

15 Then ^aEliphaz the Temanite answered and said:

² “Should a wise man answer with empty knowledge,
And fill ¹himself with the east wind?

³ Should he reason with unprofitable talk,
Or by speeches with which he can do no good?

⁴ Yes, you cast off fear,
And restrain ²prayer before God.

⁵ For your iniquity teaches your mouth,
And you choose the tongue of the crafty.

⁶ ^bYour own mouth condemns you, and not I;
Yes, your own lips testify against you.

⁷ “Are you the first man who was born?
^cOr were you made before the hills?

⁸ ^dHave you heard the counsel of God?
Do you limit wisdom to yourself?

14:7–9 hope for a tree: Job implies that life is better for trees than for people. When a tree falls, it can sprout again. This is precisely the point of Isaiah’s beautiful prophecy (Is. 6:13). The house of Jesse—that is, Israel—will be cut off, as one might cut down a great oak tree. But in God’s great mercy, that tree will sprout new growth. The “holy seed” is in the stump. That new growth is the beautiful Branch (Is. 11:1), the Savior King whose name is Jesus.

14:13 Job’s wish for the grave to be a temporary hiding place from God’s wrath differs dramatically from his earlier remarks concerning the grave (see 7:9, 10; 10:18–22). He attributes the cause of his suffering to God’s wrath because he assumes the retribution dogma that the righteous are always blessed and the wicked will eventually experience God’s judgment.

14:14 Job’s question if a man dies, shall he live again is answered with an emphatic “Yes” by Jesus and the NT authors (see John 11:23–26; 1 Cor. 15:3–57; see also Is. 26:19; Dan. 12:2). But Job responds to his own question by a determination to wait for his change to come. Since Job considers life hard (see 7:1), perhaps he is implying that he will wait for relief from his suffering through death to find out the answer.

15:2, 3 The insinuation that Job had filled himself with the east wind is an allusion to the violent and scorching wind from the desert that brought no rain. Thus Eliphaz is implying that Job’s arguments were destructive (see vv. 12, 13) and without beneficial substance (see the context of v. 3).

15:4–6 Eliphaz’s statement your own mouth condemns you expresses ironic agreement with Job’s earlier words (9:20). But Eliphaz deliberately twists Job’s words to say that Job no longer needs a day in court since his own mouth has already incriminated him.

15:7 Are you the first man who was born: This sarcastic question anticipates a theme developed in the Lord’s speeches (see 38:4–21).

15:8–10 wisdom . . . know: Eliphaz throws Job’s words of 12:3; 13:2 back into his face. He counters Job’s sarcastic rebuttal to Bildad that wisdom comes only with age (12:12) by saying that people much

2 ^a Job 13:4; 21:34
 1 Troublesome

- 24 Trouble and anguish make him afraid;
 They overpower him, like a king ready for ⁷battle.
- 25 For he stretches out his hand against God,
 And acts defiantly against the Almighty,
- 26 Running stubbornly against Him
 With his strong, embossed shield.
- 27 “Though ^r he has covered his face with his fatness,
 And made his waist heavy with fat,
- 28 He dwells in desolate cities,
 In houses which no one inhabits,
 Which are destined to become ruins.
- 29 He will not be rich,
 Nor will his wealth ^scontinue,
 Nor will his possessions overspread the earth.
- 30 He will not depart from darkness;
 The flame will dry out his branches,
 And ^tby the breath of His mouth he will go away.
- 31 Let him not ^utrust in futile things,
 Deceiving himself,
 For futility will be his reward.
- 32 It will be accomplished ^vbefore his time,
 And his branch will not be green.
- 33 He will shake off his unripe grape like a vine,
 And cast off his blossom like an olive tree.
- 34 For the company of hypocrites will be barren,
 And fire will consume the tents of bribery.
- 35 “They conceive trouble and bring forth futility;
 Their womb prepares deceit.”

older than Job's father are on their side. Since Job was already a mature man who had raised ten grown children, this may be an exaggeration for effect.

15:13 The Hebrew word translated spirit may also be translated “temper” or “anger,” as in Prov. 16:32.

15:14, 15 Eliphaz rephrases his thought of 4:17, 18 by interweaving an apparent gibe at Job's complaint of 14:1 about man “born of woman.”

15:17, 18 The phrase what I have seen shows that Eliphaz bases his instruction on experience and observation (see 4:1). He also appeals to the wisdom tradition as Bildad has done in 8:8–10.

15:20 hidden from: The Hebrew could also be translated “stored up for.”

15:21 dreadful: Eliphaz begins his subtle argument to prove that Job is a wicked man. He alludes to Job's dread, the same word translated feared in 3:25, as an implicit indicator that Job is wicked. 15:23, 24 By using the phrase make him afraid in the context of a day of darkness, Eliphaz twists the words of Job's lament about the day of his birth (3:4, 5) to fit the dark day of his death (10:18–22). Then in contrast to 14:20 where Job blames God for prevailing against people, Eliphaz says that the wicked man's own fears overpower him.

15:27–33 The imagery of the fat man who eventually loses his wealth and possessions by divine punishment for his wickedness, insinuates that Job's calamities have occurred because of his own self-indulgence.

15:34 In mentioning the fire that will consume the tents of the wicked, Eliphaz employs the same two words that describe the fire of God that devoured Job's sheep and servants (see 1:16).

16:2 I have heard many such things: Beginning with a rare direct allusion to what the previous speaker just said, Job belittles his friends as miserable comforters. To paraphrase Job: "Speaking of trouble, rather than comforting me in my troubles as a good counselor should, you have increased my trouble despite your claims to the contrary."

16:3 The phrase words of wind is a caustic comeback to Eliphaz's words in 15:2 and Bildad's in 8:2. Both had twisted Job's words of 6:26 (see 8:2; 15:2, 3).

16:4, 5 The phrase shake my head at you indicates a mocking posture (as in Ps. 22:7). However, the word comfort, meaning "to nod the head sympathetically," is used in 2:11 of the friends who came to console him. In effect, Job is saying: "Please nod your head with understanding instead of mocking and ridiculing me."

16:10 strike me: Those who mocked and mistreated Job were probably various passersby (30:1, 9–12).

16:19, 21 The identity of Job's witness is disputed. One's understanding about Job's "Redeemer" in 19:25 will affect one's understanding of Job's witness (see 19:25). Some argue that Job was referring to God. However, the context of 9:33, where Job wished for an impartial mediator between God and himself (see 9:32, 33), and the immediate context of v. 21 suggest that Job was using a legal metaphor to express his wish for an advocate who would plead for him with God, as a man pleads for his neighbor on earth. This anticipates Jesus Christ, who is our Intercessor (Heb. 7:25) and Advocate (1 John 2:1).

17:3 In another legal metaphor, Job appeals to God to act as his advocate by laying down a pledge, that is, providing bail. The use of the same metaphor in Ps. 119:121, 122 to indicate the psalmist's request for relief from his "oppressors" may suggest that Job was pleading for God to demonstrate confidence in his innocence.

8 Upright men are astonished at this,

21 Surely such are the dwellings of the wicked,
And this is the place of him who ^pdoes not know God.”

17:12 This verse may be a caricature of the friends’ false assurances that if he would repent, his darkness would soon become light.
17:13, 14 Job counters the false assurances of his friends with a facetious statement about waiting for the grave as one who longingly desires to go home to his house and his long-lost relatives, corruption (or “the pit”) and the worm.
18:3 When Bildad asks why he and his friends are counted as beasts, he apparently resents the implication of Job’s words in 12:7–9.
18:4 The phrase you who tear yourself in anger seems to be Bildad’s answer to Job’s allegation that God had torn Job in His anger (16:13).
18:8–10 net . . . trap: Six different Hebrew synonyms for various types of nets and traps emphasize the many imminent dangers that God has designed for the wicked to ensure that they will be caught in their wickedness.
18:13, 14 Bildad cruelly attributes Job’s disease to the firstborn of death, a reference to the demon of plagues and disease (see 3:8). The king of terrors is probably death personified as a king. Others suggest that this may refer to Satan.

18:16–19 In describing roots as being dried or withered, Bildad contradicts Job’s previous argument about the tree that is cut down but sprouts up from its roots (see 14:7, 8). There seems to be no hope for Job’s family tree because God, who is about to wipe the memory of Job from the earth, has already removed his descendants or posterity. In ancient times this was a sign of a divine curse. Once again Bildad manifests great insensitivity toward Job over the loss of his children (see 8:4).
18:21 In this summation of the evidence, Bildad uses the word wicked, in Hebrew literally the “unjust one,” to suggest that he is refuting Job’s allegation that God has turned him over to the “ungodly.” Bildad believes that the evidence he has exhibited in vv. 5–20 implicates Job himself as the culprit, the wicked one.

Job Trusts in His Redeemer

19 Then Job answered and said:

- ² “How long will you torment my soul,
And break me in pieces with words?

19:2 How long will you torment: Job is tired of hearing Bildad's rude questions and the tormenting words of all his friends.

19:5–8 Job's friends have used the disgrace associated with his disease to plead the case that he is guilty of sin (10:17; 16:8; see 17:3). With the statement God has wronged me, Job responds to Bildad's implication in 8:3 that God does not subvert justice. He argues that Bildad's theory about God does not fit the facts. Instead he asserts that God has wrongly entrapped him as though he were a wild animal or criminal. In describing God as surrounding him with His net, Job continues the imagery of the divine hunter initiated by Bildad. Essentially, Job feels fenced in by God when it is really Satan who has been mistreating him (see 1:10; 3:23).

19:9, 10 Job compares his removal from the respected position of judge or city councilman (see 29:7–25) to being dethroned like a king whose crown is taken from his head. Job's hope, which had once sprouted up like a new tree from a stump (see 14:7–9), has been totally uprooted.

The Mystery of Human Suffering

Bildad's speech to Job can be summed up: “You got what you deserved.” Bildad and Job's two other friends Eliphaz and Zophar had concluded that Job's suffering was certainly evidence of some sin in his life.

Job's friends were not reciting falsehoods; much of what they said was theologically sound at least in the abstract. The Scriptures, especially Deuteronomy (see Deut. 27; 28), indicate that the righteous can expect God's blessing and the wicked can expect God's curse. Both Eliphaz (15:17–35) and Zophar (20:4–29) conceded that sometimes the wicked enjoyed temporary prosperity as Job had. However, they asserted, as the Book of Proverbs does (Prov. 1:17–19; 6:14, 15), that eventually the wicked would be punished. Conversely, Elihu declared that God would reward the righteous with prosperity and security (36:7–11). The Book of Psalms teaches the same doctrine, that whatever the righteous person does “shall prosper” (Ps. 1:3). With this type of reasoning, all of Job's friends came to the same conclusion: Job's suffering was a sign of sin in his life (4:7–11; 8:11–22).

So where did Job's counselors go wrong? Their mistake was that they misapplied an abstract truth. Yes, in the end God rewards the righteous and punishes the wicked. Moreover God Himself had declared to Moses that He would not leave the guilty unpunished (Ex. 34:7). But Job's friends did not have God's perspective on Job's situation. Like Jesus' disciples, they automatically assumed that when catastrophe struck, it was God's punishment on that person (see John 9:1–3). But Job's story and Jesus' response to His disciples (John 9:3) indicate that human suffering is not always the sign of God's judgment. In this fallen world, sometimes the innocent suffer. But even through their suffering, God accomplishes His good will. In Job's case, Satan's false accusation was refuted and God's sovereignty was proven. The suffering of the blind man made it possible for Jesus to demonstrate His healing power and to transform the man into a witness to Jesus' deity (John 9:3, 30–33). Often our suffering or the suffering of others blinds us to the reality that the sovereign God is working His own good purposes through a fallen world.

4 ^b Job 8:8; 15:10

23^a “Oh, that my words were written!
Oh, that they were inscribed in a 24 That they were engraved on a rock

With an iron pen and lead, forever!

25 For I know that my Redeemer lives,
And He shall stand at last on the 26 And after my skin is ⁶destroyed, this

I know,
That ⁱin my flesh I shall see God,
Whom I shall see for myself,
And my eyes shall behold, and not

How my ⁷heart yearns within me!

28 If you should say, ‘How shall we persecute him?’—
Since the root of the matter is found in me,

29 Be afraid of the sword for yourselves;
For wrath brings the punishment of

That you may know there is a

Zophar's Sermon on the Wicked Man

20 Then ^aZophar the Naamathite answered and said:

2 “Therefore my anxious thoughts make me answer,
Because of the turmoil within me.

3 I have heard the rebuke ¹that
reproaches me,
And the spirit of my understanding causes me to answer.

4 “Do you not know this of ^bold,

19:17 The mention of the children of Job's own body is problematic since the book seems to document the loss of all ten of his children (see 1:2, 18, 19). It is possible this is a rhetorical statement: “I would be repulsive even to my children” (compare v. 18).

19:20 The meaning of the phrase skin of my teeth is uncertain. It may imply that his body was so devastated by disease that his teeth had fallen out and only the skin or gums of his teeth were left intact.

19:21 That Job believed the hand of God has struck him is ironic, since in fact, God had refused Satan's request to “stretch out His hand” against Job (1:11; 2:5).

19:25, 26 Job expresses his confidence in his living Redeemer, which in this legal context may be translated “Vindicator” or “Protector of the Family Rights” (see Ps. 119:154; also Ruth 4:1 where the word is translated close relative). Some interpreters believe that Job was referring to God, a view supported by the context of 17:3 and possibly by the mention of God in v. 26. However, the context of the Book of Job—Job's longing for a mediator (9:33) and his desire for someone to plead on his behalf with God (16:19–21)—may suggest that he was thinking of someone other than God. Here is a strong, resolute hope for a mediator between God and humanity. Ultimately Job's longing for a vindicator or mediator was fulfilled in Jesus Christ (see 1 Tim. 2:5).

19:27 Again, the redundant, emphatic pronoun I in the Hebrew text (as in v. 25) indicates a strong belief and deep conviction. This is a wonderful example of a sufferer passionately expressing his resolute faith even in the middle of a horrible situation.

19:29 Job's warning to his friends to be afraid of the sword for yourselves may have been his rebuttal of Eliphaz's remarks about the wicked person watching in dread for the sword (15:22).

20:4, 5 Zophar confronts Job's confident statement in 19:25 with a sarcastic rebuke. Since Job supposedly knew so much about his Redeemer, surely he knew the wisdom teaching that the wicked prosper only for a short time.

(Heb. ra'ah) (19:27; Deut. 3:27; Eccl. 11:7; Is. 26:10; Lam 1:9) Strong's #7200

This is the common term used in reference to the natural function of the eyes and is thus most often translated as see (Gen. 48:10; Deut. 1:8; 2 Kin. 3:14; Mic. 7:9, 10). The word also has a number of metaphorical meanings, such as acceptance (Gen. 7:1; Num. 23:21) and provision (Gen. 22:8, 14; 1 Sam. 16:1). It can even convey the notion of assurance and salvation as is the case here. In 42:5 the word means “to see” in the sense of “to come to recognize” or “to experience fully” something previously known or understood. At times the word is associated with a prophetic message, as a prophet is described as seeing a vision from God (Is. 6:1; Jer. 1:11–13; Ezek. 1:1).

Job's Discourse on the Wicked

21 Then Job answered and said:

- 2 “Listen carefully to my speech,
And let this be your ¹consolation.
3 Bear with me that I may speak,
And after I have spoken, keep ^amocking.

20:7 The word refuse may also be translated “dung.” A scathing comment.

20:12-19 Though evil may be sweet to the wicked for a while, the certain consequences of their behavior will bring about their downfall.

20:20, 21 In stating that the wicked person knows no quietness, Zophar implies that Job has received what he deserves. Zophar’s statement that the well-being or “prosperity” of the wicked will not last fits Job’s circumstances: Job has lost everything. In essence, Zophar is confirming Job’s complaint in 7:7 that he will “never again see good.”

20:27 Zophar apparently reverses Job’s appeal to the earth and heavens (16:18, 19) for vindication. He argues that the heavens and the earth will bear witness not to Job’s innocence but to his iniquity.

20:29 In this summary verdict, Zophar suggests that it is too late for Job to repent (contrast his previous words in 11:13-20). God would have no clemency for such a wicked person.

21:2 your consolation: Job tells the three friends that if they will listen carefully, they will finally be of some consolation, or comfort, to him.

21:3 keep mocking: Perhaps Job turned directly to Zophar to rebuke the most offensive of his friends. Zophar had not only claimed that Job mocked (see 11:3 where Zophar used the same Hebrew word for mocking), but he mocked Job’s words (20:9).

- 4 “As for me, is my complaint against man?
And if it were, why should I not be impatient?”
- 5 Look at me and be astonished;
^bPut your hand over your mouth.
- 6 Even when I remember I am terrified,
And trembling takes hold of my flesh.
- 7 ^cWhy do the wicked live and become old,

For we do not desire the knowledge of Your ways.

And ⁱwhat profit do we have if we pray to Him?’
- 16 Indeed ⁵their prosperity is not in their hand;

21:7 Why do the wicked live: With a rhetorical question, Job begins exposing the loopholes in the retribution dogma—the belief that suffering always indicates God’s punishment of a person. The prosperity of the wicked is still a mystery for believers today. Other biblical writers agonized over it (see Ps. 37; 73; Jer. 12:1–4). But the Scriptures affirm that God is controlling everything to accomplish His good purposes (see Rom. 8:28).

21:9 Job reacts to Eliphaz’s argument in 15:21–24 that although the wicked live peacefully for a while, they live in terror of inevitable destruction. Job contradicts this by saying that the wicked even live in their houses safe—without fear. The wicked simply deny God’s existence, so they live without any fear of His judgment.

21:17 The rhetorical questions introduced by how often expect the answer “not very often.” With the first question about the lamp of the wicked, Job challenges Bildad’s belief that the wicked person’s light does go out (see 18:5, 6). The second question opposes Zophar’s dogmatic statement in 20:23 that God will judge the wicked before they find enjoyment in life.

21:19–21 Job denies the dogma that even if a wicked person prospers temporarily, his children will be punished. Job’s position is sustained by other passages in the Bible (see Deut. 24:16; Ezek. 18:1–28; John 9:1–3).

21:30 Job may be quoting his friends’ position that the wicked are doomed. However, the Hebrew words translated reserved for could also be rendered “spared from,” which would indicate Job’s own contrary belief. This latter view is supported by the Hebrew word translated brought out. This word reappears in v. 32 in the context of a wicked person being brought to the cemetery without being repaid for what he has done (see v. 31).

Eliphaz Accuses Job of Wickedness

22 Then ^aEliphaz the Temanite answered and said:

- 2 "Can ^ba man be profitable to God,
 Though he who is wise may be profitable to himself?
 3 Is it any pleasure to the Almighty that you are righteous?
 Or is it gain to Him that you make your ways blameless?
 4 "Is it because of your fear of Him that He corrects you,
 And enters into judgment with you?
 5 Is not your wickedness great,
 And your iniquity without end?
 6 For you have ^ctaken pledges from your brother for no reason,
 And stripped the naked of their clothing.

 22 Receive, please, ^linstruction from His mouth,
 And ^mlay up His words in your heart.
 23 If you return to the Almighty, you will be built up;
 You will remove iniquity far from your tents.

21:33 shall be sweet: Job uses the same Hebrew word Zophar employed (in 20:12) in arguing that evil is sweet to the wicked person but will become bitter in his stomach (20:14). Job contradicts this by saying that things are sweet for the wicked even in the grave.

22:2 The implication of Eliphaz's rhetorical question—that a human being cannot put God under any obligation that God must repay—is a valid theological principle that the Lord Himself corroborates in 41:11. However, his application of that principle to Job's circumstances (vv. 3–5) was invalid, for it was based on the faulty assumption that the righteous are always blessed and the wicked always experience God's judgment on earth.

22:3, 4 The same Hebrew root words for blameless and fear had earlier been used by Eliphaz in his courteous remarks about Job's "reverence" and "integrity" (4:6). In these verses, Eliphaz is being sarcastic. 22:6–9 naked . . . weary . . . widows: Eliphaz lists some trumped up charges concerning the way Job gained his great wealth: greedy exploitation of the poor in business dealings; lack of hospitality or charity; and lack of compassion to the bereaved. Job categorically denied these charges (see 29:11–17; 31:13–22), and God's own witness to Satan reveals to the reader that the charges were false (1:8).

22:13, 14 Can He judge: Eliphaz misrepresents Job's position. Although he accuses Job of not understanding God, it is Eliphaz who has the greater misunderstanding.

22:15–17 Eliphaz twists Job's words recorded in 21:14–16 to support his own view that Job was walking in wicked ways. Because of this, Job's prosperity was only temporary.

22:18 The phrase but the counsel of the wicked is far from me (quoting Job in 21:16) may be an example of innuendo, mocking Job for what he was saying and also expressing Eliphaz's own sentiments.

22:21 The Hebrew word translated acquaint yourself, or sometimes "yield," is derived from the same root as "be profitable" in v. 2. This might be a play on words: "Although you cannot be profitable to God through your efforts, you can acquaint yourself with or yield to Him."

22:23 Eliphaz issues another call for repentance (5:8–17) by asking Job to return to the Almighty. Then he suggests that Job remove iniquity far from his tents, a reiteration of Zophar's words (see 11:14).

22:24, 25 Eliphaz implies that Job has been trusting in his riches rather than in God, something Job would deny in 31:24, 25. Then he urges Job to trust in the Almighty God as he does in gold.

22:30 Eliphaz’s prediction that God would deliver one who is not innocent through the purity of Job’s hands would be fulfilled ironically through Job’s prayer for the three friends (42:8–10).

23:10, 11 Job’s use of the metaphor about gold to express his assurance of being found pure from guilt may be a rebuttal to Eliphaz’s brazen words of 22:24, 25. When Job asserts that he has kept God’s way, he rejects Eliphaz’s accusation that he has kept the way of the wicked (see 22:15).

23:13–16 When Job contemplates the unique power and sovereign freedom of God, he is terrified. To him, God seems to be a capricious despot who does as He pleases (see 9:12, 34).

23:17 This verse likely describes Job’s deep depression, not only because of his losses, but also because of his failure to understand God’s purpose.

24:1 Since times are not hidden from the Almighty might also be translated, “Why are not times stored up by the Almighty?” The parallelism of the second line may indicate that the word times alludes to the set days for God’s judgment.

24:2 Removing landmarks in the ancient Middle East was tantamount to stealing land. It was a serious crime that placed a person under a divine curse (see Deut. 27:17).

5 Indeed, like wild donkeys in the desert,
They go out to their work, searching for food.

The wilderness yields food for them and for their children.

6 They gather their fodder in the field
And glean in the vineyard of the wicked.

7 They *f*spend the night naked,
without clothing,
And have no covering in the cold.

8 They are wet with the showers of the mountains,
And *g*huddle around the rock for 9 “Some snatch the fatherless from the

And take a pledge from the poor.

10 They cause the poor to go naked,

11 They press out oil within their walls,
And tread winepresses, yet suffer thirst.

12 The dying groan in the city,

Yet God does not charge them with 13“ There are those who rebel against

^d [Job 14:4]

24:9 It is ironic that Job complains about God allowing people to snatch an infant from its mother's breast. Previously he had complained that God had not taken him from his mother's breasts after his own birth (see 3:12).

24:12 In this transition between lists of social crimes and criminal acts, Job protests against God ignoring those who cry out for help, since God was supposedly ignoring his own cries for help.

24:16 Thieves would break, literally “dig,” into houses by night. The walls of houses were built of mud bricks through which thieves could dig. Marked for themselves may mean “shut themselves up” by day.

24:18–25 These verses about the ultimate fate of the wicked are problematic. They sound more like the friends' words than Job's (see 15:1–21:34). Therefore, critics usually assign them to Zophar, who has no speech in the third cycle of dialogues, or to Bildad, whose last speech is very short (25:1–6). However, they should be considered as Job's words, for he was probably quoting his friends' viewpoint in order to refute them.

25:2 In referring to God's dominion and fear, Bildad seems to be responding to Job's comments (in 23:13–17) that the very thought of God's sovereignty made him afraid.

25:4 Bildad repeats the previous rhetorical questions posed by Job

⁵ If even the moon does not shine,

26 But Job answered and said:

Job Maintains His Integrity

27 Moreover Job continued his discourse, and said:

² "As God lives, a who has taken away
my justice,
And the Almighty, who has made my soul bitter,

(see 9:2) and Eliphaz (see 4:17; 15:14) to emphasize that a person cannot be righteous or pure before the Lord.

25:5, 6 Bildad's view of God's dominion and majesty in the heavens causes him to devalue mortal man as a maggot. He responds insensitively to Job by suggesting that Job does not need to wait until he dies to be grouped with the maggots (the same Hebrew word that Job used in 17:14). This was caustic sarcasm, for Job was in fact covered with worms (see 7:5).

26:2-4 How have: Rather than presenting genuine questions, these verses are probably sarcastic exclamations by Job to imply how little Bildad has helped him. To paraphrase Job: "You've really been a big help to me! How encouraging that you tell me I'm nothing but a worm (see 25:6)! Finally my cries for help have been answered."

Sheol

(Heb. she'ol) (11:8; 26:6; 2 Sam. 22:6; Ps. 16:10; Is. 5:14; Jon. 2:2) Strong's #7585

The Hebrew word translated Sheol possibly derives from the verb meaning "to inquire" or "to question," and could be associated with the prevalent ancient practice of necromancy, the attempt to communicate with the dead through a medium. Necromancy was condemned by God (see Lev. 20:27; 1 Chr. 10:13). Sheol was a common name for the grave (7:9; 14:13; Ps. 30:3) or hell (Ps. 139:8; Is. 14:9; Hab. 2:5). The Israelites understood Sheol to be the invisible domain for deceased souls of both the righteous and unrighteous—all awaiting the final resurrection on the last day. The OT makes no distinction between the state of the righteous and unrighteous dead in Sheol, whereas Jesus' parable of the rich man and Lazarus implies separate realms for the two (Luke 16:19-31).

26:5, 6 The words of these verses echo the thoughts of God's omnipotence found in the Psalms (see Ps. 139:7-12). While Sheol and Destruction—that is, death or the place of the dead—were fearful, hidden concepts to Job and his contemporaries, they caused no fear and held no secrets for the all-knowing God.

26:7 the north over empty space: The Hebrew word translated north probably does not refer to a geographical designation (see Ps. 48:1, 2, where the same Hebrew term describes God's mountain), but to God's dwelling place in the heavens (see v. 9, which mentions God's throne). If the statement that God hangs the earth on nothing (see Gen. 1:2) refers to the suspension of earth in space, it preceded Newton's concept of gravitational attraction by thousands of years. Job probably thought, as did other ancients, that the earth was a circular disk (see v. 10) supported by nothing. In other words, he thought of the earth as floating on the vast subterranean waters.

26:10, 11 Job's graphic description of the circular horizon and the pillars of heaven—probably the mountains that held up the heavens in ancient cosmology—pictures the way the earth appears to the human eye.

26:12, 13 With His power God controls the sea, which was a symbol of evil and chaos. The highly figurative language may express the power of God over creation in a wide variety of ways. Here the sea and storm are merely creatures under the control of the Creator.

26:14 This is one of the most stunning of all the verses in the Bible that describe the power of God. Job asserts that if we truly considered God's great power, we would know that what we observe of creation represents the mere edges of His garment—just His whisper. What would happen to us if ever He were to thunder?

27:1 Moreover Job continued his discourse: The different editorial formula for introducing the speaker (as in 29:1) suggests something unusual. Perhaps Job had paused briefly to wait for Zophar before he continued speaking.

27:2 As God lives: These words reflect part of an oath formula used in ancient courts. Job paradoxically combines these words with two accusations against God. According to Job, the living God is the very one who has denied him justice—his legal right to due process. Job swears in the name of the divine Judge who, as his opponent, has perverted justice in His own favor. He alleges that God has made him bitter. Job's responses only exposed the attitude that lay deep within his being. The message of the Lord for Job was that no matter what the circumstances, one should resolutely trust in God (see 40:8; 42:1–6).

27:4, 5 Job denies that he would use the tactics of his so-called friends (see 13:7). He not only refuses to speak wickedness, he will not lie nor attempt to defend himself. you: This Hebrew plural (also in vv. 11, 12) refers to all of Job's three friends. Job maintains that they are erroneous in their reasoning, and to agree with them would be to compromise his integrity.

27:5, 6 Job's determination to hold fast his righteousness and integrity was remarkable. The Hebrew word translated hold fast also occurs in 2:9. Though Job believed that God had taken away a fair trial (v. 2), he would not put away his integrity. He persevered despite the discouraging words of his wife and friends.

27:7–12 In this imprecatory prayer, Job wishes that his enemy would receive the fate reserved for the wicked. Since he turns the words of his friends back against them, he may be alluding to his friends collectively as an enemy who rises up against him and deserves the fate of the wicked.

27:10, 11 Job returns Eliphaz's own advice back to him (in 22:22–27). Whereas Eliphaz counseled Job to turn to the Almighty for instruction and to delight in Him, Job denies that a godless person would turn to God, much less delight himself in the Almighty. Therefore, Job insists that Eliphaz and his friends should turn to the Almighty and receive instruction.

27:13–23 Since these verses sound more like the friends' words than Job's, some scholars assign them to Zophar or Bildad. However, since Job had a fondness for turning the words of his friends back in their faces, these verses may be a satirical paraphrase of the friends' teaching about the fate of the wicked (see 24:18–25). 27:17 Job's prediction that the innocent will divide the silver may foreshadow what happens to Job himself in 42:11.

28:1–28 This is a magnificent wisdom hymn that is naturally divided into three stanzas by the refrain of vv. 12, 20, with v. 28 serving as a conclusion. Only God knows true wisdom, the wisdom He has placed in the fabric of creation (vv. 21–27) and has revealed to humanity (v. 28).

28:2–4 The mention of iron being mined from the earth implies a time after the beginning of the Iron Age (around 1200 B.C.) for the writing of the Book of Job.

Glass

Because it was so rare, glass was a form of wealth. Before craftsmen developed the art of glass blowing, they molded the glass around an inner core while the glass was in a sticky, plastic form. When the glass cooled and hardened, they took away the core and the glass object was ready for use. Archaeologists have discovered a glass factory that operated at El-Amarna in Egypt about 1400 B.C.; it produced small glass bottles that were exported to Palestine. The Egyptians also sent these bottles to Haran, Cyprus, and the Aegean Islands. The Egyptians were good at making glass pots, bottles, and other vessels, and coloring them to look like the original containers. The Phoenicians began making blown glass about 100 B.C. They could produce blown glass much more rapidly than molded glass, so this lowered the cost of glass objects and made them more common. Romans used these glass vessels nearly as much as pottery.

28:6 The term translated sapphires probably means lapis lazuli.
28:7, 8 The bird, the falcon, and the lions represent all animals of every kind. No animal is familiar with the treasures hidden in the earth that human beings can discover (see vv. 2–11).
28:11 The streams from trickling may be rephrased "the sources of the rivers."
28:12 The word wisdom (see also v. 20) may emphasize the true wisdom that only the Lord knows (see vv. 23–27) and that people may learn in relationship with Him (see v. 28).
28:13–19 Every verse in this whole stanza has the Hebrew word for not at least once, stressing the absence of wisdom and even the desire for wisdom. Thus the rhetorical questions concerning the whereabouts of wisdom and understanding (v. 12) receive an emphatic answer: not anywhere in the land of the living or of the dead (see v. 14 and its parallel in vv. 21, 22).

28:23 Only God understands the way of wisdom and knows the place of understanding. Though people surpass the animals in knowing the place of precious metals (v. 1), and the "source" of gems (v. 6), God alone is the master and source of wisdom (see vv. 27, 28).

28:28 This verse vindicates Job's stance and marks a transition from the dialogue to the discourses. The words He said may introduce a reference to the Book of Proverbs (see Prov. 3:7; 9:10).

29:2 Job's wish for the prosperity of months past suggests how long it was since his suffering began (see 7:3).

29:3 The picture of God's lamp shining on Job's head symbolizes divine blessing and success (contrast 18:5, 6; 21:17; see also Ps. 18:28, 29).

29:7 The gate of the city with its nearby open square, similar to the modern courthouse square, was a place where town business and court proceedings were held (see Ruth 4:1).

29:8-11 saw me and hid: Job describes the respect he had received from young and old alike because of his position in the city.

29:14 The vivid portrait of Job being clothed in righteousness and wearing justice like a judicial robe is a stark contrast to his present condition, with his flesh being "clothed" with worms and dust (see 7:5). He will emphasize this in ch. 30.

29:17 broke the fangs: Job had rescued the poor (see v. 12) and the helpless from the wicked. Functioning much like a judge, Job had established justice and righteousness (see v. 14). This explains his frequent use of legal metaphors in his speeches (see 9:3).

29:20 Job reminisces about his past days of glory. While undergoing severe trials, he did what many of us do: He longed for "the good old days" when he still had prowess or "glory" with the bow. The phrase bow is renewed apparently symbolizes a rejuvenation of vigor and might (see Gen. 49:24). Bows were usually unstrung when not in use, allowing the wood to retain its strength.

25 I chose the way for them, and sat as chief;
So I dwelt as a king in the army,
As one who comforts mourners.

30 “But now they mock at me, men
1 younger than I,
Whose fathers I disdained to put
with the dogs of my flock.
2 Indeed, what profit is the strength of their hands to me?
Their vigor has perished.
3 They are gaunt from want and famine,
Fleeing late to the wilderness,
desolate and waste,
4 Who pluck 2 mallow by the bushes,
And broom tree roots for their food.
5 They were driven out from among men,
They shouted at them as at a thief.
6 They had to live in the clefts of the 3 valleys,
In 4 caves of the earth and the rocks.
7 Among the bushes they brayed,
Under the nettles they nestled.
8 They were sons of fools,
Yes, sons of vile men;
They were scourged from the land.
9 “And a now I am their taunting song;
Yes, I am their byword.
10 They abhor me, they keep far from me;
They do not hesitate b to spit in my face.
11 Because c He has loosed 5 my bowstring and afflicted me,
They have cast off restraint
before me.

13 They break up my path,

14 They come as broad breakers;

15 Terrors are turned upon me;

21 But You have become cruel to me;
With the strength of Your hand You h oppose me.
22 You lift me up to the wind and cause me to ride on it;
You spoil my success.

30:1 But now introduces Job’s lament (ch. 30) about the complete reversal of his former prosperity (ch. 29). Rather than everyone respecting him (see 29:8–11, 21–25), even young ruffians were daring to mock him (see 29:24). These young people were so base that Job had disdained to put their fathers, who were presumably better than they, with his dogs. His words not only stress how low they are but also how humiliated he feels as an outcast among outcasts (see vv. 9–11).

30:7 brayed: Job’s use of this verb emphasizes not only that the ruffians are poor (see 24:5, where the poor are called “wild donkeys”), but also that they act more like animals than human beings.

30:11 When Job says God loosed his bowstring, he apparently expresses a meaning opposite to that in 29:20. Here the words mean that God had put him “on the shelf,” as a bow is set aside when it is unstrung.

30:16, 17 When Job says that his soul is poured out like water, he means being emotionally and physically drained of strength (see Lam. 2:11, 12) because of his days of affliction (see vv. 1–31). These words are much like those of David, as found in Ps. 22:14, 15.

30:18, 19 Job compares the terrible effects of his suffering and disease (see vv. 16, 17) to being choked by a powerful force. Then he identifies God as the One who abuses His great power by harming Job for no apparent reason (see 9:19; 24:22). To the suffering Job, God seems like a gangster who grabs a person by the neck and flings him into the mire. He blames the Lord for throwing him in the ashes (see 2:8), even though Satan was in fact the cause of his suffering (see 2:4–6).

30:21 Ironically, Job blames God’s strong hand, which Satan could not move, for calamities that have actually been caused by the hand of Satan (see 1:11, 12, 18, 19).

affliction

(Heb. ’oni) (30:16; Gen. 29:32; Ex. 3:17; Neh. 9:9; Lam. 1:9) Strong’s #6040

The Hebrew word translated affliction here comes from a root meaning “misery” or “poverty.” The image evoked by this word is that of a person bowed down under the weight of a heavy burden. Scripture portrays the Lord as seeing the afflictions that bring pain to His people and hearing the anguished cries of those in distress (as in Gen. 16:11; Ex. 2:23–25). The Lord urges us to place our burdens on Him, for He is strong enough to bear them and loves us so much that He will assist us in our time of need (1 Pet. 5:7). Moreover, since He controls all events, we can be assured that He is accomplishing good out of the temporary difficulties we are now facing (Rom. 8:28). The entire story of Job provides vivid example of this fact (42:10–17; 2 Cor. 12:7–10).

30:23 I know: Job declares his frustration with God almost as directly as he had expressed his confidence in the Redeemer (19:25). Just as surely as he knows that God will vindicate him, he also knows that God will bring him to death.

30:25 Job builds on the image of the helpless (v. 24) by remembering his own compassion for the poor. Now that he is downcast, why does God not sympathize with him?

30:28, 29 In light of the nearby reference to Job’s dark, diseased skin (see v. 30), the word mourning might mean “darkened,” as in 6:16. When Job cries out for help, both God (see v. 20) and people of all social classes ignore him. His loud cries for justice are as futile as the wails of jackals and ostriches. Because of his diseased condition (see v. 30), Job feels ostracized, like these animal inhabitants of desolate places.

31:1–40 Job’s oath of innocence (see 29:1—31:40) contains curses that he invites God to impose if He is to find Job guilty (see vv. 8, 10, 22, 40). Thus ch. 31 corresponds structurally to Job’s curse against his day of birth in ch. 3. It bears a general similarity to the oath of clearance, widely used in ancient Mesopotamia. In this oath, an accused person would swear his innocence at a trial. However, the ethical content of Job’s confession, with its emphasis on inward motivation (see vv. 1, 2, 24, 25, 33, 34) and attitude (see vv. 1, 7, 9, 26, 27, 29, 30), is unique and unparalleled until Jesus’ Sermon on the Mount (see Matt. 5–7). Yet in this oath, a hint of pride creeps in (see vv. 13, 16, 37), setting the stage for the speeches of Elihu and the Lord.

31:1 This verse begins Job’s oath of innocence (ch. 31). When Job made a covenant with his eyes, he wisely recognized that the eye is the main avenue for temptation (see vv. 7, 9, 26, 27).

31:5 The word if was part of a formula used by accused persons to swear their innocence (see vv. 7, 9, 13, 16, 19–21, 24–26, 29, 33, 38, 39). The full oath formula was, in effect, “If I am guilty of this crime, may God impose that curse.” Because of hesitation about speaking a curse, the person swearing the oath would normally use an abbreviated version. By contrast, Job’s daring use of the full formula four times (see vv. 7–10, 21, 22, 38–40) demonstrates his confidence that he would be acquitted.

31:13 Job implies that he had been fairer in listening to the lawsuit or cause (see Mic. 6:1) of his own servants than God was being with his complaint.

31:16 Job claims to have satisfied the desire of the poor, possibly in contrast to God’s refusal to give Job a fair hearing before Him.

Elihu Contradicts Job's Friends

32 So these three men ceased answering Job, because he was ^arighteous in his own eyes. ²Then the wrath of Elihu, the son of Barachel the ^bBuzite, of 31:22 The loss of an arm in ancient society usually meant the loss of income, respect, and even life itself.

31:27 The phrase my mouth has kissed my hand reflects the apparent ancient custom of kissing the hand as a prelude to the superstitious and idolatrous act of throwing a kiss to the heavenly bodies.

31:28 God who is above: Job was resolute in his belief in the one, living God. Though he lived in a world filled with notions of many gods, Job believed in one God. This text expresses the monotheism of early biblical faith, in contrast to the prevailing polytheism of that time.

31:35 Job's wish for one to hear him seems to express his continued desire for an impartial mediator or judge (see 9:32, 33; 16:19; 19:25). Job's mark refers to his written signature attached to his oath of innocence (ch. 31). He seeks a subpoena to compel God the Prosecutor to answer him with specific charges, or perhaps an acquittal in a book, that is, a legal document. Hence, Job is arguing that God has not been following proper court procedure (13:22).

31:36 Job believed that the written charges would be so few, if any, that he could wear the document proudly on his shoulder.

31:37 Job would declare to God the number of his steps or give account for his every act and thought (see 14:16; 31:4). His idea of approaching God like a prince shows his confidence that he will be vindicated but reflects a lack of humility, an attitude that the Lord Himself will address (see 38:2, 3; 40:9-14).

31:40 the words of Job are ended: For the second time, the dialogue comes to a close (see 27:23), ending in a stalemate. Job has finished his words, and his three friends have nothing more to say. This leads to the voice of a new speaker, Elihu.

32:1 The phrase these three men seems to stress the distant relationship between Job and his so-called friends. A gulf existed partly because the trio had been accusing Job of self-righteousness.

32:2 Elihu was of the tribe of Buz and of the family of Ram, perhaps an ancestor of King David (see Ruth 4:19). His name means "He Is My God." Elihu was angry about what both Job and his friends the family of Ram, was aroused against Job; his wrath was aroused because he ^cjustified himself rather than God. ³ Also against his three friends his wrath was aroused, because they had found no answer, and yet had condemned Job.

⁴ Now because they were years older than he, Elihu had waited ¹ to speak to Job. ⁵ When Elihu saw that there was no answer in the mouth of these three men, his wrath was aroused.

⁶ So Elihu, the son of Barachel the Buzite, answered and said:

“I am ^d young in years, and you are very old;

Therefore I was afraid,
And dared not declare my opinion to you.

⁷ I said, ² ‘Age should speak,

And listen to all my words.

² Now, I open my mouth;
My tongue speaks in my mouth.

³ My words come from my upright heart;
My lips utter pure knowledge.

⁴ ^a The Spirit of God has made me,
And the breath of the Almighty gives me life.

⁵ If you can answer me,
Set your words in order before me;
Take your stand.

⁶ ^b Truly I am ¹ as your spokesman before God;
I also have been formed out of clay.
⁷ ^c Surely no fear of me will terrify you,
Nor will my hand be heavy on you.

⁸ “Surely you have spoken ² in my hearing,
And I have heard the sound of your words, saying,

⁹ ‘I am pure, without transgression;
I am innocent, and there is no iniquity in me.

¹⁰ Yet He finds occasions against me,
^e He counts me as His enemy;

had been saying. Like the other friends, Elihu thought that Job had only justified himself.

32:4, 5 The editorial introduction (vv. 1–5) emphasizes the wrath of the young man against Job (v. 2) and against his three friends (vv. 3, 5). The word wrath is found four times in these verses.

32:6–22 I am young: Elihu introduces himself and his four speeches as he explains why he has waited to speak but feels compelled to speak out at the present time.

32:21, 22 As a reassurance to Job concerning his complaint that the friends are partial to God (see 13:7–10), Elihu promises not to show partiality in his voluntary role as an arbiter (see vv. 12–14).

33:7 Elihu responds to Job’s fear of God (see 9:34; 13:21). Elihu reassures Job that he has nothing to dread since his hand will not be heavy on him.

33:9–13 In vv. 9–11, Elihu summarizes Job’s position as he perceives it. Then he confronts Job by saying that Job is not righteous in attacking God. With great perception, Elihu cuts straight to the heart of Job’s problem. Job has been treating God as though he were God’s equal. Since God is greater than man, Elihu asks: Why do you contend or “file a lawsuit” against God? Job had been treating God as though He were merely a human who could be held accountable in court (see 34:23). Elihu continues this thought when he implies that Job has become proud—even while he sits dejected in the ashes (see v. 17; 35:12–16).

- ¹¹ *f*He puts my feet in the stocks,
He watches all my paths.’
- ¹²“Look, in this you are not righteous.
I will answer you,
For God is greater than man.
- ¹³ Why do you *g*contend with Him?
For He does not give an accounting of any of His words.
- ¹⁴ *h*For God may speak in one way, or in another,
Yet man does not perceive it.
- ¹⁵ *i*In a dream, in a vision of the night,
When deep sleep falls upon men,
While slumbering on their beds,
- ¹⁶ *j*Then He opens the ears of men,
And seals their instruction.
- ¹⁷ In order to turn man from his deed,
And conceal pride from man,
- ¹⁸ He keeps back his soul from the Pit,
And his life from ³perishing by the sword.
- ¹⁹“Man is also chastened with pain on his ^kbed,
And with strong pain in many of his bones,
- ²⁰ *l*So that his life abhors ^mbread,
And his soul ⁴succulent food.
- ²¹ His flesh wastes away from sight,
And his bones stick out which once were not seen.
- ²² Yes, his soul draws near the Pit,
And his life to the executioners.
- ²³“If there is a messenger for him,
A mediator, one among a thousand,
To show man His uprightness,
- ²⁴ Then He is gracious to him, and says,
‘Deliver him from going down to the Pit;
I have found ⁵a ransom’;
- ²⁵ His flesh shall be young like a child’s,
He shall return to the days of his youth.
- ²⁶ He shall pray to God, and He will delight in him,
He shall see His face with joy,
For He restores to man His righteousness.

Elihu Proclaims God's Justice

34 Elihu further answered and said:

- ² “Hear my words, you wise men;
Give ear to me, you who have knowledge.
- ³ a For the ear tests words
As the palate tastes food.
- ⁴ Let us choose justice for ourselves;
Let us know among ourselves what is good.
- ⁵ “For Job has said, b‘I am righteous,
But ^cGod has taken away my justice;
- ⁶ d Should I lie concerning my right?
My ¹wound is incurable, though I am without transgression.’
- ⁷ What man is like Job,
^e Who drinks ²scorn like water,
- ⁸ Who goes in company with the workers of iniquity,
And walks with wicked men?
- ⁹ For *f*he has said, ‘It profits a man
nothing
That he should delight in God.’
- ¹⁰“Therefore listen to me, you ³men of understanding;
^g Far be it from God to do wickedness,
And from the Almighty to commit
iniquity.

33:14, 15 In response to 7:14 where Job complained of nightmares, Elihu suggests that God may have been trying to teach Job something through a dream or a vision of the night.

33:23 The precise identity of the messenger or angel is disputed. God may have employed this figure as a mediator to address Job's need for an impartial arbiter (9:32, 33; 16:19) and to contradict Elihu's counsel of 5:1. The intermediary role of this messenger to lead Job to repentance (see v. 27) sounds much like the role that Christ would play (see Heb. 7:25).

33:29, 30 This conclusion to vv. 14–30 succinctly states God's primary purpose in getting a person's attention through dreams and suffering: He wants to keep him from the Pit—that is, the grave and hell—and give that person the light of life—a meaningful life.

34:2 In vv. 2–15 Elihu addresses you wise men, probably a sarcastic reference to the three friends whose wisdom he had belittled in 32:12–16.

- 11 ^h For He repays man according to his work,
And makes man to find a reward
according to his way.
- 12 Surely God will never do wickedly,
Nor will the Almighty ⁱ pervert justice.
- 13 Who gave Him charge over the earth?
Or who appointed Him over the whole world?
- 14 If He should set His heart on it,
If He should ^j gather to Himself His Spirit and His breath,
- 15 ^k All flesh would perish together,
And man would return to dust.
- 16 “If you have understanding, hear this;
Listen to the sound of my words:
- 17 ^l Should one who hates justice govern?
Will you ^m condemn Him who is most just?
- 18 ⁿ Is it fitting to say to a king, ‘You are worthless,’
And to nobles, ‘You are wicked’?
- 19 Yet He ^o is not partial to princes, Nor does He regard the rich more than the poor;
For ^p they are all the work of His hands.
- 20 In a moment they die, ^q in the middle of the night;
The people are shaken and pass away;
The mighty are taken away without a hand.
- 21 “For ^r His eyes are on the ways of man,
And He sees all his steps.
- 22 ^s There is no darkness nor shadow of death
Where the workers of iniquity may hide themselves.
- 23 For He need not further consider a man,
That he should go before God in judgment.
- 24 ^t He breaks in pieces mighty men without inquiry,
And sets others in their place.
- 25 Therefore He knows their works;
He overthrows them in the night,
And they are crushed.

CHAPTER 35

3 ^a Job 21:15; 34:9

- 26 He strikes them as wicked men
In the open sight of others,
- 27 Because they ^u turned back from Him,
And ^v would not consider any of His ways,
- 28 So that they ^w caused the cry of the poor to come to Him;
For He ^x hears the cry of the afflicted.
- 29 When He gives quietness, who then can make trouble?
And when He hides His face, who then can see Him,
Whether it is against a nation or a man alone?—
- 30 That the hypocrite should not reign,
Lest the people be ensnared.
- 31 “For has anyone said to God,
‘I have borne chastening;
I will offend no more;
- 32 Teach me what I do not see;
If I have done iniquity, I will do no more’?
- 33 Should He repay it according to your terms,
Just because you disavow it?
You must choose, and not I;
Therefore speak what you know.
- 34 “Men of understanding say to me,
Wise men who listen to me:
- 35 ‘Job ^y speaks without knowledge,
His words are without wisdom.’
- 36 Oh, that Job were tried to the utmost,
Because his answers are like those of wicked men!
- 37 For he adds ^z rebellion to his sin;
He claps his hands among us,
And multiplies his words against God.”

Elihu Condemns Self-Righteousness

35 Moreover Elihu answered and said:

- 2 “Do you think this is right?
Do you say,
‘My righteousness is more than God’s’?
3 For ^a you say,
‘What advantage will it be to You?
What profit shall I have, more than if I had sinned?’

34:11, 12 Surely God: Perhaps in response to Job’s charges in 9:22–24, Elihu defends God’s impartiality according to the traditional retribution dogma: God will justly punish the wicked. Elihu defends God’s justice by siding with Bildad (see 8:3) against Job (see 19:6).
34:16 Elihu addresses Job directly in vv. 16–33, as indicated by the singular Hebrew verb translated hear.
34:17 The two rhetorical questions in this verse seem to rephrase Job’s complaints of 9:14–31 and 24:1–17 in order to refute them.
Will you condemn Him who is most just: The second question anticipates the Lord’s own rebuke of Job in 40:8.

34:28 Elihu responds to Job’s complaints about God ignoring the plight of the poor and afflicted (see 24:1–12) by asserting that God does hear the cry of the poor and the cry of the afflicted.
34:34–37 Elihu’s conclusion mixes sound analysis with an unfair representation of Job’s position. His statement that Job’s words are without knowledge anticipates the Lord’s own words (see 38:2).
35:3 By reading between the lines of Job’s many complaints, Elihu exaggerates Job’s position: “What benefit do I receive for being good?” Though Job had never made a bargain to serve God for mutual benefit, as in the religions of his day, Job’s actions and words

4 “I will answer you,
And ^byour companions with you.
5 ^cLook to the heavens and see;
And behold the clouds—
They are higher than you.
6 If you sin, what do you accomplish
^dagainst Him?
Or, if your transgressions are multiplied, what do you do to Him?
7 ^eIf you are righteous, what do you give Him?
Or what does He receive from your hand?
8 Your wickedness affects a man such as you,
And your righteousness a son of man.
9 “Because ^fof the multitude of oppressions they cry out;
They cry out for help because of the arm of the mighty.
10 But no one says, ^g“Where is God my Maker,
^hWho gives songs in the night,
11 Who ⁱteaches us more than the beasts of the earth,
And makes us wiser than the birds of heaven?”
12 ^jThere they cry out, but He does not answer,
Because of the pride of evil men.

talk,
Nor will the Almighty regard it.
14 ^lAlthough you say you do not see Him,
Yet justice is before Him, and ^myou must wait for Him.
15 And now, because He has not

He multiplies words without

36 Elihu also proceeded and said:

(Heb. mishpat) (35:2; Ps. 1:5; 9:4; Prov. 12:5; Jer. 26:11) Strong's #4941

The Hebrew term translated here as right represents an important idea in the understanding of the judicial side of government, whether by humans or by God. The central idea of most uses of the term in the Bible is “justice” (Ps. 72:1, 2). The word can be used to designate the act (see “judgment” in Josh. 20:6), the place (see “the Hall of Judgment” in 1 Kin. 7:7), or the process (see “judgment” in Is. 3:14) of a case of litigation, as well as the sentence (see “deserves” in Jer. 26:11) or the time of judgment (see “judgment” in Ps. 1:5). In the present passage, Elihu was asking whether Job had the legal right to question God's righteousness. Elihu correctly perceived that Job was implying that his ethical standards were higher than God's (see 29:12–17; 31:13, 16).

may have seemed to reflect that pagan attitude (see Job's own paraphrase of the sentiments of the wicked in 21:15). 35:4–8 God was not under any obligation to Job for any work or deed (see 41:11). Therefore, it was logically inconsistent for Job to demand that God must appear in court (see 31:35).

35:12, 13 One reason God does not answer when people cry out is that they are full of pride and devoid of pure motives (see James 4:3). Elihu implies that Job's prayers have not been heard because of his pride (see also 33:17). This accurate perception prepares the way for the speeches of God (see chs. 38; 39).

36:5, 6 Elihu states his thesis: God is both mighty and just in His dealings with humankind (see 36:1—37:24). Elihu challenges Job's assertion that the wicked are not punished by God (21:7) and his subsequent arguments (see 21:27–33). Then Elihu counters Job's complaints of 24:1–17.

- 13^a But the hypocrites in heart ⁱstore up wrath;
They do not cry for help when He binds them.
- 14^j They ⁶die in youth,
And their life ends among the ⁷perverted persons.
- 15 He delivers the poor in their affliction,
And opens their ears in oppression.
- 16^a Indeed He would have brought you out of dire distress, ^kInto a broad place where there is no restraint;
And ^lwhat is set on your table would be full of ^mrichness.
- 17 But you are filled with the judgment due the ⁿwicked;
Judgment and justice take hold of you.
- 18 Because there is wrath, beware lest He take you away with one blow;
For ^oa large ransom would not help you avoid it.
- 19^p Will your riches,
Or all the mighty forces,
Keep you from distress?
- 20 Do not desire the night,
When people are cut off in their place.
- 21 Take heed, ^qdo not turn to iniquity,
For ^ryou have chosen this rather than affliction.
- 22^a Behold, God is exalted by His power;

36:13, 14 Affliction will also reveal the hypocrites who, because their hearts are incorrigibly wicked, do not cry to God for help. The warning is clear: Do not reject God’s message by failing to cry out to Him for help (see Rom. 1:18–32).

36:16–25 Take heed: Elihu says that God intended to teach Job something through his affliction. Rather than trying to correct the Teacher, Job should remember to magnify God’s work as Maker of all things. Thus Elihu is setting the stage for the Lord, who will emphasize this concept in His speeches (see 38:1–42:6).

36:32 God the sovereign warrior commands the thunderstorm as He dispenses lightning from His hands like arrows (see 16:12, 13). The Book of Job makes clear that God alone controls the unpredictable changes of the weather (see 38:22–30, 34–38).

37:2 The plural Hebrew verb hear attentively indicates that Elihu appeals to Job and his friends and perhaps to any bystanders listening.

37:4 The voice of God roars. The Hebrew word for roars seems to compare thunder to God growling like a lion, the majestic king of beasts.

37:6, 7 He says: As God once spoke and brought forth light, land, and all manner of life (see Gen. 1:3, 9, 14, 20, 24, 26), so now He speaks and controls all that He has made (see Ps. 147:15–18). God uses the winter storms to stop the hand of every man so that he cannot work but instead may recognize the work of God.

37:9 Elihu continues to praise the all-powerful God with a series of metaphors. He describes God as keeping the wind in a chamber just as He does the snow and hail (see 38:22, 23).

37:10 In a poetic figure of speech, Elihu speaks of the breath of

The LORD Reveals His Omnipotence to Job

38 Then the LORD answered Job ^aout of the whirlwind, and said:

- 2 “Who ^bis this who darkens counsel
By ^cwords without knowledge?
- 3 ^dNow ¹prepare yourself like a man;
I will question you, and you shall answer Me.
- 4 “Where ^ewere you when I laid the foundations of the earth?
Tell Me, if you have understanding.
- 5 Who determined its measurements?
Surely you know!
Or who stretched the ²line upon it?
- 6 To what were its foundations fastened?
Or who laid its cornerstone,
- 7 When the morning stars sang together,
And all ^fthe sons of God shouted for joy?

God causing ice to form and waters to freeze. All of this is spoken with joyful delight, for Elihu is celebrating God’s control of the world.

37:12 The nautical term guidance, literally “steerings” or “rope-pullings” (see the usage of this word in Prov. 1:5), portrays God as the wise Captain who skillfully charts the course for the clouds, which respond obediently to His hand at the helm.

37:13 God causes the storm to come for three specific reasons: (1) for punishment for people’s wickedness, (2) for the nourishment of the earth (see context of vv. 3, 6, 12), and (3) for supplying the needs of His people. For correction presents the idea of judgment by His rod or scepter. for mercy: The faithfulness and loyalty of God to His covenant promises are often tied to this word. This is the word that may be translated “loyal love.” Thus God uses storms both to judge the earth and to bring the blessing of rain for His people (Ex. 15:7–10; Deut. 28:12).

37:18 Strong as a cast metal mirror: Ancient mirrors were firm and unbreakable because they were made of polished bronze.

37:21, 22 If people cannot look at the bright light of the sun in the skies, how much more difficult is it to approach God (see v. 20), who appears in His own golden splendor and awesome majesty? See the experience of Moses described in Ex. 34. the north: In ancient times, north was viewed as the direction of God’s abiding place (see Is. 14:13).

37:23, 24 Elihu’s concluding words offer praise to the living God who is at once elusive—we cannot find Him—and merciful—He does not oppress. Judgment means “justice.” Justice means “righteousness.” fear: Finally Elihu speaks of the reverential awe and worshipful wonder that all people should have for their omnipotent Creator.

38:1 out of the whirlwind: Though Job feared that God would crush him in a tempest (see 9:17), God does not come to destroy Job; rather God overwhelms Job into submission in order to restore him to his proper role as the Lord’s servant.

38:2, 3 The theme of the first speech of the Lord is given here: Job darkens the counsel of the Lord—that is, God’s plan or design for the universe. Ironically, God challenges Job to teach Him (v. 3; 40:7). These challenges are designed to alert Job to the consequences of his complaints and demands. Job’s defiant attempt to meet God on equal footing in a law court (see 31:35–37) amounts to a rival claim to His throne (see 40:10–14).

38:4–7 Perhaps partially in reply to Job’s words about the Lord shaking the pillars of the earth (9:5, 6), the Lord asks Job if he was an eyewitness when He laid the earth’s foundations.

38:7 The joyful response of the morning stars, personified as singing, and the sons of God (see 1:6) as eyewitnesses to the earth’s creation contrast with Job’s complaints that were spoken in ignorance.

38:8–11 The Lord emphasizes His control of the sea and its proud waves. These forces, which ancient society considered to be chaotic and threatening, were allowed to exist only within divinely set limits (v. 10). Though Job knew this in theory (see 26:12, 13), he needed to apply this truth to his life.

38:12–15 The Lord answers Job’s complaints that wickedness is rampant at night (24:13–17). Using personification, the Lord describes how He alone commands the morning to get out of bed and the dawn to pull off the covers of the night in order to shake out the wicked like bedbugs. God implies that only because of His control of the darkness are the activities of the wicked curbed at all. The Lord grants some freedom to humanity, but the wicked cannot go beyond His set limits. This section may be compared with the more familiar words of David in Ps. 19.

38:16, 17 Has Job ever been to the bottom of the sea, or taken a trip through the gates of death? Perhaps in response to Job’s desire for a respite in the darkness of Sheol (10:18–22), the Lord wants to know if he has ever been there.

38:19–21 Since Job had spoken intelligently about the distant horizons (see 26:10), the Lord exposes Job’s limited knowledge by asking him to lead a guided tour to the abode of light and darkness. Since Job had stated that the wicked “do not know the light” or “abide in its paths” (see 24:13, 16), the Lord reveals the deficiencies of Job’s secondhand knowledge. Had Job been there in person, he would have understood that the Lord has a place for both darkness and dawn, as well as for good and evil.

38:22–30 By asking if Job understands the seemingly unpredictable weather phenomena, the Lord reveals that His designs are not centered on humanity alone. Though God utilizes meteorological elements to intervene in human affairs (vv. 22–24), He also uses them to limit the chaotic wilderness and sea (vv. 25–30) that lie outside the human realm.

38:22, 23 The graphic metaphor of the treasury for snow and hail portrays these elements as weapons in the arsenal of God. He uses hail as slingstones (see Josh. 10:11). He prepares other weapons, including snow (see Ps. 68:14), thunderstorms, lightning (see v. 24), and winds (see 37:9).

38:29 frost of heaven: Since frost is water vapor from the atmosphere that has condensed on cold surfaces, the word heaven may refer here to the atmospheric heavens.

14 For she leaves her eggs on the ground,

15 She forgets that a foot may crush them,
Or that a wild beast may break them.

38:32 The Great Bear with its cubs is a reference to the constellation known as Ursa Major.

38:34–38 In asking whose command the clouds obey, the Lord implies Job’s impotence and ignorance of these matters, as well as His own sovereignty and omniscience. voice: The Lord alone controls the storms and lightning (see 36:32). The obedience even of lightning to God’s command serves as another subtle rebuke to Job’s complaints.

38:39–39:30 The Lord interrogates Job concerning the animal kingdom to demonstrate Job’s impotence to govern it and his ignorance of God’s providential plan (see 38:1–40:5). The wild animals listed were either favorite game animals of kings or used by royalty. Before Job could validate his claims to be able to run the universe better than the Lord, he would need to prove that he could control these hostile forces.

38:41 If the Lord provides for the young raven who cries out for help, how much more will He hear and provide for people when they genuinely cry out for help?

39:1–4 God, who provides the prey for the predators (see 38:39–41), also takes care of that prey, which includes the mountain goats and deer. By taking care of them in their most vulnerable moment of giving birth, the Lord provides for order and balance in nature.

39:4 The Hebrew word translated with grain may also be rendered “in the open field.”

39:5–7 The wild donkey, the symbol of the exploited poor in 24:5, finds satisfaction where God has placed him on earth free from the shouts of the driver or “slave driver.” This contrasts with Job’s complaints about the voice of the oppressor (3:18). True freedom is found in being content where God has placed us (see Phil. 4:10–12).

39:13–18 Job had identified himself closely with the ostrich (see 30:29). Therefore, the Lord ironically agrees that there are similarities. Both are deficient in knowledge (see v. 17; 38:2). But although the ludicrous-looking ostrich is no doubt laughed at (as was Job; see 30:1) and experiences misfortunes (see vv. 14–16), the ostrich is not concerned about the situation. This contrasts with Job, who has been full of worry (see 3:25; 15:24).

Job's Response to God

³Then Job answered the LORD and said:

- 4 "Behold, ^dI am vile;
What shall I answer You?
^eI lay my hand over my mouth.
5 Once I have spoken, but I will not answer;
Yes, twice, but I will proceed no further."

God's Challenge to Job

⁶Then the LORD answered Job out of the whirlwind, and said:

- 7 "Now ^g¹prepare yourself like a man;
^hI will question you, and you shall answer Me:
- 8 "Would ⁱyou indeed ²annul My judgment?
Would you condemn Me that you may be justified?
- 9 Have you an arm like God?
Or can you thunder with ^ja voice like His?

39:26–30 God asks Job if he designed the majestic birds—the hawk and the eagle—by his aerodynamic genius. eagle: The context of v. 30, where the young birds feast on the blood of the slain, suggests that a vulture is in view. However, the traditional translation eagle conveys the royal and majestic qualities associated with the vulture in the ancient Middle East (vv. 26–30), in contrast to the revulsion its name brings to many modern readers.

39:30 The implication is that God allows the young vultures to feed on the blood of slain people to help prevent the spread of disease. This is an answer to Job's complaint about God's failure to stop the exploitation of the helpless (24:1–17) and His ignoring of the pleas of the dying. The Lord demonstrates to Job again that He limits evil.

40:1, 2 Moreover the LORD answered: The Lord reinforces His initial thematic challenge (see 38:2, 3) with a dynamic question loaded with legal terminology. The word contend means "to bring a lawsuit" (see 9:3). God reverses Job's accusation that God has brought a lawsuit against him (see 10:2 for the same Hebrew word). It really has been Job accusing God, not the other way around. The Lord reprimands Job for his error. Who is Job to judge God? The Lord might be implying that Job has been trying to be his own "mediator" or "redeemer" (see 40:14).

40:4 vile: The context of vv. 4, 5 suggests that the Hebrew word for vile means "insignificant" or "unworthy." Job's placing his hand over his mouth is probably a gesture of respect (see 29:9) as God's subordinate.

40:6, 7 prepare yourself: But God has not finished speaking. The words of v. 7 are repeated from 38:3; but the stakes are even higher now.

40:8 The Lord confronts Job with critical errors in his speeches. Job has dared to annul God's judgment or justice. The context of Elihu's speeches, where Elihu used this same word concerning the Lord's kingship over the universe (see 34:17; 37:23), suggests that Job has maligned God's justice by claiming that God rules without establishing moral or social order in the universe (see 24:1–17). Because Job had assumed the inflexible retribution dogma, which views suffering in this world as God's punishment for sin, Job had to condemn God in order to maintain his own innocence.

40:9–14 The absurdity of Job's defiant criticism of the way the Lord runs the universe (see 29:2–17 for Job's claim to be fair in his judicial duties) is forcefully brought to his attention by God's ironic invitation to become "king for a day" over the whole universe. If Job had the power, let him don the royal regalia of God's majestic attributes and humble the proud and wicked forces in the world. Job had criticized God for not doing this well enough (21:30, 31; 24:1–17).

- 10 ^k Then adorn yourself with majesty and splendor,
And array yourself with glory and beauty.
- 11 Disperse the rage of your wrath;
Look on everyone who is proud, and humble him.
- 12 Look on everyone who is ^l proud, and bring him low;
Tread down the wicked in their place.
- 13 Hide them in the dust together,
Bind their faces in hidden darkness.
- 14 Then I will also confess to you
That your own right hand can save you.
- 15 “Look now at the ³ behemoth, which I made along with you;

- 2 Can you ^b put a reed through his nose,
Or pierce his jaw with a ² hook?
- 3 Will he make many supplications to you?
Will he speak softly to you?
- 4 Will he make a covenant with you?
Will you take him as a servant forever?
- 5 Will you play with him as with a bird,
Or will you leash him for your maidens?
- 6 Will your companions ³ make a banquet of him?
Will they apportion him among the merchants?

Or his head with fishing spears?

Never do it again!
- 9 Indeed, any hope of overcoming him is false;
Shall one not be overwhelmed at the sight of him?
- 10 No one is so fierce that he would dare stir him up.
Who then is able to stand against Me?

40:15–24 The identity of the behemoth, meaning the “great beast,” is disputed. Suggestions include the elephant, some sort of dinosaur, or a purely mythical monster. The hippopotamus, which had overtones of cosmic evil, seems to fit the biblical and cultural evidence best. Job could not approach, much less subdue, this massive beast; how could he force his way to the Almighty with his case (see 40:15—41:34)? As the description of the beast continues, the elaborate language goes beyond any physical hippopotamus and presents the beast as a symbol of chaos. The same pattern is seen in the development of the Leviathan in the next section (see ch. 41).

40:24 The clause though he takes it in his eyes is one possible translation of the Hebrew. However, it might also be construed as a question: “Can one take him by his eyes?” The phrase in his eyes may refer to the difficulty of capturing the hippopotamus when it is submerged, with only its eyes above the water. Also, because of the thick hide of the hippopotamus most weapons are ineffective unless they are shot through its eyes.

41:1 The identity of Leviathan, basically a transliteration of the Hebrew word for “sea monster” or “sea serpent,” is disputed. The traditional view is that it is the crocodile. As in the case of the behemoth (40:15–24), the description of Leviathan begins as a grand, poetic description of a well-known, formidable beast. But by the time the description is complete (see vv. 18–21), Leviathan has become a fire-breathing dragon, a powerful symbol of chaos, evil, and destruction. Ultimately, Leviathan’s image is a portrait of chaos at the beginning of God’s creation and of Satan at the consummation of the ages (see Ps. 74:2–17; Is. 27:1; 51:9). Only God can control and destroy Leviathan; Job can only shrink back in humble fear.

41:2 The reed indicates the material that was twisted or spun into a cord or rope, perhaps to “string” the Leviathan like a fish. However, the clause pierce his jaw with a hook may suggest the picture of Leviathan as a prisoner of war with a hook or ring in his jaw or nose (see 2 Chr. 33:11). This view is supported by the context of v. 4. This imagery is also used in Ezek. 29:3, 4, which describes the Lord capturing Pharaoh like a crocodile and putting hooks in his jaw.

41:4 The Lord continues to confront Job with a series of rhetorical questions. Can Job make Leviathan an eternal servant or vassal? The Lord’s mention of the covenant implies that perhaps Job could offer it a peace treaty, like a great king subduing a lesser king in battle (see v. 34).

41:10 When the Lord says no one would be so foolish as to stir Leviathan up, he is replying to Job’s desire that this monster be roused (see 3:8). In effect, the Lord questions Job: “What would you do, Job, if he were provoked?” (see vv. 8, 9).

Two Hebrew words refer to this plant—gome and agmon. Scholars generally believed this plant was the papyrus. It grew abundantly in northern Egypt along the banks of the upper Nile. Although it still grows there today, overuse has made it scarce. It also grows in northern Galilee at the mouth of the Jordan. Papyrus is a shallow-rooted plant that grows in mire (8:11). It reaches about ten feet high on an unbranched stem, which is two to three inches in diameter at the base. A large tufted head at the top of the stem droops when the plant is mature. The Egyptians used this plant for making boats and fishing rope. They used its sap for sugars, medicine, and fuel. The pithy substance inside the stem was eaten. More important for us today is the fact that the Egyptians first manufactured paper from this plant.

41:11 Who has preceded Me could also be rendered “who has confronted Me?” that I should pay: The Hebrew verb means “to pay a debt” or “to make restitution for something lost or stolen.” The Lord confronts Job for implying that God owed him something for being righteous (see 34:5–8) or that God had to make restitution for the property and posterity He had allegedly stolen from Job (see 10:3). Thus the Lord plainly refutes Job’s misconception that God is obligated to reward a person who is obedient. The idea that God does not have to reward us for what we consider good works is an essential part of the biblical doctrine of salvation by grace apart from our works (see Eph. 2:8–10).

41:12–34 mighty power: The Lord reinforces the argument of

vv. 1–11 by describing the invincibility and terrifying splendor of Leviathan’s bodily features.

41:19–21 Using poetic exaggeration (see v. 18), the Lord gradually transforms the physical Leviathan to the mythological dragon (see 7:12), which breathes fire and smoke (vv. 19–21). Even though the Leviathan (probably the crocodile; see 41:1–34) was God’s creature, it terrified the Egyptians so much that they worshiped it as a god.

41:34 The phrase he beholds every high thing could also be translated “he looks down on everything haughty.” King Leviathan, who is over all who have pride, gazes with a look of superiority at the haughty. Therefore Job, whose pride had been exposed, could ⁹So Eliphaz the Temanite and Bildad the Shuhite and Zophar the Naamathite went and did as the LORD commanded them; for the LORD had ³accepted Job. ^{10j}And the LORD ⁴restored Job's losses when he prayed for his friends. never succeed in subduing the mighty Leviathan or validating his claim to be able to rule the world better than God.

42:6 The phrase I abhor myself means “to reject” or “to recant.” Job repents of his words and accusations that were based on the false belief that God always rewards the righteous in this life. Instead of accusing God of injustice, Job submits to the will of the sovereign Lord of the universe.

42:7, 8 In contrast to his friends, Job had spoken of God what is right. Unlike the friends, Job had recanted his false belief, repented of his pride (v. 6), and affirmed God's unconditional sovereignty over his life (v. 2). Job had been right in maintaining his innocence in the face of his friends' false accusations.

42:10 Since Israelite law required a thief to restore double for stealing “an ox or donkey or sheep” (Ex. 22:4), it was ironic that the LORD gave Job twice the amount of livestock he had before (see v. 12). Clearly, the Lord was not admitting that He owed Job anything (see 41:11), but He was expressing His benevolent mercy.

42:12-17 Job's restored prosperity should not be seen as compensation for his piety (see 41:11). After Job had given up his demand for his former prosperity, the Lord could give it to him as a free gift. This conclusion shows that the Book of Job does not totally reject the principle of divine retribution but only its false application. It concurs with the Book of Proverbs that the fear of the Lord normally leads to an abundant and long life. But we cannot presume that God will always operate in this manner, as Job's friends had done.

THE BOOK OF PSALMS

AS ONE OF THE GREATEST collections of songs, prayers, and poetry, the Book of Psalms expresses the deepest passions of humanity. In these pages we can hear the psalmist's desperate cry in the midst of despair, but also his ecstatic praise of his Provider and Comforter. We can hear him pouring out his soul in confession, but also bubbling over with joy. The psalms lead us through the valleys and peaks of human experience, but in the end they guide us to the praise of our loving Creator.

Authors The superscription, the introductory words found before the first verse in most psalms, many times attributes the following psalm to King David, the “sweet psalmist of Israel” (2 Sam. 23:1). These superscriptions were probably not part of the psalms when they were originally composed but were added by editors to aid in the interpretation of the poems. Nevertheless, there is no reason to discount them. The historical books of the Bible speak of David's considerable accomplishments as a musician, singer, and composer of poems (1 Sam. 16:19–23; 18:10; 2 Sam. 1:17–27; 23:1–7; 1 Chr. 29:10–15). Moreover, one of David's psalms is recorded in 2 Samuel 22 and reappears with only slight variation as Psalm 18. Parts of the medley that David presented to Asaph in 1 Chronicles 16:8–36 are taken from Psalm 105:1–15, Psalm 96, and Psalm 106:1, 47, 48. Thus the connection between King David and the Psalms is well documented.

Of course, David is not the only composer of the Psalms. Others include contemporaries of David whom he placed in charge of worship in Jerusalem: Ethan, Heman, and Asaph. Solomon followed in his father David's footsteps by writing psalms as well as proverbs. Some of the earliest psalms were written by Moses, five centuries before the time of David. One priestly family, the sons of Korah, continued to write psalms for centuries. Women, such as Deborah (see Judg. 5) and Hannah (see 1 Sam. 2), wrote psalms as well. However, the composers of many of the psalms remain anonymous. Some of these anonymous psalms may be attributed to David, but certainly not all of them. Psalms were still being written during the time of Ezra. It was in Ezra's time that the Book of Psalms as we know it was compiled.

Structure Like the Pentateuch, the five books of Moses, the Book of Psalms is arranged in five sections: Book I (Ps. 1–41), Book II (Ps. 42–72), Book III (Ps. 73–89), Book IV (Ps. 90–106), and Book V (Ps. 107–150). Each book concludes with a doxology, an affirmation of praise to God found in the last verse or two of the concluding psalm. In the case of Book V, the entire last poem, Psalm 150, is the concluding doxology. The reason for this arrangement of the Book of Psalms is not clear. Most likely it had something to do with the use of the Psalms in the praise of God in temple worship. Books I and II are composed primarily of Davidic psalms; Book III includes the psalms of Asaph (Ps. 73–83) and the psalms of the sons of Korah (Ps. 84–88). Books IV and V include anonymous psalms, along with a few by David and others.

Categories of the Psalms Many of the psalms can be identified as certain types by their theme.

The royal psalms emphasize God as King, often using the words “the LORD reigns.” These psalms speak of His rule as Creator, as Savior of Israel, and as the Coming One. The royal psalms often point forward to the coming rule of the Savior King, the Lord Jesus.

The psalms of Zion focus on Jerusalem, using its endearing name Zion. These psalms rhapsodize on the city as God's choice for the site of His holy temple, the place for true worship of His name.

The penitential psalms are poems in which the poet confesses sin to the Lord, asks for and receives forgiveness, and then praises God for the renewed relationship that God's forgiveness provides.

The wisdom psalms focus on some of the same issues that are found in the Book of Proverbs. These psalms present sharp contrasts between the righteous and the wicked, address God's blessing and cursing, and often focus on righteous living.

One subcategory of the wisdom psalms is the Torah psalms. These are poems that focus on the beauty, truth, and sufficiency of the Law of God. Two other subcategories of the wisdom psalms are the creation psalms and the history psalms. In the creation psalms, the poet calls for the believer to praise God as the Creator of the universe and the Savior of His people. In the history psalms, the poet recounts the history of Israel and asks for a renewed commitment to God—even in the face of a history of rebellion.

Some of the most troubling psalms are those that contain prayers asking God to curse the wicked. These imprecatory psalms are sometimes thought to conflict with the sentiment of the gospel, but in fact they accurately reflect God's abhorrence of evil.

In contrast to the imprecatory psalms are the joyful and prophetic Passover psalms that became a part of the Passover celebration in Judaism. These psalms are a remarkable celebration of the great acts of the Lord in delivering His people from Egypt, the theme of the Passover celebration. They point forward to the deliverance that would come through the Savior Jesus.

A final group of psalms is clustered at the end of the book. These are the Hallel psalms, named for the principal Hebrew word for praise, hallel. As their name suggests, these psalms praise God for His character and saving works.

Characteristics In order to fully appreciate the Psalms, a certain number of their characteristics should be kept in mind.

First, the psalms were written for singing. These were songs for public worship in the temple of ancient Israel. They are not merely poems, but lyrics for music from the ancient world. As such they contain musical conventions peculiar to music and worship during that time.

Second, the poems in the Psalms were written over a period of a thousand years, from the time of Moses in the fifteenth century B.C. to the time of Ezra in the fifth century B.C. Although David is the main author associated with the composition of the Psalms, many other authors from various time periods contributed psalms to what would become the Book of Psalms.

Third, the psalms were collected and arranged over a long period of time. This process involved some editorial additions to the poems, some cutting and expanding, and some rearranging and restructuring of various psalms. The Holy Spirit who had inspired these poems in the beginning oversaw this process of restructuring them for temple worship.

Fourth, the psalms were written in the language of the human spirit, the utterances of the soul. The psalms are not cool, reasoned prose, but deeply emotional works that use wrenching language, dramatic exaggeration, and figurative speech.

Fifth, psalms and the writing of psalms were part of ordinary life for the Israelites. The Scriptures record a number of times when the Israelites spontaneously responded to the Lord with a psalm of praise. Moses sang a psalm in praise of God (Ex. 15); Deborah and Hannah did the same (Judg. 5; 1 Sam. 2); and David blessed the Lord with a psalm (1 Chr. 29). Through a psalm the Israelites would express their devotion and thanks to their Lord. This tradition continued into the New Testament period, for Mary in Luke 1 responded to the angel's message with a psalm. This Israelite tradition of psalm writing was confirmed by the discovery of a number of original psalms among the Dead Sea Scrolls discovered in 1947.

Sixth, individual psalms were written for different purposes. Some began as works of private devotion, while others were designed from the beginning to be used in public worship. Ultimately, all the psalms became the treasure of all the people in temple worship, for no matter what subject they addressed, they always led the people to the worship of the living God.

Finally, it must be remembered that the psalms were written in the language of response. Each psalm records in powerful, poetic language one individual's response to God. From a desperate cry to an ecstatic shout of joy, each psalmist responds to God in the middle of a particular situation. Even though the psalms became a part of the community's worship life, they remained a vehicle for individual expression as well. Even today, the psalms are used both in public worship and in the devotional moments of individual Christians.

CHRIST IN THE SCRIPTURES

Finding Jesus in the Book of Job is a bit more of a challenge than finding references to Him in the Psalms. The Psalms are replete with allusions to Him! The coming King is a frequently repeated theme of these ancient Hebrew worship songs. Many specifically anticipate the life and ministry of Jesus Christ, the One who came centuries later as the promised Messiah. One kind of messianic psalm called the enthronement psalm anticipates the day when Yahweh (Jehovah) will consummate His kingdom in the person of the Messiah. The psalmists may not have understood what they were writing, but they wrote with both eyes focused on eternity (see Ps. 96–99).

Psalm 1, a wisdom psalm, presents a vivid contrast between the way of the righteous (vv. 1–3) and the way of the wicked (vv. 4–6). No author is named nor is any circumstance given for the writing of this poem. It was probably written late in Israel's history. With its focus on the distinctions of character and the different destinies of the righteous and the wicked, this psalm serves as an introduction to the entire Book of Psalms. It affirms that there is one way to true life; to ignore this way is to foolishly accept death (see Prov. 1:20–33).

1:1 The Hebrew word for man in this context means “person,” without reference to gender. Who walks not: The parallelism in this verse speaks of an increasingly deeper involvement with wickedness: “walking beside,” “standing with,” “sitting beside.” Similarly, the terms for the wicked are progressive: ungodly, sinners, and the scornful. The imagery of this verse presents an ideal righteous person—one who is in the world, but quite unaffected by the world.

1:2 But his delight: Instead of finding enjoyment in entanglements with wicked persons, the godly person finds his or her deep enjoyment in the things of God, particularly the Word of God. The law of the LORD refers specifically to the Pentateuch, the first five books of the OT. The Hebrew word for law expresses the idea of God pointing out the path for life in fellowship with Him (19:7–11). Meditates means “to mumble” or “to speak to oneself” (4:4). Biblical meditation is focusing the mind on Scripture.

1:3 like a tree: This simile presents an image of a desert date palm that has been firmly planted in a well-watered oasis (Jer. 17:8). Everything about the tree is valuable and productive. Likewise, the righteous are valuable and productive to God—people in whom He finds pleasure (33:15; 147:11). Shall prosper is not a guarantee of the future financial worth of the righteous; rather, the righteous person is always useful and productive to the Lord.

1:4, 5 Like chaff, the refuse that is blown away by the wind after the grain harvest, the ungodly have no stability (35:5; 83:13). When the judgment comes, the ungodly will no longer stand (5:5). This is similar to the picture of final judgment in the Olivet Discourse of Jesus (Matt. 25:31–46).

1:6 The Bible speaks of two ways (Prov. 2:8; 4:19), only one of which leads to God. This is a consistent biblical theme, culminating in the celebrated words of Jesus, “I am the way” (John 14:6). The verb knows in this context refers not just to God's awareness, but to an intimate, personal knowledge (101:4). God is intimately involved with the way of the righteous, but has no connection with the way of the ungodly, except in judgment (146:9).

Psalm 2, a royal psalm, focuses on the coming glorious reign of the Lord's Messiah. The author is anonymous in the Hebrew text, but the NT apostles assign it to David (Acts 4:24–26). This psalm should be read in conjunction with Ps. 110. Both psalms point prophetically to the coming rule of Jesus (see Acts 13:33; Heb. 1:5; 6:5; Rev. 2:26, 27; 12:5). Psalm 2 has four movements, each related to a different voice or speaker: (1) a description of the plans of the wicked (vv. 1–3); (2) the Father's derisive laughter from heaven (vv. 4–6); (3) the Son's declaration of the Father's decree (vv. 7–9); (4) the Spirit's instruction to all kings to obey the Son (vv. 10–12).

2:1 Why do the nations rage: This passage has multiple meanings. Originally it referred to the nations that confronted David and his legitimate successors. But the Davidic kings were mere shadows of the coming great King, the Savior Jesus. Consequently, the verse also refers to any attack on Jesus and His divine kingdom. This assault by the nations occurred in its most dramatic form at the cross, but resistance to God's kingdom has continued. Throughout history, nations have resisted the claims of the gospel, the foundation of Jesus' kingdom.

2:2 LORD refers to the Father. His Anointed (18:50; 132:10) refers to the Son. The word conveys a sense of royalty, for kings were anointed (see 1 Sam. 10:1; 16:13). The kings of the earth would attempt to withstand the very King of the universe.

2:4, 5 hold them in derision: God laughs scornfully at an attack nations

(Heb. goy) (2:1; 10:16; Judg. 2:21) Strong's #1471

The Hebrew word goy basically means a body or group of people and is usually translated nation. Although goy can be used to designate the people of Israel, especially before their settlement in Canaan (Josh. 4:1; 5:6), the term generally refers to neighboring pagan nations (Deut. 4:38; Judg. 2:21, 22). These nations, characterized by wickedness (Deut. 9:4, 5), were considered enemies of God (2:1; 10:16). Yet the nations were not without hope, for the OT also speaks of the grace of God extending to all people through the coming of the promised Messiah (Is. 2:2; 11:10; 42:6).

on His Son (37:13). The idea of “fighting off” the will of God is truly preposterous. He who sits in the heavens: God is King of the universe (Ps. 93). What are the puny kings of the earth compared to Him?

2:6 My King: David and his legitimate heirs were given a divine promise that they would rule the Israelites under the Lord’s blessing. Any attack on the king of Israel was an assault on God’s promise. Zion is another name for Jerusalem. My holy hill: The site of Zion was “holy,” for it was declared to be so by God. It was the place where Abraham bound his son Isaac (Gen. 22), where the holy temple was built (2 Chr. 3), and where the Savior Jesus would die (Matt. 27).

2:7 You are My Son: Each time a legitimate son of David was crowned king as the successor to his father in the city of Jerusalem, these words could be used of him. The new king was adopted by God as his “son”; he would look to God as his “Father” (see 2 Sam. 7:5, 14). This formula of adoption was announced in a solemn ceremony of coronation attended by priests and prophets, with pomp and celebratory worship of God. In the NT, the Son of God is also declared to be the King, the true Anointed, the Christ (see Matt. 3:17; Mark 1:1, 11; Luke 3:22; John 1:18; Acts 13:33; Heb. 1:5; 5:5).

2:9 rod of iron: The future rule of the royal Son would be absolute. There would be no rebellion.

The Poetry of the Psalms

A fuller appreciation of the eloquence of the Psalms can be gained by understanding the basics of Hebrew poetry. The lack of a predictable rhythm and rhyme has confused some people about the poetic nature of the Psalms. Although Hebrew poetry contains some rhythm, it primarily makes use of repetition and recapitulation. One line of a verse is followed by another that gives a variation of the same idea. Not only do the psalmists use this poetic technique, but the authors of proverbs use it as well (see the Introduction to Proverbs). The second line of a proverb usually reinforces the meaning of the first line (see Prov. 22:1). This reinforcement of the thought is not mere tautology, but the graceful artistry of a poet. The first line makes a statement that the second line sharpens or heightens.

A psalmist could modify this general pattern in a number of ways. First, the psalmist could use synonymous parallelism to make the two elements similar. For example:

But his delight is in the law of the LORD,
And in His law he meditates day and night. (1:2)

Second, the psalmist could contrast the two elements. This type of parallelism, called antithetical parallelism, usually contains the word “but.” For example:

For the LORD knows the way of the righteous,
But the way of the ungodly shall perish. (1:6)

Third, the psalmist could develop the theme of the first line in the second line. This is called synthetic parallelism. For example:

Blessed is the man
Who walks not in the counsel of the ungodly,
Nor stands in the path of sinners,
Nor sits in the seat of the scornful. (1:1)

A fourth improvement on general parallelism is climactic parallelism. In this type of parallelism, the first member of a couplet is incomplete and the second member partially repeats the first member and then completes the thought. For example:

Give to the LORD, O families of the peoples,
Give to the LORD glory and strength. (96:7)

Finally, the psalmist could use emblematic parallelism. In this type, the first line contains a figure of speech and the following lines explain the figure by expansion or explanation. In the following example, the parallel lines of this verse explain the meaning of the expression “like a tree.”

He shall be like a tree
Planted by the rivers of water,
That brings forth its fruit in its season,
Whose leaf also shall not wither;
And whatever he does shall prosper. (1:3)

With poetic parallelism, the Hebrew psalmist powerfully expresses his praise of the Lord. By reading the psalms aloud and emphasizing the parallel elements, one can gain some sense of the harmonious poetic language from which the translation is derived.

You shall dash them to pieces like a potter's vessel.'"

¹⁰ Now therefore, be wise, O kings;

The Safety of the Faithful

To the ¹Chief Musician. With stringed instruments. A Psalm of David.

Hear me when I call, O God of my righteousness!

You have relieved me in my distress;

² Have mercy on me, and hear my prayer.

2:10, 11 be wise: Potentially rebellious kings would avoid terrible judgment only by submitting to the Anointed of God. rejoice with trembling: Only with the proper fear, adoration, reverence, and awe of the Most Holy God could there be genuine joy in the coming kingdom.

2:12 Kiss the Son: In this passage, the kings and all peoples were presented with a clear choice. They could either love and respect the Lord's Anointed and so experience His great blessing, or they could refuse to submit, and incur God's wrath.

Psalm 3 is a lament psalm ascribed to David. The superscription indicates a precise setting: the period of David's flight from his son Absalom (2 Sam. 15). This is one of the few psalm titles that ties a psalm to a specific incident in the life of David. The brief poem has four movements: (1) David's opening lament (vv. 1, 2); (2) his strong confession of trust (vv. 3, 4); (3) his determined act of faith (vv. 5, 6); (4) his continuing plea (vv. 7, 8).

3:1, 2 Many: At this point in David's life there was one specific foe who troubled him greatly—his son Absalom. However, David's friends had also become his foes because they were advising him that no one would help him, not even God. Selah: This is a musical term, perhaps indicating a pause in the lyrics for a musical interlude.

3:3, 4 The phrase but You, O LORD changes the mood of the psalm from dejection to confidence. David says three things of the Lord: (1) When no one would help David, God was his shield. (2) When David had nothing to treasure, God was his glory. (3) When no one would encourage him, God Himself would encourage him and lift his head. Holy hill is a poetic reference to God's dwelling in heaven; the place of Israel's worship was but a physical symbol of this dwelling.

3:5, 6 I lay down and slept: Given the stress that David faced, it is remarkable that he was able to enjoy a night's rest. This was possible only because of God's sustaining power. God's gift of rest may be given even in the most troubling times. I will not be afraid: When God is one's protector, there is no need to fear (23:4; 27:3; 118:6).

3:7, 8 In the language of the lament psalms, David calls out for God to arise, to move on his behalf, to incline to his prayer (40:1). on the cheekbone: In the poetic imagery David uses, his enemies are like powerful beasts whose strength is in their jaws and whose terror is in their teeth. God's strike at the source of their strength means that they are no longer a threat. Salvation, in this instance, refers to deliverance from the immediate pressure that the psalm has already described. One meaning of the Hebrew word translated salvation is "room to breathe." Your people: As is the pattern in Psalms, the experience of the individual becomes the template for the community. Psalm 4 is linked to Ps. 3 in mood and concept. Both speak of the possibility of finding such peace in God's presence that even when torn by physical and emotional pain, a person may still have restful sleep (3:5; 4:8). This is a lament psalm of the individual, but one in which there is an unusual degree of confidence. Psalm 4 is the first of the psalms to have a superscription that focuses on its musical nature. To the Chief Musician is a notice that indicates that this psalm is from an early collection of psalms used in temple worship. With stringed instruments specifies the musical setting for the psalm. A Psalm of David serves not only as a notice of authorship, but also as a reminder that the poem was to be sung. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) a petition for deliverance (v. 1); (2) an address to the wicked, encouraging them to turn from falsehood and to trust in God (vv. 2–5); (3) an assertion that only God is able to provide genuine joy, deep peace, and abiding safety (vv. 6–8).

4:1 O God of my righteousness can also be translated "O my righteous God." The phrase has two meanings: (1) Only God is righteous. (2) All of a person's righteousness is found in Him alone. The psalmist is facing a very pressing need, but his confidence in God remains especially strong. He addresses God in terms of His character—His "righteousness." Then he speaks of God's earlier saving works in his life: You have relieved me in my distress.

4:2 How long: The psalmists often use these words to question God (13:1, 2). Here they are addressed to the wicked. my glory: For the believer, one's sense of glory or honor is found in relationship to the Savior.

- 2 How long, O you sons of men,
Will you turn my glory to shame?
How long will you love worthlessness
And seek falsehood? Selah

4:3 set apart: This is the central point of this psalm. God has identified the godly—those who are devoted to God and His ways. He exercises special care over them and listens to their prayers.

4:4, 5 Be angry, and do not sin: These words are cited by Paul in the NT to describe “righteous indignation” (Eph. 4:26). Here the psalmist exhorts his reader not to let anger or anxiety erode complete trust or faith in the Lord. Offer the sacrifices of righteousness: These words speak of the salvation experience. put your trust in the LORD: Those being addressed here are the wicked (1:4–6). Thus in this psalm, the poet calls his neighbors to put their faith in God (Ps. 67).

4:6 any good: Although our lives often seem to be filled with uncertainty, there is never uncertainty with God. light of Your countenance: This phrase recalls the Aaronic benediction (Num. 6:26) and indicates God’s favor. Those on whom the Lord shines His face are truly blessed.

4:7 grain and wine: The joy God gives transcends the joy of the harvest. Agricultural produce, the result of abundant rain on fertile soil, was a blessing of God on His people. But there is something greater than full barns and overflowing cisterns—the joy of God’s presence.

4:8 The peace that God gives is far from a relaxation technique. It is a peace that enables an anxious person to lie down and sleep (3:5).

Psalm 5, a lament psalm, speaks of an unspecified but distressing period of David’s life, a time marked by enemies who verbally opposed him and his rule. When David’s enemies hurled curses at him, they believed that those curses called on divine power to destroy him. In this psalm, David is in distress because of the lies and boasts of his adversaries (101:7). He identifies his own cause with that of the Lord, so that attacks on him become attacks on God Himself. The “righteous” in v. 12 ultimately points to the Savior Jesus, as is common in the Book of Psalms (1:6). The psalm has three movements: (1) a prayer to the Lord for deliverance in a time of trouble (vv. 1–6); (2) a desire to worship the Lord in a time of trouble (vv. 7–9); (3) a longing for final judgment by the Lord in times of trouble (vv. 10–12).

5:1–3 Give ear: As in 4:1, this is the language of a person who believes from experience that God has forgotten his plight. The sufferer calls on the Lord to listen, even though the Lord has been continually listening and caring. Meditation here refers to incessant groaning. My King: The psalmists often address God in heaven as King, the ruler over all. At times, the psalms focus on prayer in the morning (88:13)—a commendable habit that helps a person to dedicate all the activities of the day to the glory of God.

5:4–6 Takes pleasure means to find enjoyment or reason for laughter. There is no enjoyment to be found in evil. The Hebrew word for boastful is the same one used to describe the praise of God. The praise of God is the focus of the Psalms; but praise of self—a mere boast—is a twisted, human perversion of true praise.

not stand: This psalm speaks of final judgment on the wicked (compare 1:5). They will not be allowed to stay in His glorious presence. You hate: God’s hatred is not merely a feeling, but an action of His will. The phrase workers of iniquity occurs often in the Psalms to describe those who characteristically practice evil (14:4).

5:7, 8 But as for me: In the Hebrew text, these words indicate a sharp contrast with the previous description of the wicked. The Hebrew word temple can be used of any very large structure—“palace” or “big house.” David was a leader in reforming the worship of God in Jerusalem, and he established a structure for the worship that would take place in the temple to be built by Solomon. David uses the word temple in anticipation of the future glorious building; all later generations of Hebrew worshipers would understand their own worship better because of the use of this word in these psalms. Make Your way straight: David prayed that God would make clear His will for him.

5:9, 10 Their throat is an open tomb: These words describe ¹⁰ Pronounce them guilty, O God!

 Let them fall by their own counsels;
 Cast them out in the multitude of their transgressions,
 For they have rebelled against You.

¹¹ But let all those rejoice who put their

 Let them ever shout for joy, because
 You ⁶ defend them;
 Let those also who love Your name
 Be joyful in You.

¹² For You, O LORD, will bless the

PSALM 7

Prayer and Praise for Deliverance from Enemies

A ^a Meditation ¹ of David, which he sang to the LORD ^b concerning the words of Cush, a Benjamite.

O LORD my God, in You I put my trust;

the perverse language used by people in opposition to God. Paul used the words of these verses to argue for depravity of all people (Rom. 3:13).

5:11, 12 rejoice: Here the psalmist describes the joy of the saved, the ecstasy of the ones whom God saves from their own deserved destruction. Our joy must always be focused on our Savior (Phil. 4:4).

Psalm 6 is a lament psalm that shares elements of the penitential psalms. David was experiencing what he feared to be a mortal illness. He sensed that this illness may have fallen on him because of his own sinfulness. The title of the psalm is similar to those of Ps. 4; 5. The specification of instruments is a reminder that this very personal psalm became part of the worship of the community when the temple was built. The psalm has four movements: (1) a petition for the Lord's mercy at a time of great pain (vv. 1–3); (2) an affirmation that the praise of the Lord comes from the living (vv. 4, 5); (3) a description of the psalmist's suffering (vv. 6, 7); (4) a rebuke of the psalmist's enemies, for the Lord has heard his prayer (vv. 8–10).

6:1–3 in Your anger: The psalmist suffers from a grave physical illness, one from which he fears he might not recover (v. 5). His principal concern is not only that his suffering might be more than he could stand, but that it comes as a result of God's severe anger. In his mourning, David cries out to God (as in 38:1). My bones is a poetic way of describing a deeply troubling illness; David's entire being is in torment.

6:4, 5 Return: This is a typical part of a petition in the psalms of lament (Ps. 13). The call for God to act is based on faith, even during a period of great stress. Your mercies' sake: Perhaps the most significant single term in the Hebrew text regarding the character of God is the word rendered mercies here. The Hebrew word describes what some prefer to call the loyal love of God. The translations vary because the word has much depth. Aside from the personal name of God (Yahweh), it may be the single most important term describing Him as the object of praise in the Book of Psalms (36:5). In the grave: If God still desires to hear David's voice in worship, He must keep David alive. David would be of no use to God dead; alive he could sing, shout, and testify to God's love and His mercy (94:17).

6:8–10 Depart: Psalm 6 is a lament psalm in which the Lord answers the prayer of the afflicted David. The change of mood in the psalm is due to the Lord's response. David who has been so ill is now healed. The Lord has answered David's prayer. workers of iniquity: See 14:4; 101:8. Let all my enemies be ashamed: The psalmist speaks in righteous indignation against those who have reviled him, and more importantly have ridiculed his God.

Psalm 7 is a lament psalm, featuring David's protests of innocence. In some psalms, the psalmist indicates that his suffering is deserved. Such cases lead to confession of sin. But in other cases, psalmists, like David in this psalm, do not believe they deserve the suffering or the feeling of being abandoned by God. Hence this psalm expresses David's extreme sorrow. Often we are shocked when we face suffering. But the dominant message in the Book of Psalms is twofold: (1) God is good, and (2) life is difficult. The life of faith is lived between these two realities. Although the title of the psalm refers to "Cush, a Benjamite," the Scriptures do not identify who this person was or what event in David's life prompted this psalm. The psalm has several brief movements: (1) an initial appeal for deliverance (vv. 1, 2); (2) a protest of innocence (vv. 3–5); (3) an appeal for God's judgment, part one (vv. 6–8); (4) an appeal for God's judgment, part two (vv. 9, 10); (5) a picture of God's judging work (vv. 11–13); (6) a portrait of the wicked (vv. 14–16); (7) a vow of praise (v. 17).

7:1, 2 I put my trust: The verb here can describe the action of a bird seeking refuge in the wings of its mother. This picture is found

PSALM 8

The Glory of the LORD in Creation

To the Chief Musician. ¹ On the instrument of Gath. A Psalm of David.

O LORD, our Lord,
How ^a excellent is Your name in all
the earth,
Who have ^b set Your glory above the heavens!

in the Book of Psalms (11:1; 17:8) and in the historical books (Ruth 2:12). Tear me like a lion vividly conveys the psalmist's fear. David had witnessed a lion who had captured its prey, and he compares his own fate to being captured and torn apart.

7:3–5 if I have done this: David protests that he is innocent of whatever charge his enemy has brought against him (Ps. 94). let him trample my life: These solemn words are spoken to God. The Lord can enact His judgment through David's enemies if his protest of innocence is false.

7:6–8 in Your anger: This is a plea for God to display His anger against the psalmist's adversaries, to judge them for their slander against David. Lift Yourself up: David implores the Lord to rise from His throne to intervene on his behalf, to bring justice in the intolerable situation (3:7). Judge me: Only someone confident of his own innocence would dare to pray these words before the Lord. David was innocent of the charges. He had not attacked someone without cause (see vv. 3–5).

7:9, 10 In the Hebrew, hearts and minds is literally "hearts and kidneys"—an ancient way of describing the innermost person. My defense means "my shield." God hovers over the believer like a military shield, an invisible defense (33:20).

7:11–13 God is angry: The indignation of God is directed at the enemies of His people. sharpen His sword: The imagery in vv. 12, 13 is of a great warrior preparing for battle: the Warrior is the Lord and the battle is against the wicked (37:9; 118:10).

7:14–16 conceives trouble: The wicked become "mothers" to trouble. They will give birth to their own destruction.

7:17 Most High is a term often used to describe God's authority over the nations (47:2; 78:35; Deut. 32:8). The God of Israel is not just another national deity—He rules all nations.

Psalm 8, a psalm of praise with wisdom connections, is a poetic reflection of the great creation text of Gen. 1. This psalm expresses wonder at the majestic and sublime nature of God. However, the center of the psalm focuses on human beings, a rarity in Scripture. But even this focus leads to the praise of God, the Creator of humanity. Thus the psalm sets to music the significance of the phrase "in His image" in Gen. 1:26–28. The structure of the poem is: (1) a prologue in praise of God's excellent name (v. 1); (2) the praise of God from children (v. 2); (3) the praise of the Creator of humanity (vv. 3–8); (4) an epilogue in praise of God's excellent name (v. 9).

8:1 How excellent is Your name: The name of God and the glory of God are alternate ways of describing who He is. See the description of the meaning of the name of God in Ex. 3:14, 15 and the focus on the name of God in 113:1–3. This psalm ends with the same words it begins with. These words of praise to the name of

Prayer and Thanksgiving for the LORD's Righteous Judgments

To the Chief Musician. To the tune of 1 "Death of the Son." A Psalm of David.

I will praise You, O LORD, with my whole heart;
I will tell of all Your marvelous works.
2 I will be glad and ^arejoice in You;
I will sing praise to Your name,
^bO Most High.

God form a frame for its central subject—the praise of man as male and female, whom God has made to reflect His majesty.

8:2 mouth of babes: This verse was quoted by Jesus (Matt. 21:16) to the priests and scribes who wanted to squelch the people who were speaking the words of 118:26 in praise of Jesus.

8:3, 4 Your heavens: David is in awe at the splendors of creation; the wonders of nature lead him to praise its Creator. Even the universe with its infinite distances was the work of the Lord's fingers (19:1). What is man: In view of the vastness of creation and the surpassing glory of God the Creator, who are we to presume upon Him? Here man refers to all human beings regardless of gender.

8:5–8 You have made him a little lower than the angels: The response to the rhetorical questions of v. 4 is stunning. Man, as male and female, stands at the summit of God's creation. The Hebrew text is "You have made him to lack little of God." The Septuagint, the ancient Greek translation of the OT, translates the Hebrew word meaning "God" as angels. The author of Hebrews bases his argument in Heb. 2:5–9 on the Septuagint. So both readings are true. God made human beings in His image, just a little lower than angels. The words crowned him with glory fill out and explain the parallel phrase "a little lower than the angels." God created human beings as majestic creatures who were to rule over His creation. But in our fallen state, we are profoundly disfigured, a perversion of the majesty God has intended (9:20). However, Jesus restores those who put their trust in Him.

8:9 O LORD, our Lord: The first word is the divine name Yahweh. The second Hebrew word translated our Lord speaks of the One in control: "our Sovereign."

Psalm 9 may have been originally one poem with Ps. 10. Indeed, there is evidence that several of the psalms have been restructured in varying ways (see Ps. 42; 43). Note that Ps. 10 does not have a new superscription and that the two psalms deal with the same theme. Moreover, the psalms in the Hebrew text form a partial acrostic pattern. Ten of the initial letters of verses in Ps. 9 follow the order of the Hebrew alphabet, and seven initial letters in Ps. 10 continue the same pattern. In Hebrew, this pattern is pleasing to the listener and attests to the skill of the poet. Although Ps. 9; 10 are psalms of lament, they present a triumphant determination to praise God. The structure of Ps. 9 is as follows: (1) a determination to praise the Lord (vv. 1, 2); (2) a rehearsal of God's saving deeds (vv. 3–5); (3) a rebuke of God's enemies (vv. 6–8); (4) a statement of confession (vv. 9, 10); (5) an ascription of praise to God (vv. 11, 12); (6) a petition

Image of God: His Reflection in Us

What a magnificent concept—God's creation of mankind in His image—patterned after Him, mirroring a family resemblance of Him (2 Cor. 3:18). This does not pertain to the physical nature but rather to the spiritual and moral nature. How are we like God?

- We are capable of communicating, and in so doing, we can bless or curse (James 3:9).
- We are creative, and creativity gives us joy and satisfaction (Prov. 31:13–22).
- We experience emotions and feelings; we long for relationships and fellowship (Ps. 16:11).
- We discern between right and wrong (Is. 6:5).
- We act and are responsible for our actions (John 3:18).
- We long to pursue Him. Mary sat at Jesus' feet, listening to Him. Jesus let her know that sitting at His feet was important (Luke 10:42).

Even though the original intimate relationship between God and humanity was severed by the Fall (Gen. 3:5–7), God has pursued His children down through the ages, sending His Son that we might be reconciled to Him and become His daughters and sons, His heirs (Rom. 8:14–17). His image can be reflected in us. Through Christ the image is brought back into focus so that His glory shines from the reflection.

- 3 When my enemies turn back,
They shall fall and perish at Your presence.
- 4 For You have maintained my right and my cause;
You sat on the throne judging in righteousness.
- 5 You have rebuked the ²nations,
You have destroyed the wicked;
You have ^cblotted out their name forever and ever.
- 6 O enemy, destructions are finished forever!
And you have destroyed cities;
Even their memory has ^dperished.
- 7 ^eBut the LORD shall endure forever;
He has prepared His throne for judgment.
- 8 ^fHe shall judge the world in
righteousness,
And He shall administer judgment for the peoples in uprightness.
- 9 The LORD also will be a ^grefuge³ for the oppressed,
A refuge in times of trouble.
- 10 And those who ^hknow Your name will put their trust in You;
For You, LORD, have not forsaken those who seek You.

for deliverance by God (vv. 13–16); (7) a vision of the judgment of the wicked (vv. 17, 18); (8) a call for deliverance by God (vv. 19, 20). The title of the psalm, which ascribes the poem to David, may also indicate the tune to which it was to be sung, “Death of the Son.”

9:1, 2 with my whole heart: Real praise is not halfhearted; it involves one’s whole being (146:2). The words of these two verses are characteristic of the praise of God in the Psalms. He is to be praised for His works and His name. His name represents who He is; His works stand for all He does. Most High is a designation for the Lord, especially as He rules the nations (47:2; 78:35; Deut. 32:8). 9:3–5 The enemies are not identified; this is common in the Psalms. All subsequent readers can fill in their own list of those who trouble them. The poet has confidence that God is in control (v. 4) and that He executes judgment (v. 5). Therefore in the middle of trouble, the psalmist is able to foresee the end of his enemies (vv. 17, 18).

9:6–8 One day even the names of the enemies of God will be forgotten. But the name of God will endure forever. One day there will be a final judgment when God will make right every wrong and establish His peace based on justice (96:13).

9:9, 10 Refuge speaks of a secure height, something inaccessiblely high. David was often outdoors, and he used images from physical geography to describe the wonder of God’s protective care (91:1, 2). who know Your name: To know the name of God was the OT equivalent of saving faith in the NT. have not forsaken: This is a further explanation of the meaning of God’s name. Since the Lord is God, He cannot abandon those to whom He has bound Himself. He is a faithful God—a God who never gives up on His people.

9:11, 12 He avenges blood: God is the Avenger, not any person (Deut. 32:35). One day God will judge the wicked. In the end, He will establish His just rule.

9:13–16 David asks that his life be spared from the gates of death so that he might praise the Lord in the gates of the temple. David moved from the gates of death to the gates of life. Only God could accomplish such a sudden reversal; only the Lord could lift him from such depths. Daughter of Zion was an endearing term for Jerusalem. As Jacob was God’s “son,” so Jerusalem was God’s “daughter” (Ps. 48). In the net: David prays that the evil the wicked intend for him will become their own trap (7:15, 16; 35:7, 8).

9:17, 18 hell: Just as the Psalms speak of heaven as the destiny of the righteous (see 23:6), so they also speak of hell as the destiny of the wicked (see 1:6). It is a place from which the righteous want to be delivered (86:13). Passages like this one confirm the NT affirmation of a day of final judgment in which the righteousness of God will be displayed and the wickedness of unrepentant humankind will finally receive punishment (see Matt. 25:31–46). The expectation of the poor describes the often frustrated hope that the oppressed may feel in this life. One day, however, they will be vindicated, for God Himself is their Protector (140:12).

(Heb. mishpat) (9:16; 99:4; 140:12; Ex. 23:6; 1 Kin. 7:7; Amos 5:7, 15, 24; 5:12) Strong’s #4941

Judgment (also translated “justice”) specifies what is right, not only as measured by a code of law, but also by what makes for right relationships as well as harmony and peace. The OT prophets were champions of social justice. God’s judgment is His just, fair, and impartial treatment of all people. His actions and decisions are true and right (Job 34:12; Rev. 16:7). His demands on individuals and nations to look after victims of oppression are just demands (82:1–8). As Lord and Judge, God brings justice to nations (67:4) and “sets things right” in behalf of the poor, the oppressed, and the victims of injustice (103:6; 146:6–9). For the wicked, the unjust, and the oppressor, God as supreme Judge of the earth is a dreaded force. But for all who are unjustly treated, God’s judgment is reason for hope.

18^p For the needy shall not always be forgotten;
 9 The expectation of the poor shall not perish forever.

9:19, 20 Do not let man prevail: Although human beings are made in God's image as described in Ps. 8, the wickedness of fallen humanity is profound. Humanity in rebellion against God is a gross perversion of God's plan. The Lord cannot allow this arrogance to go unchallenged.
Psalm 10 was originally part of Ps. 9. The two are found as one psalm in the Septuagint, the ancient Greek translation of the Hebrew Scripture. Psalm 10 reiterates the desire expressed in Ps. 9, that the Lord would deal with the wicked enemies of the psalmist. This psalm reflects a sense of urgency: The psalmist pleads for immediate deliverance from his enemies. The structure of Ps. 10 is: (1) an inquiry into the Lord's inaction (vv. 1, 2); (2) a description of the actions of the wicked (vv. 3–11); (3) a renewed call for the Lord to rise in judgment (vv. 12, 13); (4) a confession of trust in the Lord's final judgment (vv. 14, 15); (5) a presentation of praise to God who is King (vv. 16–18).
10:1, 2 Stand afar off are classic words of lament or mourning (13:1–3). As the psalmist views the actions of the wicked, he finds himself angry at wickedness and wondering how God can remain apathetic and inactive. But even with his doubts, he continues to pray to the only God who can deliver him from his troubles.
10:3, 4 God is in none of his thoughts: For the psalmist, this is the most difficult part of his circumstances (14:1). With no thought of God, his wicked enemies are able to boast in themselves. They turn reality upside down by praising evil and spurning God.

10:6 Only those who stand on the sure foundation of God's Word can confidently say, I shall not be moved (see 15:5). The wicked who have lost all sense of God assume that they can use these words themselves. But eventually they will be swept away by the turmoil and troubles of this world (see Prov. 10:25; Matt. 7:24–27).
10:8–10 sits in the lurking places: The psalmist views the wicked as oppressors. They are similar to lurking beasts, ready to pounce on their prey.
10:11 God has forgotten: The wicked behave the way they do because they doubt that the Lord knows, cares, or will act. They want to believe that there will be no final judgment, so they feel free to do as they please. But the truth is that God will establish justice (see vv. 14, 15).
10:12, 13 Arise, O LORD: The psalmist returns to his call for God to act (see 9:19, 20).
10:14, 15 You have seen is the classic confession of trust in God in the psalms of lament. God does know; He does see; and He will act. God protects those like the fatherless who have no other protection (27:10). Break the arm: As in 3:7, this is a call for God to destroy the power of the wicked. This impassioned curse on the wicked displays the righteousness of God.

The nations have perished out of His land.

10:16–18 The LORD is King: These words suggest that Ps. 9; 10 are royal psalms. Usually the royal psalms have a more positive viewpoint. They take the stance that God is King and the world is established and will not be moved. On the other hand, Ps. 9; 10 question how there can be such distress in the world with God as King. But since God is King, this psalm concludes with the fervent prayer that the will of God may be done on earth as it is in heaven (Rev. 19:1–6).

Psalm 11 is a psalm of trust. The title ascribes the psalm to David. In the middle of the psalms of lament (see Ps. 9; 10; 12), this psalm expresses great trust in the Almighty Lord. It is the context of adversity that makes this psalm of trust all the more impressive. This brief poem has three movements: (1) an affirmation of trust in the Lord even during the assaults of the wicked (vv. 1–3); (2) an affirmation of trust in the Lord who reigns above and who will judge the actions of the wicked (vv. 4–6); (3) an affirmation of trust in the Lord because of who He is (v. 7).

11:1–3 The phrase I put my trust describes seeking refuge, similar to a bird under the wings of its mother (Ruth 2:12). Flee as a bird: Here is the contemptuous challenge of the wicked. They are like their father, the devil (John 8:44; 2 Cor. 11:13–15). They view the righteous as helpless birds flying to their mountain home. They do not realize that their mountain home is protection in the Lord Himself. bend their bow: This is a picture of the wicked on the hunt for the righteous (10:8–10). foundations are destroyed: These verses are the taunt of the wicked to the righteous. They are a false charge; the words are untrue. The foundations are not destroyed; there is a great deal the righteous can do (Eph. 6:10–18). Most important, the righteous can keep trusting in God, their true foundation.

11:4–6 The words in His holy temple prove that the charge of

v. 3 is false. God is in control; the foundations are not destroyed. His eyes behold: It may appear that God is not involved (10:11), but He does see and He will act (Ex. 2:23–25; 3:6–15). tests the righteous: There are times when the Lord allows trials to come into the life of the righteous as a test. But God's actions are more severe toward the wicked, whom He hates. The Hebrew word for hates is a strong term that speaks primarily of rejection (5:5). rain coals: The source for “fire and brimstone” judgment is the story of God's judgment on Sodom and the other cities near the Dead Sea in Gen. 19.

11:7 Because the LORD is righteous, the believer who is under stress can continue to trust in Him. Such faith allows one to ignore the taunts of the wicked. The believer needs only to return to the enfolding wings of God to renew strength and purpose in the midst of a troubled day.

Psalm 12, a psalm of lament, begins with a focus on the power of the wicked's perverse mouth (Ps. 52; 120). It concludes powerfully with an assertion of the power of the pure and truthful words of God. The title ascribes the poem to David. The psalm has five movements: (1) a description of the language of the wicked (vv. 1, 2); (2) a prayer for God's intervention (vv. 3, 4); (3) the intervention of God to deliver His own (v. 5); (4) a characterization of the language of God (vv. 6, 7); (5) a reminder of the continuing presence of the wicked (v. 8).

12:1, 2 godly man ceases: David wonders if there are any righteous people left. speak idly: This psalm charges the wicked for using words to destroy and hurt others.

12:4 With our tongue: Because the wicked do not submit to any authority over them, much less God Himself, they believe they can say anything they want.

12:5–7 Now I will arise: With these dramatic words, God speaks

Now I will arise,” says the LORD;
“I will set him in the safety for which he yearns.”

6 The words of the LORD are ^dpure words,
Like silver tried in a furnace of earth,
Purified seven times.

7 You shall keep them, O LORD,
You shall preserve them from this generation forever.

8 The wicked prowl on every side,
When villainy is exalted among the sons of men.

Folly of the Godless, and God’s Final Triumph

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

The ^afool has said in his heart,
“There is no God.”
They are corrupt,
They have done abominable works,
There is none who does good.

2 ^b The LORD looks down from heaven upon the children of men, to David and reveals His righteous character. He will not linger; He will judge the speech of the wicked. pure words: In contrast to the idle words of the wicked (vv. 1–4), the words of God are altogether trustworthy. The eternal and steadfast nature of the Lord Himself stands behind His words. He will establish justice just as He has promised to David (v. 5).

12:8 The wicked prowl: Even with God’s words of judgment, there are still wicked people looking for those whom they might destroy. One day there will be full punishment (10:16–18). For now, we still struggle with the help of the Holy Spirit against the evil in our own souls and the pervasive wickedness in our world.

Psalm 13 is a psalm of lament, an impassioned cry to the Lord for help. It is ascribed to David. The psalm is brief, even terse; but it is remarkably powerful in its tone and imagery. There are similarities between this psalm and Ps. 142. This psalm has three movements: (1) a lament of the forsaken (vv. 1, 2); (2) a petition for deliverance (vv. 3, 4); (3) a confession and a vow of praise (vv. 5, 6).

13:1, 2 These two verses present all three pronouns that occur in a typical lament psalm: (1) I am hurting; (2) You have forgotten; (3) they are winning. Four times in two verses David screams out how long (4:2; 6:3). The Lord allows David to pour out his anxiety before Him. But by the end of David’s prayer, the Lord has granted him a correct perspective on his situation. David’s only option is to trust in the sovereign mercy of his loving God.

13:3, 4 Enlighten my eyes: As a person who is nearing death might sense the dimming of his vision (38:10), David also senses his death and pleads with God to intervene before he dies. Lest my enemy say: If God does not intervene, not only will the psalmist be lost from the community that praises the living God (6:5), but his enemies will also claim a victory over him and his God. Fundamentally, the Lord’s honor is at stake. rejoice: The enemies’ rejoicing would be intolerable because it would be aimed in part against God in whom the psalmist has trusted (35:19).

13:5, 6 This is the turning point of the psalm. The tone of the psalm abruptly changes from despair to hope. In this verse, David recalls his commitment to trust God completely. The term mercy describes God’s loyal love. His faithfulness to His commitment to take care of His people. I will sing was the psalmist’s vow to praise God in the worshiping community. Based on the assurance that God will deliver him, David resolves to tell the people about it—this is the essence of praise (40:1–3).

Psalm 14, which is closely allied with Ps. 53, is a wisdom psalm attributed to David. It speaks of the foolishness of living as if God did not exist. The psalm has three movements: (1) a description of the pervasiveness of evil (vv. 1–3); (2) an assertion that final judgment is coming (vv. 4–6); (3) a prayer for God’s kingdom (v. 7).

14:1 The word fool refers not to mental inability but to moral and spiritual insensitivity. The phrase no God suggests “practical atheism,” the view that if there is a God, it really does not matter to one’s life. This is the viewpoint stated in 10:4, 11; 12:4. The Hebrew word for corrupt has the idea of soured milk. Those who cease to believe in God will eventually “sour”; they will degenerate into doing evil.

14:2, 3 The LORD looks down: Here the Lord’s inquiry leads to judgment (as in Gen. 6:12). The pictorial language is a way of describing the omniscience of God, the fact that the Lord knows

words

(Heb. imrah) (12:6; 138:2; Deut. 33:9; Is. 32:9) Strong’s #565

This Hebrew word, based on the common verb meaning “to say,” occurs mainly in poetry. Over half of its appearances are in Ps. 119, where it refers to what God has said. It is also used to refer to the prophetic warning of Isaiah (Is. 28:23), the humble prayer of the psalmists (17:6), or even the prideful boast of Lamech (Gen. 4:23). In Ps. 119, the term is used in parallel with “statute,” “commandment,” “judgment,” “precept,” and “testimony.” The psalmist describes treacherous people as not keeping God’s word, but the psalmist himself treasures God’s word in his heart as a guide for life, that he might not sin against the Lord (119:11, 67, 133, 158).

everything. No, not one: The biblical teaching on depravity is not that each individual is as evil as he or she could possibly be, but that sin is present in every individual (Rom. 3). Since no one is perfect, all must ask God for His forgiveness—something He freely gives to those who place their trust in His son Jesus (Eph. 1:7; 1 John 1:9). 14:4, 5 The wicked lack knowledge of God’s truth. Although people may be brilliant in their chosen fields, they can still be morally insensitive and spiritually closed to the issues that have eternal consequences. My people refers to those who are faithful to God. God has delivered a group of people from the prison of wickedness. These people are His people and must follow His ways. They may become special targets of the wicked because they are different. There is an adverb of place that alludes to the final judgment. 14:6 His refuge speaks of shelter, as in the shadow of a tree. David as an outdoorsman had experienced the urgent need of shelter from the fierce elements. He uses this common experience to describe the various ways in which God protects His people from the storm of evil that surrounds them (9:9). 14:7 The salvation of Israel refers to a future salvation, the coming reign of God (Ps. 2; 89). Psalm 15 may be a wisdom psalm, but its principal focus is on the proper approach to the worship of God. Although all of the psalms were used in the worship of God, we might call this poem a worship psalm because of its special focus on this subject. The psalm asks the question, Who is righteous enough to approach God? We who are in Christ learn to come boldly into the presence of the Father because we come on the authority of His Son (Heb. 4:16). Jesus makes us feel at home in the presence of the Father. This psalm, ascribed to David, is posed in question-and-answer format. There are three movements: (1) the question of who may approach the holy God (v. 1); (2) the response (vv. 2-4); (3) the blessing (v. 5). 15:1 who may abide: Except for priests, people did not live in the precincts of the temple. These words describe an approach to God’s presence in which one might feel accepted, even “at home.” holy hill: As in 3:4, this phrase is used of the presence of God in the temple or the tabernacle. The Hebrew term is a general one that refers to wherever the tabernacle was in David’s day; later readers and singers of this psalm appropriately applied the word to the temple built in Jerusalem. 15:2-4 He who walks uprightly speaks of relative righteousness, not absolute righteousness, for no one is innocent before God. The Lord commands us to be holy (see 1 Pet. 1:15, 16), and He also gives us the power to become holy (2 Thess. 2:16, 17). vile person is despised: The righteous hate what God hates (vv. 4, 5). The point is not so much the emotion of hatred as the deliberate rejection of wicked ways (1:1). swears to his own hurt: When a righteous person takes an oath, it must be honored even if it requires suffering. 15:5 never be moved: The promise of God for the righteous is for this life and for the life to come. The Lord is the righteous person’s sure foundation. Psalm 16, a psalm of lament, has a remarkable prophetic aspect that parallels many of the messianic prophecies concerning the Suffering Servant (Is. 53). This poem of David became central in the preaching of the apostles in the early church (Acts 2:22-31). The psalm has four movements: (1) a petition to God for deliverance (vv. 1-3); (2) a condemnation of the wicked and their practices (v. 4); (3) an exaltation of the psalmist’s relationship with God (vv. 5-8); (4) a confident assertion that God will spare the psalmist’s life and bless it (vv. 9-11). 16:1 I put my trust: David uses the expression of a bird seeking refuge under its mother’s wing to indicate his complete trust in the Lord (compare 7:1; 11:1). From this strong stance of confidence, he is able to boast that his goodness comes only from God. He shares with the people of God the enjoyment of God’s presence.

16:5–8 My inheritance refers to the Promised Land. God had given this inheritance to His people (Deut. 6:1–3). However there was a greater inheritance for the Levites, who did not receive a share in the land (Num. 26:62); their share of the inheritance was in the Lord. David had an ancestral inheritance in the land. As king, he also had extensive royal holdings. But he realized that no inheritance was greater than his relationship with Almighty God.

(Heb. simchah) (16:11; Neh. 8:12, 17; Prov. 21:15; Jon. 4:6)
Strong's #8057

This Hebrew word is one of several frequently occurring Hebrew words that express exceeding gladness or rejoicing. Like its synonyms, this word can apply to a disposition of the heart (Prov. 14:10; Jer. 15:16). It is frequently set in a context of feasting (see Neh. 8:12) and singing (137:3; 1 Sam. 18:6), as it is in a prophecy concerning God's singing over Jerusalem (Zeph. 3:17). The word is also used for the senseless happiness of the enemies of God's people (Judg. 16:23; Ezek. 35:15; 36:5), of the foolish (Prov. 15:21), of the lazy (Prov. 21:17), and of the hypocrites (Job 20:5). However, joy in the Bible is usually associated with the people of God, who celebrate God's blessing at a number of occasions—feasts, coronations of kings, victories in battle, and the dedication of the rebuilt walls of Jerusalem (Num. 10:10; 1 Kin. 1:40; 2 Chr. 20:27; Neh. 12:27). In fact, Moses exhorts the Israelites to serve God with joy, so that they would not lose their blessing (see Deut. 28:47).

16:11 path of life: With this phrase David speaks of his escape from death at a critical point, but he also indicates the eternal life given by the resurrected Savior to all who trust in Him.

Psalm 17 is a special use of the psalm of lament; it is a protest of innocence (Ps. 26; 35; 43; 69). The psalm is ascribed to David. At times, David suffers under the heavy hand of God's anger because of unconfessed sin in his life. But there are other occasions where he insists that his present troubles are not caused by any fault in his life. In such a case, he calls upon God to vindicate him. God indicates through these psalms that He has a special concern for people who experience undeserved suffering, even though He allows the trouble to come for reasons that may never be known in this life. The poem has six movements: (1) a plea for vindication (vv. 1, 2); (2) an acknowledgment of God's testing (vv. 3–5); (3) a plea for God's mercy (vv. 6–9); (4) a description of the wicked (vv. 10–12); (5) a renewed plea for vindication (vv. 13, 14); (6) a statement of resolute faith (v. 15).

17:1, 2 a just cause: With these words, David sets the tone of the psalm. By protesting his innocence, he hopes to convince God to move on his behalf and deliver him from his trouble. He asks for God to search him thoroughly and to declare his vindication, often translated “justice” or “judgment.”

17:3 tested my heart: David knows that God has done what he is requesting even before he asks. That is, God knew David's needs and what was in his heart. David's prayer helps David to focus on the source of his strength and reaffirm his determination to live a pure life (1:1–3; 19:14).

17:6–9 Incline Your ear is pictorial language describing the mercy of God (40:1): God will stoop down to earth to hear David's plea.

lovingkindness: This significant term for God's loyal love is enhanced by the Hebrew term for marvelous, a word used in the

God the Sovereign Savior

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David
^a the servant of the LORD, who spoke to the LORD the words of ^b this song on the day that the LORD delivered him from the hand of all his enemies and from the hand of Saul.

And he said:

- I ^c will love You, O LORD, my strength.
² The LORD is my rock and my fortress and my deliverer;
My God, my ¹ strength, ^d in whom I will trust;
My shield and the ² horn of my

So shall I be saved from my

- ⁴ ^f The pangs of death surrounded me,
And the floods of ³ ungodliness made

- ⁵ The sorrows of Sheol surrounded me;
The snares of death confronted me.
- ⁶ In my distress I called upon the

And cried out to my God;
He heard my voice from His temple,
And my cry came before Him, even to His ears.
- ⁷ ^g Then the earth shook and trembled;
The foundations of the hills also quaked and were shaken,
Because He was angry.

Bible only with reference to God. The apple of Your eye: Just as a person has an instinctive response to protect the eye, so God cares instinctively for His servants. shadow of Your wings: Here God is described as a “mother hen” in a positive sense. Chicks who flee for protection to the wings of their mother find not only safety but warmth and love as well. In the same way, God protects us.

17:10–12 The words fat hearts are a description of insensitivity, similar to the language of Is. 6:10. As a lion: This language is similar to that of 10:8–10. The point is that the wicked are insensitive to human needs; they are like lions who wait for the right opportunity to destroy their prey.

17:13, 14 Arise, O LORD: The same language is used in 9:19, 20; 10:12, 13. their portion in this life: The wicked live their lives with only the pursuit of the pleasures of this world in mind. The righteous should not try to obtain what this life can offer, but instead pursue God and His ways.

17:15 when I awake in Your likeness: This verse is a key text on biblical immortality in the OT. Having rejected the idea that the pleasures of this life are ultimately fulfilling, David anticipates the day when he will awake in glory and be made in the likeness of God.

Psalm 18 is attributed to David. The text of this psalm is found in 2 Sam. 22 with some variations. The superscription indicates that this psalm was David’s hymn of celebration to the grace of God. This may be a psalm of trust (Ps. 23), but it is unique. The lengthy poem has several movements: (1) a statement of faith and a description of deliverance (vv. 1–6); (2) a poetic description of God’s battle for David’s deliverance (vv. 7–19); (3) a recital of the blessings of God on the righteous (vv. 20–27); (4) an offering of praise to the person of the Lord (vv. 28–36); (5) a recounting of battles and victories in the Lord (vv. 37–45); (6) concluding praise for God’s work of deliverance (vv. 46–50).

18:1 I will love You, O LORD: Twice in the Psalms the poet declares a love for God (116:1). Here an unusual word for love is used, referring to compassion as deep as a mother’s love.

18:2 The Hebrew word for my rock is balanced by its parallel Hebrew word my strength, meaning also “my rock.” References to God as a mountain fortress that protects the believer are found many times in the Psalms (91:1–3; 144:1). This is a particularly apt image for David, who many times had to hide in the mountains for security (see 1 Sam. 26:1, 20). The words strength and stronghold reinforce the image of God as Protector. The horn symbolized strength.

18:4–6 In these verses, David describes how his life is endangered. Using very strong language, he expresses the pain he feels as he watches death come near: sorrows of Sheol. But even in the great depths of his trouble, David makes his distress known to God. He cries out to the Lord and the faithful God answers him.

18:7–9 the earth shook . . . He bowed the heavens: Underlying these poetic words is the understanding that the Almighty will turn the universe inside out, if necessary, to deliver His servant.

- 8 Smoke went up from His nostrils,
And devouring fire from His mouth;
Coals were kindled by it.
- 9 ^h He bowed the heavens also, and came down
With darkness under His feet.
- 10 ⁱ And He rode upon a cherub, and flew;
^j He flew upon the wings of the wind.
- 11 He made darkness His secret place;
^k His canopy around Him was dark waters
And thick clouds of the skies.
- 12 ^l From the brightness before Him,
His thick clouds passed with hailstones and coals of fire.
- 13 The LORD thundered from heaven,
And the Most High uttered ^m His voice,

18:10-12 The language He rode upon a cherub is similar to the descriptions of Baal in Canaanite poetry. Thus David is taking the words typically used to praise Baal and applying them to the living God, the only One who truly deserves such praise. The cherub is a royal symbol and thus speaks of God's power and glory (80:1). The references to darkness speak of the hiddenness of God. He cannot be completely understood by those whom He has created. The references to brightness speak of God's holiness.

18:15 the channels of the sea: This culminates the picture of God's turning the universe upside down (v. 7). Even the most hidden passages of the sea are exposed, as are the elements that hold the earth together. The Lord God does all this to rescue His servant David (v. 16). All of the Lord's fearsome power is used to save the one who worships Him. The passage vividly illustrates why the believer has no reason to fear (see Heb. 13:6).

18:16-19 He drew me out of many waters: Again, David draws from the language of the Canaanites, turning it to the praise of God.

The waters were regarded as dark gods in Canaan. But according to David, God is Lord of all, and the waters are His creatures. He delivers His servant David from any power that might hold him. Why David might ask, would God tear apart all of creation to act on his behalf? Because God takes pleasure in those who serve Him.

18:20-23 cleanness of my hands: David pleads his integrity, as in Ps. 17. Contrast this language with the description of the bloodied hands of unfit worshipers in Is. 1:15. blameless: As in Ps. 15, these are descriptions of relative righteousness. No one is completely innocent before God. But God enables His servants to pursue godliness in this life.

18:25-27 With the merciful: The poet describes the actions of God in terms of the people to whom He relates. God deals with each person according to his or her attitude. He opposes the proud but delivers the humble, for the humble turn to Him for strength.

18:31 who is God: With a question, David confesses that he cannot compare God to any person, god, or object (113:5; Is. 40:25).

33 ^b He makes my feet like the feet of

PSALM 19

The Perfect Revelation of the LORD

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

The ^a heavens declare the glory of God;
And the ^b firmament ¹ shows ² His handiwork.

18:35, 36 The use of battle armor, such as a shield, as an image of God's provision for the righteous, is found in both the OT and NT (Eph. 6:10–20).

18:37–41 pursued my enemies: God gives David strength to complete the battle against his enemies. God Himself is a Warrior (Ex. 15:3) and He outfits His servants for battle. to the LORD: Apparently in the extremes of battle, the enemies of David found no help from their gods, so they screamed aloud to David's God for deliverance. But God would not answer them. There is only one prayer from the wicked to which He gladly listens—the prayer of repentance.

18:43 Head of the nations is language that prophetically speaks of the reign of the Messiah. David gained his empire by the work of the Lord on his behalf. But David's empire was only a picture of the kingdom of God that will one day be governed by David's greater Son, the Lord Jesus.

18:49, 50 Ordinarily, praise to the Lord was given in the congregation of the Israelites. On occasion the poets speak of God's victories among the Gentiles who still worship other gods (138:1). This was a form of mission activity during the OT period (117:1). By proclaiming the victories of God to the nations, the poets were calling for the nations to respond in faith. How fitting that Paul would cite this verse (or its parallel in 2 Sam. 22:50) in Rom. 15:9 as an indicator of God's ongoing intention to bring His salvation to all people. to His king: David's victories are prototypes of the victories of the great King to come. The use of the word anointed is appropriate for David, but it points forward to the Savior who is the Anointed One (2:2). The words to David and his descendants forevermore connect the previous promises to the only Son of David who inherited an eternal kingdom, the Savior Jesus (2 Sam. 7).

Psalm 19, a wisdom psalm, celebrates the Word of God in the context of creation. Thus it is both a creation psalm and a Torah shield

(Heb. magen) (18:30, 35; Gen. 15:1) Strong's #4043

The Hebrew noun for shield is derived from the verb ganan, which means "to defend" and signifies the protective guardianship of God. The shield is a common biblical symbol for protection. Kings and rulers are described as "shields" protecting their people (47:9; 89:1, 8), and the Bible frequently depicts God as a shield protecting those who trust in Him (18:30). This imagery has its roots in the Abrahamic covenant, where God describes Himself as Abraham's shield (Gen. 15:1). David praises the Lord for being his "shield," "stronghold," and "refuge" (2 Sam. 22:3).

May the LORD answer you in the day of trouble;
May the name of the God of Jacob ¹defend you;

psalm. Both the creation psalms and the Torah psalms are regarded as subgroups of the wisdom psalms. The poem begins with the heavens, centers on the Word, and culminates in the heart of the servant of God. The poem has three movements: (1) a celebration of the greatness of God's creation (vv. 1–6); (2) a celebration of the purity of the Word of God (vv. 7–11); (3) a contemplation of the life of the person of God (vv. 12–14).
19:1–6 All of creation including the heavens reveals God's glory and majesty (Rom. 1:18–20). Firmament is another word for heaven (Gen. 1:6). The vast expanse we see is testimony to the craftsmanship of God (8:3). From the vantage point of earth, there is no heavenly body so wonderful as the sun. In the ancient Middle East the sun was often thought of as a god. In this poem, the sun is but a stunning symbol of the Creator. Like a bridegroom, it is pictured as celebrating its Creator.

19:7–10 The law is the Torah, which means "instruction" or "direction." This passage (vv. 7–9) presents six words for the law of God—law, testimony, statutes, commandment, fear, and judgments; six evaluations of the law—perfect, sure, right, pure, clean, and true; and six results—converting the soul, making wise the simple, rejoicing the heart, enlightening the eyes, enduring forever, and righteous altogether. The value of the Scripture cannot be compared with any other desirable thing—even gold. It provides the key to wisdom, joy, and most importantly, eternal life.
19:12–14 his errors: The discussion of the nature and perfection of the law of God leads the psalmist to consider his own imperfection. He is aware of both hidden faults and presumptuous sins; he asks to be delivered from both. His final prayer corresponds to 139:23, 24. My strength means "my rock" (see 18:1). My Redeemer describes God as the One who purchases our freedom from any bondage or slavery. The principal meaning of the word is "defender of family rights."
Psalm 20, a royal psalm, is a psalm of trust ascribed to David. The tone of the psalm is one of blessing, such as a king might bestow on his people, perhaps on the eve of battle. The brief poem has three movements: (1) God's blessing in battle (vv. 1–5); (2) the assurance of God's deliverance (v. 6); (3) an assertion of faith in God the King (vv. 7–9).
20:1–5 The day of trouble likely refers to the day of battle. But it has wide application for any troubled day in the life of the believer. sanctuary: Help from God was perceived to come from the temple in Jerusalem. Ultimately it comes from God's dwelling in heaven, of which the earthly sanctuary was a symbol. your offerings: The pure

(Heb. bar) (19:8; 24:4; Prov. 14:4) Strong's #1249

This Hebrew term appears only seven times in the Bible and always in the poetic books. Possibly it derives from a verb that can mean (1) to purify, (2) to choose or select, or (3) to make shine or polish. In 19:8, the word is associated with the eyes, suggesting radiance (compare Prov. 4:18). The concepts of "selectness" and "radiance" may fit the use of this word in the description of the chaste and pure Shulamite (the word is translated as favorite and clear in Song 6:9, 10). The term appears with other words denoting cleanness and purity (19:7–9), especially purity of the heart (24:4; 73:1).

- 2 May He send you help from the sanctuary,
And strengthen you out of Zion;
3 May He remember all your offerings,
And accept your burnt sacrifice. Selah
- 4 May He grant you according to your heart's desire,
And ^afulfill all your ²purpose.
5 We will rejoice in your salvation,
And in the name of our God we will set up our banners!
May the LORD fulfill all your petitions.
- 6 Now I know that the LORD saves His ³anointed;
He will answer him from His holy heaven
With the saving strength of His right hand.
- 7 Some trust in chariots, and some in ^bhorses;

soldiers who were about to go to war would have completed the necessary sacrifices for confession of sin (see Lev. 1–7). In the immediate context, salvation is used to describe daily deliverance from the rigors of the battle and the victory over the enemy. But the Lord's deliverance of us from our spiritual troubles should prompt the same type of praise.

20:6 King David was the anointed of the Lord (18:50). His right hand: This is a slogan that describes God's powerful deliverance of the Israelites from Egypt (17:7; 44:3; 118:16; see also Ex. 15:6).

20:7–9 Chariots were the leading weapon on the ancient battlefield. The implements of warfare are mere tools in God's hand—the wise trust in God because the battle belongs to Him. May the King answer: Above King David was God the Great King; moreover, one day King Jesus would rule from sea to sea.

Psalm 21 is another of the royal psalms of David. Psalm 20 is a prayer of the king for God's blessing on his army. Psalm 21 is an assurance of God's blessing on the king. Both psalms, as is the case with all the royal psalms, speak ultimately of the great King to come, the Lord Jesus. Psalm 21 has four movements: (1) a declaration of praise to God by the king (vv. 1, 2); (2) a review of God's blessing on the king (vv. 3–7); (3) an expectation of the final destruction of all enemies of the king (vv. 8–12); (4) a renewed commitment by the people to praise God (v. 13).

21:1, 2 joy in Your strength: An ancient king would tend to find joy in his own strength and power (20:7, 8). But a wise king would find pleasure in the Almighty, for all power comes from Him. Your salvation: Ultimately, spiritual salvation may be in view, but the immediate issue is more mundane. One meaning of the Hebrew word salvation is "room to breathe." God had given King David a release from the pressures and constraints that bound him. Jesus speaks of this kind of salvation in Matt. 24:13, as does Paul in Phil. 1:19 (see also James 1:21). his heart's desire: The Lord gives people their aspirations when they are derived from a fundamental desire for God's honor and glory (20:4; 37:4; 145:19).

21:3–7 blessings of goodness: King David acknowledges that all he has is God's gift; his kingship itself (the crown) is a gift from the Lord. But God's greatest gift is life—temporal and eternal. In response to God for His many gifts, David trusts in the LORD, for he knows that this trust is not misplaced (15:5). These words of this passage should not be limited to King David, for they also speak generally of God's blessings on all believers. Each of us shares in the blessings of true royalty when we place our trust in the Lord, the Great King.

21:8–10 As is customary in the Psalms, the enemies of the king are the enemies of the Lord. Therefore the curse on the enemies is provoked by holy zeal for the glory of God (Num. 25). The time of Your anger may refer to any period of God's judgment, but compare to "the day of the LORD" (Joel 2:1; Zeph. 1:14). Their offspring: The wicked intend evil against the Lord; but He will prevail, causing them to flee from His anger.

- 12 Therefore You will make them turn their back;
You will make ready Your arrows on Your string toward their faces.
- 13 Be exalted, O LORD, in Your own strength!
We will sing and praise Your power.

21:13 Be exalted: The psalmist concludes with a shout of joy as he leads the faithful people in praising God for the promise of His final victory.

Psalm 22 is a profound lament psalm that concludes as a triumphant psalm of praise for God’s deliverance. Although this psalm speaks of David’s own distress and the Lord’s deliverance of him, it also prophetically describes in remarkable detail Jesus’ crucifixion and resurrection. The language David uses to describe his own predicament is prompted by the Holy Spirit. Thus it could span a thousand years to describe precisely the experiences of the Savior Jesus—both His excruciating death and victorious resurrection. See also Ps. 69, which predicts the emotional and spiritual suffering of Jesus. The title of Psalm 22 indicates that it was sung to the tune “The Deer of the Dawn.” This lengthy poem has two main sections: (1) a description of the agony of impending death—an interplay of lament, confession, and petition (vv. 1–21); (2) an ecstatic celebration of great victory—a series of vows to praise God in the congregation (vv. 22–31).

22:1, 2 With the words My God, My God, David expresses a painful sense of separation from God at a time of great trouble (38:21). These words were quoted by Jesus while in agony on the cross (Matt. 27:46; Mark 15:34).

22:4 Our fathers trusted in You: Even in the midst of great pain, David confesses his faith in the God of his fathers. God has been faithful to earlier generations; surely He will continue to be faithful to those who call upon Him (see v. 21 for God’s faithful answer).

22:6–8 David’s suffering makes him feel as though he were no longer human—instead he feels like a worm. When David was at his lowest, his enemies ridiculed his faith in the Lord. These words also describe the experience of the Savior who endured the verbal abuse of His tormentors (Matt. 27:27–31, 39–44).

22:9 You made Me trust: With troubles and taunts swirling around him, David places his trust in the Lord—the One he has trusted throughout his whole life. David’s response to difficult circumstances is instructive. Instead of doubting God’s goodness, David reaffirms his lifelong faith in the Almighty.

22:11 Be not far from Me: David repeats his original plea (v. 1) for emphasis (vv. 19–21). He cannot endure his suffering without divine support.

22:12–15 David uses striking imagery to describe his distress. He is surrounded by animals—bulls and lions. Moreover, David’s distress is so profound that he feels as if his life has been drained from him, as one might empty a jug of water. These words become even more poignant when they are applied to the sufferings of Jesus on the cross (see John 19:34). My tongue clings to My jaws: Jesus’ words “I thirst” (John 19:28) expressed the pain of terrible thirst. the dust of death: For David, death would be avoided at this time (as in 16:9, 10). For the Savior, however, there was no reprieve.

22:16 dogs: This is the third animal portrayal of the psalmist’s enemies (vv. 12, 13). They pierced My hands and My feet explicitly predicts the crucifixion of the Lord Jesus Christ. The words are merely a figure of speech for the terrifying experiences of David; but as a prophet (Acts 2:30), David spoke accurately of the sufferings of Jesus.

PSALM 23

The LORD the Shepherd of His People

A Psalm of David.

- The LORD is ^amy shepherd;
^bI shall not ¹want.
^{2 c}He makes me to lie down in ²green pastures;
^dHe leads me beside the ³still waters.

22:18 The soldiers at Jesus' crucifixion gambled for His garments, in direct fulfillment of this text (Matt. 27:35).

22:19–21 Up to this point, the focus of this psalm has been on the suffering of the psalmist. The Lord God, who seemed so distant (vv. 1, 11), is now petitioned to draw near, to help, deliver, and save. The Lord is the only source of strength to help David fight off the attacks of his tormentors. The use of animal imagery is now given in reverse order: dog, lion, and wild oxen—in contrast to bulls (v. 12), a lion (v. 13), and dogs (v. 16).

22:22–24 Not only does the psalm describe David's pain and prophetically Jesus' suffering on the cross, it also depicts God's deliverance. The Lord has answered, and David who has suffered so much promises to sing the praises of the Lord, his Deliverer. Nor has He hidden His face: The psalm begins with a sense of desperation based on a feeling of separation from God (v. 1). But the psalm ends with praise and gratitude: In reality God is near, He has answered, and He does save. David's hope has not been misplaced.

22:25, 26 David promises to praise the Lord for His miraculous salvation among other believers—in the great assembly at the temple (13:6). This public proclamation would encourage others to place their trust in the faithful Lord who rescues His people.

22:27–30 All the ends of the world: For David, these words refer to the spread of the news of his deliverance to places far outside of Judah. For the Savior Jesus, these words speak of the eventual spread of the gospel of redemption to all the families of the nations, a fulfillment of God's promise that He would bless all nations through Abraham's descendants (Gen. 12:3). Those who go down to the dust is a common biblical expression for physical death and the resulting decay.

22:31 to a people who will be born: The gospel message of the death and resurrection of Jesus will spread not only geographically but also throughout all time. All people will hear the clear message of what God has done.

Psalm 23 is a psalm of trust. Within the six verses there is a development of the single theme of the first verse: David has no fear or concern, for the Lord is His Shepherd. This psalm of trust presents David in two ways. On the one hand, he is the "sheep" whose Shepherd is the Lord. At the same time, one of the most common descriptions of kingship in the ancient world is that of shepherd. In this sense, David as king was shepherd over the flock of Israel. This means that Ps. 23 is also a royal psalm. Even though the word "king" does not appear in it, this psalm is a description of what it means to be a good ruler. Moreover, the psalm prophetically speaks of Jesus. He is the Good Shepherd whose flock trusts in Him (John 10) and the King whose perfect rule will be established (Luke 23:2, 3; Rev. 17:14). The psalm has two movements: (1) a description of the Lord as Shepherd caring for the psalmist's every need (vv. 1–4); (2) a description of the Lord as Shepherd extending His mercy to all (vv. 5, 6).

23:1 The LORD is my shepherd: The word pictures David uses for God come from his own life and experience. He had been a shepherd in his youth (1 Sam. 16:19).

23:2 Any disturbance or intruder scares sheep. They are very fearful animals and cannot lie down unless they feel totally secure. green

Shepherds and Sheep

Shepherding and goatherding were among the major occupations of Palestine throughout its history. Sheep and goats were sometimes herded together and sometimes herded separately. Either way, the methods were the same. Shepherding had many other occupations that grew up around it, including sheepbreeders, and sheepshearers, who cut the sheep's wool. Ancient shepherds walked in front of their flocks. A flock knew its shepherd's voice and would follow only him. Often for protection, flocks were lodged together at night and separated in the morning when the shepherds called their sheep by name. They provided their flocks with water and food. They knew each sheep and lamb. When one was lost, they went out to find it. Small lambs, unable to keep up with the flock, were often carried next to a shepherd's breast inside the fold of his outer garment. The shepherd also protected his flock, risking his life if necessary.

pastures: David uses eloquent language to express his view of the abundant care God gives to His people. still waters: Sheep are afraid of fast-flowing streams. God's provision of still waters has a soothing effect and calms the sheep.

23:3 He restores my soul: God refreshes His people with His quiet voice and gentle touch. For this reason, the sheep know the Shepherd and are known by Him (John 10:14). For His name's sake: The loving actions of the Shepherd proceed from His nature.

23:4 The valley of the shadow of death can refer to any distressing time in our lives. The awareness of our own mortality often comes with sickness, trials, and hardship. But the Lord, our Protector, can lead us through these dark and difficult valleys to eternal life with Him. There is no need to fear death's power (1 Cor. 15:25–27). You are with me: The Good Shepherd is with us even in what seem the most difficult and troubling situations. Your rod and Your staff: Ancient shepherds used the rod and staff to rescue, protect, and guide the sheep. Thus they become symbols of the Good Shepherd's loving care over His flock. The sheep are not alone, their Shepherd is standing over them, guiding them into safety—just as the Lord stands over us and protects us.

23:5 a table before me: God's provision is so luxurious, it is as though He has prepared a banquet. anoint: Typically an honored guest in the ancient Middle East was anointed with olive oil that contained perfumes. My cup: God's provision is as abundant as the wine offered to a guest by a generous host. The lavish treatment of the guest is indicative of the loving care of God for His people.

23:6 The use of both goodness and mercy to describe God's loyal love intensifies the meaning of the two words. What is described in v. 5 is God's overabundant mercy—love that is in no way deserved. The Hebrew verb follow describes an animal in pursuit. When the Lord is our Shepherd, instead of being stalked by wild beasts we are pursued by the loving care of the Lord. the house of the Lord forever: God's promise for the Israelites was not just for the enjoyment of this life in the land of promise (see 6:1–3); it was also for the full enjoyment of the life to come in His blessed presence (16:9–11; 17:15; 49:15).

Psalm 24, a psalm of David, is one of the royal psalms. The psalm describes the Lord's entrance into the holy city. It may have been sung when David brought the ark of the covenant to Jerusalem (2 Sam. 6:15). This psalm is often linked with Ps. 22; 23, for all three psalms speak prophetically of the Lord Jesus. Psalm 24 also has some affinities with Ps. 15, for both ask and answer the question of who is fit to come into the presence of the Lord. The answer in Ps. 15 focuses on a person's righteousness; the answer in Ps. 24 focuses on the King of glory. Psalm 24 should also be read with Ps. 2; 110, which share a focus on the return of the Lord Jesus Christ to establish His kingdom on earth. This psalm has three movements: (1) praise to God the Creator and Sovereign of the world (vv. 1, 2); (2) an inquiry concerning the appropriate approach to the Lord (vv. 3–6); (3) an anticipation of the King of glory (vv. 7–10).

24:1, 2 The earth is the Lord's: The psalmist praises God as Sovereign over all He has created. These words also set the stage for the question of vv. 3–5: If God is Lord over all, who then may approach Him? those who dwell therein: God's rule extends to all people, even those who do not acknowledge His power. founded it upon the seas: Drawing on the language of Gen. 1 in which God calls the dry land to rise from the watery abyss (Gen. 1:2, 9), David describes God's continued control over the waters.

- 8 Good and upright is the LORD;
Therefore He teaches sinners in the way.

24:3 Who may ascend: As in Ps. 15, those who approach the Holy One to worship Him in the temple in Jerusalem—His holy place—must approach Him in righteousness. This verse highlights the inability of any person except the King of glory to stand before God.

24:4, 5 Clean hands refers to a person's actions; pure heart refers to inner attitude.

24:7 Lift up your heads: The gates of the city seem to sag; the doors appear loose. But they must rouse themselves for the King of glory. One is coming who is worthy to stand in the holy place. As He nears, the gates raise themselves to honor His entry.

24:8 Who is this King: This is praise for the King who is fresh from battle. This is the One who may enter the city, the Lord Himself. Only with the coming of Jesus did the meaning of this ancient poem become clear (see Matt. 21:1–10; Rev. 19).

24:9, 10 The LORD of hosts: The repetition in these verses is for effect and emphasis. This is praise for the coming King.

Psalm 25 is a psalm of lament. But in the middle of his sorrow, David petitions the Lord to forgive him. Although the psalm contains elements of a lament psalm and a penitential psalm, the mixture of the two forms makes the psalm unique. The psalm is an acrostic, with one poetic line for each successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) an introductory appeal that David will not be ashamed before his enemies (vv. 1–3); (2) a call for God to forgive David (vv. 4–7); (3) a focus on the character of God (vv. 8–10); (4) a renewed call for God to forgive David (vv. 11–18); (5) a concluding appeal that David will not be ashamed before his enemies (vv. 19–21); (6) a concluding prayer for Israel (v. 22).

25:1, 2 Let me not be ashamed is the opening and closing appeal of Ps. 25 (v. 20). Shame is the intended end of the enemies of God (35:26), but not of the faithful. who waits: Waiting on the Lord is the equivalent of hoping in Him (25:5; 40:1).

25:4–7 Show me is an appeal to God to enter into David's life more directly, to help him become conformed to the character of God (Rom. 12:1, 2). sins of my youth: Both the sins of immaturity and the transgressions of adulthood need forgiveness (see 1 John 1:9).

25:8 Good and upright is the Lord: In the midst of David's plea for forgiveness, he praises God by speaking of two of God's characteristics. God must be both good and upright. Because He is both, the Lord extends mercy to repentant believers and at the same time promises not to allow the guilty to go unpunished. God will bring justice to this fallen world.

remember

(Heb. zakar) (25:6, 7; 106:45) Strong's #2142

This Hebrew verb has as its basic meaning "to contemplate" or "to call to mind." When it refers to recalling past ideas or events it is translated remember (Gen. 42:9; Num. 11:5). In other passages, it pertains to thinking about the future and is translated dwell on (Eccl. 5:20), consider (Lam. 1:9), and mention (Jer. 20:9). The psalmists frequently call on God to remember His people (106:4) or His mercy (25:6, 7). This does not imply that God has forgotten, but instead it is a request that God would take action according to His promises.

A Prayer for Divine Scrutiny and Redemption

A Psalm of David.

Vindicate ^a me, O LORD,
For I have ^b walked in my integrity.
^c I have also trusted in the LORD;
I shall not slip.
2 ^d Examine me, O LORD, and ¹ prove me;
Try my mind and my heart.
3 For Your lovingkindness is before my eyes,
And ^e I have walked in Your truth.
4 I have not ^f sat with idolatrous mortals,
Nor will I go in with hypocrites.
5 I have ^g hated the assembly of evildoers,
And will not sit with the wicked.
6 I will wash my hands in innocence;
So I will go about Your altar, O LORD,
7 That I may proclaim with the voice of thanksgiving,
And tell of all Your wondrous works.
8 LORD, ^h I have loved the habitation of Your house,
And the place ² where Your glory dwells.
9 ⁱ Do ³ not gather my soul with sinners,
Nor my life with bloodthirsty men,
10 In whose hands is a sinister scheme,
And whose right hand is full of ^j bribes.
11 But as for me, I will walk in my integrity;
Redeem me and be merciful to me.
12 ^k My foot stands in an even place;
In the congregations I will bless the LORD.

25:11–14 Pardon my iniquity: David returns to the subject of his own sinfulness, summarizing vv. 4–7 as well as expressing his desire for the Lord to teach him. fear Him: Those who fear the Lord pay attention to His instructions and thus learn the secrets of God's wisdom (111:10; Prov. 1:7; 3:32).
25:19, 20 Let me not be ashamed is a reprise of the opening verses, with emphasis both on David's enemies (v. 2) and on his continuing stance of waiting in expectant hope (v. 5).
25:22 Redeem Israel: This concluding verse is outside the general acrostic pattern of the psalm. Here David petitions the Lord to be compassionate with the nation Israel just as He has been with David. The Lord was not only the personal Savior of David, but also the Savior of all the Israelites.
Psalm 26 is a psalm of lament in which there is a protest of innocence (Ps. 17; 35; 43; 69). The structure of the Psalm is as follows: (1) a prayer for vindication (vv. 1, 2); (2) an assertion of integrity (vv. 3–5); (3) a vow of praise (vv. 6–8); (4) a prayer for discrimination (vv. 9, 10); (5) an assertion of integrity (vv. 11, 12).
26:1, 2 The Hebrew word for vindicate usually means "to judge"; however, here it means "to declare righteous." my integrity: This is the prayer of a forgiven sinner who is living in the fear of God but whose life has been plagued by undeserved evil. My mind and my heart refer to the innermost person.

26:3, 4 Your lovingkindness: The loyal love (13:5) of God is the recurring focus of the Book of Psalms. have not sat: As in the description of righteousness in 1:1, David declares that he has no part with men of wickedness or idolatry. Instead he has continually sought the Lord.
26:6–8 go about Your altar: The heart of this psalm is the desire to worship God in integrity. In this regard, the poem shares the spirit of Ps. 15. where Your glory dwells: The place where God chose to reveal His glory to His people. The priests interceded for the people with the required offerings. Today "the Most Holy Place" is in the presence of God, where our Savior pleads our case (see Heb. 7:25).
26:9 Do not gather: On the basis of his protests of integrity (vv. 1, 2), David prays for divine discrimination (4:3). God distinguishes those who have responded to His grace from those who have not.
26:12 As always in the Psalms, praise is a public and vocal action that has its proper place in the congregations of believers.

Names and Descriptions of God in the Psalms

The chief purpose of the Psalms is to praise God, and in doing this they describe Him. Below is a list of the numerous titles and descriptions the psalmists use to praise the Lord.

PSALM 27

An Exuberant Declaration of Faith

A Psalm of David.

The LORD is my ^alight and my salvation;
Whom shall I fear?
The ^bLORD is the strength of my life;
Of whom shall I be afraid?
² When the wicked came against me
To ^ceat ¹ up my flesh,
My enemies and foes,
They stumbled and fell.
³ ^dThough an army may encamp against me,
My heart shall not fear;
Though war may rise against me,
In this I will be confident.

⁴ ^eOne thing I have desired of the LORD,
That will I seek:
That I may ^fdwelt in the house of the LORD
All the days of my life,
To behold the ²beauty of the LORD,
And to inquire in His temple.
⁵ For ^gin the time of trouble
He shall hide me in His pavilion;
In the secret place of His tabernacle
He shall hide me;
He shall ^hset me high upon a rock.

⁶ And now ⁱmy head shall be ³lifted up above my enemies all around me;
Therefore I will offer sacrifices of ⁴joy in His tabernacle;
I will sing, yes, I will sing praises to the LORD.

⁷ Hear, O LORD, when I cry with my voice!
Have mercy also upon me, and answer me.
⁸ When You said, “Seek My face,”
My heart said to You, “Your face, LORD, I will seek.”

Psalm 27, a psalm of trust (Ps. 23), begins with David’s affirmation of the reality of God in his life. The poem presents a strong desire to live in the presence of God and points to the ongoing need for believers to continue to “wait” on the Lord. The psalm has six movements: (1) a determination not to fear enemies because of God’s presence (vv. 1–3); (2) a desire to live in the presence of the Lord (vv. 4, 5); (3) an affirmation of praise in God (v. 6); (4) a prayer for God’s continuing presence (vv. 7–10); (5) a prayer for continuing trust in the midst of a life of stress (vv. 11–13); (6) a word of instruction (v. 14). 27:1, 2 Light indicates deliverance from darkness (Gen. 1:3), which is a biblical symbol of evil. The word salvation combined with the word light means “saving light” (3:8). To eat up my flesh: David pictures his enemies as ravenous beasts who would shred his flesh (10:8–10; 22:12–16). 27:4, 5 The phrase dwelt in the house of the LORD expresses David’s desire to be always nearer to God’s presence. The beauty of the LORD speaks of God’s “pleasant nature.” The name Naomi in the Book of Ruth is related to the Hebrew word for beauty. 27:6 Sacrifices of joy are praise offerings the believers bring to God to celebrate the blessings He gives them (Heb. 13:15). 27:8–13 Throughout this psalm, seeking the presence of God (His face) was the psalmist’s highest purpose. Enemies might dissuade

⁹ J Do not hide Your face from me;
Do not turn Your servant away in anger;
You have been my help;
Do not leave me nor forsake me,
O God of my salvation.

¹⁰ k When my father and my mother
forsake me,
Then the LORD will take care of me.

¹¹ l Teach me Your way, O LORD,
And lead me in a smooth path,
because of my enemies.

¹² Do not deliver me to the will of my adversaries;
For m false witnesses have risen
against me,
And such as breathe out violence.

¹³ I would have lost heart, unless I had believed
That I would see the goodness of the LORD
n In the land of the living.

¹⁴ o Wait ⁵ on the LORD;
Be of good courage,
And He shall strengthen your heart;
Wait, I say, on the LORD!

PSALM 29

Praise to God in His Holiness and Majesty

A Psalm of David.

Give ¹ a unto the LORD, O you mighty ones,

the righteous from seeking the presence of the Lord. But the psalmist wants to know God's presence in this life—in the land of the living.

27:14 To wait on the LORD is to demonstrate confident expectation. The Hebrew word for wait may also be translated "hope." To hope in God is to wait for His timing and His action (40:1; Is. 40:31). Psalm 28, a psalm of lament, is attributed to David. The psalm includes a prayer against David's enemies and a royal invocation of praise to the Lord. The psalm has four movements: (1) an appeal to God that He not be silent (vv. 1, 2); (2) a petition to be distinguished from the wicked and their deserved punishment (vv. 3–5); (3) a blessing of the Lord for His work in the psalmist's life (vv. 6, 7); (4) praise for the Lord who delivers His anointed and His people (vv. 8, 9).

28:1, 2 my Rock: For further references to God as a fortress and refuge, see 91:1, 2. Do not be silent: One of the ways David senses the distance of God is His "silence" (13:1; 22:1). David might be referring merely to his lack of a sense of intimacy with God (27:4, 5), but it is also possible that he is awaiting a specific word from the Lord through a prophet or a priest. The pit is one of the terms for death in the Psalms (9:17, 18; 16:10; 143:7). As in 6:5, David asks to be rescued from death so that he might live to praise God. lift up my hands: One of the standard postures for prayer in the Bible (134:2).

28:3–5 Do not take me away: Again, the psalmist is asking to be delivered from death (6:5). according to their deeds: David pronounces his curse on the wicked, from whom he wishes to be distinguished (4:3). they do not regard: The language here is similar to that of Paul in Rom. 1:18–32. One day even the wicked will have to acknowledge God as their Creator and give Him the glory He deserves.

28:6, 7 Blessed be the Lord: See 103:1, 2 for a development of this theme. Because the plea of the psalmist has been heard, the last section of the poem is a hymn of praise (138:1).

28:8, 9 The term His anointed acknowledges God's covenant with David, His promise that He would be David's God and David would be His representative. This passage became a heritage of the monarchy, a treasure for each godly king in the Davidic line to go back to for strength and encouragement. Shepherd them: As in Ps. 23; 80, the comparison of God with a shepherd is an image of the loving care of a great king (Eccl. 12:11). This image also foreshadows Jesus, the coming King and the Good Shepherd (John 10:11).

Psalm 29 is a worship psalm (see also Ps. 15). But it is also a royal psalm that uses striking language to assert the sovereign reign of the Almighty. David has taken over some of the vocabulary and poetic style of the Canaanites and used it to praise the living God.

PSALM 30

The Blessedness of Answered Prayer

A Psalm. A Song ^a at the dedication of the house of David.

- I will extol You, O LORD, for You have ^b lifted me up,
 And have not let my foes ^c rejoice over me.
- 2 O LORD my God, I cried out to You,
 And You ^d healed me.
- 3 O LORD, ^e You brought my soul up from the grave;
 You have kept me alive, ^f that I should not go down to the pit.
- 4 ^f Sing praise to the LORD, you saints of His,
 And give thanks at the remembrance of ² His holy name.
- 5 For ^g His anger is but for a moment,
^h His favor is for life;
 Weeping may endure for a night,
 But ³ joy comes in the morning.
- 6 Now in my prosperity I said,
 “I shall never be ^d moved.”
- 7 LORD, by Your favor You have made my mountain stand strong;
ⁱ You hid Your face, and I was troubled.

As in the case of Ps. 93, the result is both a debunking of Baal and an unusual way of praising the true God of Israel. The psalm has three movements: (1) a call to the angels and all people to acknowledge the supremacy of God (vv. 1, 2); (2) a description of the living God as Lord over storms (vv. 3–9); (3) a blessing from God, who is enthroned as King on high, to His people (vv. 10, 11).

29:1 Give here means “to ascribe.” O you mighty ones means “O sons of gods.” This Hebrew phrase refers to spiritual beings who are in the presence of God. We know these beings to be angels. The Hebrew words are similar to those of Job 1:6, which also describes the angels who are in the presence of God.

29:2 glory due to His name: The call is for the angelic hosts to acknowledge fully the wonder of God. The poets of the Bible delighted in taking the ideas of the Canaanites and then stripping them of their essentials. See the scathing attacks on idolatry in 115:4–8; Is. 41:21–29. Here the poet takes a treasured image of Canaanite thought—Baal with other gods bowing before him—and turns it inside out. It is not Baal, but the true God who is worshiped. He is worshiped not by gods who do not even exist, but by His own angels.

29:3 The voice of the LORD: Both the language and the parallelism of this verse directly reflect Canaanite poetry. Baal was believed to be the god of the storm who thundered in the heavens. Here the sound of thunder is a symbol of the voice of God. The phrase “the voice of the LORD” occurs seven times in the passage (vv. 3–9), like rapidly succeeding peals of thunder.

29:5–9 cedars of Lebanon: There is a dramatic energy to these verses as they trace the movement of the storm from the north of Lebanon and Sirion, an ancient name for Mt. Hermon (Deut. 3:9) to Kadesh in the south. Nothing stops the advance of the storm; its effects reach from sea to land, from north to south, from animals to trees. As at the beginning of the psalm, all the angels in the heavenly sanctuary acknowledge the surpassing glory of the omnipotent God.

29:10, 11 As Baal was supposed to have been victorious over the waters, here it is God who is the true victor over all. He even controls the waters at the height of their destructive power, the Flood. There is no one to oppose His glorious rule; He is King forever. The LORD will give strength: Since He is the true God, there is none other. Only He can empower His people.

Psalm 30, a psalm of declarative praise, commemorates a time when God delivered David from mortal illness. The psalm has five movements: (1) a determination to praise the Lord (v. 1); (2) a report of deliverance (vv. 2, 3); (3) a call for others to join in the praise of the Lord (vv. 4, 5); (4) a report of the psalmist’s mortal illness (vv. 6–10); (5) a presentation of the psalmist’s praise to the Lord (vv. 11, 12).

30:1 I will extol You: David begins his song with a strong determination to praise God.

30:2, 3 up from the grave: David is not reporting a resurrection, but a deliverance from a nearly fatal illness. As in 28:1, the psalmist describes death as a great pit into which a person drops into the enveloping darkness of the unknown.

30:4, 5 Possibly David judges his illness to be in some way related to God’s anger. in the morning: For a sick person, nothing is so long as a painful, sleepless night; few things are as desired as the coming of morning (5:3; 130:6; 143:8).

The Music of the Psalms

The Book of Psalms is the hymnal of ancient Israel. The psalms are ancient lyrics preserved with occasional musical notations. Most of these musical notations are found in the superscriptions or titles. For instance, many are directed “To the Chief Musician” (Ps. 31). Others call for musical accompaniment. For example, Ps. 4 calls for stringed instruments, Ps. 5 for flutes, Ps. 6 for an eight-stringed harp, and Ps. 8 for the instrument of Gath. The titles sometimes specify the tune to be used, such as “Death of the Son” in Ps. 9 and “The Lilies” in Ps. 45. In this way the superscriptions contain hints of the musical nature of the psalms. Furthermore the psalms themselves present a balanced picture of the use of music in worship. For example, in Ps. 33 the purpose of godly music is to rejoice in the God who has given new life.

The LORD a Fortress in Adversity

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

*I*n ^a You, O LORD, I ¹ put my trust;

30:9, 10 As in 6:5, the psalmist pleads with God to save his life so that he can fulfill his promise to praise God in the worship of the community. The emphasis is on singing praise to God in this life. Helper can be translated “power” or “strength” (33:20). What a sick person needs is strength for recovery: God is that powerful force. 30:11, 12 mourning into dancing: The psalmist has been transformed and renewed because of God’s blessing on his life. He boasts in God as he fulfills his vow of praise. My glory refers to the psalmist’s inner being (16:9). Psalm 31 is a psalm of lament, but it has such a strong element of trust that it can also be classified as a psalm of trust (see Ps. 23 for an example). The psalms of trust grow out of the confession of trust that occurs in the psalms of lament. In this psalm, the relationship between the two classifications is apparent. There are two major sections: (1) the presentation of lament in the context of trust (vv. 1–18); (2) the presentation of praise in the context of lament (vv. 19–24).

31:1–3 The phrase I put my trust pictures the action of a bird seeking refuge under its mother’s wings (11:1; 17:7; 91:1–4). A different word for trust occurs in vv. 6, 14, which has the connotation of leaning on someone or something (Prov. 3:5, 6). The imagery of God as the rock and fortress for the believer recurs often in the Psalms (91:1–3). 31:5 With the words into Your hand I commit my spirit, David expresses a complete dependence on God—his life is in God’s hands to do with as He pleases. These words were spoken by Jesus on the cross shortly before His death (Luke 23:46) and by Stephen before his death (Acts 7:59). 31:9–11 I am in trouble are classic words of lament and thus begin the lament section of this psalm. My eye wastes away: David uses similar language in 6:7 to express his sorrow. a reproach: As in the case of Ps. 30, it is possible that what faces the psalmist is a terrible illness—perhaps a physical condition that makes him repulsive to others.

- 11 ¹ I am a ⁷ reproach among all my enemies,
But ^m especially among my neighbors,
And am repulsive to my acquaintances;
ⁿ Those who see me outside flee from me.
12 ^o I am forgotten like a dead man, out of mind;
I am like a ⁸ broken vessel.
13 ^p For I hear the slander of many;
^q Fear is on every side;
While they ^r take counsel together against me,
They scheme to take away my life.
14 But as for me, I trust in You, O LORD;
I say, “You are my God.”
15 My times are in Your ^s hand;
Deliver me from the hand of my enemies,
And from those who persecute me.
16 ^t Make Your face shine upon Your servant;
Save me for Your mercies’ sake.

PSALM 32

The Joy of Forgiveness

A Psalm of David. A ¹ Contemplation.

- Blessed is he whose ^a transgression is forgiven,
Whose sin is covered.
2 Blessed is the man to whom the LORD ^b does not ² impute iniquity,
And ^c in whose spirit there is no deceit.
3 When I kept silent, my bones grew old
Through my groaning all the day long.
4 For day and night Your ^d hand was heavy upon me;
My vitality was turned into the drought of summer. Selah

31:15–18 With the words my times are in Your hand, David reaffirms his earlier expression of complete dependence on the Lord (v. 5). David petitions the Lord, who is in complete control of his life, for deliverance. Your face shine: As in 4:6, this expression grows out of the words of the Aaronic benediction in Num. 6:24–26. It is a plea for God to “smile” in favor on David.

31:19–22 This verse begins the praise section of the psalm. David affirms that the delights of knowing God far outweigh any other kind of pleasure. the secret place: God makes His people safe in the intimacy of His friendship (27:5). I said in my haste: The psalmist says things in his pain that he would not say under normal circumstances.

31:23, 24 David encourages the community to join him in praising God. Of all the sacrifices offered in the OT period, only the sacrifice of praise continues in NT worship (Heb. 13:15). All you who hope in the LORD is a characteristic term of piety in the Bible.

Psalm 32, a wisdom psalm, is also one of the great penitential psalms. It is generally believed that this psalm—like Ps. 51—has its origin in David’s response to God following his infamous affair with Bathsheba (2 Sam. 11). It is one of the marks of the integrity of Scripture that the low points as well as the triumphs of its principal characters are described. The structure of this psalm is as follows:

(1) a description of blessing (vv. 1, 2); (2) a report of David’s agony before he confessed his sins (vv. 3–5); (3) a lesson to others based on David’s experience with the Lord (vv. 6, 7); (4) an oracle from the Lord on righteous living (vv. 8, 9); (5) concluding praise to the Lord for His mercy (vv. 10, 11).

32:1 Blessed, the word that begins the Book of Psalms (1:1), means “to be happy.” It is appropriate that this term is used of both the righteous person of the first psalm and the confessed sinner in this psalm. sin is covered: The poet describes God’s dealing with sin in various ways. Sin can be taken away, the basic meaning of the word forgiven, and covered, the basic meaning of atonement.

32:3–5 I kept silent: The silence was a stubborn resistance to admitting guilt, a hope that in time the sin and its penalty would go away. The more David delayed his confession, the more he suffered. David realized it was not just his conscience or his feelings that were assaulting him, but the heavy hand of God (38:1, 6–8). No matter who else is hurt, the principal offense of any sin is always against the Lord. You forgave: The consequences of David’s sin with Bathsheba remained despite God’s forgiveness (2 Sam. 12:13–20). But at this point, the greater news was God’s forgiveness. God had restored His relationship with David.

- ⁵ I acknowledged my sin to You,
And my iniquity I have not hidden.
^e I said, "I will confess my transgressions to the LORD,"
And You forgave the iniquity of my 32:6 who is godly: On the basis of his own experience, David instructs the congregation. They too can experience forgiveness if they will come to the Lord in faith as David has.

32:7 The psalm has quick and dramatic shifts. After addressing the congregation, David speaks directly to God: You are my hiding place.

32:8, 9 I will instruct you: The speaker changes. The Lord "comes into the psalm" to instruct the people. He exhorts the people not to be like a horse that will not go where its rider wants it to go; it has to be disciplined because it is stubborn. God does not want to muzzle or bridle His people like a horse. He expects His servants to respond promptly to Him of their own accord.

32:10, 11 The psalmist resumes his song by contrasting the many sorrows of the wicked with the joy of the forgiven sinner. He then calls for all the righteous to join him in public praise of the wonder of God's mercy.

Psalm 33, a psalm of descriptive praise, calls for all people to join Israel's faithful in praising God and waiting on (trusting in) the Lord. This is one of the few anonymous psalms in Book I (see also Ps. 1; 2; 10). The structure is as follows: (1) a call for the righteous to praise God, in view of His righteous acts in creation (vv. 1-7); (2) a call for the nations to praise God, in view of His sovereign work in creation (vv. 8-12); (3) a call for the people to praise God, in view of His care of creation (vv. 13-19); (4) a concluding affirmation of confidence in God (vv. 20-22).

33:1-3 God sees the praise from believers as beautiful (147:1). harp: Throughout the Psalms, many instruments are employed to praise the name of the Lord (98:5; 150:3-5). to Him: Praise is always directed to One who deserves all praise, the Lord Almighty. 33:4, 5 Although the world is filled with evil and with people who have no thought of God (Ps. 14), believers must look beyond the apparent confusion of the world to see God's goodness—the goodness that manifests itself every time the sun rises, a bird sings, and a mother lovingly embraces her child. Out of His goodness, God holds together the earth and provides for the sustenance of all people. One day God's goodness will prevail over all evil (98:2). 33:6, 7 The reference to God's control of the waters of the sea has a twofold origin (24:2; 93:3, 4). It grows out of the creation story in Gen. 1, in which God brings dry land from the waters and establishes His place for the waters that remain (Gen. 1:6-10). The idea also grows out of Canaanite religious ideas, for the Canaanites considered the seas as malevolent deities. But the Lord alone is God. No power—no matter how evil—is a threat to His control (Job 26:10; Prov. 8:28, 29).

33:8, 9 The Bible presents the fear of the Lord as a mark of reverence and awe on the part of those who recognize Him as Lord (40:3). He spoke: The account of creation in Gen. 1 describes God's word as the sole source of creation. This psalm emphasizes God's word as the controlling element in creation (vv. 4, 6). It was by God's "breath" (v. 6) that He made all things.

33:10-12 In contrast to the ineffective counsel of the nations, the counsel of God is wise counsel that lasts forever. Blessed means to be manifestly happy; the same word is used at the beginning of Ps. 1. Those who listen to God's counsel will be happy.

- 11 ^h The counsel of the LORD stands forever,
The plans of His heart to all generations.
- 12 Blessed is the nation whose God is the LORD,
The people He has ⁱ chosen as His own inheritance.
- 13 ^j The LORD looks from heaven;
He sees all the sons of men.
- 14 From the place of His dwelling He looks
On all the inhabitants of the earth;
- 15 He fashions their hearts individually;
^k He ³ considers all their works.
- 16 ^l No king is saved by the multitude of an army;
A mighty man is not delivered by great strength.

PSALM 34

The Happiness of Those Who Trust in God

A Psalm of David ^a when he pretended madness before Abimelech, who drove him away, and he departed.

I will ^b bless the LORD at all times;
His praise shall continually be in my mouth.

33:13–15 The LORD looks on humankind with a sense of discriminating pleasure. The emphasis of this section is not condemnation, but discrimination.

33:16, 17 army: People should not rely on physical strength or material resources to save them. Salvation belongs to the Lord (3:8), both for spiritual deliverance and for physical strength.

33:18, 19 eye of the LORD: This is a particularly warm image of God's care for His people. God watches all people, but He looks with delight on those who fear Him and hope in His mercy (147:11).

33:20–22 waits: To wait on God is to adopt a stance of resolute faith (40:1). Just as we hope: The psalm concludes with a phrase similar to "Amen." This is a "yes" to God's mercy, a statement of agreement with His provisions.

Psalm 34 is a wisdom psalm and a psalm of praise. It is written in the form of an acrostic, with one verse for each letter of the Hebrew alphabet. One verse appears to have dropped out at some point; there is no verse for the Hebrew letter waw, that would otherwise appear after v. 5. The title of the psalm ascribes it to David and specifies that it was written to commemorate his escape from Abimelech the king of Gath (1 Sam. 21:10–15). The name of the king in 1 Sam. 21 is Achish. It is believed that Abimelech was a throne name and Achish a personal name. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a call for the congregation to join the psalmist in praise (vv. 1–3); (2) a declaration concerning the psalmist's deliverance from trouble (vv. 4–7); (3) instruction about the fear of the Lord (vv. 8–14); (4) a declaration of praise to the Lord (vv. 15–22).

34:1–3 at all times: The determination of David to praise God is similar to the words of Paul in 1 Thess. 5:18. Exalt His name together is David's call for the congregation to join him in his praise of God.

Psalms on Creation

The poets of the Old Testament loved to describe the natural world. Like all people in that ancient time, they lived closer to nature than do most of us. They enjoyed nature's beautiful and fascinating manifestations. They observed the ways of birds and badgers, the flowing rivers, and the pulsing of the waves. In this respect the biblical poets have much in common with many other poets throughout history.

But in two important ways the biblical poets were different from their neighbors in the ancient Middle East. First, they resisted the temptation to deify nature. Their neighbors did not merely rhapsodize about birds and trees, hills and seas—they worshiped them. The biblical poets learned to do something truly new. Namely, they loved nature but did not bow to it. They enjoyed nature but did not worship it.

The second distinctive of the biblical poets was their identification of "nature." For them, nature was always "creation." The word nature does not itself deify the world, but it still implies that the world has its own sense of being, its own power, and its own dynamic. On the other hand, the word creation is a term of faith. It expresses the belief that everything that exists is made by God. All the beauty and splendor of the universe comes from God's creative hands.

In some ways, the modern emphasis on "Mother Earth" is simply a revival of the goddess cults of the ancient Middle East. However, the authors of the creation psalms have the right perspective. We can express our enjoyment of creation without worshipping it. We can love the earth because we first love its Creator. We can rejoice in the marvels of nature—the sparkling waterfall and the soaring eagle—because we know they are the handiwork of God. Any efforts to "save" the earth should arise from our worship of its Creator and our knowledge that we are called to responsible stewardship because everything God created is a gift from Him.

PSALM 35

The LORD the Avenger of His People

A Psalm of David.

Plead ¹my cause, O LORD, with those who strive with me;
Fight against those who fight against me.

34:4-7 He heard me is a classic statement of praise in the psalms. God is praised for the deliverance He provides in response to the prayers of His people (40:1). were radiant: Those who came to God in prayer as David did found themselves transformed; it was as if they also experienced what Moses had on Mt. Sinai (Ex. 34:29; 2 Cor. 3:18). Poor man refers to the needy as well as the humble, whom the Lord delights to deliver (147:6). The phrase the angel of the LORD and the name of God are often interchanged. With the sense of God surrounding or hovering over the believer in this manner, there is no need to fear—even in the most desperate times.

34:8, 9 The center of biblical mission in the OT is found in the words taste and see. The task of Israel was to attract the nations to their God. For their faithfulness to Him, God had promised to bless them abundantly, and when the nations saw this blessing they would see that the living God was with them. In the midst of a world of gods who were not good at all, there was one living God, and He was altogether good (100:5). Fear is a call to awe, wonder, worship, and reverence (Prov. 1:7). To fear God is to respond to Him in piety and obedience.

34:10 People who live by their wits may eat as infrequently as young lions. shall not lack: As is true of 23:1, this is not a categorical statement. Time after time, however, the believer is able to attest to the ways God has met needs.

34:11-14 Come, you children: David took on the role of a wisdom teacher addressing the young people who are in his charge (Prov. 3:1-12). Depart from evil: The same sentiment is found in 37:27.

34:15, 16 In this context, the eyes of the LORD symbolize His care and protection.

34:17-19 the LORD hears: With slight variations, this is a reprise of v. 6. The LORD is near: When the Scriptures speak of God being near, it is to comfort the believer with a sense of His care.

34:20 guards all his bones: This verse, which speaks of the Lord's preservation of the righteous, notes that not a bone is broken. John 19:33-36 shows that the words of this verse were fulfilled in detail in the death of Jesus. Despite the terrible suffering the Savior endured, none of His bones were broken. When the Roman soldiers came to break Jesus' legs to hasten His death, they found that He had already died.

34:22 This verse is outside the acrostic pattern; it summarizes the psalm, giving appropriate praise to the Lord who saves those who put their faith in Him (see 1 Tim. 4:10).

Psalm 35 is a psalm of lament and a protest of innocence (Ps. 17; 26; 43; 69). Like Ps. 94, this poem by David places an unusual emphasis on the role of his enemies. Sometimes it is called an imprecatory psalm. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) an appeal to God the Warrior and Judge to plead the psalmist's cause (vv. 1-3); (2) a series of petitions for God to dishonor His enemies, deliver His servant, and glorify Himself (vv. 4-10); (3) a second series of petitions and promises (vv. 11–18); (4) a third series of petitions and promises (vv. 19–28).

35:1–3 Plead my cause is the classic protest of innocence (Ps. 17; 26; 43; 69). David has been wrongly attacked, so he prays that God will deliver him from these assaults (see Ps. 94). stand up for my help: David is not afraid to ask God to take up arms like a soldier and fight for him. The psalmist does not shrink from asking the Lord to comfort him by saying the words I am your salvation. All these demands demonstrated David's complete dependence on the Lord.
35:4–7 David's first petition calls for shame on his enemies (v. 26). This is not just a call to embarrass them; it is a call for final judgment. In this instance, the angel of the Lord is a scourge (contrast 34:7). without cause: Here is the heart of David's position: he has not done anything to cause this evil attack upon himself.

35:9, 10 These two verses are the first prayer of confidence in this psalm (vv. 17, 27). All my bones refers to the inner being, the total person. who is like You: There is nothing in all the universe to be compared with God.
35:11–15 The psalmist begins his second cycle of petition with reference to treacherous witnesses, like the false witnesses in the story of Jezebel and Naboth in 1 Kin. 21. The actions of these witnesses are even more shameful because they had received the help of the psalmist in their own times of need. they rejoiced: The ferocity of these witnesses is appalling. The psalmist finds that they are like animals in the way they treat him, rejoicing that troubles have come upon him.

And I did not know it;
 They tore at me and did not cease;
 16 With ungodly mockers at feasts
 They gnashed at me with their teeth.

17 Lord, how long will You ^klook on?

 My precious life from the lions.

PSALM 36

Man's Wickedness and God's Perfections

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David the servant of the LORD.

An oracle within my heart concerning the transgression of the wicked:
^aThere is no fear of God before his eyes.

2 For he flatters himself in his own eyes,
 When he finds out his iniquity and when he hates.

3 The words of his mouth are wickedness and deceit;
^bHe has ceased to be wise and to do good.

4 ^cHe devises wickedness on his bed;
 He sets himself ^din a way that is not good;
 He does not ⁱabhor ^eevil.

35:18 give You thanks: This is the second of the vows of praise that follow each cycle of petition in this psalm (vv. 9, 10, 27, 28). The Hebrew word for thanks means “to make public acknowledgment,” to praise God in the community (122:4; 136:1).

35:19–21 The enemies would rejoice if someone like David fell, who had trusted in the Lord. hate me without a cause: Again, David asserts his innocence (v. 7). The fact that he is hated for no cause is baffling and discouraging. The passage also predicts the suffering of the Savior Jesus (John 15:23–25). peace: Far more than simply an absence of war, the biblical peace has the idea of wholeness, things as they ought to be. Note that the contrasting opposite here is not war, but deceit. Aha, aha: These contemptuous sneers are similar to the assaults in 22:7.

35:22–25 You have seen: The wicked were not the only ones who have seen David’s grave distress (v. 21); God has also seen his pain. Stir up Yourself: The people of Israel know that God, unlike the false gods (1 Kin. 18:27), never sleeps (121:4; Is. 40:28). Yet for David, it seems as though God is napping (44:23).

35:26–28 The phrase be ashamed refers not to simple embarrassment, but to the revelation of the complete emptiness of wickedness before the judgment seat of God (14:5; 31:17; 36:12). Who favor: Only here do we learn that David has defenders: those who are on his side will share his joy when he is saved.

Psalm 36 is a wisdom psalm that gives a revelation of the nature of sin and an exaltation of God’s unfailing love (see also Ps. 14; 53). The structure is as follows: (1) a revelation of the nature of sin (vv. 1–4); (2) praises to God, centering on His loyal love (vv. 5–9); (3) a prayer for God to continue His loyal love to His people even in the context of His final judgment (vv. 10–12).

36:1–4 The term oracle was used by the prophets of the OT to mean a divine utterance. In Mic. 4:6 the same Hebrew word is translated “says the LORD.” In this psalm, David “the prophet” (Acts 2:30) has received a prophetic revelation as striking as any among the sons of the prophets. He has received divine insight into the nature of wickedness. no fear of God: Underlying wickedness is a complete disregard for the reality of God in a person’s life and in the world. The word translated fear in this psalm is the same word used for “terror” at the final judgment (14:5). flatters himself: With no sense of God or of final judgment, the wicked become egotistical. words of his mouth: The theme of the wicked mouth is developed in Ps. 12. ceased to be wise: The wisdom that the psalmist observes here is the practical outworking of the skill of sound living. Wickedness is crookedness and perversity.

- 5 Your mercy, O LORD, is in the heavens;
Your faithfulness reaches to the clouds.
- 6 Your righteousness is like the ²great
mountains;
^fYour judgments are a great deep;
O LORD, You preserve man and beast.
- 7 How precious is Your lovingkindness,
O God!
Therefore the children of men ^gput

Your wings.
- 8 ^hThey are abundantly satisfied with the fullness of Your house,
And You give them drink from ⁱthe river of Your pleasures.
- 9 ^jFor with You is the fountain of life;
^kIn Your light we see light.
- 10 Oh, continue Your lovingkindness to those who know You,
And Your righteousness to the upright in heart.
- 11 Let not the foot of pride come
against me,
And let not the hand of the wicked drive me away.
- 12 There the workers of iniquity have fallen;
They have been cast down and are not able to rise.

- 12 The wicked plots against the just,
^oAnd gnashes at him with his teeth.

36:5, 6 The contrast of these verses with the previous ones is extreme. Just as the revelation of depravity in vv. 1–4 is awful, the revelation of the Lord's love is even more wonderful. great mountains . . . great deep: The contrasts continue with David ranging from the highest mountains to the depths of the sea to describe the perfect character of God. The height of the great mountains can be compared to how great God's righteousness is; the depth of the seas can be compared with how mysterious and inaccessible God's true judgments are. The word deep is also used in Gen. 1:2. 36:7–9 their trust: Because of God's nature, righteous men and women come to Him like nestlings seeking shelter under the wings of the mother bird (7:1; 11:1; 16:1; 31:1). Although the wicked are never satisfied (Prov. 27:20), the one who trusts in the Lord can find ample satisfaction. fountain of life: God's salvation and continuing mercy to His people are often described in terms of life-giving water (Is. 12:3; Jer. 2:13).

36:10–12 continue: On the basis of two of the revelations this psalm presents—the nature of the wicked (vv. 1–4) and the nature of God's loyal love (vv. 5–9)—David prays that God's loyal love will continue in the lives of His people. There the workers of iniquity have fallen: This is the third revelation in this psalm. David is given a glimpse of the horror of divine judgment on the wicked. In effect, the psalmist "sees" the judgment scene and shudders.

Psalm 37 is a wisdom psalm written as an acrostic. Its simple message is to maintain patience in the midst of troubles. God's people can have such patience because they know that their eternal reward will abundantly surpass any temporal troubles. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) the need for patience in light of the apparent success of the wicked (vv. 1–11); (2) the need for patience in light of the final judgment of the wicked (vv. 12–22); (3) encouragement for the righteous in view of the role of the wicked (vv. 23–33); (4) a renewed call for patience in view of the apparent success of the wicked (vv. 34–40).

37:1–4 Do not fret is the theme of this psalm. When the wicked seem to prosper, the psalmist calls for patience, a renewed sense of dependence on the Lord, and a new sense of pleasure in knowing Him. the desires of your heart: When the righteous have desires that spring from the Lord, the Lord will surely fulfill those desires. 37:5 To commit your way means "to roll it over on" the Lord. What a splendid picture of trusting in Him.

37:7, 8 Rest . . . wait patiently: These commands reemphasize the major point of the psalm, "do not fret" (v. 1). This is not a call to be inactive, but to depend actively on the living Lord. The psalm gives us a commandment to cease from worry.

37:9–11 The wicked sometimes appear to prosper; but constantly throughout this psalm the writer reminds his listeners that they will be cut off, yet a little while: From God's vantage point, the flourishing of the wicked is short (Eccl. 3:16, 17). the meek shall

- ³⁵ I have seen the wicked in great power,
And spreading himself like a native green tree.

inherit the earth: Jesus quoted these words in Matt. 5:5, confirming the OT and showing the importance of the Psalms in His life.

37:13 The Lord laughs: These words recall the scornful laughter in 2:4. What sheer horror for the wicked to hear God's laughter directed against them! Contrast this laughter with the delight that the Lord finds in the ways of the righteous (see v. 23).

37:18 The phrase the LORD knows the days of the upright has several meanings: (1) God knows our circumstances and provides for us; (2) God knows how long we will live and will sustain us to the end (90:12); (3) God knows that our days on earth are only the beginning of our days with Him in eternity.

37:21 the righteous shows mercy: There are many contrasts between the wicked and the righteous in the wisdom psalms; this one is based on contrasting attitudes toward possessions (15:5; 112:5). Of all the things on earth that God has created, only one will last—people. All material things will pass away (2 Pet. 3:10–12).

37:24 upholds him: The righteous know that when they fall, they are never left lying there; when they stumble, they are never completely forsaken.

37:25 begging bread: These words may be viewed from two perspectives: (1) The hunger of the righteous is temporary and will be replaced by fullness in the days to come; and (2) there is a hunger that the righteous never need to suffer: they are never deprived of the Lord's presence (see John 6:35). Perhaps this is also a call to help the righteous when they do suffer hunger in this world.

37:27–29 The same command to depart from evil is found in 34:14. In this life people must choose either to cling to God and righteousness, or to pursue evil. The way of God leads to everlasting life. the LORD loves justice: Because God stands opposed to injustice, to support injustice is to become His enemy. God's people ought to love the things that He loves and detest the things that He hates.

37:31 in his heart: At numerous places in the Psalms, the poet declares his love for God's law and his effort to make it integral to his life (1:2; 19:7–11; 119:1–176).

37:34, 35 To wait on the LORD is an act of faith; not to wait on Him is foolishness. like a native green tree: David admits that the wicked might prosper, but he also affirms that they will not enjoy success forever.

- 36 Yet ⁷he passed away, and behold, he was no more;
Indeed I sought him, but he could not be found.
- 37 Mark the blameless man, and observe the upright;
For the future of that man is peace.
- 38 ^cBut the transgressors shall be destroyed together;
The future of the wicked shall be cut off.
- 39 But the salvation of the righteous is from the LORD;
He is their strength ^din the time of trouble.
- 40 And ^ethe LORD shall help them and deliver them;
He shall deliver them from the wicked,
And save them,
^fBecause they trust in Him.

Prayer in Time of Chastening

A Psalm of David. ^aTo bring to remembrance.

- O LORD, do not ^brebuke me in Your wrath,
Nor chasten me in Your hot displeasure!
- 2 For Your arrows pierce me deeply,
And Your hand presses me down.
- 3 There is no soundness in my flesh

² I wait for You,
O LORD ³ answer

- 5 My wounds are foul and festering
Because of my foolishness.
- 6 I am ¹troubled, I am bowed down greatly;
I go mourning all the day long.
- 7 For my loins are full of inflammation,
And there is no soundness in my flesh.
- 8 I am feeble and severely broken;
I groan because of the turmoil of my heart.
- 9 Lord, all my desire is before You;
And my sighing is not hidden from You.
- 10 My heart pants, my strength fails me;
As for the light of my eyes, it also has gone from me.
- 11 My loved ones and my friends ^cstand aloof from my plague,
And my relatives stand afar off.
- 12 Those also who seek my life lay snares for me;
Those who seek my hurt speak of destruction,
And plan deception all the day long.
- 13 But I, like a deaf man, do not hear;
And I am like a mute who does not open his mouth.
- 14 Thus I am like a man who does not hear,
And in whose mouth is no response.
- 15 For ²in You, O LORD, ^dI hope;
You will ³hear, O Lord my God.
- 16 For I said, "Hear me, lest they rejoice over me, Lest, when my foot slips, they exalt themselves against me."

37:37 In this context peace suggests "everything as it ought to be." The destiny of the righteous is in sharp contrast to the fate of the wicked (1:4-6).

37:39, 40 salvation: The principal issue here is not regeneration but sanctification—the daily deliverance of God's people from temptation and evil. they trust: The psalm concludes with the righteous trusting God, like chicks running to the wings of their mother (17:8; 36:7).

Psalm 38 is a psalm of lament, specifically a penitential psalm. In it, David pleads earnestly for the mercy of God even when he senses God's discipline. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) a plea to God to stop rebuking (vv. 1-5); (2) a description of David's suffering (vv. 6-8); (3) a second plea based on the actions of David's friends and foes (vv. 9-12); (4) a commitment by David to trust solely in the Lord even in the time of His anger (vv. 13-16); (5) a third plea for deliverance based on David's weakening condition (vv. 17-20); (6) a concluding plea based on David's certainty that there is salvation in the Lord alone (vv. 21, 22).

38:1-4 As in 6:1, David has two concerns. His first concern is the painful distress he feels during the time of God's discipline on his life (32:4). David's second concern is that God might be placing His heavy hand on him in wrath, as He does on the wicked (37:22). my iniquities have gone over my head: David uses expressive language to describe his loss of control: he cannot free himself from the burden of sin (69:5). This is similar to Paul speaking of himself as the "chief" of sinners (1 Tim. 1:15).

38:6 I am troubled: David feels he is carrying an immense load. In this case, the heavy load is guilt.

38:9-12 light of my eyes: As in 13:3, David complains that he is about to lose his vision: probably he means that an oppression like death seems about to overcome him. My loved ones: David expresses sorrow because even those closest to him are leaving him. See Job's similar experience in Job 2:9, 10.

38:13 David is determined, even in the gravest suffering, not to present an opportunity for his enemies to condemn the name of the Lord. In this, David's silence foreshadows the silence of the Savior Jesus before His accusers (see Mark 14:61).

17 ^cFor I am ready to fall,
And my sorrow is continually
before me.
18 For I will ^fdeclare my iniquity;
I will be ^gin ⁴anguish over my sin.
19 But my enemies are vigorous, and they are strong;
And those who hate me wrongfully have multiplied.
20 Those also ^hwho render evil for
good,

38:18 I will declare: David’s silence is only before his enemies (vv. 13–16); to the Lord he willingly confesses his sins. He expects that the merciful God will forgive and restore him (Ps. 32).
38:21 be not far from me: These words echo the sentiment of 22:1. All that is left for David is to trust in God. In that sense, David was in the right place, for confidence in any person or thing other than God Himself is misplaced trust.

(Heb. yachal) (38:15; 130:5, 7; 131:3; Lam. 3:21–24) Strong’s #3176

This Hebrew word signifies “to wait with expectation.” Almost half of its occurrences are in the Psalms, and it is especially frequent in Ps. 119. Sometimes the idea of hope is expressed with confidence (Job 13:15; Is. 51:5), and sometimes hope is clearly in vain (Ezek. 13:6). The Bible describes Noah as waiting for seven days to send out the dove (Gen. 8:12) and men as waiting to hear the counsel of Job (Job 29:21); but by far the main object of “expectant waiting” or “hope” is God, His word, His judgment, and His mercy (33:18; 119:43; Mic. 7:7). That hope is not misplaced, for the One in whom we hope is completely faithful to His promises (see Heb. 10:23).

Psalm 39 is a wisdom psalm in the form of a psalm of individual lament. The title indicates that this is a psalm of David composed for Jeduthun. Psalm 39 is unusual in many respects. It speaks of a determination to be silent against foes, whereas most psalms speak boldly against enemies. Moreover, it ends with a request that God leave the psalmist alone, a stance that is remarkably like sections of the Book of Job. The structure of the poem is in four movements: (1) a determination by the psalmist to be silent before his foes (vv. 1–3); (2) a petition to God for help in view of the brevity of life (vv. 4–6); (3) a petition for forgiveness and deliverance (vv. 7–11); (4) a petition for God to leave him alone (vv. 12, 13).
39:1 will restrain my mouth: David determines to be silent in suffering so that he will not speak out foolishly. See 32:3 for another reason to be silent.
39:4, 5 Make me to know my end is an appeal to God to deliver the psalmist before his life passes him by (90:7–12). Vapor refers to something that passes quickly, not something that has no meaning.
39:7, 8 My hope is in You: David knows that his only chance of deliverance is in God. But he also believes that his trouble has come from God. He is in a quandary. Should he ask for God’s help or should he ask God to leave him alone? Unlike most of the psalms of lament, there is noticeable difficulty in moving into a posture of praise. my transgressions: David acknowledges his sin and throws himself on the mercy of the Lord (Ps. 32).
39:12, 13 Hear my prayer: David has been silent for a period of his distress (vv. 2, 9) but can remain silent no longer. Here he cries for God not to be silent, but to deliver him. Remove Your gaze:

- ¹³ ^lRemove Your gaze from me, that I may regain strength,
Before I go away and ^mam no more.”

If God is not going to deliver him, the despondent psalmist asks God to just leave him alone. It is rare outside the Book of Job to find language such as this (Job 7:19; 10:20, 21; 14:6). Sometimes the pain of the psalmist was so far from being resolved at the time when he composed his poem that he remained on the edge of despair to the last verse. Yet the fact that God saves those who call upon Him is described again and again in the Book of Psalms (22:21; 118:21).

Psalm 40 is a psalm of declarative praise that moves into a psalm of lament. This psalm is a remarkable example of how troubles and difficulties forced David to depend continually on the Lord. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) a report of deliverance (vv. 1–3); (2) instruction to the people to commit their lives to the Lord (vv. 4, 5); (3) a confession about worship (vv. 6–8); (4) a report to God of the fulfillment of the vow of praise (vv. 9, 10); (5) a renewed lament (vv. 11, 12); (6) a set of petitions for deliverance (vv. 13–15); (7) continuing praise in the midst of trouble (vv. 16, 17).

40:1 The Hebrew translated I waited patiently is literally “waiting I waited.” The emphasis of this phrase is not really on patience, but on the fact that David waited solely on the Lord. The verb “to wait” expresses a confident trust or faith in the Lord (130:5). David knows that salvation comes only from the Almighty (3:8). The words He inclined to me present the image of the Creator of the universe, the King of heaven, stooping from His throne to save the helpless.

40:2, 3 horrible pit: David writes this poem during a period of terrible stress; he feels as if he is stuck in a pit or swamp. No matter how hard he tries, he cannot get out. But David turns his frustration over to the Lord and trusts in His strength. a new song: The Lord’s salvation prompts David to praise God. The music is new because God’s salvation is fresh and new to David.

40:4, 5 The proud refers to idolaters who will not bow in humility before the Lord (147:6). Lies refers to idols. Not only are the works of God directed toward the people of faith, but so are His thoughts. He is thinking about us.

40:6 The Lord takes pleasure in those who obediently come to Him with praise on their lips (1 Sam. 15:22, 23). My ears You have opened: The Lord not only gives us ears to hear His word, but also grants us understanding so that we can truly obey Him.

40:7, 8 Behold, I come: David brings his sacrifice, but his focus is on presenting his own life to the Lord (Rom. 12:1, 2). According to the Book of Hebrews, Jesus spoke these words to the Father (Heb. 10:4–6). Delight is related to the word desire in v. 6. What brings pleasure to God will also bring delight to His people.

40:11, 12 Do not withhold: Even after the experience of deliverance with which the psalm begins, David has another reason to turn to the Lord in renewed prayer. The Hebrew for Your tender mercies (which can also mean “womb”) refers to God’s affection for us. In effect, David is asking the Lord to surround him with warmth and comfort that is practically maternal.

40:13–15 deliver me: David does not ask for forgiveness of sin here (contrast 51:3, 4), but for deliverance from powerful enemies. Aha, aha: David’s enemies are all around him, taunting him mercilessly (35:21).

15 Let them be ^rconfounded because of their shame,
Who say to me, “Aha, aha!”

16 ^sLet all those who seek You rejoice and be glad in You;
Let such as love Your salvation ^tsay continually,
“The LORD be magnified!”

17 ^uBut I am poor and needy;
^vYet the LORD thinks upon me.
You are my help and my deliverer;
Do not delay, O my God.

40:16, 17 The LORD be magnified: With these great words of praise, David encourages others in the community to glorify the Lord (35:27). poor and needy: The psalmist is still in trouble, pleading with God to deliver him anew.

Psalm 41 is a lament psalm. Since it begins and concludes with words of praise to God, it may also be called a psalm of praise. The poem is ascribed to David and speaks of the plight of a person suffering from serious physical illness. Ultimately, it presents the victory of the Savior Jesus over His enemies, especially the great enemy Satan. There are four movements in the psalm: (1) an affirmation of confidence in the Lord’s power to deliver the godly from distress (vv. 1–3); (2) a description of David’s distress (vv. 4–9); (3) a renewed expression of hope in the Lord (vv. 10–12); (4) a coda of praise marking the end of Book I of the Psalms (v. 13).

41:1 Blessed is the same word that begins Ps. 1. The same word introduces the first and last psalms of Book I (see Introduction). When the verb blessed is used with God as its object (as in v. 13), it serves as a word of praise (103:1, 2). To bless God is to identify Him as the source of our blessings. The poor refers not only to those who do not have enough money, but also to those who suffer illness or misfortune through no fault of their own. For such persons, God is Defender, Deliverer, and Sustainer (10:2, 9; 35:10; 69:33; 109:16; 140:12).

41:2, 3 Blessed on the earth refers to the acts of God’s goodness in a person’s life, including health, wealth, longevity, spiritual vitality, and harmony with God and people (Prov. 3:1–4). bed of illness: The distress in this psalm is the psalmist’s serious physical illness.

41:4 for I have sinned: In the context of the psalm, this is a general acknowledgment of sin and the need for God’s forgiveness and restoration (1 John 1:9).

41:5–8 At times, the psalmist’s enemies are indicated (3:1), but more often these enemies are left unspecified in the Psalms, allowing others to think in terms of their own situations. his name perish: In ancient cultures, for a person not to be remembered was like saying that he or she had never existed. The righteous in Israel hoped that their names would endure after them, that they would have a “great name” (Gen. 12:2). he speaks lies: David charges his enemies with visiting his sickbed on the pretext of mercy but with malice in their hearts.

41:9 Familiar friend describes a close, intimate relationship. The outrage of betrayal by one so close is nearly unbearable (Matt. 26:14–16). The fulfillment of this verse in the experience of Jesus and Judas is remarkable. Not only did the two eat a meal together (Matt. 26:21–25; Mark 14:18–21; Luke 22:21), but Jesus also called Judas a “friend” at the moment of betrayal (Matt. 26:50). Moreover Jesus quoted this verse, noting its fulfillment in Judas (John 13:18).

41:10–12 Raise me up was David’s prayer for healing from the disease that had him bedridden (v. 3). In another sense, these words look forward to Jesus’ resurrection (16:10, 11; 118:17, 18). does not triumph: The failure of David’s enemy to destroy his life was an indicator of God’s pleasure in David’s life. my integrity: These words suggest that it is the righteous person who is suffering in this psalm, not an unrepentant sinner (26:1). before Your face forever: David prays not only for a long life on earth (v. 2), but also for eternal life in God’s presence (23:6). His ultimate hope is to glorify and praise God in His presence forever.

41:13 Blessed: This psalm begins with a blessing of God on the righteous; it ends with the righteous blessing their Lord. The word here for blessed is different from the word in v. 1. Here the word identifies the Lord as the source of our blessing. The word Amen,

PSALM 43

Prayer to God in Time of Trouble

Vindicate ^ame, O God,
 And ^bplead my cause against an ungodly nation;
 Oh, deliver me from the deceitful and unjust man!

meaning “surely” and “let it be,” is an affirmation of faith in God. It is simply saying “yes” to God. The repetition of the word parallels the repetition of the word everlasting and expresses enthusiastic agreement with the praise in the psalm.

Psalm 42 and Ps. 43 were probably originally one poem, like Ps. 9; 10. Note that Ps. 43 does not have a superscription and that 43:5 repeats the refrain of 42:5, 11. Apparently a longer psalm was divided into two sections for use in temple worship. As an independent poem, Ps. 42 is an individual lament with a strong emphasis on trust (see Ps. 23). The psalm’s two movements both conclude with a refrain of encouragement to hope in God (vv. 5, 11), even though the psalmist was in exile far from the temple. The psalm is attributed to the sons of Korah, a musical family in Israel. They descended from the priest who had led an abortive rebellion against the leadership of Moses and Aaron (Num. 16). God’s judgment came upon Korah and his companions, but Korah’s family continued for hundreds of years to be some of the premier leaders of worship music in Israel. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a description of the psalmist’s longing for God’s presence (vv. 1–4); (2) a description of the psalmist’s fear that God might no longer remember him (vv. 5–11).

42:1–4 pants: The verb “to pant” is unusually expressive of a spiritual thirst for God. The poet describes his experience of being cut off from the worshiping community. He feels distant from God’s presence among His people and he longs for intimacy with God (see v. 4). For the believer who lived during OT times, there was only one place where the true worship of the Lord was possible—the temple in Jerusalem. go with the multitude: The psalmist was consumed with thoughts of the worship of God that he had experienced at the temple in Jerusalem among throngs of joyful believers (Ps. 100). Generally the focus of worship in the Book of Psalms is on the community worshipping together (compare Acts 2:40–47; Heb. 13:15, 16).

42:5 Why are you cast down: These words are repeated in v. 11 and 43:5. The psalmist reminds himself that one day he will experience anew the presence of God. In the end, his hope in the Lord will not be misplaced. praise Him: As is common in the Psalms, the poet is not describing an act of private devotion, but of public praise of the goodness of God. This is praise in words and songs that would be repeated in the midst of the congregation (22:22; Eph. 5:19; Heb. 13:15).

42:6 The land of the Jordan and the heights of Hermon refer to the Promised Land, from which the people were exiled.

42:9–11 Why have You forgotten me: The psalmist asks these troubling questions in faith, for he remembers that God is his Rock, his protector and foundation. He cannot help but hope in Him in the middle of difficult circumstances.

Psalm 43 is a continuation of Ps. 42. The original poem was separated into the two psalms we have today so they could more easily be used for worship in the temple. As it stands, Ps. 43 shares features of a psalm of lament and a psalm of trust. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a call for vindication from the Lord (vv. 1, 2); (2) a prayer for the psalmist’s return to the temple to worship God (vv. 3, 4); (3) a renewed call for hope in God (v. 5).

43:1, 2 Vindicate me is a protest of innocence (Ps. 17; 26; 35). The

PSALM 44

Redemption Remembered in Present Dishonor

To the Chief Musician. A ^aContemplation ¹ of the sons of Korah.

We have heard with our ears,
O God,
^bOur fathers have told us,
The deeds You did in their days,
In days of old:

psalmist takes the stance of one wrongfully attacked. Why do You cast me off: More hurtful than the words of the psalmist's enemies is the sense that God has rejected him (Ps. 13).

43:3, 4 Your light and Your truth: The psalmist asks God for deliverance. See 104:2 for the significance of light; see 100:5 for the significance of truth. Only the "true light" of God could save the psalmist from the lies and darkness all about him. Your tabernacle: More than anything else the psalmist desires to rejoin the worshiping community in praising God (149:1).

43:5 Why are you cast down: These words are the refrain of this and the previous psalm (see 42:5, 11). In time of doubt and stress, the poet urges his inner being, by the power of God, to keep believing. He knows that one day, by God's grace, he will return to the place of praise to God, the center of worship in Jerusalem.

Psalm 44 is a lament of the community, a collective sigh of the people of Israel for God to help them in a time of great national stress. The psalm also presents an occasion for a rehearsal of God's great deeds in the Exodus, the major saving action of the Lord in the OT period (Ps. 105). This psalm is attributed to the sons of Korah, the descendants of the rebellious priest mentioned in Num. 16. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a rehearsal of God's deliverance of Israel in the past (vv. 1–3); (2) a statement of confidence in God the great King (vv. 4–8); (3) a lament of the people (vv. 9–12); (4) a protest of innocence of the people (vv. 13–22); (5) a petition of the people (vv. 23–26).

44:1–3 heard with our ears: God's marvelous intervention in history to deliver the Israelites from Egypt was the cornerstone of OT faith (17:7; 118:16; Ex. 15:6). Each generation of Israelites was obligated to tell the next generation about what God had done for them. The story that they told was not merely a national history, but also a description of the loving character of God (Deut. 8). Your right hand became a slogan of redemption in Israel. You favored

Psalms for Every Occasion
Just as our modern hymnals contain different kinds of songs—anthems, choruses, and calls to worship—so the hymnal of ancient Israel, the Book of Psalms, contains songs for different occasions and purposes.
Type of Psalm	Purpose	Examples
Individual Lament	To remind God of a desperate personal situation and to request help	Ps. 3–7; 12; 13; 22; 25–28; 35; 38–40; 42; 43; 51; 54–57; 59; 61; 63; 64; 69–71; 86; 88; 102; 109; 120; 130; 140–143
National Lament	To tell God of a pressing national emergency and to ask for His intervention	Ps. 44; 60; 74; 79; 80; 83; 85; 90; 123
Individual Thanksgiving	To express individual gratitude or trust in a public manner	Ps. 18; 30; 32; 34; 40; 41; 66; 106; 116; 138
National Thanksgiving	To acknowledge as a nation God's gracious acts	Ps. 124; 126
General Praise	To exalt God's character	Ps. 8; 19; 29; 103; 104; 139; 148; 150
Specific Praise	To praise God for specified acts or attributes	Ps. 33; 36; 105; 111; 113; 117; 135; 136; 146; 147
Enthronement	To celebrate God's kingship, or His reign over the earth	Ps. 47; 93; 96–99
Ascent or Pilgrimage	To be sung by pilgrims traveling to Jerusalem for Israel's religious feasts	Ps. 43; 46; 48; 76; 84; 87; 120–134
Royal	To portray and compare the rule of an earthly king with the reign of the heavenly King	Ps. 2; 18; 20; 21; 45; 72; 89; 101; 110; 132; 144
Didactic	To teach how to live in a way that honors God	Ps. 1; 37; 119
Imprecatory	To call down divine judgment on the enemies of Israel and God	Ps. 7; 35; 40; 55; 58; 59; 69; 79; 109; 137; 139; 144 them: The selection of Israel as the people of God came by His grace alone (4:3; Rom. 11).

44:4, 5 my King: In this community lament, it is striking that here the speaker is singular. It may be that these words are spoken by Israel's king to the King of glory. As the king of the nation, it was appropriate for him to lead the people in asking for God's renewed favor. through Your name: The king affirms that victory will be won only by God's Spirit.

44:9–12 The words cast us off begin the lament section of the psalm. The army of Israel was not to be regarded as merely a group of warriors—they were the warriors of the Almighty (Ps. 144). Their victories were the victories of God and their defeats were losses that He allowed them to endure. You sell Your people: When the people suffered loss, it was as though God had “sold” them. But God's deliverance of them from suffering is depicted as His purchase of His people—the meaning of the word redemption (see v. 26).

44:17–20 we have not forgotten: The people protest that they have not rejected God. The implication is that their troubles would be deserved if they had rejected him. Stretched out our hands refers to a posture of prayer (Ps. 134). They protest that they have not prayed to the idols of the nations, but have been faithful to the only living God.

44:22 as sheep: These words predict another beloved Son of the Most High who would also feel cast off by the Lord (Is. 53:7; see also Rom. 8:36).

44:23–26 Israel's God does not sleep (121:3, 4; Is. 40:28). The cry to awake is an appeal for God to act on behalf of His people. The cry is based on the people's faith that the Lord will forgive. redeem us: In v. 12, the people suggested that God had sold them; here they ask Him to redeem them—to buy them back for Himself.

BIBLE TIMES & CULTURE NOTES

Scepter

The scepter (45:6) was the official staff of a ruler, symbolizing his authority and power. Since the first kings were nomadic princes, originally the scepter was a simple shepherd's staff. In some instances the scepter was a strong rod (Ezek. 19:11, 14). Sometimes the symbolism of a scepter refers to the Messiah who will rule from Israel, from the tribe of Judah in particular (Gen. 49:10). In the NT, the Book of Hebrews describes Christ as the Son who rules with a scepter of righteousness (Heb. 1:8, quoting Ps. 45:6).

The breaking of a scepter signified the downfall of the one who possessed it. This symbolism was used by several of the OT prophets to predict what would happen to the enemies of the nation of Israel (Is. 14:5; Ezek. 19:1–14).

When the Roman soldiers mocked Jesus before His crucifixion, they placed a reed in His hand as a mock scepter and saluted Him as “King of the Jews” (Matt. 27:29).

⁷ ⁱ Ps. 2:2 / Ps. 21:6; Heb. 1:8, 9 ⁸ ^k Song 1:12, 13 ⁹ ^j Song 6:8 ^m 1 Kin. 2:19

Psalm 45 is a royal psalm—a royal wedding song that celebrates human marriage in such a grand manner that the NT writers applied it to the great King Jesus as well (compare vv. 6, 7 with Heb. 1:8, 9). Like many other psalms, this one not only portrays the joy of human marriage, but also describes prophetically the glorious reign of Jesus (see Ps. 2; 22; 69). This psalm was composed by the sons of Korah. The structure is as follows: (1) introduction of the “good theme” (v. 1); (2) wedding wishes for the great king (vv. 2–9); (3) wedding wishes for the beautiful bride (vv. 10–15); (4) concluding blessings on the king (vv. 16, 17).

45:2–5 You are fairer: This poem's cultural setting is the opulence of an ancient eastern royal court. The profuse description of the royal groom would be appropriate in that culture. O Mighty One: In the ancient Middle East the king was supposed to be a great warrior. The model in Israel was David, the celebrated champion who defeated the giant Goliath (1 Sam. 17). The term Mighty One is also a messianic title. Your glory and Your majesty can be rephrased as “Your majestic glory.” right hand: The victories of the king's hand would be awesome, a symbol pointing back to Exodus and forward to the works of the Savior Jesus.

45:6–9 The words Your throne indicate the messianic direction of the psalm. Here the King is addressed as God, yet it is “God, Your God” who anointed Him. Thus these verses describe the interaction of the Father and the Son, for both are called “God.” The writer of Hebrews used these verses to assert Jesus' deity (Heb. 1:8, 9). anointed You: Anointing set aside a particular person for special service to God. In OT times, those who were anointed for special service foreshadowed the Anointed One, the meaning of Messiah and Christ. As symbols appropriate for divine service, the garments of a priest or king had to be clean and luxurious. The king was surrounded by radiant women; his bride the queen was resplendent in her precious golden garments. This is a portrait of heaven, with God as King and the church as His radiant bride (Rev. 19:1–10). Ophir, possibly located in southern Arabia or on the east coast of Africa (2 Chr. 8:17, 18), was known in the OT world as a source of fine gold.

45:10–14 O daughter: The beautiful bride forsakes her own family and relationships as she becomes part of the family of her king and husband. worship Him: The bride is to give homage and worship to the great King. robes of many colors: In the ancient world, the beauty of the bride's gowns might be an expression of her family's wealth, their pride in her, and their love for her.

- "Forget your own people also, and your father's house;
11 So the King will greatly desire your beauty;
"Because He is your Lord, worship Him.
12 And the daughter of Tyre will come

"The rich among the people will seek your favor.
- 13 The royal daughter is all glorious

PSALM 47

Praise to God, the Ruler of the Earth

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of the sons of Korah.

- Oh, clap your hands, all you peoples!

Psalm 46 as a psalm of trust (Ps. 23) rejoices in the deliverance that the Lord gives His people in the midst of a fearsome battle or siege. There is reason to believe that Ps. 46–48 form a trilogy that focuses on God's special love for Jerusalem. Psalm 46 was Martin Luther's basis for the Reformation hymn "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God." The poem has three movements, each indicated by the closing word Selah, a musical notation perhaps indicating a musical interlude (vv. 3, 7, 11). The psalm is also called "A Song for Alamoth," a word that may refer to soprano voices. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) a celebration of God as our defense even though the earth is moved (vv. 1–3); (2) a celebration of God as our defense even though the nations rage (vv. 4–7); (3) a celebration of God as our defense even when the Lord brings His judgment (vv. 8–11).

46:1 Our refuge and strength may be rephrased "our impenetrable defense." The psalms regularly use imagery of a fortress to describe God. In the ancient Middle East, cities were built on heights with high walls for defense. Yet there was no city and no defensive structure that was impenetrable. However, the psalmist describes here the One who is a sure defense.

46:2, 3 earth be removed: The wording of vv. 2, 3 moves the action to a cosmic level. What if the struggle were not just an orinary war with ordinary weapons? What if the war involved even shaking the mountains and causing the seas to roar? It makes no difference. God is a refuge for His people against everything actual or imagined.

46:5 God is in the midst of her: The people do not have an absentee deliverer, a defense that is only sometimes present. The Lord lives with His people. Consequently, His protection can be counted on.

46:7 The LORD of hosts is with us: These words form a refrain (see v. 11). The pairing of the words "the LORD of hosts" with "the God of Jacob" is notable in both this verse and v. 11. This refrain praises the Almighty, the Commander of heaven's armies, for choosing to live with the descendants of Jacob, His people. Who could protect His people better? See 9:9; 48:3 for other uses of the word refuge.

46:8–10 desolations: The picture here is of final judgment (Ps. 1; 110). Be still: The call for stillness before the Lord is not a preparation for worship, but for impending judgment (Hab. 2:20; Zeph. 1:7; Zech. 2:13). God will be exalted. All the earth will bow before Him.

Psalm 47, a royal psalm attributed to the sons of Korah, presents the grand ascent of the King of kings to His throne. The psalm also presents the joy of the people over the fact that the great King's rule

PSALM 48

The Glory of God in Zion

A Song. A Psalm of the sons of Korah.

Great is the LORD, and greatly to be praised
In the ^acity of our God,
In His holy mountain.
2 ^bBeautiful in ⁱelevation,
The joy of the whole earth,
Is Mount Zion on the sides of the north,
The city of the great King.
3 God is in her palaces;
He is known as her refuge.
4 For behold, ^cthe kings assembled,
They passed by together.
5 They saw it, and so they marveled;
They were troubled, they hastened away.

means the end of all inequity, warfare, and trouble (Is. 11:3–5). The poets of Scripture knew that God is King as Creator of the world (Ps. 93), that He is King of His people because He is their Savior (Ps. 99), and that He is the coming King in the prophetic future. This last is the focus of Ps. 47. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a call to shout in triumph at the coming of the King (vv. 1–4); (2) a call to shout in triumph at the enthronement of the King (vv. 5–7); (3) a call to rejoice in the rule of the King (vv. 8, 9).

47:1–3 clap your hands: There are many ways in which the people of God express their joy in Him; one is the clapping of hands in joyful adoration. all you peoples: It is principally the people of God who will praise the great King; but the call for the nations was always a part of the larger picture in the theology of the Psalms (Ps. 67; 117). the LORD Most High: The divine name usually translated “the LORD” is buttressed by the term Most High, which speaks of God’s power over all nations (7:17; 77:10; 78:17, 35, 56; 82:6; 107:11; Deut. 32:8). Awesome is related to the word for “fear” and suggests reverence for Almighty God (147:11). Great King is the key phrase of this psalm. All kings have derived authority; only one King, the great God of heaven, is absolute in power and righteousness. He will subdue: The promise of the eventual victory of God’s people under the leadership of their great King is a basic focus in the Bible (Ps. 2; 110; 1 Cor. 15:24–28). The outcome of the final battle was determined long ago by God.

47:4 The words whom He loves are perhaps the most significant contribution of this poem to our understanding of God’s purposes. To love means “to make one’s choice in.” God had chosen the Israelites to be His holy people and in that way He loved them. In his dialogue with Nicodemus, Jesus explained that God’s love extended to all the nations as well as to Israel (John 3:16).

47:5–7 God has gone up: This psalm speaks of an anticipated enthronement of God. As He seats Himself on the throne, all who see Him in heaven and earth shout aloud in triumph. Sing praises: The repetition of this command in vv. 6, 7 is similar to the angelic voices singing of the holiness of God in Is. 6:3. The reason for the call to sing is clear: God is the King of all the earth; He deserves our praise. This psalm speaks of the coming great reign of Jesus when He establishes His holy rule.

47:8, 9 God reigns: We know that God is King over the earth. There are other forces clearly at work, but they function only by His permission. One day there will be an end to all evil, to all acts of rebellion, and to all acts of oppression. The people of the God of Abraham: This is the prophetic picture of the ultimate fulfillment of the Abrahamic covenant (Gen. 12:1–3). One day all the peoples of the earth who have come to faith in God through Jesus will discover that they are one people. They are all the true seed of Abraham, because they, like Abraham, believed in God (Gen. 15:6; Gal. 3:5–8). Then all shields will belong to God; there will be no other power on earth or in the universe apart from the power of God. Greatly exalted comes from the term meaning “to go up,” the same root used in v. 5. God’s ascent to His throne will come with the enthronement of Jesus and His coming rule in the New Jerusalem (Rev. 20). Psalm 48 unites with Ps. 46; 47 to form three great psalms of praise to God for His kingship and His love for the holy city of Jerusalem. This emphasis on Jerusalem has led many scholars to speak of these psalms as “Songs of Zion.” Attributed to the sons of Korah, this psalm calls the people to offer reverent praise to their Lord. The structure is as follows: (1) a celebration of God’s greatness in the holy city of Zion (vv. 1–3); (2) a description of the gathering of the kings and the peoples to witness God’s rule (vv. 4–11); (3) a celebration of God’s greatness in the holy city of Zion (vv. 12–14). 48:1 Great is used often in the Psalms to describe the person of God (21:5; 77:13; 95:3; 96:4; 145:3; 147:5). city of our God: The city of Jerusalem had a particularly dear place in the heart of God’s people (see 1 Kin. 14:21). The city was holy because of the presence of God in the temple.

48:2, 3 The joy of the whole earth: As is strongly established in the Book of Psalms, the purpose of God’s work in Israel was to draw all nations to Himself (117:1). sides of the north: This phrasing is likely borrowed from Canaanite poetry. In Canaanite thought, the great gods resided in some remote northern location. For Israel, God’s dwelling was the physical city of Jerusalem. The city of the great King: Jesus quoted these words in Matt. 5:35 and identified the city as Jerusalem. God is in her palaces: These words express a prayer for the present and hope for the future. The point is clear: the beauty of the city of Jerusalem comes from the presence of the Lord, who has made His dwelling there.

48:4–7 This section describes from a different point of view the final battle referred to in Ps. 2; 110. Psalm 48 describes the approach and hasty retreat of the errant kings. The connection between this text and Ps. 2 is heightened by the use of an unusual Hebrew word for fear—a term meaning “trembling” or “quaking terror”—which is found in both places (2:11).

BIBLE TIMES & CULTURE NOTES

Tarshish

Tarshish was a city or territory in the western portion of the Mediterranean Sea with which the Phoenicians traded. Tarshish is believed by some to be Tartessus, in southern Spain, near Gibraltar. When Jonah fled from God's instruction to go to Nineveh, he boarded a ship bound for Tarshish, in the opposite direction from Nineveh (Jon. 1:3). Tarshish was famous for its ships, which carried gold, silver, iron, tin, lead, ivory, apes, and monkeys.

Because the ships of Tarshish carried such great riches, they became symbols of wealth, power, and pride. When God judged the nations for their sinful ways, He destroyed their "ships of Tarshish" to humble them and to demonstrate His great power (2 Chr. 20:35–37; Is. 2:16; 23:1, 14).

PSALM 49

The Confidence of the Foolish

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of the sons of Korah.

- Hear this, all peoples;
Give ear, all inhabitants of the world,
2 Both low and high,
Rich and poor together.
3 My mouth shall speak wisdom,
And the meditation of my heart shall give understanding.
- 4 I will incline my ear to a proverb;
I will disclose my ¹ dark saying on the harp.
- 5 Why should I fear in the days of evil,
When the iniquity at my heels surrounds me?
6 Those who ^a trust in their wealth
And boast in the multitude of their riches,
7 None of them can by any means redeem his brother,
Nor ^b give to God a ransom for
him—
8 For ^c the redemption of their souls is costly,
And it shall cease forever—
9 That he should continue to live eternally,
And ^d not ² see the Pit.

48:8 As . . . we have seen: The people who first sang this song knew the presence of God in temple worship. They knew that they were in the city where God had chosen to establish His blessing.

48:9 We have thought: The verb is an unusual one in Hebrew. It refers to making comparisons and looking for similarities, thinking and considering with discrimination. The point is that nothing can be compared to the loyal love of God.

48:12–14 Praising the city of Zion is another way of praising God, whose dwelling was there. To be a guide describes the work of a shepherd (78:52).

Psalm 49, a wisdom psalm attributed to the sons of Korah, has many similarities with Proverbs and Ecclesiastes. The psalm calls for the wise person to realize that there is nothing to fear from the oppressive rich: like animals, they too will die. But the righteous will live forever. This psalm is quite different from a psalm of praise; it is an instruction text set to music. Its structure is: (1) a call for understanding (vv. 1–4); (2) a declaration of the vanity of trusting in wealth (vv. 5–9); (3) a declaration of the worthlessness of possessions after death (vv. 10–12); (4) a description of God's redemption (vv. 13–15); (5) the conclusion that there is no need to fear the rich (vv. 16–20).

49:1–4 Hear this, all peoples: The call for wisdom and understanding goes to all, similar to the calls for universal worship of the Lord (Ps. 117). Dark saying, which may be translated "riddle" or "enigma," refers to a perplexing moral problem: how do the righteous come to terms with oppressive rich people who seem to have no thought for God?

49:6–9 Those who trust in their wealth: As in the teaching of Jesus (Mark 10:24), there is a warning against trusting in wealth, for wealth can achieve nothing of lasting value in this life or the life to come. Nor give to God a ransom: Wealth cannot buy redemption. Pit refers to the power of death in its dark aspect (16:10). Only God has the power to deliver us from death and hell.

10 For he sees wise men die;
Likewise the fool and the senseless person perish,
And leave their wealth to others.
11³ Their inner thought is that their houses will last forever,
Their dwelling places to all generations;
They ^ecall their lands after their own names.
12 Nevertheless man, though in honor,
does not ⁴remain;
He is like the beasts that perish.
13 This is the way of those who are

And of their posterity who approve their sayings. Selah
14 Like sheep they are laid in the grave;

PSALM 50

God the Righteous Judge

A Psalm of Asaph.

The ^aMighty One, God the LORD,
Has spoken and called the earth
From the rising of the sun to its going down.
2 Out of Zion, the perfection of beauty,
^bGod will shine forth.
3 Our God shall come, and shall not keep silent;
^cA fire shall devour before Him,
And it shall be very tempestuous all around Him.
4 ^dHe shall call to the heavens from above,
And to the earth, that He may judge
His people:
5 “Gather ^eMy saints together to Me, ^fThose who have ¹made a covenant with Me by sacrifice.”
6 Let the ^gheavens declare His
righteousness,
For ^hGod Himself is Judge. Selah
7 “Hear, O My people, and I will speak, O Israel, and I will testify against
you;
ⁱI am God, your God!
8 ^jI will not ²rebuke you ^kfor your sacrifices
Or your burnt offerings,
Which are continually before Me.
9 ^lI will not take a bull from your house,
Nor goats out of your folds.

49:10 The theme that wise men die is developed in Ecclesiastes. The rich and the poor, the wise and the fool, all have the same fate—physical death.
49:14, 15 These verses vividly describe both the power of death and the greater power of God. their beauty shall be consumed: Death is the great leveler. People who have beauty, riches (vv. 16, 17), and power in this world will lose them all at death. They will be stripped of everything except their character or soul. This is why the Scriptures exhort us to pursue character development—God’s law, holiness, wisdom, and knowledge—more than anything else. Each use of the word grave in these two verses is a translation of the Hebrew word Sheol, meaning death (16:10). God will redeem my soul: The psalmist trusts in God to deliver him from the power of death.
Psalm 50, a wisdom psalm, is the first of 12 poems attributed to Asaph, one of the music leaders appointed by David. This psalm contrasts the distinctions of the righteous and the wicked in the eyes of God, a constant theme of the wisdom writers. True wisdom in biblical thought is based on the “fear of the Lord,” a proper response to the awesome nature of God. In this psalm, God is portrayed as the great Judge (Ps. 96–98). The structure of the psalm is: (1) the praise of God who shines forth from Zion (vv. 1–3);

(2) a vision of the coming of God, the great Judge (vv. 4–6); (3) the instruction of the great Judge to His people concerning sacrifice (vv. 7–15); (4) the rebuke of the great Judge to the wicked (vv. 16–21); (5) the words of the great Judge on condemnation and salvation (vv. 22, 23).
50:1, 2 The Hebrew text uses the three terms the Mighty One, God, and the LORD as a stunning introduction to this poem. This language suggests a grand display of God Himself in the midst of His people (18:7–9). Out of Zion: The glory of God shines from His sanctuary in Jerusalem.
50:3–6 Our God shall come: This prophetic language speaks of the coming kingdom of God (Ps. 96–98). God Himself is Judge: See 75:7 for a powerful development of this idea. This is the point of this psalm; God is the great Judge. When used of God, the Hebrew word for Judge has connotations of royalty (94:2). Thus this wisdom psalm is also a royal psalm, because it speaks of the coming of the great King who both rules and judges.
50:8–10 not rebuke you: The sacrifices were commanded by God in Leviticus, but the people had difficulty keeping a godly perspective on the nature of sacrifices. every beast of the forest: The people were not doing God a favor by bringing their animals, for everything belonged to Him anyway. He knows every bird and beast.

- 10 For every beast of the forest is Mine,
And the cattle on a thousand hills.
- 11 I know all the birds of the
mountains,
And the wild beasts of the field are Mine.
- 12^a “If I were hungry, I would not tell

- 16 But to the wicked God says:
“What right have you to declare My statutes,
Or take My covenant in your mouth,
17^r Seeing you hate instruction
And cast My words behind you?
18 When you saw a thief, you
^sconsented³ with him,
And have been a ‘partaker with

PSALM 51

A Prayer of Repentance

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David ^awhen Nathan the prophet went to him, after he had gone in to Bathsheba.

- Have mercy upon me, O God,
According to Your
lovingkindness;
According to the multitude of Your tender mercies,
^bBlot out my transgressions.
2^c Wash me thoroughly from my iniquity,
And cleanse me from my sin.
- 3 For I acknowledge my transgressions,
And my sin is always before me.
- 4^d Against You, You only, have I sinned,
And done this evil ^ein Your sight—
^fThat You may be found just ¹when
You speak,
And blameless when You judge.

50:12–15 If I were hungry: The God of Israel does not hunger for food; however, He does “hunger” for righteousness of His people.

Call upon Me: Sacrifice in the Bible was for the good of the people. The Lord designated the sacrificial system as the place when He would shower His mercy on those He loves.

50:16–20 As in the case of 1:4, the attention of the psalm turns from the righteous who need instruction to the wicked who merit judgment. This section announces God’s judgment not against the nations, but against the people of Israel who heard but spurned God’s word. You give your mouth to evil: God offered truth, but these people chose falsehoods. They had seen the light but preferred to live in darkness (John 3:16–21). your own mother’s son: There was no sense of decency remaining in these wicked persons; even normal bonds of family relationships were disregarded.

50:22, 23 In the climax of the revelation of the coming judgment in this psalm, the Lord offers an opportunity to repent and receive forgiveness. This is an indicator of His grace. The Lord wants to save; His warnings are another expression of His mercy.

Psalm 51 is associated with one of the hardest experiences of David’s life, the aftermath of his affair with Bathsheba. This is one of several psalms of David in which the title specifies the incident that inspired the poem. For the account of David’s sin and Nathan’s rebuke, see 2 Sam. 11; 12:1–15. David’s response to Nathan was immediate: “I have sinned against the LORD” (2 Sam. 12:13). Sometime later, he wrote this memorable, penitential psalm. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a plea for God’s mercy in the context of David’s confession (vv. 1, 2); (2) an acknowledgment that David’s sin was against the Lord (vv. 3, 4); (3) a confession that sin pervades David’s being (vv. 5, 6); (4) a series of pleas for forgiveness (vv. 7–13); (5) a vow of praise by the forgiven sinner (vv. 14, 15); (6) a statement on the meaning of true worship (vv. 16, 17); (7) a plea for God to restore the fortunes of the people (vv. 18, 19).

51:1, 2 David’s call for mercy is the only appropriate request for a confessing sinner. No sinner should ask for justice, for that would mean judgment and ruin. Mercy and forgiveness is God’s gift to the confessing sinner. Even when the Lord forgives, He does not tarnish His just character: confessed sins are covered by the sacrifice of His perfect Son on the cross (see 2 Cor. 5:21). The phrase according to Your lovingkindness expresses God’s loyal or covenantal love to His people (13:5).

51:3, 4 The months of agony that David suffered because of his guilt are expressed in the striking words—my sin is always before me. See the development of these ideas in Ps. 32. Against You: David had sinned against Bathsheba, Uriah, and the nation he was called to rule. But none of these indictments were as serious as David’s offense against God. The first few verses use several different words to describe sin—“transgression,” “iniquity,” and “sin.” The words for forgiveness are all pictorial words: “blot out” (v. 1), “wash,” and “cleanse” (v. 2). All these words express the seriousness of sin and the great lengths God goes to in removing our sin. be found just: The Lord deals with sin in two ways: The wicked receive God’s just condemnation; the righteous receive His undeserved mercy.

5 ^g Behold, I was brought forth in iniquity,
And in sin my mother conceived me.
6 Behold, You desire truth in the inward parts,
And in the hidden part You will make me to know wisdom.
7 ^h Purge me with hyssop, and I shall be clean;

PSALM 52

The End of the Wicked and the Peace of the Godly

To the Chief Musician. A ¹ Contemplation of David ^a when Doeg the Edomite went and ^b told Saul, and said to him, “David has gone to the house of Ahimelech.”

Why do you boast in evil,
O mighty man?

51:5, 6 brought forth in iniquity: Sin was found in David from the beginning; from birth he was inclined towards sin (see Rom. 5:12). Inward parts, a rare word in the Hebrew Bible, indicates something clouded over, difficult for anyone but God to see. The Lord’s penetrating gaze searches the innermost recesses of a person’s mind and heart.

heart
(Heb. leb) (51:10; Jer. 31:33) Strong’s #3820

The Hebrew nouns leb and lebab are synonymous words, which speak of a person’s inner being and therefore are often translated heart. To the Hebrews, the heart was the seat of the affections, will, and mind. One’s emotions and understanding were centered in the heart (Prov. 15:13, 14), thus blurring the common dichotomy between mind and heart, intellect and emotions. Therefore to have a “clean heart” (51:10) is to have pure thoughts and desires. To have a “hardened heart” (Ex. 4:21) or a “heart of stone” (Ezek. 36:26) is to have a closed mind and deadened emotions. Early in human history, God identified the human heart as the center of rebellion, producing all kinds of evil (see Gen. 8:21). For this reason, people found it impossible to obey God’s simple command to love Him “with all [their] heart” (Deut. 6:5). To remedy this deplorable situation, God determined to replace their “stony heart” with a “heart of flesh,” one which would love and obey its Creator (Ezek. 36:26, 27).

51:7 hyssop: Here David refers to the ritual acts of cleansing described in the Law of Moses (Lev. 14:4; Num. 19:6). David repeatedly calls for his cleansing (see also v. 9). By this, he expresses his profound sense of guilt.
51:10 This verse is significant in two areas, repentance and creation. The verb translated create is the same one used in Gen. 1:1 and refers to what only God can do. David was asking that his heart be renewed, restored, and transformed. God is the only source of such a renewal.
51:13, 14 David calls sinners to salvation in this verse. He vows that he will use his experience of God’s grace as a renewed motivation to bring others into the knowledge of the love and mercy of God (40:3). my tongue shall sing: David desires to be forgiven for several reasons: (1) for his own peace, (2) for the message of hope that he could communicate to others, and (3) for the praise he would be able to give in the community of the faithful.
51:16 You do not desire sacrifice: The key term here is the verb desire, which means “to find pleasure in.” God’s pleasure is not in the sacrificed animal, but in the restored person. He demanded sacrifices, even from David; but His pleasure is in the person who comes obediently to Him (Gen. 4:1–7; John 4:21–24; Rom. 12:1, 2). Actions not accompanied by a contrite heart are not acceptable to God (Is. 1:12–20).
51:18, 19 Do good: David declared God’s goodness to the whole community in their collective worship (125:4). The Hebrew verb translated pleased is the same verb translated delight in v. 16. God took pleasure in those whose hearts were humble before Him. Their sacrifices were a source of joy.
Psalm 52, a psalm of lament, strongly emphasizes judgment of David’s enemies. The title of this psalm specifies the incident in David's life that prompted him to write it. Doeg, an official of Saul, had spied on David when he fled to Ahimelech, the priest at Nob, for provisions and guidance (1 Sam. 21:7). Doeg's report angered Saul so much that he destroyed the priestly family at Nob (1 Sam. 22). This incident must have been disheartening to David. His actions had caused the death of others, and his enemies were determined to destroy him. The structure is: (1) the question of why the wicked boast in evil (vv. 1-4); (2) a proclamation that God will destroy the wicked (vv. 5-7); (3) a vow to praise the Lord (vv. 8, 9).

52:1-4 Boast is related to the word meaning “praise”; however, boasting in evil is no more than a perversion of praise. Mighty is likely used here sarcastically; the only Mighty One is the Lord. The goodness of God is His “loyal love.” The contrast is between a wicked man who boasts in evil and the Lord who is constant in His supreme character. Your tongue refers to more than just words. These people used language as a weapon, for they believed that the gods could empower their words to a devastating effect.

52:5-7 God shall likewise destroy you forever: The poet uses the strongest terms to describe divine judgment on those who practice evil. Uproot you from the land of the living refers to death, but not eternal death. The righteous also shall see and fear: This fear is a deepened respect for God and a sense of awe before His throne. Here is the man: The righteous laugh at the wicked because of their foolishness. A reference to man often means man in his strength; but this “man” has no real strength at all. He seeks strength in himself instead of seeking the source of all strength, the Almighty.

52:8, 9 A green olive tree is a symbol of beauty. In Rom. 11, the olive tree is used as a symbol of the Gentiles who are grafted into the root, the people of God or the church. The Hebrew word for mercy is the same term, meaning “loyal love,” that is translated “goodness” in v. 1. The Hebrew word for praise is the same word sometimes translated “give thanks” (105:1); it typically refers to vocal and public praise.

Psalms 53 is a recasting of Ps. 14 with only slight differences, particularly in the ending. Its structure is as follows: (1) an announcement of the judgment of the fool (v. 1); (2) the Lord's examination of people (v. 2, 3); (3) the judgment of the Lord (vv. 4, 5); (4) a prayer for the salvation of Israel (v. 6).

53:1 In the Bible, the term fool does not mean mental incompetence, but moral and spiritual insensitivity. The fool is the one who ignores God.

53:4, 5 God has scattered the bones: This is a prophetic pronouncement of the final judgment on the wicked. Those who did not fear God will be filled with great fear, for God will come in His glory and power. One day there will be no more wickedness to contaminate the earth or to compromise the people of God.

Psalm 54 is a psalm of lament in which the answer to the prayer is declared before the end of the poem. The prayer’s answer may have come through a priest or prophet. The psalmist knew that he was being answered, and he sought immediately to make God’s goodness known. Psalm 54 is another of David’s psalms in which the title indicates the specific situation that gave rise to the poem (Ps. 51; 52). Twice the people of the Wilderness of Ziph had informed Saul that David was hiding in their region (1 Sam. 23:19–23; 26:1–3). David’s distress is understandable; yet from the Ziphites’ viewpoint, their actions were warranted. After all, Saul was the king and David was a fugitive. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a call for God’s help in the midst of persecution from many foes (vv. 1–3); (2) a declaration that God is David’s Helper (vv. 4, 5); (3) a vow of praise (vv. 6, 7).

54:1–3 Save me, O God, by Your name: The poets of the Bible knew the significance of God’s name even when they did not use it. The people of Ziph probably are indicated by the words strangers and oppressors. David makes the point that they are not pious people. Since he is God’s servant, he expects that God will deliver him.

54:4, 5 Helper could also be translated “power.” The Lord was David’s strength in his time of need. Cut them off is David’s curse on his enemies, an imprecation. Even so, David did not take vengeance into his own hands. Only the Lord can take revenge.

54:6, 7 I will freely sacrifice to You: The prayer has been answered, and God is honored. Thus David expresses his willingness to fulfill his vow.

Psalm 55 deals with life and death, deliverance from hell, and the abiding presence of God. It speaks prophetically of the experience of the Savior Jesus. This psalm consists of many short sections, and its choppy quality shows the deep emotion behind it. The structure of the poem is: (1) a call for God to hear in the midst of the distress (vv. 1–3); (2) a wish to escape death (vv. 4–8); (3) a prayer for God’s judgment on the wicked (vv. 9–11); (4) the description of a friend’s betrayal (vv. 12–14); (5) a renewed prayer for God’s judgment on the wicked (v. 15); (6) a prayer for deliverance for the righteous (vv. 16–19); (7) a retrospective on the friend’s betrayal (vv. 20, 21); (8) a call for hope in the midst of trouble (v. 22); (9) a concluding statement of confidence in view of final judgment (v. 23).

55:1–3 Give ear to my prayer: The poem begins in a way that is common in the lament psalms. There is a call to God, a reference to the psalmist’s distress, and a notice concerning his enemy. David’s shock is not that he is in distress again or even that he has more enemies. The great shock is that the enemy is his own friend (vv. 12–14).

55:4–8 David’s intense pain can be felt in his strong language. The phrase terrors of death is unusual. The Hebrew word for terror or “dread” is first used in Scripture to describe the horror that Abraham felt in the unnatural darkness that seized him as God was about to come near (Gen. 15:12). The word also described the horrors that would fall on the people of Canaan when the Lord gave the land to the Israelites (Ex. 15:16). To strengthen this feeling, David speaks of a “trembling fear” and an overwhelming horror (see also Ezek. 7:18).

55:9 David calls for God’s judgment on the wicked; he renews this call in vv. 15, 23.

- For I have seen ^dviolence and strife in the city.
- 10 Day and night they go around it on its walls;
^eIniquity and trouble are also in the ^fOppression and deceit do not depart

Then I could hide from him.

And ^jwalked to the house of God in the throng.
- 15 Let death seize them;
Let them ^kgo down alive into ^lhell,
For wickedness is in their dwellings and among them.
- 16 As for me, I will call upon God,
And the LORD shall save me.
- 17 ^lEvening and morning and at noon
I will pray, and cry aloud,
And He shall hear my voice.
- 18 He has redeemed my soul in peace

- 4 In God (I will praise His word),
In God I have put my trust;
^dI will not fear.
What can flesh do to me?

55:12–14 Here is the reason for David’s terrible pain in this psalm. It was not an ordinary enemy who had risen up against him; it was his companion, his confidant and friend. The one who betrayed him was not only a close friend, but a person with whom David had worshiped the Lord.

55:15 In rage, David cries: Let death seize them. His words are directed against the wicked generally, and not personally against the one who had distressed David (vv. 13, 14). David could express his emotions to God in prayer, but judgment or revenge was in God’s hands (see Rom. 12:19).

55:16–19 The words as for me mark a dramatic turning point in the psalm. David reverts to a stance of faith; he declares his trust in the omnipotent Lord. God will hear: David reminds himself of the great acts of deliverance that God has done on his behalf in the past and the work that God will continue to do in the future. In a similar way, we should also remind ourselves of God’s faithfulness in times of distress.

55:20 He has put forth his hands: David turns to describe his former friend, now his enemy (vv. 13, 14). He had been completely taken in by the man’s lies.

55:22 To anyone who has experienced grief or desolation, the command to cast one’s burden on the Lord is refreshing. The Lord is the one constant in life (v. 19) and the one true friend (27:10). He can always bear the burden.

Psalm 56 is a psalm of lament. This poem of David has the same setting as Ps. 34—the flight of David to Achish at Gath. In Ps. 34, Achish is referred to as “Abimelech,” his royal designation. The fact that two of David’s psalms are tied to this one event demonstrates how devastating the experience was to David. Cut off from all he had known, David tried to find refuge among the Philistines. When they turned on him, he nearly lost his life. He escaped by pretending to be insane (1 Sam. 21:10–15). This psalm was sung in corporate worship, for it is addressed to the “Chief Musician” and is set to the tune “The Silent Dove in Distant Lands.” The structure of the poem is: (1) a cry to God who alone is David’s help (vv. 1, 2); (2) a confession of trust in God (vv. 3, 4); (3) a description of the work of David’s enemies (vv. 5–7); (4) a confession of why David trusts in God during his time of distress (vv. 8–11); (5) a vow to praise the Lord (vv. 12, 13).

56:1 Be merciful to me: David cries out to God because of his overwhelming sense of loss during his time as a fugitive in a foreign land (see 1 Sam. 21:10–15).

56:3, 4 I will trust are words of abiding confidence, even in times of distress. Alternating passages of pain and faith are a characteristic of the lament psalms (Ps. 13). I will praise His word: This insert is also found twice in v. 10. The idea of what can flesh do is repeated in v. 11 and is developed more fully in 118:6. These words are also an OT basis for the apostle Paul’s confidence expressed in Rom. 8:31.

5 All day they twist my words;
All their thoughts are against me for evil.

6 They gather together,
They hide, they mark my steps,
When they lie in wait for my life.

7 Shall they escape by iniquity?
In anger cast down the peoples,
O God!

8 You number my wanderings;
Put my tears into Your bottle;
Are they not in Your book?

9 When I cry out to You,
Then my enemies will turn back;
This I know, because God is for me.

10 In God (I will praise His word),
In the LORD (I will praise His word),

11 In God I have put my trust;
I will not be afraid.
What can man do to me?

12 Vows made to You are binding upon me, O God;
I will render praises to You,

13 For You have delivered my soul from death.
Have You not kept my feet from falling,
That I may walk before God
In the light of the living?

56:5 All day they twist my words: In lament psalms, the poet typically complains about lies, the misuse of language, and deceitful speech (Ps. 12).

56:8–11 You number my wanderings: The psalmist is confident that God has a particular interest in his every pain, even his every tear. He also knows the great truth that comes from the meaning of God’s name, that the Lord is for us. See 118:6, 7 for a further development of this idea. I will praise His word: The double insert of this shout of praise shows the psalmist’s great enthusiasm for the praise of God. In God: The poet repeats the words of v. 4 as a refrain of confidence.

56:12, 13 Vows made to You: The poet takes very seriously his determination to praise the Lord. You have delivered my soul: Here is the psalmist’s report of deliverance. In the congregation of believing people, David rejoices in the Lord.

Psalm 57 is another of David’s poems in which the title gives the specific setting of the psalm. The narrative of David’s life indicates that he twice hid in caves—once in Adullam (1 Sam. 22:1–5) which was the setting of Ps. 142, and once in En Gedi (1 Sam. 24:1–7), the setting of this poem. In En Gedi, David spared Saul’s life even though Saul had become an easy target. While pursuing David, the king had entered a cave to relieve himself. It so happened that he chose the very cave in which David was hiding. Rather than killing Saul while he had the chance, David cut off a piece of the king’s garment. David later repented even of that act against Saul. This psalm is one of four that were set to the tune “Do Not Destroy” (Ps. 58; 59; 75). The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a call for mercy in the midst of calamities (vv. 1–3); (2) a confession of trust in the midst of trouble (vv. 4–6); (3) a determination to praise God in the midst of the people (vv. 7–11).

57:1–3 The opening cry be merciful to me is similar to many in the lament psalms, but here it is followed immediately by a confession of trust in the Lord. in the shadow: The picture of hiding under the wings of a mother bird is a familiar theme in the Psalms (91:1–4). Here the psalmist vows that he will pray only to his God, for God alone can deliver him from trouble. The Hebrew word for performs is translated “will perfect” in 138:8; the point is that God acts on behalf of His servant.

57:4–6 The psalmist’s foes are like lions prowling about for prey. Be exalted: In the midst of his distress, the psalmist shouts his praise to God (v. 11). One of the ways in which God exalts Himself is by graciously delivering the needy. They have prepared a net: The psalmist is like a bird that is easily caught; yet by God’s mercy, his enemies will fall into their own pit.

57:7 Near the end of his life, Paul was able to say that he had kept the faith (2 Tim. 4:7). With the words my heart is steadfast, David is assuring God of much the same thing: he has remained faithful to the God who has provided for him from the beginning.

- ⁹ ^lI will praise You, O Lord, among the peoples;

PSALM 59

title ^a 1 Sam. 19:11
¹ ² Lit. Set me on high

- Break out the fangs of the young lions, O LORD!
- ^{7 e}Let them flow away as waters which run continually;
When he bends his bow,
Let his arrows be as if cut in pieces.
- ⁸ Let them be like a snail which melts away as it goes, ^f*Like* a stillborn child of a woman, that they may not see the sun.
- ⁹ Before your ^gpots can feel the burning thorns,
He shall take them away ^has with a whirlwind,
As in His living and burning wrath.
- ¹⁰ The righteous shall rejoice when he sees the ⁱvengeance;
^jHe shall wash his feet in the blood of the wicked,
- ^{11 k}So that men will say,
“Surely there is a reward for the righteous;
Surely He is God who ^ljudges in the earth.”

PSALM 59

The Assured Judgment of the Wicked

To the Chief Musician. Set to ¹“Do Not Destroy.” A Michtam of David ^awhen Saul sent men, and they watched the house in order to kill him.

- Deliver me from my enemies, O my God;
²Defend me from those who rise up against me.

57:9, 10 I will praise You: As is common in the Psalms, the conclusion is a vow to praise the Lord. Such praise would be centered on the Lord's saving acts. In this poem, the praise of the Lord revolves around His mercy and truth (86:15). The words of v. 11 serve as a refrain, a repetition of the words of praise in v. 5.

Psalm 58, an imprecatory psalm, might have been provoked by a very strong attack on David. This is one of the four psalms set to the tune “Do Not Destroy” (Ps. 57; 59; 75). It has four parts: (1) a description of wicked judges who wreak havoc on the earth (vv. 1, 2); (2) a description of the wicked who continue in evil (vv. 3–5); (3) a prayer for divine vengeance against the wicked (vv. 6–9); (4) a promise that the righteous will be vindicated (vv. 10, 11).

58:1, 2 You silent ones is a derisive term for the wicked judges. Although they were merely humans, they were behaving as though they had divine power. Wickedness . . . violence: Instead of establishing righteousness, these wicked judges were producing havoc. They thought they had all power in the earth. But they would soon learn that God “judges in the earth” (v. 11).

58:4, 5 The effects of the wicked in powerful places are as deadly as the effects of poisonous snakes that are out of control. The word charmers refers to those who have the ability to “control” the behavior of snakes; but in this case, not even the equivalent of charmers could control the destruction and evil that resulted from wicked people in high places.

58:6, 7 In 57:4, the wicked are described as having powerful teeth, as though they were carnivores, eating the righteous alive. Here David asks God to shatter their teeth, symbolizing the destruction of the power of the wicked over the poor and defenseless (3:7).

58:8 The ancient Israelites desired children so much that a live birth was considered extremely precious. Alternatively a stillborn child would cause great sorrow.

58:9 In this verse, David speaks of the certainty of divine judgment. Before your pots can feel: It takes some time for a pot to boil. But the judgment of God will come suddenly—even before a pot would feel the heat. as with a whirlwind: The image speaks of sudden destruction. As in His living and burning wrath may also be translated “As He lives, so real is His anger.”

58:10 The destruction of the wicked brings sadness at the thought of the waste of human dreams, lives, and hopes. But there is great joy for the righteous in the recognition that the Savior King has won the victory (Rev. 19:11–21). There is also joy in knowing that wickedness will no longer anger the Lord of the universe (68:3). Justice will be established forever.

58:11 a reward for the righteous: See 1 Cor. 3:11–15 for further development of this theme. in the earth: This is the fitting arena of divine judgment, for the wicked judges thought they possessed all authority on earth (v. 2).

Psalm 59, a psalm of lament, contains strong assurance of the final judgment of the wicked. The superscription refers to the story found in 1 Sam. 19:9–17: David escaped Saul's anger with help from his wife Michal. She showed unusual heroism and great devotion to David—actions that resulted in a strained relationship with her father Saul. Psalm 59 has four parts: (1) a prayer for deliverance (vv. 1–5); (2) a confident hope (vv. 6–10); (3) a renewed prayer for deliverance (vv. 11–13); (4) a renewed hope (vv. 14–17).

59:1, 2 The repetition of the phrase deliver me is for emphasis, meaning “to bring one out” of trouble and distress. The verb translated defend means “to set on high” or “to place out of reach of trouble” (91:14). Save me: This is the most common of the Hebrew verbs for salvation. It suggests “to give room to” or “to expand an area to breathe.”

59:3, 4 they lie in wait: Enemies become like wild animals on the hunt or enemy soldiers lurking along one’s paths. Not for my transgression: There were times in David’s life when he knew that he was suffering because of sin in his life (Ps. 32). There were other times when he believed himself to be innocent of sin, but still he was hounded by wicked persons. Here he shouts his protest aloud: through no fault of mine. He is guilty of no wickedness that would cause such merciless attacks on him.

59:5 David’s call for the Lord to awake is another way of asking God to pay attention to his plight (7:6; 35:23; 44:23; Is. 51:9). To ensure God’s reception of his bold shout, David uses the “full name” of God: LORD God of hosts, the God of Israel. The Commander of the armies of angels is also the Protector of His people. Do not be merciful: The righteous constantly experience the mercy of the Lord, but His mercy is not extended to those who constantly oppose Him. The wicked transgressors were those who engaged in constant acts of treachery.

59:6, 7 A dog in the ancient Hebrew culture was considered a semi-wild scavenger, not the beloved pet of our own day. Who hears: Like those described in Ps. 9; 10, the wicked here believe that they will face no punishment for their evil. They are profoundly mistaken (75:7, 10; 92:6).

59:8 But You: This is a complete turnaround in the psalm—from thoughts about the wicked to an acknowledgment of the reality of God in human affairs. shall laugh . . . in derision: The wording is the same as in 2:4 (Job 9:23; Prov. 1:26). There is the pleasurable laughter of God in joy with His people (see 147:11; Zeph. 3:17). But this is the laughter of contempt.

59:9 Wait can also mean “watch.” The enemies of David had come to watch for him; but David was determined to “watch” for God. His Strength may also be translated “My Strength” or “O My Strong One.” The noun my defense means “a high place of refuge” and is related to the verb in v. 1. The same word is used again in vv. 16, 17 (62:2).

59:10 My God of mercy: The term mercy is sometimes translated “loyal love” (13:5). The Lord is the “God of my loyal love.”

59:11 This verse begins the second round of the petition in the psalm. The imprecation or curse in this verse is unusual. Instead of asking for the destruction of the wicked, the psalmist asks for them to be scattered, to be made fugitives. This would be a constant reminder of the consequences of evil.

59:13 The repetition of this verbal phrase consume them is similar to the repetition of the phrase deliver me in vv. 1, 2. that God rules in Jacob: The idea is similar to 58:11.

59:16, 17 But I: The words of these verses capture the positive thrust of this psalm. David sings with joyful abandon of his relationship with God, despite the presence of wicked persons. There are two verbs translated I will sing; together they capture the idea that singing in the name of the Lord is a wonderful act of faith (Ex. 15:2).

59:17 You, O my Strength is repeated from v. 9. In God, the believer finds strength, defense, and mercy. This psalm ends in a grand manner with bold faith in the living God.

Psalm 60, a psalm of community lament (Ps. 80), expresses David's great faith in the eventual victory he would find in the Lord. In this psalm, we hear the voice of God breaking into the poem itself and pronouncing His judgment on David's enemies (vv. 6–8; see also Ps. 12; 75; 87; 91). Since the tone of the psalm is military in nature, it is possible that this poem was used in military training. Along with training in weapons and tactics, David gave ongoing instruction to his soldiers about how to trust their Lord. The heading and content of this psalm add additional information to the account in 2 Sam. 8:3–8. The campaign of David and his general Joab against Hadadezer, the king of Zobah, did not succeed at first. This psalm describes the feelings of David and his army at the time of their defeat. But it also records their confident expectation that they would eventually succeed, something celebrated in the heading of the psalm and confirmed in 2 Sam. 8. The psalm has four movements: (1) a lament of the people when they experienced defeat (vv. 1–3); (2) an expression of confidence and a prayer for deliverance (vv. 4, 5); (3) the voice of God giving assurance of ultimate victory (vv. 6–8); (4) an expression of confidence in the Lord (vv. 9–12).

60:1–3 David accuses God of having broken them down. This is a poetic description of an otherwise unknown defeat of the armies of Israel in a battle that was part of the campaign against Aram of Zobah and Mesopotamian allies (2 Sam. 8). The defeat was so startling that it caused the people of Israel to feel as though God had made the earth tremble, a metaphor for devastation. wine of confusion: The defeat sent the people reeling; they could not understand how it could have happened.

60:4, 5 a banner: Despite the recent defeat, the people still had reason to hope in a final victory for Israel over its foes. The term beloved (127:2; Is. 5:1; Jer. 11:15) is particularly endearing. God had a reason to act on behalf of His people: He loved them.

60:6–8 At this point in the poem, God speaks (75:2–5, 10; 91:14–16). The Lord affirms that He is in charge, that the land belongs to Him, and that He will give victory to His people. In His holiness can also mean “in His holy place.” I will rejoice: It gives God pleasure to grant His people success. Shechem and the Valley of Succoth represent regions west and east of the Jordan River in the central parts of the land. Gilead and Manasseh are also regions east and west of the Jordan; Ephraim and Judah are regions in the north and south. The Lord was asserting His sovereignty over the entire land of Israel. Moab . . . Edom . . . Philistia: These traditional enemies of Israel were also enemies of God. The Lord would not allow them to disturb His people.

9 Who will bring me to the strong city?
Who will lead me to Edom?
10 Is it not You, O God, who cast us off?
And You, O God, who did not go out with our armies?
11 Give us help from trouble,
For the help of man is useless.
12 Through God we will do valiantly,
For it is He who shall tread down our enemies.

PSALM 62

A Calm Resolve to Wait for the Salvation of God

To the Chief Musician. To ^aJeduthun.
A Psalm of David.

Truly ^bmy soul silently waits for God;
From Him comes my salvation.
2 He only is my rock and my salvation;
He is my ¹defense;
I shall not be greatly ^cmoved.²
3 How long will you attack a man?
You shall be slain, all of you,
^dLike a leaning wall and a tottering fence.
4 They only consult to cast him down from his high position;
They ^edelight in lies;
They bless with their mouth,
But they curse inwardly. Selah
5 My soul, wait silently for God alone,
For my ³expectation is from Him.
6 He only is my rock and my salvation;
He is my defense;
I shall not be ⁴moved.
7 ^fIn God is my salvation and my glory;
The rock of my strength,
And my refuge, is in God.

60:10 Is it not You: The very One the people thought had cast them off (v. 1) would lead them to final victory.

60:11, 12 Ultimately, true help—the Hebrew word means “salvation”—comes only from God. we will do valiantly: As the title records, this was what happened. David's general Joab led the battle, and under God's hand Israel's enemies were soundly defeated. This psalm presents a strong encouragement to all believers who are presently experiencing difficulties in their lives: When the help of man proves useless, often God dramatically provides strength and power so that our boast is solely in Him.

Psalm 61, a royal psalm attributed to David, has elements of lament (Ps. 13) and trust (Ps. 23). In this psalm, the king of Israel points to the great King who is to come. The title includes the words “On a stringed instrument” (see the titles of Ps. 4; 6; 54; 55; 67; 76). The psalm has four parts: (1) a petition to God (vv. 1, 2); (2) an affirmation that God is David's refuge (vv. 3, 4); (3) an affirmation that God provides (vv. 5–7); (4) a vow to praise God (v. 8).

61:1 Hear my cry is classic language of a lament psalm. David calls on the Lord to hear the prayer of the troubled believer (5:2, 3; 17:1; 55:2; 66:19; 86:6; 142:6).

61:2 From the end of the earth: David describes his sense of being far from God's presence in his time of need. His prayer is that he might be brought back to the rock that is higher than he. The imagery of God as a Rock for the believer was introduced by Moses (see Deut. 2:4) and is developed elsewhere in the Psalms (62:2; 71:3; 91:1, 2; 144:1).

61:3 The idea of God as one's shelter or refuge is seen in a number of passages in the Psalms (14:6; 46:1; 62:7, 8; 71:7; 91:2, 9; 94:22; 142:5). Such verses present the psalmist's strong affirmation of the protection and deliverance to be found in God.

61:4 I will abide implies strong determination. It is used of a worshiper in God's house in 15:1. Elsewhere, the psalmist compares himself to (1) an everlasting guest in the tent of the Lord (Ps. 15) and (2) a chick who has complete trust under its mother's wings (63:7; 91:4).

61:5 The pronoun You is emphasized in this verse as David celebrates the work of God in his life and in the life of his people. the heritage: God had given the nation to David for him to rule responsibly. These words also refer to the greater reality of the Savior King who would receive the nations as His inheritance to rule forever. who fear Your name: This is standard language describing biblical piety. To fear is to hold the name of God in awe and wonder, in worship and obedience (see 147:11; Ex. 20:20).

61:6, 7 The terms many generations and forever refer to David's long rule but more literally prophesy the eternal rule of Jesus, the King of kings. Mercy and truth together mean “loving loyalty” (see John 1:14 for an equivalent expression: “grace and truth”). Psalm 23 presents the believer pursued by God's “goodness and mercy” (23:6); but here the king is guarded by God's loving loyalty.

61:8 My vows refers to the vows of praise to God mentioned in v. 5 (see also 22:22–26; 66:13; 76:11).

Psalm 62 is a wisdom psalm that eloquently urges silent confidence in the victory of God over all enemies because salvation is found only in Him. Jeduthun in the superscription was the chief of one of the choirs in the temple (1 Chr. 9:16) whose descendants founded a temple choir (1 Chr. 16:41, 42). The superscription “To Jeduthun” is also found in Ps. 39; 77. This psalm consists of seven brief sections: (1) a statement of confidence in God (vv. 1, 2); (2) a direct challenge to the wicked (v. 3); (3) a description of the ways of the wicked (v. 4); (4) a renewed statement of confidence in God (vv. 5–7); (5) a direct challenge to the righteous (v. 8); (6) a further description and warning of the ways of the wicked (vv. 9, 10); (7) a final statement of confidence in God (vv. 11, 12).

62:1, 2 In these two verses, David declares his complete dependence on God. silently waits: David expresses silent resignation before the sovereign will of the living God. My defense is from the word also used in 59:9, 16, 17. not be greatly moved: See the development of David’s confidence in God in the wording of v. 6.

62:3 How long: David addresses his tormentors directly, expecting that they will soon be judged. attack: The word means to threaten or shout at someone.

62:5 wait silently: A different Hebrew word is used here, but the concept of v. 1 is restated. My expectation may also be translated “hope” (71:5).

62:6, 7 Verse 6 is a restatement of v. 2, but strengthened by dropping the word greatly. Verse 7 restates v. 6. My salvation and my glory may be rephrased “my glorious salvation.”

62:8 Trust: David addresses the righteous (contrast v. 3) with his lesson of reliance on God (40:3). What is true for David (v. 7) is extended to all in the believing community.

62:11 once, Twice: It is a convention of wisdom literature to use a number and then raise it by one (Prov. 30:11–33). The point here is that David has heard the message with certainty.

62:12 Mercy can be translated “loyal love,” the covenantal love of the Lord (13:5). to each one: God is the true Judge; He will repay and reward every person (Eccl. 12:13, 14).

Psalm 63 is a royal psalm with elements of the psalms of trust (Ps. 23). The brief biographical note in the title “when he was in the wilderness of Judah” possibly refers to an incident during the period when Saul was chasing David (1 Sam. 22–24). The pattern of the psalm is as follows: (1) a search for a renewed sense of God’s presence (vv. 1, 2); (2) a confession of David’s faith in God (vv. 3–5); (3) an expression of confidence in the Lord even during the lonely night watches (vv. 6–8); (4) a prediction of the end of David’s enemies (vv. 9, 10); (5) a renewal of David’s confession of trust in God the great King (v. 11).

63:1, 2 O God, You are my God: The opening words indicate faith in God, but they also suggest a time of trouble (22:1). thirsts . . . longs: The poet is away from the place of God’s worship and feels the distance keenly (42:1, 2). The sanctuary had been at Nob (1 Sam. 21:1), and it was there that David had sought the presence of the Lord. Later it was moved to Jerusalem (76:1, 2).

63:3–5 The psalmist expresses his joy in knowing God and his determination to continue praising God throughout his life. Lovingkindness may also be translated “loyal love” (13:5). Praise is a vocal, public act in the Psalms (Heb. 13:15). bless . . . hands: Praise (the meaning of bless here) and raising the hands in worship are often associated in the Psalms (134:2). To lift the hands to the Lord expresses dependence on Him, coupled with an acknowledgment of His power, wonder, and majesty (77:2). be satisfied . . . with joyful lips: In coming to the Lord in praise, the poet finds the refreshment he has sought (v. 1).

63:6 From his bed, David continues to fix his thoughts on God (77:6). night watches: The Israelites counted three watches to the night. Evidently David is having difficulty sleeping, and he directs his thoughts to worship. Meditate means “to speak” about the things of God or to fill one’s mind with the knowledge of God (1:2; 77:12).

63:7, 8 in the shadow of Your wings: See 91:4 for this expression of faith in God. Your right hand: The same power of God that delivered Israel from Egypt (Ex. 15:6) would support David—and all other believers in their daily life (74:11).

63:9, 10 David predicts the destruction of his enemies. They will be driven to barren places where only jackals, wild dogs of the desert, roam.

63:11 The king refers to David. When he finally became king, David would find his true pleasure in God. Everyone who swears by Him refers to those who believe in the Lord.

Psalm 64 has elements of lament (Ps. 13) and imprecation (Ps. 137), but it appears to be basically a wisdom psalm. It contrasts the righteous and the wicked, compares their destinies, and is itself a “meditation” (v. 1). The structure of the poem is: (1) an appeal for protection from the wicked (vv. 1, 2); (2) a description of the evil activities of the wicked (vv. 3–6); (3) an expectation of the defeat of the wicked by God (vv. 7–9); (4) a description of the joy of the righteous (v. 10).

64:1 The initial cry of the psalmist expressed with the verbs hear and preserve resembles the psalms of lament (Ps. 13), but the term my meditation suggests that this is a wisdom psalm. This observation is confirmed in the rest of the psalm, which contrasts the destiny of the wicked with that of the righteous, a theme of wisdom psalms. In other passages the term meditation has the idea of “complaint” (55:2; 102:2; 142:2). But in this psalm the word indicates contemplation, for David contemplated the wicked and their end (see also 73:17).

64:5, 6 The arrogance of the wicked in their plots against the righteous is a continuing theme in the Psalms (Ps. 9; 10; 12). Who will see: The wicked do not know, or do not care, that there is One who sees (73:11), and who will repay (75:7).

64:10 The joy of confident trust in God cannot be overstated. By placing our problems into God’s hands, we can rest in His sovereign will for our lives. Concerns about the future can be cast aside, for the Lord controls our future and has good plans for us (see Rom.

Praise to God for His Awesome Works

To the Chief Musician. A Song. A Psalm.

- Make ^aa joyful shout to God, all

² Sing out the honor of His name;
Make His praise glorious.

8:28). All the upright in heart is another designation for the righteous or “the blameless” (v. 4). Their glory is their exuberant praise to God (63:11).

Psalm 65 is a wisdom psalm and more particularly a creation psalm (as Ps. 19). It celebrates rainfall, sharing the mood of Ps. 104 in this regard. But this is also a prophetic psalm, although it is not always recognized as such. The prophetic element is signaled in the first verse, the vow of praise yet to be paid—that is, all creation is waiting to praise the Lord when He finally appears in glory (see Rom. 14:10, 11; Rev. 19:5). The psalm has five movements: (1) a vow of praise yet to be performed (vv. 1–3); (2) a blessing pronounced on the redeemed (v. 4); (3) a celebration of God’s power that extends throughout the earth (vv. 5–8); (4) a celebration of God’s provision of rain (vv. 9, 10); (5) a celebration of God’s coming blessings in the year of His goodness (vv. 11–13).

65:1 Praise is awaiting You: There is still a vow of praise to be performed (v. 3). In the background of this psalm is an idea not far from that of Paul in Rom. 8:22, the groaning of creation for its release from the curse brought on it by humanity’s fall (Gen. 3:17). The point of the psalm is twofold: (1) Every good rain and every full harvest is a blessing from God, showing His delight in His creation. (2) A day of God’s goodness is coming in which good rains and harvests will be greater than ever before.

65:2, 3 atonement: David speaks of a coming day when sin will be dealt with fully, when redemption will be completely paid. This took place in the death and resurrection of Jesus Christ (see Eph. 1:7).

65:4 shall be satisfied: In other psalms, David expresses his desire to live in the presence of God (27:4, 5). The fulfillment of this desire in David’s day came through the sacrificial services of worship in Israel.

65:5–8 The awesome power of God at creation in the beginning (Job 26) will one day be seen anew in the restoration of all things. noise of the seas: God’s power over the “dark powers” of the seas is a regular theme in the royal psalms (Ps. 93).

65:9, 10 You visit the earth: Rainfall is seen here as a gracious visitation of God. This is in keeping with the provisions of God’s covenant with Israel (Deut. 28:12). These words have some fulfillment every time the rains bring productivity to the earth.

65:11–13 Your paths: The picture is of wagon tracks across the heavens, where the “cart” of God’s mercies slashes abundance on the earth below. they also sing: The “singers” here are the pastures and the valleys. The coming of God’s kingdom to earth will be a magnificent time of productivity (67:6). This is the vow that remains to be performed (v. 1).

Psalm 66, a psalm of praise, offers significant contributions to our understanding of the values of biblical worship. In the course of the psalm, the poet offers descriptive praise, praising God for who He is and what He does, as well as declarative praise, praising God for specific answers to prayer. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) a call for all the earth to join in the celebratory worship of God (vv. 1–4); (2) an enumeration of reasons to worship God (vv. 5–7); (3) a call for the peoples to join the psalmist in descriptive praise of God (vv. 8–12); (4) the psalmist’s decision to participate in holy worship (vv. 13–15); (5) declarative praise of God (vv. 16–19); (6) a final blessing of the Lord (v. 20).

66:1, 2 As in 100:1, the call is not only for the people of Israel, but for peoples of all the earth to join in the praise of the living God, the Most High (Ps. 87; 96; 117). Sing out the honor of His name: The Lord is pleased with music that praises His glorious name

An Invocation and a Doxology

To the Chief Musician. On ¹stringed instruments. A Psalm. A Song.

God be merciful to us and bless us,
 And ^acause His face to shine upon us, Selah
 2 That ^bYour way may be known on earth,
^cYour salvation among all nations.

(Ex. 15:2). The Lord’s name describes His character, so honoring God’s name is honoring God Himself (Ex. 3:14, 15).

66:3, 4 How awesome: The works of God are designed to bring a sense of awe to people (19:1, 2). In this context, submit means “to cringe” before God. The term translated worship means “to kneel” or “to bow down.” The opening verses of this psalm present a call and an expectation that one day all the earth will worship God, with a particular focus on the glory of God’s name.

66:8, 9 To bless God is to identify Him as the source of our blessing (see 103:1, 2). you peoples: The call is to all the nations of the earth (vv. 1, 4, 5). God’s preservation of His people is one of many reasons to bless Him.

66:13–15 Your house refers to the temple in Jerusalem where God lived among His people. During periods of distress in his life, the poet made vows that when God brought him out of distress, he would publicly acknowledge God’s deliverance (40:1–3; 61:5, 8; 76:11). Each of the sacrifices would be accompanied by the heart attitude of the true worshiper (see John 4:23, 24). The psalmist speaks very personally of his intent to bring abundant sacrifices in his worship of God.

66:16–19 You who fear God refers to those who respond in awe and wonder to the Lord (v. 4). iniquity: Among the things that can block effective prayer is ongoing sin in a believer’s life (Ps. 32).

But the psalmist here confesses that God has heard. The psalmist appeals to the “peoples” in vv. 8, 9; he calls out to believers in vv. 16–19.

66:20 The concluding words of the poem are an affirmation of the psalmist’s blessing of the Lord (v. 8) based on his realization of God’s continuing goodness in his life.

Psalm 67, a psalm of praise, serves as a marvelous invocation and doxology in worship. The poem calls the nations of the world to praise God, to join Israel in honoring the Creator. There is: (1) a call for God’s blessing for the purpose of world evangelization (vv. 1, 2); (2) a call for the nations to bless the Lord in view of His righteous judgments (vv. 3, 4); (3) a call for the nations to bless the Lord in view of His coming kingdom (vv. 5–7).

67:1, 2 cause His face to shine: In the language of the Aaronic benediction (Num. 6:24–26), the psalmist calls for God to smile on His people (Ps. 80). From the beginning, God had intended to bring His blessing to all nations, in fulfillment of the provisions of the Abrahamic covenant (Gen. 12:3). This passage anticipates the thrust of world mission that is found in the NT (Matt. 28:18–20; Acts 1:8). The point in this psalm is clear: May God bless His people Israel in such a manner that the message of God’s way would become known throughout the earth.

- ³ Let the peoples praise You, O God;
Let all the peoples praise You.
- ⁴ Oh, let the nations be glad and sing for joy!
For ^dYou shall judge the people
righteously,
And govern the nations on earth.
- Selah*
- ⁵ Let the peoples praise You, O God;
Let all the peoples praise You.
- ⁶ ^eThen the earth shall ²yield her increase;
God, our own God, shall bless us.
- ⁷ God shall bless us,
And all the ends of the earth shall fear Him.

67:3, 4 Let the peoples praise You: God’s desire is for all people to praise Him, for He is their Creator and their Provider (2 Pet. 3:9). This should also be the desire of God’s people.

67:5–7 yield her increase: As in the prophetic aspect of Ps. 65, the coming of God’s kingdom on earth will be marked by a magnificent increase in production. The curse on the land (Gen. 3:17–19; Rom. 8:22) will be lifted in “the year of God’s goodness” (65:11).

Psalm 68 is based in part on the Song of Deborah in Judg. 5. It speaks with great power of the glory of God. The first and last verses of the psalm (vv. 1, 35) capture its essence. The title refers to it as both a “Psalm” and a “Song,” indicating its musical nature. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) a call for God to rise in judgment against the wicked (vv. 1–3); (2) a call for the people of God to praise Him for His wonders and mercies (vv. 4–6); (3) a review of the works of God on behalf of His people (vv. 7–14); (4) a celebration of the city of God and His saving works (vv. 15–20); (5) an anticipation of the final victory of God over all His enemies (vv. 21–27); (6) an anticipation of the worship of God by the peoples of the earth (vv. 28–35).

68:1–3 Let God arise . . . flee before Him: The presence of the wicked on the earth is an assault on God’s holiness and a constant threat to the righteous. Only God’s mercy compels Him to delay His judgment (75:2). But when God awakes, His enemies will be scattered; they will disappear like smoke. let the righteous . . . rejoice exceedingly: The joy of the righteous will be great when there is an end to all evil (58:10).

68:4 Extol Him who rides on the clouds: A well-known description of Baal was as “the rider of the clouds.” Here the title is stripped from the supposed “god” Baal and given to the living God of Scripture. The fact that the Lord is the Rider of the clouds indicates that He is the One who brings rain and controls the powerful forces of a storm (147:8, 9, 15–18). YAH is a shortened form of the divine name Yahweh (Ex. 3:14, 15). There is a significant emphasis on the name of God in this section (122:4; 135:1–3).

68:5 The Lord is not limited to clouds and storms; He also meets the needs of the helpless. For all people, He is in His holy habitation, dispensing justice.

68:7–10 The poet describes the work of God on behalf of His people in poetic terms that recall the Exodus events and draw on the Song of Deborah (Judg. 5:4). The language of this section is also an expansion of the description in v. 4; this is the march of God as the true God of the Storm.

68:11 The term translated word refers to a command rather than a revelation. The command was that God’s works would be made known among the peoples. Those who proclaimed it translates a feminine participle. Thus the people who made the proclamation were women, most likely the women who gave praise to God under the direction of Miriam (Ex. 15:20, 21).

68:14 The Almighty is the name Shaddai, a title that refers to the majesty and strength of the Lord (91:1). The scattering of kings refers to the early battles won by Israel during the wilderness period and at the time of the conquest of the land of Canaan.

68:15, 16 Bashan was a very fertile area northeast of the Sea of Galilee, a part of the former territory of Og. It is possible that the connotation of Bashan as a place of plenty is transferred poetically to Jerusalem in these verses, for it was only in Jerusalem that the Lord had sworn that he would dwell.

68:18 When God delivered His people from Egypt, He brought them out with great treasures from the Egyptians (Ex. 12:35, 36). These gifts were used by the people of Israel to build the tabernacle (Ex. 35) that the Lord God might dwell there.

68:19, 20 This section is a benediction, a blessing on the Lord, for His daily mercies in the lives of the people of faith. The God of our salvation is a great title for the One who saved Israel from Egypt, who saved Israel from their sin, who continues to save His people in their daily lives, and who will glorify His people in the future.

68:21, 22 The Lord is the Victor over the enemies of His people. None shall escape, whether near—Bashan—or far—in the sea. Like grapes they will be crushed, and justice will finally be served (58:10).

68:24–27 The procession of God could refer to one of three things: (1) carrying the ark of the covenant through the wilderness during the time of the Exodus; (2) God leading as the Commander of His armies in Israel; (3) the grand procession of the Savior King as He comes to establish His reign on earth (Rev. 19:14–21). Timbrels, or tambourines, often played by women, were used for both sacred and secular occasions. Associated with dance, they suggested joy (81:2; 149:3; 150:4; see also Judg. 11:34; 1 Sam. 18:6, 7; 2 Sam. 6:5; Is. 30:32). The fountain of Israel is a poetic term for the people as they rise to praise God. little Benjamin: The role of Benjamin, one of the smaller tribes, was significant. Saul was from this tribe, and the city of Jerusalem was located within its borders.

68:29, 30 Kings . . . presents: The term presents means “gifts offered in homage.” Royal guests came to Solomon with gifts (1 Kin. 10:1–10); but the ultimate prophetic fulfillment of this verse was in the kings who came to Jerusalem to bring gifts to the infant Jesus (Matt. 2:1–12). One day all kings will show their obedience and humility before Jesus, the great King (2:10–12; 76:11). Egypt, Assyria, and Canaan may be indicated by the phrases the beasts of the reeds, the herd of bulls, and the calves of the peoples. The point of these verses seems to be general submission to the royal house in Jerusalem.

- 33 To Him ^qwho rides on the heaven of heavens, which were of old!
Indeed, He sends out His voice, a ^rmighty voice.
- 34 ^sAscribe strength to God;

68:33–35 The psalm ends with a celebration of the presence of God in the midst of His people. This section looks forward to the reign of Jesus the Savior King (Zeph. 3:14–17). Him who rides on the heaven of heavens is a development of the phrase found in v. 4. The Lord's voice is the thunder; God is the true God of storm (77:16–20) and Creator of the universe. When all things are considered, there is nothing in the universe that can be compared with God. Thus the poet says You are more awesome than Your holy places. Psalm 69, a psalm of lament, is more specifically a protest of innocence. This highly messianic psalm presents a remarkable description of the suffering of Jesus Christ. Whereas Ps. 22 describes Jesus' physical sufferings, Ps. 69 focuses more on His emotional and spiritual suffering. Yet like Ps. 22, this psalm was written by David approximately a thousand years before the events it describes. Both psalms begin with the sufferings of David but have their full meaning in the sufferings of Jesus. Its structure is as follows: (1) a cry for deliverance that expresses the psalmist's weariness (vv. 1–3); (2) a description of the psalmist's enemies (v. 4); (3) a lament that expresses the psalmist's sense of alienation (vv. 5–12); (4) a cry for deliverance from the mire (vv. 13–18); (5) a lament that expresses the psalmist's reproach (vv. 19–21); (6) a petition for God to bring His judgment on the wicked (vv. 22–28); (7) a determination to praise the Lord (vv. 29–36).

69:2, 3 I sink in deep mire: The opening words of this psalm of anguish use the strong image of a person about to drown—not just in deep waters, but in muck (40:2). This powerfully descriptive language expresses extreme mental anguish. I am weary: As a drowning man might exhaust his voice entirely, so David is worn out from praying and crying out to the Lord (6:6).

69:4 hate me without a cause: These words describe David's experience in a difficult period of his life. It seems that his foes are innumerable; but more devastating to him than their number is the fact that he has not caused their attack. Any attack is difficult; an unprovoked attack is intolerable. Yet these words also are prophetic of the sufferings of Jesus (35:19; 109:3–5; John 15:23–25).

69:9–12 zeal for Your house: Like Phinehas in Num. 25, David describes himself as a zealot for the house of the Lord. Jesus' cleansing of the temple was a fulfillment of these words (see John 2:17). When I wept: Even the piety of David has become a reason for his enemies to chide him. Those who sit in the gate: The elders of the cities looked with contempt on David; similarly, many of the elders of Jerusalem held Jesus in disdain.

69:14–16 The words deliver me out of the mire tie the psalm together; compare the words of vv. 1–3. Hear me: This renewed plea to God is based on the character of the Lord; His lovingkindness or loyal love, and His tender mercies compelled David to keep looking to the Lord for deliverance.

15 Let not the floodwater overflow me,
Nor let the deep swallow me up;
And let not the pit shut its mouth on me.

16 Hear me, O LORD, for Your lovingkindness is good;
Turn to me according to the multitude of Your tender mercies.

17 And do not hide Your face from Your servant,
For I am in trouble;
Hear me speedily.

18 Draw near to my soul, and redeem it;
Deliver me because of my enemies.

19 You know ^jmy reproach, my shame,

23 ^oLet their eyes be darkened, so that they do not see;
And make their loins shake

PSALM 70

Prayer for Relief from Adversaries

To the Chief Musician. A *Psal*m of David.
^aTo bring to remembrance.

Make haste, ^bO God, to deliver me!
Make haste to help me, O LORD!

2 ^cLet them be ashamed and confounded
Who seek my life;
Let them be ¹turned back and confused
Who desire my hurt.

69:20, 21 for my thirst: At one point during Jesus' suffering on the cross, He was offered vinegar to soothe His thirst (Matt. 27:34; Mark 15:23; Luke 23:36; John 19:28-30).

69:24-28 Pour out Your indignation upon them may refer to the Lord's judgment on His foes in this lament over Jerusalem. The words of v. 25 were fulfilled in Judas Iscariot. See Acts 1:20, in which the words of this verse are joined to the words of 109:8.

69:29-33 The phrase I am poor refers to a brokenness of spirit and sense of worthlessness caused by the assaults of the wicked. The poor in the psalms become a portrait of the Savior, illustrating the magnitude of Jesus' humility (described by Paul in Phil. 2:5-7).

I will praise: David praised God in exuberant joy when the Lord saved him from the depths of despair. All humble people, especially those who suffer the indignities brought about by the wicked, will join in praise and joy before God their Savior.

Psalm 70, a psalm of lament, is a reprise of 40:13-17. The description of the poor and needy was such a necessary element in the encouragement of people enduring troubles that this section was selected for individual use as a freestanding poem.

70:2 Let them be ashamed and confounded: David prays that those who rejoice in his misery will be proven wrong in their assumption that the Lord is unable to help His people. In this way, the Lord's deliverance of David will result in God's name being glorified—both by the joy of God's people and the shame of His enemies (see also vv. 3, 4).

- 3 ^d Let them be turned back because of their shame,

- 4 Let all those who seek You rejoice

You are my help and my deliverer;
O LORD, do not delay.

70:4, 5 The last three words of the psalm do not delay indicate the near-desperation of David. The cry echoes David's plea in v. 1 for the Lord to “come quickly” to save him. Even in panic-stricken despair, David does not forget to praise his Lord. He reminds himself that the Lord is his only source of strength, help, and deliverance. Psalm 71 is a psalm of lament with a major focus on the psalmist's trust in God. The psalm alternates between expressions of desperate need and resolute trust in the Lord. In this interplay, the psalmist models the way believers should react to suffering. The poet describes himself as an old man who has trusted in God for a long time (vv. 9, 18). In his great time of need, he asks God to be faithful to His servant. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) a confession of the psalmist's resolute trust in God (vv. 1–3); (2) petitions for God to deliver the psalmist from trouble (vv. 4–6); (3) a determination to praise God even in the midst of trouble (vv. 7, 8); (4) petitions for deliverance (vv. 9–11); (5) a call for judgment on the psalmist's enemies (vv. 12, 13); (6) a commitment to trust and praise God (vv. 14–16); (7) a renewal of the psalmist's petitions based on his experience of God's faithfulness (vv. 17, 18); (8) a renewal of trust in God (vv. 19–21); (9) a determination to praise God (vv. 22–24). 71:1 The theme of the psalm is stated in this verse. On the basis of resolute trust (61:4; 91:3), the psalmist asks that he never be put to shame. Trusting in God is never foolish (4:2; 119:31).

71:2, 3 in Your righteousness: The psalmist is concerned not only with his own plight but with the character of God (vv. 15, 16, 19, 24). The psalmist's point is that God could display His righteousness by answering the needs of the psalmist, whose life had been lived in constant trust in God. strong refuge: The Hebrew words mean literally “rock fortress.” The Lord is the only source of continual protection for the psalmist.

71:4 The Hebrew root of deliver me means “to cause to escape” (17:13; 37:40; 144:2). After asking for deliverance, the poet reasserts his strong faith in God, calling Him his hope and his trust, the One who has sustained him from his birth (22:10). He prays in faith, not allowing his circumstances to cause him to doubt the goodness of God.

71:7 a wonder: The poet declares that the work of God in his life has made him a special sign to the people, similar to the great miracles of God through Moses and Aaron in Egypt (Ex. 7:3; 11:9). 71:9–11 The poet uses familiar images in the psalms of lament (Ps. 13) to encourage God to respond to his need. in the time of old age: The psalmist has trusted in God his entire life (v. 6); it would be sad if he were dismissed by the Lord late in life (v. 18). Not only was the psalmist's own life and comfort at stake, but so was the reputation of God. If the enemies concluded that God has forsaken him, then the reputation of the Lord would be tarnished in the world.

71:12, 13 do not be far: These words evoke the language of 22:1, 19. confounded: The language of this verse is imprecatory (Ps. 137); the poet calls for justice and vengeance against his enemies, for they are in fact enemies of the living God (v. 24).

71:14 I will hope: The Hebrew text has an emphatic pronoun meaning “as for me,” bringing determination to the poet's words. The Hebrew verb translated hope describes a confident expectation that God will intervene and deliver (147:11).

16 I will go in the strength of the Lord
God;
I will make mention of Your righteousness, of Yours only.

PSALM 72

Glory and Universality of the Messiah's Reign

A Psalm ^a of Solomon.

Gⁱve the king Your judgments,
O God,
And Your righteousness to the king's Son.

2 ^bHe will judge Your people with righteousness,
And Your poor with justice.

3 ^cThe mountains will bring peace to the people,
And the little hills, by righteousness.

4 ^dHe will bring justice to the poor of
the people;
He will save the children of the needy,
And will ¹break in pieces the oppressor.

5 2 They shall fear You
^eAs long as the sun and moon endure,
Throughout all generations.

71:17, 18 youth . . . old and grayheaded: The poet has trusted in God all his life. In his old age, he faces a crisis. He fully expects that God in His righteousness (vv. 2, 15, 16, 19, 24) will respond favorably to his request to deliver him and preserve him from shame (v. 1). For his part, the psalmist will continue to praise the Lord.

71:19, 20 The poet speaks of the great things that God had done, for which He is worthy of praise. He also speaks of the great and severe troubles that he has experienced at God's hand, and from which he seeks relief. Depths of the earth is a metaphor for the psalmist's despondency (40:2); he feels as though he has already dropped headlong into a pit.

71:22, 23 The poem concludes with a bold vow of praise, in confident expectation that the psalmist's prayer will be answered. The poet praises God with the lute, but also with his lips. At the same time, his inner being, his soul, is filled with praises to the living God.

71:24 brought to shame: The psalm comes full circle with the word shame. The poet begins by asking the Lord to prevent him from becoming shamed (v. 1), and he ends the poem with a declaration that the wicked have been shamed. The Lord has answered his prayer; He has protected His righteous servant.

Psalm 72, a royal psalm, is one of two psalms (see also Ps. 127) ascribed to Solomon, the son of David. King Solomon might have arranged David's psalms in something like their present order, then appended his own psalm to the group (see v. 20). This psalm is intensely messianic, speaking in ideal terms of the coming of the great King. On the basis of the ideals of ancient Middle Eastern royalty, the psalm calls for a good king to govern Israel under God's blessing. Ultimately this King is the Savior Jesus. The psalm has the following structure: (1) a call for a reign of judgment (vv. 1-4); (2) anticipation of a reign of righteousness (vv. 5-7); (3) a vision of a universal reign (vv. 8-11); (4) a vision of a reign of compassionate justice (vv. 12-14); (5) a prediction of a reign of great blessing (vv. 15-17); (6) praise for the God who will establish this glorious reign (vv. 18-20).

72:5-7 Fear You is an expression of wonder, awe, reverence, worship, and obedience. He shall come down: The great King is pictured as the gentle rains of God's blessing on the earth. His reign will lead to true peace, the state of things as they really ought to be.

wondrous works

(Heb. pala') (71:17; 107:8; 118:23; 119:27) Strong's #6381

The core meaning of this word is "to do something extraordinary." In reference to people, the word is used to describe an action or understanding beyond the normal capacity of humans (Deut. 17:8; 30:11; 2 Sam. 13:2; Prov. 30:18) or beyond normal obligations (Lev. 22:21; 27:2; Num. 6:2; 15:3, 8). However, the highest sense of the word is reserved for God alone, especially in the Psalms in which it occurs most frequently and always in reference to God (72:18; 136:4). God is wonderful in counsel; nothing is too marvelous for Him (Gen. 18:14; Is. 28:29). His wondrous works are cosmic (107:24; Job 37:14), national (Ex. 3:20; Is. 29:14), and personal (31:21; Job 10:16). Not everyone understands them (78:32; 106:7), but the Bible exhorts believers to remember these wonderful works of God and publicly praise Him for them (96:3; 105:2, 5; 1 Chr. 16:9, 12, 24).

- 9 ⁱThose who dwell in the wilderness
will bow before Him,
^jAnd His enemies will lick the dust.
- 10 ^kThe kings of Tarshish and of the isles
Will bring presents;
The kings of Sheba and Seba

BIBLE TIMES & CULTURE NOTES

Lebanon

In ancient times the Phoenicians used the city-states of Byblos, Sidon, and Tyre as the base of a great sea-trading empire in what is now Lebanon. Over the years, these city-states were conquered by Egyptians, Assyrians, Persians, and the Greeks under Alexander the Great. The scenic beauty of the country has inspired many symbolic references in the Bible and the rich vegetation of Lebanon became a symbol of fruitfulness and fertility. Originally, the famed cedars of Lebanon covered the region, but bands of marauding conquerors from Mesopotamia, Egypt, Israel, and Tyre destroyed the forests by using the wood for palaces, furniture, ships, coffins, and musical instruments. By the sixth century A.D., the beautiful groves were almost gone. The climate of Lebanon ranges from the almost tropical heat and vegetation of the plain of Dan to heavy snow in the plain of el-Bekaa. Mainly it has a Mediterranean climate with cool, wet winters and hot, dry summers.

72:8–10 The promises of God to Abraham included a promise that his descendants would have dominion over the land of Canaan (Gen. 15:18–21). These verses expand the geographical dimensions to include the entire earth. The River refers to the Euphrates—a distant, significant waterway that many Israelites hoped would become the extent of their kingdom. The glorious coming King will have the river as a near border; His territory will extend to the ends of the earth. No one will escape the power of His reign, not even those in the wilderness. Lick the dust: The King's enemies will have their faces to the ground in forced submission to His majesty. Tarshish and Sheba were the most distant places known to the Israelites; they suggest distances beyond Solomon's imagination. As Solomon had received gifts from the queen of Sheba (1 Kin. 10:1–10), so he predicted that the coming King would receive gifts from rulers all over the earth.

72:13, 14 This section emphasizes the work of the King on behalf of the poor and needy. precious shall be their blood: The blood shed by the needy points to the blood the Savior shed on the cross (see Heb. 12:24). No wonder Jesus finds the shed blood of others to be precious.

72:15–17 The promise of life in the words He shall live is a messianic theme (16:10, 11; 91:16; 118:17, 18), for the coming Savior is the only One who grants true life (John 11:25). gold of Sheba: This is a reference to v. 10. The name of the great King will be regarded as the greatest name in the universe; Paul speaks this way of Jesus' name in Phil. 2:9–11.

72:18, 19 These magnificent words of benediction mark the conclusion of the psalm, as well as the conclusion of Book II of the Psalms. The repetition of the word blessed, the focus on the name (as in 89:16), and the double Amen all indicate that this psalm was used in the worship of God in His temple.

19 And ^vblessed be His glorious name forever!
^wAnd let the whole earth be filled with His glory.
Amen and Amen.

The Tragedy of the Wicked, and the Blessedness of Trust in God

A Psalm of ^aAsaph.

To such as are pure in heart.
2 But as for me, my feet had almost stumbled;
My steps had nearly ^bslipped.
3 ^cFor I was envious of the boastful,
When I saw the prosperity of the ^dwicked.

Nor are they plagued like other men.
6 Therefore pride serves as their necklace;
Violence covers them ^f*like a* garment.
7 ^gTheir ²eyes bulge with abundance;
They have more than heart could wish.
8 ^hThey scoff and speak wickedly concerning oppression;
They ⁱspeak ³loftily.

11 And they say, ^l“How does God know?
And is there knowledge in the Most High?”
12 Behold, these are the ungodly,
Who are always at ease;

So, Lord, when You awake,
You shall despise their image.

72:20 The prayers of David: The superscription of Ps. 72 attributes the psalm to Solomon. It is possible that Solomon wrote this poem in honor of his father David at the end of an early edition of the psalms so far collected. Other psalms were added later to this original collection.

Psalm 73 is a psalm of trust with some features of the wisdom psalms. The psalm is unusual in that it tells a story about the psalmist’s struggle with envy, doubts, and his faith in God. But through his struggles, the psalmist Asaph learned to trust in God. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) the temptation to be envious of the wicked (vv. 1–3); (2) a description of the wicked (vv. 4–14); (3) the realization that the end of the wicked is the balancing factor (vv. 15–20); (4) the psalmist’s regret over his uncertainty (vv. 21–24); (5) a renewed resolve to trust in God alone (vv. 25, 26); (6) the destruction of the wicked (v. 27); (7) a renewed trust in God (v. 28).

73:1–3 In the opening verses Asaph describes the crisis of faith he experienced. He begins with one of the basic elements of biblical theology, that God is good to Israel (100:5; 106:1; 107:1). But then he confesses that he almost stumbled when he became envious of the success and wealth of the wicked.

73:5, 6 Asaph observes that the attitudes and actions of the wicked seem to place no constraints upon them. They appear not to have trouble. Their pride and violence are not hidden but are displayed like jewelry. They fulfill their lustful appetites and boast about their wicked accomplishments.

73:12 Asaph describes the apathy about God characteristic of the wicked, who had concluded that God—if there was a God—was disengaged from people’s lives. Asaph is bothered by the fact that with this aberrant view of life the wicked are still able to enjoy life, drink their fill, and live at ease. Thus the psalmist feels that his own acts of righteous living are without meaning or purpose.

73:15–17 untrue: Asaph realizes that if he continued on this path, he would be abandoning the faith. He finds the issue painful to consider until he comes to a new sense of enlightenment in the sanctuary, the temple in Jerusalem. He rediscovered something he probably knew but had not really considered: The prosperity of the wicked will not last. Their wealth will have no value in the next life.

73:19 Asaph remembers that the wicked are just a step away from disaster. In a moment they could find all of their wealth valueless and their pleasure vanished as they face an eternity separated from the presence of their Creator.

- 21 Thus my heart was grieved,
And I was ⁶vexed in my mind.
- 22 ^pI was so foolish and ignorant;
I was like a beast before You.
- 23 Nevertheless I am continually with
You;
You hold me by my right hand.
- 24 ^qYou will guide me with Your counsel,
And afterward receive me to glory.
- 25 ^rWhom have I in heaven but You?
And there is none upon earth that I desire besides You.
- 26 ^sMy flesh and my heart fail;
But God is the ⁷strength of my heart and my ^tportion forever.
- 27 For indeed, ^uthose who are far from
You shall perish;
You have destroyed all those who ⁸desert You for harlotry.
- 28 But it is good for me to ^vdraw near to God;
I have put my trust in the Lord God,
That I may ^wdeclare all Your works.

73:21–24 Asaph was grieved because of his own lapse of faith (vv. 1–3). In the manner of a wisdom psalm, he speaks of his own foolishness, like a beast: An animal has no sense of eternity and a divine perspective. The poet was making an animal-like decision when he began to wonder about the wicked (vv. 1–3). But God had never left him, even when he struggled with doubts. And afterward: What helped the psalmist gain a proper perspective on this life was the afterlife. The righteous will have the glorious privilege of living with God forever.

73:27, 28 The contrast between the words shall perish and draw near to God explains the heart of the psalm. There are those who may enjoy great wealth and notoriety today, but nothing they have or do will last forever. Therefore, Asaph concludes he has put his trust in the Lord God. Only those who place their trust in God will find eternal life and eternal peace.

Psalm 74 is a lament psalm of the community (as is Ps. 80) and a powerful presentation of Hebrew poetry at its best. The poem describes God's actions in the past and the desire of His people for Him to act in the present. In some ways, Ps. 75 may be regarded as the Lord's answer to the difficult questions of Ps. 74. This is one of 11 psalms attributed to Asaph (Ps. 50; 73–83). The outline of the poem is: (1) a community lament over a foreign invasion (vv. 1–8); (2) a community complaint that there appears to be no hope (vv. 9–11); (3) a recounting of God's historic victories against evil powers (vv. 12–17); (4) a petition for God to remember His covenant and deliver His people (vv. 18–21); (5) a call for God to act on His own behalf against His enemies (vv. 22, 23).

74:1, 2 O God, why is a classic lament in the Psalms (13:1). The invasion of a foreign power into Judah and Jerusalem had devastated the people. The foreign invader is viewed as an expression of the anger of the Lord. The principal call of the psalm is for the Lord to remember His people and the foolish ridicule of their enemies (vv. 18, 22). In his appeal to God the poet uses a series of endearing terms to describe the people of God: the sheep of Your pasture, Your congregation, the tribe of Your inheritance, and this Mount Zion. The psalmist also focuses on the loving actions of God for His people in the past: You have purchased, You have redeemed, You have dwelt. In the context of God's past faithfulness to the people He has chosen, the poet calls upon God to deliver His people in their time of need (vv. 20, 22).

74:3–7 Lift up Your feet is a call for God “to get up and walk” to see what is going on. The worst part of the enemy invasion was the desecration of the temple in Jerusalem. Several terms are used to describe this holy place: the sanctuary, Your meeting place, and the dwelling place of Your name.

74:11 The poet calls on God to fight against the enemy, to extend His right hand to protect and deliver the people as He had during the Exodus (63:8; see also Ex. 15:6).

74:12 The Lord is King by virtue of His creation of the earth (Ps. 93). He is King because of His special relationship with Israel (44:4; 99:1–3). And He is the coming King who will reign over all (96:13; 97:1–6; 98:6–9). from of old: The poet recalls the ancient victories of the Lord over the dark forces in a poetic recasting of the events of creation. Salvation here refers to God's deliverance of earth from the dark forces represented by the waters and serpents (vv. 13–15).

74:13 the sea . . . the heads of the sea serpents: In Canaanite mythology, the sea and its serpents joined together as enemies of Baal. Supposedly Baal was victorious over these enemies and subsequently became king. The poets of the Bible use the language of Canaanite myth to describe the victories of God in the formation of the earth, in the deliverance of His people from Egypt, and in future battles (77:16–20; 93:1–5; Is. 27:1; 51:9, 10). The division of the waters described in Gen. 1:6–8 is viewed as a battle in which God was victorious over both sea and serpents.

74:14 One of the enemies of Baal was the sea monster Lotan. In Hebrew literature this figure became the Leviathan. The name speaks poetically of various evil forces over which God has ultimate control and victory. Eventually the Leviathan became a symbol for Satan (Is. 27:1) who is "the dragon, that serpent of old" (Rev. 20:2). In this context, the people refers to beasts.

74:15 the fountain: The Lord gave water to the people of Israel in the wilderness (Ex. 17:5, 6; Num. 20:8–13). mighty rivers: He also enabled His people to cross over the Red Sea (Ex. 14) and the River Jordan (Josh. 3).

74:16, 17 In His great works of creation (Gen. 1) God established His rule over day, night, light, and the sun. In addition, He established the seasons and set borders, a reference to the limitations He placed on the waters (Prov. 8:27–29). Asaph's argument is that since God is in control, why was He allowing chaos in Israel?

74:18–21 Three times in this poem the poet calls upon God to remember (vv. 2, 22). In addition to appealing to the honor of God's name (v. 10), the poet uses endearing terms for God's people who are in distress: Your turtledove, Your poor, the oppressed, and the poor and needy. These were the people with whom the Lord Himself had chosen to make a covenant.

74:22, 23 The phrase plead Your own cause refers to a legal complaint and is often used by the prophets in contexts of impending judgment on Israel (Mic. 6:1). For the third time in this poem (vv. 2, 18), God is asked to remember His stake in Israel and His need to defend His own reputation against foolish people.

Psalm 75, a grand psalm of praise (Ps. 100), contains a lively interchange between the people, the psalmist, and the Lord. For other psalms in which the Lord speaks, see Ps. 12; 75; 87; 91. In some ways this psalm may be regarded as God's answer to the questions presented in Ps. 74. The structure of the psalm is based on its varied speakers: (1) the people's praise of God for the sense of His presence (v. 1); (2) God's announcement of His sovereign determination to judge the earth at the proper time (vv. 2–5); (3) the people's declaration that God is the true Judge (vv. 6–9); (4) God's declaration of His intention to bring final judgment (v. 10).

75:1 Thanks indicates public acknowledgment of God. Your wondrous works speaks of the actions only God can perform, those that instill a sense of awe on the part of His people. Your name is near: God Himself is ready to intervene on the part of His people.

75:2 When I choose the proper time: God will not be rushed—not even by His people. Uprightly indicates the fullness and perfection of God's justice.

75:3 The earth . . . dissolved: In times of great stress, it may seem that the world is falling apart (60:2). God's response is I set up its pillars firmly. God has not abandoned His people, nor has He given up His authority.

75:4, 5 On the basis of God's determination to wait until the "proper time" (v. 2), there are strong warnings to boastful and wicked people who misinterpret God's delay and think there will be no judgment. The horn is an ancient symbol of strength. The wicked strut around like powerful animals, brandishing symbols of power with no thought of God. But the power of the wicked is feeble compared to the strength of the Almighty (v. 10).

75:7 The words God is the Judge establish the fact that He is the true ruler of the universe (50:6; 58:11). He puts down . . . exalts: As Daniel declares in his prayer (Dan. 2:20–22), God is sovereign in the world’s affairs.

75:8 This is not a cup of blessing, but of the Lord’s wrath. The biblical image of wine and judgment goes back to Jacob’s blessing on Judah (Gen. 49:11) and is referred to in Christ’s judgment as depicted in Rev. 19:13–15.

75:10 The psalm concludes with the words of God. Here God depicts the contrasting fates of the wicked and the righteous. horns: The wicked have proudly lifted up their horn (vv. 4, 5) by boasting in their strength. The Lord will take away the very strength in which they have boasted.

Psalm 76 is a psalm of praise with a strong focus on the fear of God. The psalm has four movements: (1) a celebration of the center of worship in Jerusalem (vv. 1–3); (2) a celebration of the victories of God against His enemies (vv. 4–6); (3) a description of the fear of the earth at the anger of God (vv. 7–10); (4) an exhortation to the righteous to worship the Lord (vv. 11, 12).

76:1–3 The word translated tabernacle signifies a lair, like that of a great lion. Salem is the shortened form of the name Jerusalem.

76:4–6 more glorious and excellent: Nothing in all the universe or in all eternity can ever be compared with God (77:13). His glory and beauty are unsurpassed and His power is unassailable. Chariot and horse refers to the defeat of the army of Pharaoh (Ex. 14; 15).

76:7 The repetition of pronouns You, Yourself is for emphasis: Only the Almighty is to be feared. For the righteous, the fear of God is a response of awe, wonder, adoration, and worship. For the wicked, the fear of God is terror, for there is no escape from Him (14:5).

76:8–10 judgment to be heard: In God’s victories over the enemies of His people, word of God’s glory and justice would spread to the entire world. Even the wrath of men will praise God because any anger against God is utterly futile. As Paul writes, “For who has resisted His will?” (Rom. 9:19). A person’s futile hostility to God will only result in a demonstration of God’s power and a subsequent glorification of His name. See the Lord’s response to Pharaoh (Ex. 11:9).

76:11, 12 The psalmist instructs the righteous in the true worship of the sovereign Lord of creation. Make vows: These are vows of praise, sacrifice, and faithful living (61:5; 8; 66:13; Heb. 13:15). As one might bring presents to a king (72:10), so the righteous should

This Hebrew word is the common word meaning “to give light.” The author of Proverbs likens the life of the just to the light of the sun (Prov. 4:18). For one’s eyes to be lit means that one has been revived or has received wisdom or understanding (13:3; 19:8; 1 Sam. 14:27–29; Ezra 9:8). The common prayer request that God would cause His face to shine upon someone was always, except for one possible early exception (Num. 6:25), a petition that God would grant mercy from distress (31:16; 67:1; 80:3, 7, 19; 119:135; Dan. 9:17). In the present passage, as elsewhere, the light is from the glory of God’s presence, which is to be reflected by His people (Is. 60:1–3; Ezek. 43:2). One day, the light of the sun and moon will be completely replaced by the light of God’s glory (Is. 60:19, 20; Rev. 21:23; 22:5).

bringing their gifts to God—the ultimate gift being the dedication of their lives to the service of God (Rom. 12:1).

Psalm 77 is a psalm of a troubled believer. It is marked by a sense of inward trouble and reflection. Key terms in the psalm are the verbs "to remember" and "to meditate." The outline is as follows: (1) a cry to God (vv. 1–3); (2) doubts (vv. 4–6); (3) a question: Has God forgotten? (vv. 7–9); (4) focus on the goodness of God (vv. 10–12); (5) remembrance of the incomparability of God (vv. 13–15); (6) remembrance that God is Lord of the sea (vv. 16–20).

77:1, 2 stretched out: Asaph was in such need that he held his hand out before the Lord throughout the night (63:4; 134:1, 2). All the while, he groaned and complained as he remembered God. What he knew of God contrasted with what he was experiencing. The more the psalmist thought about these things, the more troubled he became.

77:4–6 You hold my eyelids open: Asaph could not sleep (63:6). Through the night he thought about his situation and his past (vv. 4–6), but most importantly he turned to God. First he cries out to the Lord in anguish (vv. 7–9). But then his focus changes; he reminds himself of the power of God and all the miraculous things the Lord has done (vv. 10–20).

77:9 Wondering if God is finished with him, Asaph asks if the Lord will ever show mercy to him again. Each of the verses presents painful questions; perhaps none as difficult as the one in v. 9: Has God forgotten to be gracious? Asaph was at the depths of despair.

77:11–13 I will remember the works of the Lord: Asaph made a conscious decision to turn from his pain and focus his thoughts on the person, works, and wonders of God. His first focus is on the incomparability of God. Who is so great a God as our God? With this question Asaph reminds himself that the living God cannot be compared to any other god or power. This wondrous God demonstrated His power in a variety of ways, but especially in the redemption of Israel from Egypt.

77:16–18 Asaph now turns his thoughts to God's sovereignty over the powers of the sea, His control over the waters and the depths (74:12–15; 93:1–5). Moreover, the Almighty controls the skies, for a storm as depicted in these verses is merely a response to His strength. Your arrows is a poetic description of lightning.

77:19 This verse presents images of God as the Lord of the storm (vv. 16–18) and the sea, walking on the waters. The term great waters may be rephrased "many waters" (18:16; 32:6; 144:7). The point is that the waters are no threat to God, for they are merely another pathway for Him to walk.

77:20 God is Lord of His people. He is the Shepherd who leads His flock, as He has done from the time of Moses and Aaron. Lost in contemplation of the greatness of God, the poet seems thoroughly distracted from his pain. He does not mention it again, not daring to compare it to the greatness of the Almighty.

Psalms 78, a wisdom psalm, relates the early history of Israel in a dramatic poetic alternation between reports of the faithfulness of God to His people and of their periodic outbreaks of stubbornness, willfulness, and rebellion against Him. Asaph expresses an intense desire that the present generation not repeat the failures of so many past generations. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) the lesson of the past works of God in Israel's history (vv. 1–4); (2) an exhortation for each generation to teach the next (vv. 5–8); (3) the rebellion of the people of Ephraim (vv. 9–11); (4) God's marvelous salvation of Israel in the Exodus (vv. 12–16); (5) the people's complaints (vv. 17–20); (6) God's anger against the ungrateful people (vv. 21–25); (7) God's judgment through the quail (vv. 26–31); (8) the continuing unbelief of the people (vv. 32, 33); (9) the people's remembrance of God's true character and God's remembrance of the people's weaknesses (vv. 34–39); (10) God's faithfulness and the people's unfaithfulness (vv. 40–55); (11) Israel's sins during the period of the judges (vv. 56–64); (12) God's victory over Israel's enemies (vv. 65, 66); (13) God's choice of Judah, Jerusalem, and David (vv. 67–72).

78:1, 2 The psalmist uses the vocabulary of the wisdom school to establish himself. My law is the familiar word Torah. The wisdom writers use this word to connote insight; their instruction is always in accord with the "instruction" of Moses (Prov. 1:8; 3:1; 4:2). The terms parable and dark sayings or riddles indicate sayings with "deeper meanings" or "teachings with a point" (Prov. 1:6). With the words my people the psalmist shows himself to be one with them even though he stands over them as their teacher.

78:3, 4 Asaph explains that the teaching was designed to be passed from one generation to the next, so that each generation would contribute to the praises of the Lord. The phrase His strength and His wonderful works means "His extraordinarily wonderful works."

78:5, 6 The testimony God established was a lasting procedure, a means whereby one generation would pass on to the next the need to know the Lord. the generation to come: The psalm will make the point that the generations had not handed on the teaching as they should have.

78:8 Because their fathers did not believe in God, the present generation needs to be different from their predecessors.

78:9 Asaph's first illustration of the faithlessness of previous generations is taken from an incident in which the people of Ephraim rejected God. The poet may be referring to Ephraim's conflict with Jephthah (Judg. 12:1–7).

78:12–16 The poet celebrates the marvelous things God did for Israel in delivering them from Egypt, especially at the crossing of the Red Sea (Ex. 14), the signs of God's presence with His people (Ex. 13:21), and the bringing of water from the rock in the wilderness (Ex. 17:1–7; Num. 20:1–13).

78:17, 18 The Hebrew word translated rebellious here is translated provoked in two other places in this poem (vv. 40, 56). food of their fancy: This derivative language is used to describe the outrageous ungratefulness of the Israelites as they clamored for food and water in the wilderness.

20^w Behold, He struck the rock,
So that the waters gushed out,
And the streams overflowed.
Can He give bread also?
Can He provide meat for His people?"

21 Therefore the LORD heard this and ^xwas furious;
So a fire was kindled against Jacob,
And anger also came up against
Israel,

22 Because they ^ydid not believe in God,
And did not trust in His salvation.

23 Yet He had commanded the clouds
above,

^zAnd opened the doors of heaven,

24^a Had rained down manna on them to eat,
And given them of the ⁵bread of ^bheaven.

25 Men ate angels' food;
He sent them food to ⁶the full.

26^c He caused an east wind to blow in the heavens;
And by His power He brought in the south wind.

27 He also rained meat on them like the dust,
Feathered fowl like the sand of the seas;

28 And He let them fall in the midst of their camp,
All around their dwellings.

29^d So they ate and were well filled,
For He gave them their own desire.

30 They were not ⁷deprived of their craving;
But ^ewhile their food was still in their mouths,

31 The wrath of God came against them,
And slew the stoutest of them,
And struck down the choice men of Israel.

78:21–25 God's anger against His people centered on their lack of faith and trust in Him, evidenced by their contempt for the manna He gave them. The poet refers to God's manna as the bread of heaven and angels' food. The Israelites audaciously rejected the food of angels.

78:29 For He gave them their own desire: People of true faith will seek God's will and respond in grateful praise. Self-centered people will simply complain and suffer the result.

78:32, 33 In spite of this: The poet says that the people had suffered enough from their ingratitude to have learned the lesson of faith. Unfortunately, they had not learned. So God determined that they would not enter the land of Canaan but would spend their days in futility.

78:34, 35 The people tended to remember the true character of God only when pressed to do so by His judgments; but God always remembered (v. 39) the frail nature of the people. The image of God as a rock is found in Moses (Deut. 32:4) and is developed elsewhere in the Psalms (61:2; 62:2, 7; 91:1, 2; 144:1). God as Redeemer is the Savior, who rescued Israel from Egypt just as He also delivered them from their sins (19:14; Is. 41:14; 44:6). The title Most High God emphasizes the majesty and power of God. God surpasses all powers, all creation, and nothing can be compared to Him. It is utter folly for a person to shake a small fist at the Most High. This title is found three times in this psalm (vv. 17, 35, 56); it is also found in 7:17; 9:2; 18:13; 21:7; 46:4; 50:14; 56:2; 57:2; 73:11; 77:10; 82:6; 83:18; 87:5; 91:1; 92:1; 107:11.

78:38 full of compassion: The awesome transcendence of the Lord is complemented in this section (v. 35) by an emphasis on His compassionate mercy.

78:40–42 The verb translated provoked here is used three times in this psalm (rebell in v. 17; see also v. 56). Even though God had showered blessings on His people, they provoked Him with their contempt and ingratitude. The Holy One of Israel (89:18) is a phrase particularly favored by the prophet Isaiah (Is. 1:4; 5:24).

78:43–55 This section is a poetic retelling of the way God helped Israel in Egypt and during the wilderness years. Verses 43–51 recount

44 ^v Turned their rivers into blood,
And their streams, that they could not drink.

45 ^w He sent swarms of flies among them,
which devoured them,

the ten plagues of Ex. 7-12, and vv. 52, 53 speak of the deliverance of Israel at the Red Sea (Ex. 14). Verse 54 speaks of the experience at Mt. Sinai, and v. 55 summarizes the conquest of the land of Canaan. 78:56 Tested and provoked may be rephrased "thoroughly provoked." The title Most High is used three times in this poem (vv. 17, 35), as is the Hebrew word for provoked (vv. 17, 40). The two words emphasize the seriousness of the Israelites' action; they were rebelling against their Creator, the Ruler of the entire universe. 78:58-64 A different Hebrew word from the one used in v. 56 is used for provoked here, but it conveys the same idea. High places refers to the places where the Canaanites worshiped Baal and other fertility gods. Carved images were fertility symbols from Canaanite cults. The reference to Shiloh places this period of Israel's apostasy in the latter period of the judges (1 Sam. 1:3). His strength and His glory are unusual ways of speaking of the ark of the covenant, which was lost to the Philistines during the battle of Aphek (1 Sam. 4:1-11). At this time the suffering of the people was acute, including even the deaths of priests (1 Sam. 4:17, 18). 78:68, 69 The choice of Judah over the other tribes and of Zion over other cities is explained only in terms of God's sovereignty and love. The description of the sanctuary suggests that this psalm was written after Solomon's temple was built.

72 So he shepherded them according to the ^bintegrity of his heart,
And guided them by the skillfulness of his hands.

5 ^eHow long, LORD?
Will You be angry forever?

78:72 The words of praise for David in v. 72 are very close to 1 Kin. 9:4, suggesting some connection between the two passages. The shepherding attributed to David is an ideal; it will be fully realized in the Savior King, Jesus, the true Good Shepherd (Ps. 23; John 10). Psalm 79, a lament of the community (see Ps. 80), was written in response to an attack on the city of Jerusalem and the sacking of the holy temple. In these respects this psalm is similar to Ps. 74. It is possible that the event behind the psalm was the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians; however, it may have been an earlier, less final devastation. The development of the poem is as follows: (1) a lament for the devastation of Jerusalem (vv. 1-4); (2) a call for God to punish the enemies of Judah and Jerusalem (vv. 5-7); (3) a plea for forgiveness and deliverance (vv. 8-10); (4) a prayer for God to help His people and judge their enemies (vv. 11, 12); (5) a vow of praise in anticipation of the Lord's deliverance (v. 13). 79:1 the nations have come: The words of this section are quite similar in tone to 74:1-8. Your holy temple: It is not clear whether the destruction described in this verse was what the Babylonians did in 586 B.C. The ruin of Jerusalem—it was in heaps—may indicate an invasion of the land prior to its total destruction. 79:2-4 The lament over the dead defenders of Jerusalem is similar to the words of Jer. 7:32-34; Lam. 4:1-10. reproach . . . derision: The wording is very close to 44:13. 79:5 The question how long is a standard element in the lament psalms (13:1, 2; 80:4). The question is based on the Lord's eternal character. Since God is eternal, Asaph asks, will He be angry forever?

Psalms of Lament

In the lament psalms, we hear the strong, emotional words of sufferers. These are words written by real people in very difficult situations. Sometimes the forcefulness of the psalmists' complaints against God is shocking. But these godly sufferers know that God will not be angry with their honesty, for even when they scream at God, it is a scream of faith. The following is the basic structure of the psalms of lament:

- | | |
|--------------------------|---------------------------|
| 1. An introductory cry | 4. Reasons for God to act |
| 2. The lament proper | 5. Petitions |
| • I am hurting | • Hear me |
| • You do not care | • Save me |
| • The enemy is winning | • Punish them |
| 3. A confession of trust | 6. A vow to praise God |

The introductory cry can be very brief—just an “O God,” as in 79:1. This is the psalmist's cry of distress to the living God who will act on his behalf once again—even as He has done in the past.

The lament proper often consists of three parts. The first part introduces the pain and hurt that the psalmist is experiencing (6:6). The second part of the lament is the most astonishing, for in this part the psalmist addresses God directly. Often, God is accused of inattention, forgetfulness, or no longer caring about the psalmist and his plight (13:1). In the third part, the psalmist describes the success of the wicked (10:3-11). The wicked present two intolerable problems to the psalmist: one is the personal attack upon the psalmist, a friend of God; and the other is what this evil attack means for the reputation of God.

In the lament psalms, these complaints are followed by statements of trust. The confession of trust shows that the psalmist still believes in God—even when his faith is under assault by the evils of the world, the pressures of advisors, and nagging doubts. In the middle of his painful situation, the psalmist reminds himself of God's care for him in the past (13:5).

Many of the lament psalms contain a section giving further reasons for God to act. Here the psalmist describes in more detail his own situation, the acts of the wicked, or the consequences to his life and to the community of believers if the Lord does not deliver him from his distress.

On the basis of a renewed trust in the Lord, the psalmist presents his petitions. He calls out to God to listen to him, to deliver him (71:2), and to punish his enemies, who mock his faith in God (71:13). Finally, the psalm concludes with a vow of praise. The psalmist promises to praise God before the congregation when God delivers him from his plight (9:14).

The psalms of lament are a model of godly response to suffering. The Lord does not expect us to remain stoic when we face suffering. We can pour out our souls to the Lord. However in the middle of our cry, we must remember God's loving care for us in the past so we can willingly trust Him with the future. With this type of response, we can renew our hope in the living Lord.

Prayer for Israel's Restoration

To the Chief Musician. ^a Set to ¹ "The Lilies."
 A ² Testimony of Asaph. A Psalm.

- Give ear, O Shepherd of Israel,
^b You who lead Joseph ^c like a flock;
 You who dwell between the cherubim,
^d shine forth!
² Before ^e Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh,
 Stir up Your strength,
 And come and save us!
³ ^f Restore us, O God;
^g Cause Your face to shine,
 And we shall be saved!
⁴ O LORD God of hosts,
^h How long will You be angry Against the prayer of Your people?
⁵ ⁱ You have fed them with the bread of tears,
 And given them tears to drink in great measure.
⁶ You have made us a strife to our neighbors,
 And our enemies laugh among themselves.
⁷ Restore us, O God of hosts;
 Cause Your face to shine,
 And we shall be saved!

79:6, 7 Pour out Your wrath: An imprecation or curse on one's enemies is often found in the psalms of lament (Ps. 137). Vengeance is left to the Lord, but such a call for vengeance is based in part on the covenant provisions God had established with Abraham. God had promised to curse those who cursed Abraham's descendants (Gen. 12:2, 3).

79:10 The appeal is based on the character of God as expressed by His name (Ex. 3:14, 15; 6:2, 3). Another basis for the poet's appeal is the international reputation of God (42:10). If God delivered the Israelites, His power would be demonstrated to all the nations.

79:11, 12 Groaning may also be translated crying. Your power refers to the powerful, outstretched arm of God that had delivered Israel from Egypt (Ex. 6:6). Reproach refers to an insult or taunt (74:10, 18, 22).

79:13 Sheep of Your pasture describes the Israelites. God's care for the Israelites was so great that they were called His sheep (77:20; 95:7; 100:3). The people vowed to bring thanks, or public acknowledgment (35:18; 105:1), and praise to God.

Psalm 80, a lament of the community, has especially powerful imagery. The psalm is marked by two metaphors for Israel in its relation to God: (1) the flock of the Good Shepherd; (2) the vine of the True Vinedresser. Both of these metaphors are used by Jesus of His people in the NT (John 10; 15). This is one of Asaph's psalms (Ps. 50; 73–83) and is set to the tune "The Lilies" (Ps. 45; 69). The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a call for the Shepherd of Israel to restore the distressed (vv. 1–3); (2) a complaint concerning the Lord's anger against His people (vv. 4–7); (3) the metaphor of a vine (vv. 8–13); (4) an appeal for God to return, revive, and restore Israel (vv. 14–19).

80:1, 2 O Shepherd of Israel is reminiscent of the teaching of Ps. 23 and points forward to the teaching of John 10. God's pattern is to lead His people as a shepherd might lead a flock. between the cherubim: In the Most Holy Place, the ark of the covenant was topped by the mercy seat on which were two cherubim, heavenly symbols of the throne of God (Ex. 25:22). shine forth: After Moses had been in close proximity to the Lord, his own face was transformed by a resplendent glow (Ex. 34:29–35). Here the appeal means that the Lord should make His presence known in a saving manner. The tribes Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasseh may be representative of the whole nation. Ephraim was in the north; Benjamin was where Jerusalem was located; Manasseh was partly across the Jordan.

80:3 Cause Your face to shine is reminiscent of the priestly benediction, "The LORD make His face shine upon you" (Num. 6:25).

80:4, 5 Since their request for deliverance has seemed to go unanswered, the people ask whether God's anger is directed even against their prayer. The phrases bread of tears and tears to drink refer to the manna and water that God provided for Israel in the wilderness. The idea is that God had given the people of past generations nourishing food; but the people of this generation have only their tearful despair.

Euphrates

The Euphrates is the longest river of Western Asia and one of two major rivers in Mesopotamia. The river begins in the mountains of Armenia in modern-day Turkey, heads west toward the Mediterranean Sea, turns to the south, swings in a wide bow through Syria, and then flows a thousand miles southeast to join the Tigris River before it empties into the Persian Gulf. The ruins of many ancient cities are located along the river in Iraq—Babylon, Eridu, Kish, Larsa, Nippur, Sippar, and Ur.

In the Bible the Euphrates appears in both Genesis (Gen. 2:14) and Revelation (Rev. 9:14, 16:12). It is referred to as “the River Euphrates,” “the great river Euphrates,” or simply as “the River.” The Euphrates formed the northern boundary of the territories promised by God to Israel (Gen. 15:18; Josh. 1:4). David attempted to expand the boundaries of his kingdom to this river (2 Sam. 8:3).

PSALM 81

An Appeal for Israel's Repentance

To the Chief Musician. ^a On ¹ an instrument of Gath. A Psalm of Asaph.

Sing aloud to God our strength;
Make a joyful shout to the God of Jacob.

80:8–11 God's bringing the Israelites from Egypt to Canaan is compared to transplanting a vine. The vine grew phenomenally, so that it filled the land and reached to the Mediterranean Sea and the Euphrates River. These expansions of the Lord's vine occurred during the reigns of David and Solomon.

80:12 But then there came a dramatic change. The Lord broke down her hedges—that is, He removed Israel's protective walls. Israel became weak, subject to all kinds of assaults.

80:14–17 Look down from heaven: The appeal is for the heavenly Vinedresser to observe the sorry state of His vine. The Hebrew word translated visit can describe a gracious visit of the Lord (65:9) or a visit in judgment. Of course, the prayer offered is for a merciful visit from Israel's Protector. The appeal is for God to use His right hand (Ex. 15:6) to restore what He had planted. The Hebrew term for vineyard is used only here in the Bible; it literally means “root-stock.” Branch means “son”; it is the same Hebrew word translated son of man in v. 17. The nation of Israel was God's own son (Ex. 4:22). 80:18 Revive us is a call for new life from God's Spirit. we will call upon Your name: In response to God's work of deliverance, the poet promises renewed praise centered on the name of God. Psalm 81 begins as a psalm of praise and becomes a psalm of admonition (Ps. 50), in which the voice of the Lord Himself is heard

- 2 Raise a song and strike the timbrel,

A Plea for Justice

A Psalm of Asaph.

- GOD ^astands in the congregation of ¹the mighty;
He judges among ^bthe ²gods.
- 2 How long will you judge unjustly,
And ^cshow partiality to the wicked?
Selah

(Ps. 75). The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a call for the people to praise the Lord (vv. 1, 2); (2) a command for the people to celebrate the New Moon festival (vv. 3–5); (3) the Lord's report of His deliverance of His people (vv. 6, 7); (4) the Lord's admonition concerning idolatry (vv. 8–10); (5) the Lord's description of Israel's failure to obey Him (vv. 11, 12); (6) the Lord's lamentation of Israel's failure to obey (vv. 13–16).

81:1 Sing aloud . . . Make a joyful shout: The energy level of this psalm is similar to that of other psalms of praise (33:1–3; 35:27, 28; 66:1–4; 95:1, 2; 100:1, 2). The use of voices and instruments to praise God is a standard element of joyful worship in the Psalms (Ps. 149; 150).

81:3–5 The New Moon festival is mentioned in association with the Feast of Trumpets (Num. 29:6). Regulations for this festival can be found in the instructions to the Levites during the time of David (1 Chr. 23:31) and Solomon (2 Chr. 2:4). This psalm seems to be a basic instruction on the festival. a statute . . . A law . . . a testimony: The language and regulations of this passage are as solemn as any in the Torah. The basis for the New Moon festival was the salvation of Israel from Egypt. a language: As in 114:1, there is a disdain for the history, culture, and language of Egypt.

81:6, 7 his shoulder . . . His hands: This is a poetic way of describing how God delivered His people from the Egyptian taskmasters (Ex. 1). I answered you: The Lord's appearance to Moses on Mt. Sinai was God's great revelation of Himself (Ex. 19; 20).

81:8–10 The phrase translated I will admonish you is also found in 50:7, where it is translated “I will testify against you.” The basic stipulation of the first commandment is repeated: there must be no foreign god among the Israelites (Ex. 20:3). God's great description of His own saving work for the Israelites is quoted from Ex. 20:2. Then the Lord invites His people to open their mouth so that He can meet their needs (v. 16).

81:11, 12 The people's resistance to obeying God led to their punishment. God identifies the root of the people's problem as their own stubborn heart. They wanted to follow their own ways and refused to listen to God.

Psalm 82 is a wisdom psalm. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) God's call for the judges of the earth to appear in the heavenly assembly (vv. 1, 2); (2) God's review of His commands to the judges of the earth (vv. 3, 4); (3) God's hearing of the complaint of the oppressed (v. 5); (4) God's announcement of His judgment on the judges of the earth (vv. 6, 7); (5) the prayer of the people of the earth for divine justice (v. 8).

82:1, 2 The congregation of the mighty refers to an assembly before God. As a wisdom writer, the poet Asaph uses the language of Job 1, Ps. 110, and Is. 6 as a teaching device to present a morality tale. Asaph describes the wicked judges of all time gathering before God and His angels to give an accounting of themselves. gods: The Hebrew word may refer to the true God or to false gods. Here it is the judges of the earth (see also v. 6). Asaph uses this honorific term sarcastically to express his contempt for the evil judges. judge unjustly: The unrighteous judges had perverted their calling, which was to represent God Himself by establishing justice on the earth.

82:3 God expects all judges to administer true justice. Do justice: These words summarize the teaching of the Law and indicate God’s basic desire that the defenseless would find a haven of justice in the courts.

82:5 They do not know is the collective sigh of oppressed people of all ages. Wicked judges act as if they did not care about their official responsibility or the judgment they will face for abusing it. All the foundations of the earth are unstable: In 11:3, the taunt of the wicked is that the earth’s foundations are destroyed. This is said to be untrue, for God is still in control. In this psalm, however, the situation is deemed unstable because of the profound wickedness of the judges.

82:6, 7 die like men: Jesus quoted these verses in His exchange with the religious authorities who wanted to stone Him for declaring Himself to be the Son of God (John 10:31–35).

82:8 Arise, O God: In view of the overwhelming disaster that wicked judges have created, the poor and afflicted of all time call out for the true Judge, God Himself to come. Their cry will not go unheeded. The righteous Judge is coming, and He will establish justice (96:13; 98:9).

Psalm 83 is a psalm of lament in which particular attention is given to the wicked. The curse that Asaph utters against the wicked puts this psalm in the category of the imprecatory psalms. When we read the strong words in this psalm, we need to keep in mind that the intent of the psalmist Asaph is to vindicate the glory of God. The psalm’s structure is as follows: (1) a call for God to speak out in judgment on the wicked (vv. 1–4); (2) a recital of the acts of the wicked (vv. 5–8); (3) a recital of God’s acts of judgment in the past (vv. 9–12); (4) a call for God to judge the wicked (vv. 13–18).

83:1 Do not keep silent: Calls for God to awaken, to rouse Himself, to turn and look, and to speak, are all ways the psalmists prayed for God to act. They believed that God as the Holy One would root out all evil. What they did not always recognize was that God’s delay in judgment was an expression of His mercy.

83:2, 3 Asaph feels revulsion against the enemies of the Lord. He hates what God hates (101:6–8). The attacks of the wicked are not only against God, but also against the people of God.

83:4 let us cut them off: God’s attitude toward those who plot the destruction of His people is clear: His curse will rest on them (Gen. 12:2, 3). Asaph here is simply praying that God would act according to His promises.

83:5–8 consulted together: Throughout history, many nations have conspired to bring about the ruin of Israel and Judah. All such endeavors are condemned in this psalm. against You: In conspiring against the people of God, the wicked actually resist God Himself. The tents of Edom: The place names in this passage refer to nations on the borders of Israel and Judah. The Hagrites may have come from Arabia (1 Chr. 5:10, 19, 20). The people of Gebal may have lived in a mountainous region south of the Dead Sea; alternatively, Gebal may have been another name for Byblos, a city near Tyre.

83:9 Asaph recites God’s great victories against the formidable foes of Israel. God’s victory at Midian was accomplished through Gideon (Judg. 7). God’s victory over Sisera was accomplished through Deborah and Barak (Judg. 4; 5). The same God who had battled Israel’s enemies in the past would fight all those who might oppose His people in the future.

portant, an ultimate curse would have been to regard a person's memory as whirling dust or windblown chaff.

83:16 Shame is the opposite of dignity, an attribute of the righteous (25:2; 97:7). seek Your name: Asaph's first call for God to shame Israel's enemies is redemptive—that the nations might hear, feel shame, repent, and seek the face of the Lord. Yet if they continued in their wicked path, they would face further confounding and would one day face God in judgment. The title Most High is often used in the Psalms to speak of God's control over all the nations of the world (47:2; 78:35; 97:9).

Psalm 84 is one of the psalms of Zion. These psalms celebrate God's presence in Jerusalem, the city where His temple was built. Today it is not necessary to go to Jerusalem to draw near to God, for God is near those who trust in His Son (Matt. 28:18–20). This psalm was composed by the sons of Korah (see Ps. 42; 44–49; 85; 87; 88). There are six movements: (1) the expression of the desire to be at home in Zion (vv. 1, 2); (2) the blessings of being at home in Zion (vv. 3, 4); (3) the blessings of those who make pilgrimages to Zion (vv. 5–7); (4) a prayer for God's attention in Zion (vv. 8, 9); (5) the joy of being at home in Zion (vv. 10, 11); (6) the blessing of trusting in God (v. 12).

84:1, 2 Tabernacle is used here as a poetic term for the temple that was built by Solomon. longs . . . faints: For a similar expression of a psalmist's desire for the Lord's presence, see 42:1, 2. the living God: All other "gods" are nonentities; but He who created the universe, who chose Israel as His people, and who provided salvation for the world, lives forever in great glory.

84:3, 4 sparrow . . . swallow: By describing the approach of birds to the courtyards of the temple, the poet expresses his own great joy. Blessed, the same term used in 1:1, means "O, the great happiness of."

84:5–7 The phrase whose heart is set on pilgrimage refers those who make their way to the temple not out of obligation, but out of a wellspring of joy. The Valley of Baca, or "Valley of Weeping," refers to the various difficulties that one might face on a pilgrimage. The person on a pilgrimage might discover that the once-dark valley is filled with springs, rain, and pools—all signs of God's blessing. strength to strength: As one nears the temple, the rigors of the journey become tolerable, for the joy of the approaching arrival strengthens the soul.

84:8 Lord God of hosts, literally the "God of armies," speaks of God's transcendence. The hosts are the angelic armies of the heavens. This title is balanced by the phrase God of Jacob, referring to the covenant relationship God established with the patriarchs of Israel.

84:9 The two phrases our shield and Your anointed both point to the same person, the king of Israel (see 89:3, 4). Each person who was anointed in the OT foreshadowed the coming Anointed One, the Messiah.

84:10, 11 a day . . . a thousand: Nothing in the pilgrim's daily experience can be compared to a day spent in the worship of God in the holy temple. a doorkeeper . . . dwell in the tents: The role of a menial servant in the house of his God is more desirable

sun

(Heb. shemesh) (84:11; Josh. 10:12, 13). Strong's #8121

The Hebrew word for sun most often refers to the celestial body that illuminates the earth (136:7, 8). The idiom "before the sun" may describe an action done openly or in public (see 2 Sam 12:12). The sun is also a biblical symbol for righteousness (Mal. 4:2) and even a title for God in the Psalms (84:11). Many of the ancients worshiped the sun, moon, and stars (see 2 Kin. 21:3; Ezek. 8:16). But the psalmist understood that the sun, moon, and stars worshiped God because He created them (148:3). In the new creation, there will be no need of the sun because God Himself will be an everlasting light to the people (Is. 60:19).

Prayer for Mercy, with Meditation on the Excellencies of the LORD

A Prayer of David.

- Bow down Your ear, O LORD,

For I am poor and needy.
- 2 Preserve my ^llife, for I am holy;
You are my God;
Save Your servant who trusts in You!

than a life of luxury with those who practice wickedness. Sun and shield means “splendid shield.” Grace and glory may be rephrased as “glorious grace.” Whereas the anointed king was a “shield” (v. 9), the greater Shield is God Himself. No good thing will He withhold: This is the observation of a wise and righteous person; time after time, God gives good gifts to His people.

Psalm 85 is a prayer for restoration that is rooted deeply in trust in God. The setting for the psalm appears to be the restoration of the people of God following a great catastrophe—perhaps the Babylonian captivity. With this psalm, the people prayed for a revival of their spirits and a renewal in their land. The ultimate fulfillment of their prayer would be in the coming glorious kingdom of the Savior Jesus. This is one of the psalms composed by the sons of Korah (see Ps. 42; 44–49; 84; 87; 88). The development of this psalm is in four sections: (1) a celebration of God’s favor on the land (vv. 1–3); (2) a petition for restoration and revival (vv. 4–7); (3) an expectation that God will act soon (vv. 8, 9); (4) a description of the restoration (vv. 10–13).

85:1 You have brought back the captivity may refer to the return of the exiles from Babylon. But it also may be a more general reversal of fortune (14:7).

85:4–7 God of our salvation may be rephrased as “our Saving God.” Your anger: The first section of this psalm already says God’s anger has turned away from the people (v. 3). Yet until the restoration is complete, the people still feel the effects of God’s wrath. This suggests an understanding that the people’s troubles were due to their own sin disciplined by God. revive us: The people prayed for their own welfare and for renewed ability to praise God. Mercy may also be translated “loyal love.”

85:8, 9 The speaker here may be a priest expecting to hear a direct revelation from the Lord. Such a revelation would be consistent with God’s character. Peace suggests wholeness, fullness, things as they ought to be. The word saints is related to the term translated mercy in v. 7; these are people who reflect the love of God in their own lives. not turn back to folly: God’s blessing would continue only as long as the people remained faithful to Him. His salvation can describe any act of mercy on the part of God.

85:10–13 The words mercy and truth often appear together in the Scriptures to express one concept (see 25:10; 61:7; 86:15; 89:14). Here they are viewed as separate entities that come together, in the same way that righteousness and peace have kissed. The union of God’s mercy and truth and His righteousness and peace describes the way things ought to be, or the state of peace spoken of in v. 8. The blending of the ideals of truth and righteousness in v. 11 suggests a vision of the kingdom of God (see Is. 11). The fact that the word righteousness appears three times in the last four verses of this psalm alludes to the holiness of the coming kingdom of God and the sinlessness of the Savior and King who will rule over it.

Psalm 86 is a psalm of lament in which David expresses grave concerns about his lowly state, as well as joy in the God who alone is merciful. This poem is the only one in Book III of the Psalms that has David’s name in the title. The structure is as follows: (1) a call for God to deliver David from distress (vv. 1–5); (2) a call for God to hear David’s prayer (vv. 6, 7); (3) a statement that there is none other like God (vv. 8–10); (4) a petition for God to teach David about Himself so that he can praise Him forever (vv. 11–13); (5) a comparison of the assaults of the wicked with the character of the Lord (vv. 14, 15); (6) a renewed call for God to show His goodness to David in his distress (vv. 16, 17).

86:1–4 Bow down Your ear: As in 31:2, David uses a dramatic phrase that captures the grandeur of God on high and David’s

- 3 Be merciful to me, O Lord,
For I cry to You all day long.
- 4 ² Rejoice the soul of Your servant,

PSALM 87

2 ^a Ps. 78:67, 68
3 ^b Is. 60:1

- 13 For great is Your mercy toward me,
And You have delivered my soul from the depths of ⁴ Sheol.
- 14 O God, the proud have risen
against me,
And a mob of violent men have sought my life,
And have not set You before them.
- 15 But ⁹ You, O Lord, are a God full of compassion, and gracious, Longsuffering and abundant in mercy and truth.
- 16 Oh, turn to me, and have mercy on me!
Give Your strength to Your servant,
And save the son of Your maidservant.
- 17 Show me a sign for good,
That those who hate me may see it
and be ashamed,
Because You, LORD, have helped me and comforted me.

The Glories of the City of God

A Psalm of the sons of Korah. A Song.

- 2 ^a The LORD loves the gates of Zion
More than all the dwellings of Jacob.
- 3 ^b Glorious things are spoken of you, humble position on the earth below. Here the phrase I am holy does not speak of the transcendence of God, as in Is. 6:3. Rather it speaks of the faithfulness and godliness of a righteous person who, by God's grace, is living in accordance with God's law. It is another way that David describes himself as a servant of the Lord. Rejoice: God rejoices in those who serve Him, and His servants find their joy in Him.

86:8, 9 Among the gods: The ancient nations took their sense of identity in part from their ties to their supposed gods. When the nations found out that their "gods" did not exist, they would have to acknowledge that the Lord alone is God. Here David envisions other nations worshiping the true God and thus anticipates the missionary thrust of the NT (Ps. 117; Matt. 28:18–20).

86:11–13 Teach me Your way: David asks the Lord to teach him so that he will be able to praise God in the midst of the congregation. Mercy is the "loyal love" of the Lord. depths of Sheol: David describes the Lord as mercifully delivering him from certain death (9:17; 116:3, 4).

86:14 The Psalms consistently describe God as the enemy of the proud and the friend of the humble (138:6; 147:6).

86:15 The phrase abundant in mercy and truth is a precursor of the NT phrase "full of grace and truth" (John 1:14). The Lord upholds the truth so that He can mercifully free those caught in falsehoods.

86:16 save the son of Your maidservant: The idea here may be that since David's mother was a pious woman, the Lord ought to save David from his lowly state (116:16).

Psalm 87, a psalm of Zion, is also an intensely evangelistic psalm that anticipates the NT mission to present the gospel to the entire world (see Matt. 28:18–20). This psalm is one of the collection from the sons of Korah (Ps. 42; 44–49; 84; 85; 88). It has three movements: (1) a description of God's love for the city of Zion (vv. 1–3);

(2) a description of the citizens of Zion coming from all nations (vv. 4–6); (3) a celebration of God's salvation (v. 7).

87:1 His foundation: God Himself established Zion or Jerusalem as the center of true worship. He ordained Solomon to build a temple there so that He could live among the Israelites (1 Kin. 6:13). Zion is holy because of God's declaration (1 Kin 11:13), His promise, the worship given Him there (1 Kin. 8:14–66), the future work of the Savior there (Matt. 21:4–11), and the future rule of the King there (Rev. 21).

87:2, 3 God has a special love for the place where His name is worshipped. The gates of Zion are the conspicuous entrance to the city. The verb loves includes the idea of choice (see Deut. 6:5) as well as emotion. God chose Jerusalem; and He also has an enduring truth

(Heb. emet) (86:11; 1 Kin. 10:6; Esth. 9:30) Strong's #571

This Hebrew term signifies truth that conforms to a standard—either to created reality or to God's standards. Truth is often associated with mercy, especially God's mercy (57:3; 117:2; Gen. 24:49). This word is also frequently used in the context of legal language: In secular contexts it is used in speaking of witnesses and judgments (Prov. 14:25; Zech. 8:16), while in religious contexts it is used in reference to the law and commandments of God (119:142, 151). Truth is precious, and its absence was lamented by the Prophets (Is. 59:14; Jer. 9:5; Hos. 4:1). God desires truth in the inward parts of His people (15:2; 51:6); thus it is the basis of a life-style that pleases Him (25:5, 10; 26:3).

4 “I will make mention of ¹Rahab and Babylon to those who know Me;
Behold, O Philistia and Tyre, with Ethiopia:
‘This one was born there.’”

5 And of Zion it will be said,
“This one and that one were born in her;
And the Most High Himself shall establish her.”

6 The LORD will record,
When He ^cregisters the peoples:
“This one was born there.” Selah

7 Both the singers and the players on instruments say,
“All my springs are in you.”

affection for the city. City of God may also be translated “city of the True God.”

87:4 I will make mention: In this verse, God Himself speaks. Rahab is a symbolic name for Egypt (Is. 30:7) that has negative connotations. It alludes to the arrogance of the Egyptians. This is not the Rahab of Josh. 2:3–11, whose name is spelled differently in Hebrew. Babylon was the proverbial seat of apostasy and idolatry (Gen. 10:10). To those who know Me may be rephrased “as those who know Me.” Thus the verse anticipates a time when foreigners would know and worship the living God. Among those who came to Zion to worship the Lord were people from Egypt, Babylon, Philistia, Tyre, and Ethiopia. At the time of the writing of this psalm, perhaps in the later period of Hezekiah’s reign, foreigners were worshiping God in the temple along with Jews.

87:5 And of Zion: Despite their foreign heritage, the people who worshiped God were considered as having been born in Zion. Thus this psalm anticipates the NT teaching of the second birth (John 3). The title Most High is used particularly with reference to God’s power over the nations (47:2; 78:35; 82:6). shall establish her: Zion would become the place where more and more people from other nations would come to worship the living God. This is prophetic of the coming of the gospel of Jesus, the spread of that gospel, and the culmination of the gospel in the rule of the Savior King (Is. 2:1–4).

87:6 The LORD will record pictures God making a register of the people of the nations. All believers will find their true identity in the Lord, to whom they will offer their worship in Zion.

87:7 The singers and the players are called to celebrate together the joy of the Savior God. The image of springs indicates salvation, which is found only in the Lord (Is. 12:3). This anticipated the salvation that God would offer through Jesus Christ (Titus 2:11).

Psalm 88 begins as a psalm of lament but never comes to the resolution of trust and praise that is the hallmark of those psalms. Thus Ps. 88 can be considered a psalm of complaint, a development of the lament portion of the psalms of lament. The title ascribes the psalm to the sons of Korah (Ps. 42; 44–49; 84; 85; 87), more specifically to Heman the Ezrahite. Heman is identified in 1 Kin. 4:31 as a gifted wise man, and in 1 Chr. 15:16–19 as one of the musically gifted Levites who ministered in worship during the time of David. The term Ezrahite may mean “native born.” The name of the tune perhaps means “A Dance of Affliction.” The structure is: (1) an opening prayer for deliverance (vv. 1, 2); (2) Heman’s impending death (vv. 3–5); (3) a complaint about the Lord’s attack on Heman (vv. 6–8); (4) God’s delay in coming to the aid of Heman (vv. 9–12); (5) Heman’s desperation as he senses no deliverance from the Lord (vv. 13–18).

88:1, 2 Even in the midst of despair, Heman confesses his faith in God’s saving goodness—O LORD, God of my salvation (vv. 9, 13). cried out . . . my cry: This language of desperate weeping is not unusual in the psalms of lament. The Hebrew word for cried indicates a loud scream. The psalmist’s appeal for God to listen—incline Your ear—has the same wording as in 86:1.

88:3–5 Grave here is the familiar word Sheol (86:13), which is often linked with the term pit as a symbol of death (30:3; 143:7; Prov. 1:12; Is. 14:15; 38:18). Heman feels so near to death that he describes himself as adrift among the dead.

88:6–8 Heman feels as though he were in the lowest pit and the deepest darkness. His most vexing problem, however, is his belief that God has brought this trouble on him. put away . . . from me: Not only does he feel troubled by God; he is also alone, separated from all of his friends.

88:9 Verses 9 and 13 are a reprise of v. 1. Heman continues to pray. Even though his eyes are strained and bloodshot from constant weeping, he continues to call out to the Lord for salvation.

88:10–12 The context of these verses is the worshiping community in Jerusalem (Ps. 6). If God allows Heman to die, Heman’s voice will never again be heard in the temple giving praise to God. The word translated place of destruction is also found in Job 26:6; 28:22; Prov. 15:11; 27:20.

Or Your faithfulness in the place of destruction?

12 Shall Your wonders be known in the dark?

And Your righteousness in the land of forgetfulness?

13 But to You I have cried out, O LORD,
And in the morning my prayer comes before You.

14 LORD, why do You cast off my soul?
Why do You hide Your face

88:17, 18 In this psalm, Heman renews his complaints from earlier sections. However, he does not come to any resolution. As a person adrift at sea is aware only of the engulfing water, so Heman knows only the terrors of his life, which he believes come from the Lord. Loved one: In v. 8, Heman describes himself as removed from his friends; now he says his friends are removed from him. At the close of the psalm, Heman still feels alone, even though the psalms consistently describe a Lord that hears and answers those who call on Him (see 28:6).

Psalm 89 begins as a psalm of praise but ends as a psalm of lament. It celebrates God's covenant with David (2 Sam. 7) and then laments how David's descendants had not remained faithful to the provisions of that covenant (see 2 Sam. 7:14). Yet even in the face of unfaithfulness, this psalm reaffirms God's faithfulness to His covenant and its ultimate fulfillment in David's greater Son, the Messiah (vv. 33–37). The title attributes the psalm to Ethan, who was also known as Jeduthun (1 Chr. 25:1, 3, 6). The structure of the psalm is: (1) praise to the Lord for His everlasting covenant with David (vv. 1–4); (2) a celebration of God who established His covenant with David (vv. 5–18); (3) a review of the covenant with David (vv. 19–37); (4) consternation at a time of national distress (vv. 38–45); (5) a complaint to the Lord to provoke Him to remember His covenant and restore the fortunes of His people (vv. 46–51); (6) an appendix of blessing (v. 52).

89:1, 2 The mercies of the Lord in this psalm center on the covenant He made with David, promising him an eternal dynasty (see 2 Sam. 7). Mercy, which may be translated “loyal love,” refers to the exact words of God's promise to David (2 Sam. 7:15). The Lord had promised that His mercy would always rest on David's son.

89:3, 4 Ethan quoted God's words to David in 2 Sam. 7. David is referred to as My chosen and My servant (v. 20)—names that describe his intimate relationship with the Lord (see 2 Sam. 7:7). Your seed . . . your throne: God had promised David a line of descent and an enduring throne (2 Sam. 7:12, 13).

89:6 All praise in heaven and earth belongs to God, who is incomparable. No one, not even the supposed gods, can match His strength and love. This is the point of the question, who in the heavens can be compared to the Lord? The Hebrew phrase for the sons of the mighty may mean “sons of gods” or “heavenly beings.” The reference could be to other supposed gods or to angels, members of the heavenly court (Job 1:6).

89:9, 10 Rahab is a title for Egypt (87:4). The sea and Rahab refer to God's great victories: in the beginning, His control of His creation; in the historic past, His victory over Egypt; and in the future, His complete triumph over Satan, sin, and death (Is. 27:1; 51:9). The psalmists regularly assert God's complete control of creation (see 24:1). Nothing can challenge God's majestic rule over the entire universe.

89:13, 14 God is the great Deliverer; He brandished His arm and 14 Righteousness and justice are the foundation of Your throne; Mercy and truth go before Your face.

15 Blessed are the people who know the ⁿjoyful sound! They walk, O LORD, in the light of Your countenance.

16 In Your name they rejoice all day long, And in Your righteousness they are exalted.

20 ^qI have found My servant David; With My holy oil I have anointed him, 21 ^rWith whom My hand shall be established; Also My arm shall strengthen him.

22 The enemy shall not ⁵outwit him, Nor the son of wickedness afflict him.

23 I will beat down his foes before his face, And plague those who hate him.

24 “But My faithfulness and My mercy shall be with him, And in My name his horn shall be exalted.

hand in delivering His people from Egypt (Ex. 6:6; 15:6). Righteousness and justice means “utter righteousness.” Mercy and truth may be rephrased as “unbreakable loyalty.”

89:15–18 Blessed, the same word used in 1:1, means “manifest happiness.” To exalt the horn of the people (75:4, 5; 92:10; 132:17) means to give them power and eventual triumph. The Holy One of Israel (78:41) is the title Isaiah uses to describe God, following his experience of God’s holiness in his memorable vision of God’s throne (Is. 6).

89:19 The psalm recounts God’s remarkable intervention in the life of David and the specifics of His covenant with David. Your holy one: David had been singled out as holy to the Lord. Yet his beginnings were not spectacular, for he was from the people; he had been an ordinary shepherd (2 Sam 7:18). In these respects and in many others, David was a type, or a divinely intended portrait, of the Savior. In a similar way, Jesus came from humble origins as the son of a carpenter. Yet He was the Holy One, the Son of the Most High.

89:24, 25 My faithfulness and My mercy: The usual order of this common phrase is reversed here (vv. 1, 2). But the point is the same: God will remain true to His word and demonstrate His love to His servant. sea . . . rivers: The possible reference here is to Israel’s expansion of its borders. But note the language used to describe God’s control over creation (vv. 9, 10). The Lord is extending to His servant the authority He has over creation.

89:26–30 Father . . . firstborn: This wording is derived from God’s covenant with David (2 Sam. 7:14). seed . . . throne: These words are repeated from v. 4 (see v. 36; 2 Sam. 7:12, 13). his sons: The provisions of the Davidic covenant in 2 Sam. 7 included the discipline of errant sons.

89:34 The words my covenant I will not break and the wording of v. 35 are strong, so as to assure the reader that the will of the Lord is quite settled in this matter. The people might become faithless, but God cannot deny Himself. In spite of errors, rebellions, sins, and apostasies in the lives of many of the kings of Judah, God is determined to complete, fulfill, and accomplish His grand plan for David’s dynasty (2 Sam. 7:1–24).

89:39 After the long recital of the details of the Lord's covenant with David and God's sworn statement that He would not revoke it (v. 35), the psalmist questions whether the covenant had really been honored. Most likely the occasion of this psalm was the defeat of Israel's armies, accounting for the psalmist's strong sense of consternation before the Lord. With the repeated use of the pronoun You, he addresses his complaint directly to God. You have renounced the covenant of Your servant: As in the case of Ps. 60, the military defeat that likely sparked this psalm was a temporary situation; a victory was still to come. Nonetheless, the poet presses his claim to God: This is the covenant that the Lord has established, that He has sworn Himself to uphold.

89:40–45 As a result of the military defeat, the people were despondent and disillusioned. The psalmist voices their feelings and thus allows the process of healing to begin, even as the people wait for their deliverance from the Lord.

89:49–51 The writer complains that God has not been keeping His promises to David (2 Sam. 7:1–24). As a result, His people are experiencing undeserved reproach from their enemies. There is no resolution to this psalm; it ends with the people, the king, and the psalmist in distress. Yet the inclusion of this psalm among the praises of Israel suggests that God did answer this prayer of His beleaguered people, just as He did in the case of Ps. 60.

89:52 This verse is an editorial addition to Ps. 89, the concluding line of praise for Book III of the Psalms.

Psalm 90 is a psalm of lament in which the community complains of God's judgment and the brevity of life. But even in the midst of sorrow, the people acknowledge the security they have in the Lord and pray for renewal. This is the only poem in the Book of Psalms attributed to Moses, who wrote two other poems recorded in the Pentateuch (Ex. 15; Deut. 32). Psalm 90 has four sections: (1) an affirmation of the security of a life lived close to the Lord (vv. 1, 2); (2) a complaint about the brevity of life (vv. 3–6); (3) a complaint about God's judgment on His people (vv. 7–12); (4) a prayer for restoration (vv. 13–17).

90:1, 2 Lord here is not God's personal name (Ex. 3:14, 15), but a Hebrew word celebrating His majestic authority. The word suggests a title similar to "my Supreme Master." Dwelling place refers to the Lord as the "refuge" of His people (71:3; 91:9). In all generations: Throughout history, people have found the Lord to be their refuge in life.

90:4, 5 Even if people lived a thousand years, they would pass away like a watch in the night. A thousand years may seem long at the time, but not in comparison to God's eternal existence. Grass sprouts after the spring rains, but wilts quickly in the heat—almost in a single day.

6 In the morning it flourishes and grows up;
In the evening it is cut down and withers.

7 For we have been consumed by Your anger,
And by Your wrath we are terrified.

8 ^h You have set our iniquities before You,
Our ⁱ secret sins in the light of Your countenance.

9 For all our days have passed away in Your wrath;
We finish our years like a sigh.

10 The days of our lives are seventy years;
And if by reason of strength they are eighty years,
Yet their boast is only labor and sorrow;
For it is soon cut off, and we fly away.

11 Who knows the power of Your anger?
For as the fear of You, so is Your wrath.

12 ^j So teach us to number our days,
That we may gain a heart of wisdom.

13 Return, O LORD!
How long?
And ^k have compassion on Your servants.

14 Oh, satisfy us early with Your mercy,
^l That we may rejoice and be glad all our days!

15 Make us glad according to the days in which You have afflicted us,
The years in which we have seen evil.

Safety of Abiding in the Presence of God

He ^a who dwells in the secret place of the Most High Shall abide ^b under the shadow of the Almighty.

2 ^c I will say of the LORD, "He is my refuge and my fortress;
My God, in Him I will trust."

3 Surely ^d He shall deliver you from the snare of the ¹ fowler
And from the perilous pestilence.

4 ^e He shall cover you with His feathers,
And under His wings you shall take refuge;
His truth shall be your shield and ² buckler.

5 ^f You shall not be afraid of the terror by night,
Nor of the arrow that flies by day,
6 Nor of the pestilence that walks in darkness,
Nor of the destruction that lays waste at noonday.

7 A thousand may fall at your side,
And ten thousand at your right hand;
But it shall not come near you.

90:7 wrath: The allusion is to the anger of God against the unbelieving Israelites in the wilderness (see Num. 13; 14). An entire generation spent their lives wandering in the wilderness because of their unbelief and rebellion.

90:10 seventy . . . eighty years: The point here is not to set a maximum, but to present a context for the brevity of human life. No matter how long people live, it is inevitable that they will fly away to death.

90:11, 12 These verses are the key of the psalm. Moses had experienced a sufficient measure of God's anger (Ex. 32; Num. 14:11–25; Deut. 3:23–28). teach: What Moses needed was a new understanding of the meaning of his own life. number our days: This is more than just having a sense of mortality; it means valuing the time we do have by using it for eternal purposes.

90:13, 14 Moses uses the word "return" in v. 3 to refer to God's call for his death. Here he asks God to return for a renewed sense of life. compassion . . . mercy: Moses is asking God for new meaning in his life in the days that remain.

90:16, 17 Your work . . . Your glory: Moses asks God to give him a sense of lasting meaning in life, something that will continue to the next generation. The same idea is expressed in the words the work of our hands. Beauty refers to the "pleasantness" of God. Psalm 91, a psalm of trust, does not identify its author. The psalm is sufficiently similar to Ps. 90, a psalm of Moses, that it might also be by him. Alternatively, the experiences and ideas of Moses could have been used by an anonymous writer. This poem has a very strong messianic thrust, and God Himself speaks in vv. 14–16 (see also Ps. 12; 60; 75; 87). The development of the psalm is in four main sections: (1) a confession of confidence in the Lord (vv. 1, 2); (2) assurance that those who trust in the Lord need not fear evil (vv. 3–8); (3) promises of God's protection to the coming One (vv. 9–13); (4) a description of the Lord's protection of the coming One (vv. 14–16).

91:1, 2 in the secret place: The person who trusts in God is the one who lives close to Him. The title Most High emphasizes God's majesty (92:1) and is parallel to the term Almighty, a translation of the divine title Shaddai. Together the terms Most High and Shaddai speak of God as a mountain-like majesty, in whose presence there is a "secret place" or a shadow. My refuge and my fortress may be rephrased as "my secure fortress."

91:3 fowler . . . pestilence: The images of a bird trap and various types of disease are a general description of dangers that might come to helpless people.

91:4 His feathers . . . His wings: God is described as a mother hen under whose wings the psalmist can come for refuge (61:4; 63:7). Shield and buckler indicates complete protection from all harm. God is an all protective shield for the believer.

91:5, 6 The interplay of words for night and day in these verses indicates the universal nature of God's protection. Terror, arrow, pestilence, and destruction together refer to evil in general.

91:7, 8 A thousand . . . ten thousand: Like the Israelites in Egypt who were spared the danger that touched their neighbors (Ex. 9:26; 10:23; 11:7), believers in the Lord are protected from any assault.

- 8 Only ^gwith your eyes shall you look,
And see the reward of the wicked.
- 9 Because you have made the LORD,
who is ^hmy refuge,
Even the Most High, ⁱyour dwelling

- 10 ^jNo evil shall befall you,
Nor shall any plague come near your

- 11 ^kFor He shall give His angels charge over you,
To keep you in all your ways.
- 12 In their hands they shall ³bear you up, ^lLest you ⁴dash your foot against a

- 13 You shall tread upon the lion and the cobra,
The young lion and the serpent you shall trample underfoot.
- 14^aBecause he has set his love upon Me,
therefore I will deliver him;
I will ⁵set him on high, because he has ^mknown My name.
- 15 He shall ⁿcall upon Me, and I will answer him;
I will be ^owith him in trouble;
I will deliver him and honor him.
- 16 With ⁶long life I will satisfy him,
And show him My salvation.”

look . . . And see: The punishment of the wicked is as sure as the deliverance of the righteous.

91:9, 10 In vv. 14–16, God describes directly the same person addressed by the psalmist in vv. 9–13. This person is the coming One.

My refuge is the same word used in v. 2. Dwelling place is the same word used in 90:1. Most High: The psalmist indicates that the coming One's faith in God is the same as the psalmist's.

91:11–13 His angels . . . a stone: These words were used by Satan to tempt the Savior (Matt. 4:5, 6). the lion and the cobra: The animal and snake imagery in this verse pictures all kinds of evil that might threaten the coming One. The Father will protect Him no matter what the danger.

91:14 The verb used here for love is not the usual Hebrew word for love. It has the idea of “holding close to,” even “hugging tightly in love” (Deut. 7:7; 10:15). He has known My name speaks of an intimate, experiential knowledge of the Father (John 1:18).

Psalm 92, a psalm of descriptive praise (Ps. 113), celebrates the person and work of God in an exuberant way. The psalm also includes several wisdom themes. The title is unusual in that it attaches the designation “for the Sabbath day.” The poem has four brief sections: (1) an encouragement for the people to respond to God in praise and worship (vv. 1–4); (2) a celebration of the wisdom of God in bringing judgment on the wicked (vv. 5–9); (3) an acknowledgment of the mercy of God who has established the believer's present life (vv. 10, 11); (4) an anticipation of the mercy of God that will continue in the life to come (vv. 12–15).

92:1–4 The wording of this section has similarities to Ps. 33:1, 2; 147:1; 149:1. To give thanks means “to give public acknowledgment” or to praise God verbally in a public setting (35:18; 105:1).

92:6 A senseless man . . . a fool: In contrast to the limitless wisdom of God is the shallow nature of the fool (14:1).

92:8, 9 You, LORD, are on high forevermore is the central shout of this psalm of descriptive praise (113:4). The Lord's eternality is contrasted with the brevity of the lives of His enemies. Because of God's patience, He allows evil to occur (2 Pet. 3:9)—but He will not allow it to flourish forever.

92:10 My horn You have exalted (75:4, 5; 89:17, 24; 132:17) is a figure of speech for the psalmist's eventual triumph, the celebration of the psalmist's strength. I have been anointed with fresh oil is not just a general statement of God's interest in the poet, but a prediction of the coming One, the Lord's Anointed.

92:12–15 The language of this section speaks of God's continuing blessing on the believer not only in this life but also in the life to come (Ps. 23). The tree image recalls the words of 1:3.

13 Those who are planted in the house of the LORD
Shall flourish in the courts of our God.
14 They shall still bear fruit in old age;
They shall be ³fresh and ⁴flourishing,

PSALM 94

God the Refuge of the Righteous

O LORD God, ^ato whom vengeance belongs—

Psalm 93, a royal psalm, focuses on the reign of God over the earth, making use of a distinctly Canaanite perspective. The psalmist denies Baal and shouts exuberantly in praise of God. God is King of the universe. What are humans compared to Him? God is King of heaven. What are the gods compared to Him? God is King of all. To whom may He be compared (Is. 40:25)? This focus is one of the most impressive ideas in the Bible. The structure of Ps. 93 is as follows: (1) the establishment of the reign of God as King of creation (vv. 1, 2); (2) the celebration of the stability of God as King of creation (vv. 3, 4); (3) the acknowledgment of the excellent nature of God (v. 5). 93:1, 2 The LORD reigns is the key of the royal psalms (96:10; 97:1; 99:1). The language girded Himself with strength describes the victor of one-on-one combat. God is dressed in the garments of victory. This is a celebration of God as the Creator. cannot be moved: There is no power on earth or in the universe that can wrench control of the earth from God. from of old: Unlike Baal, who was a recent “upstart” in the myths of Canaan, the rule of God is from antiquity. The living God is eternal.

93:3, 4 The floods: Baal was supposed to have been victorious over the waters; thus this section of the poem is a continuing refutation of Baal worship while it joyfully celebrates the power of God. The LORD . . . is mightier: The Creator King is infinite in power; no force in the universe competes with Him.

93:5 While this psalm uses language resembling the worship of Baal to emphasize the greatness of God (Ps. 29), it also glorifies God with praises never attributed to Baal. None of the accolades of Baal speak of his testimonies. But God is superior to Baal, for He is faithful to His word. He is the gracious God who speaks to His people; He is the holy God of Scripture who is approached by His people; and He is the eternal God whom we worship, as did the people of ancient Israel.

Psalm 94 is a royal psalm, since the phrase “Judge of the earth” (v. 2) is equivalent to “King” (50:4–6). The righteous call for the divine Judge to punish evil in the world (82:8; 96:13; 98:9). Psalms 93–99 are a splendid set of psalms focused on the eternal reign of God. The order of the psalm is as follows: (1) a call for the Judge of the earth to punish the wicked (vv. 1–3); (2) a description of the senseless acts of the wicked (vv. 4–7); (3) a chiding of the wicked.

Royal Psalms

Some of the most inspiring psalms are the royal psalms. These are psalms that celebrate God as King. It is amazing that the first time Scripture refers to God as King is in one of the oracles of Balaam, the pagan seer who was blind to spiritual reality until God confronted him (Num. 23:21). Once God was revealed as the Great King, the psalmists made much of that fact.

The reign of God in the Psalms is presented against the cultural backdrop of Canaanite thought and religion. The Canaanites regarded their chief deity El as king of the gods. But according to Canaanite mythology, El’s rule was attacked by Baal, a god of storm and fertility. He defeated a number of the followers of El. These were the gods Yamm (the god of the sea), Lotan (a sea monster), and Mot (the god of death). Baal himself was mortally wounded in this conflict and Anat, the wife-sister of Baal, was associated with his resuscitation. With this victory, Baal became king. But there was always a lingering question: How long would Baal rule? How long would his enemies remain defeated? Could not Lotan surge anew and threaten Baal’s position? The Canaanites who believed in these stories lived their lives on the brink of a heavenly catastrophe. Their gods were fragile; they were easily established and easily deposed.

It is against this background that the words of Ps. 93 obtain their force. The living God is the King from the beginning of time; He is no recent claimant to power (vv. 1, 2). As King, He exercises authority over all. He does not have to fear a resurgent sea (vv. 3, 4). Not only is the Lord omnipotent, but He is truthful and holy, unlike any of the gods of the Canaanite imagination (v. 5).

In general, the royal psalms speak of the Lord as King in three different ways. He is King over creation, for He is the Creator (74:12–17). He is King over the Israelites (44:4), for He is their Savior. And He is the coming King, for He will eventually judge everyone (47:7, 8). Sometimes in people’s minds God’s kingdom is narrowly identified with the coming glorious rule of Jesus: God’s present reign over creation is ignored. But sometimes the opposite is true. God’s present rule can be emphasized so much that Jesus’ coming is disregarded. The royal psalms consistently balance these two ideas: “The LORD reigns” (93:1), but the Lord is also coming to establish His permanent rule (24:9).

PSALM 95

A Call to Worship and Obedience

Oh come, let us sing to the LORD!
Let us shout joyfully to the Rock of our salvation.

ed concerning their ignorance of God (vv. 8–11); (4) a blessing on the righteous (vv. 12–15); (5) a prayer for God’s intervention in the psalmist’s life (vv. 16–19); (6) a prayer for God’s defense of His own purposes (vv. 20–23).

94:1–3 Even when the poets call out for divine vengeance, they recognize that God decides when to exercise His wrath and judgment. God’s law clearly states that vengeance belongs to Him (Deut. 32:35). How long will the wicked triumph: This question is based on a concern for the glory of God. How long would the wicked defy God? The answer, of course, is in God’s mercy. The Lord may delay this judgment, but in His own timing He will come to establish true justice (2 Pet. 3:9).

94:4–6 The Psalms often describe the wicked in terms of their evil speech (Ps. 12). They slay the widow and the stranger: The Israelites had been commanded to comfort widows and orphans and to welcome strangers as long as those strangers obeyed the Law of God (Ex. 22:22). Thus the wicked were brazenly disobeying God’s commands.

94:8–11 The command to understand is for fools to abandon their foolishness. Surely, the poet argues, the Creator of the earth is not deaf, nor is the Fashioner of the eye blind. Although idols do not have real eyes and ears (115:3–8), the God of heaven does see and hear. The LORD knows: The difference between the thoughts of God and the thoughts of human beings is beyond comprehension. The thoughts of man apart from God are futile or “quickly passing.”

94:12 Blessed is the man: This beatitude uses the word with which the Book of Psalms begins, a term meaning “manifest happiness.” These words are very similar to the ideas of 1:2.

94:13, 14 Pit is one of the words used as a synonym for Sheol (16:10). Digging the “pit” is a way of describing the preparations for the final judgment of the wicked (Rev. 20). will not cast off His people: God will not forget His people any more than He will forget or deny Himself (2 Tim. 2:13).

94:16–19 Who will rise up for me is an appeal to the Lord who alone is the sure defense of the believer. settled in silence: The psalmist exclaims that if the Lord had not delivered him, he would have died. As in Ps. 6, if the psalmist had died, his voice would no longer be able to praise God in the temple. The comforts of God extend from His hearing the call of the righteous to His meeting their needs even when they are not aware of them.

94:20–23 Throne of iniquity is a description of the wicked who have great power. The holy Lord cannot tolerate evil in His presence. The LORD . . . shall cut them off: Final judgment will one day come to the wicked.

Psalm 95 places particular emphasis on the worship of God, making it a worship psalm. But it is also a royal psalm because of the way it acknowledges God as the great King (v. 3). The psalm has three movements, each reflecting a “mood” of the worshiping community: (1) the worship of God in a mood of celebration (vv. 1–5); (2) the worship of God in a contemplative mood (vv. 6, 7); (3) the worship of God in obedience (vv. 8–11).

95:1–4 Oh come: The psalm begins with energy and delight at the prospect of worshipping God in the temple (Ps. 100). The use of the psalms in worship is indicated in this passage. In His hand refers to God’s control over all that He has made.

95:6, 7 Each of the key verbs in this sentence describes a physical posture of humility before the Lord. The Hebrew word translated worship means literally “to prostrate oneself.” When bow down, kneel, and worship occur together as in this verse, they amplify each other and call for a reflective, humble approach to God. Worship is joyful and can be done with abandon (vv. 1–5); but at other times worship may be quiet reverence of the Almighty (see Ps. 134). people of His pasture: These words seem to be an inversion of the wording of 100:3, expressing the loving care the Father has for His children.

95:7–11 The third movement of this psalm is a call for obedience in worship and a reminder of God’s judgments in past times on people who did not take Him seriously. The entire section is quoted in its entirety in Heb. 3:7–11, with a notable introduction: “Therefore, as the Holy Spirit says” (Heb. 3:7). This phrase reminds us that the words of the psalms, which are the response of the worshiping Israelite community, are also the oracles of God.

95:8 The word rebellion is literally “Meribah,” a word that would remind the Israelites of the times they had doubted the Lord’s provision for them (Ex. 17:7; Num. 20:13). The event of Meribah was the rebellion of the first generation at Kadesh (Num. 14). By refusing to enter Canaan, the entire generation of Israelites lost their opportunity to enjoy the promises of God in the land of blessing.

Psalm 96, a royal psalm, is part of the set that begins at Ps. 93. This psalm emphasizes world mission, specifically the prophetic fulfillment of the mission provision of the Abrahamic covenant (Ps. 67). The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a call to praise God (vv. 1–3); (2) a celebration of God the Creator (vv. 4–6); (3) a celebration of God the King (vv. 7–10); (4) a celebration of God the coming One (vv. 11–13).

96:3 Among the nations is a bold declaration that one day the message of God’s mercy will be known the world over. One day the message of God’s salvation will be known among all peoples. This declaration depends on God’s promise to Abraham that through his descendants all nations of the earth will be blessed (Gen. 12:1–3). It also anticipates Jesus’ command to his disciples to spread the news of God’s goodness to a desperate world (Matt. 28:18–20; see also Ps. 67).

96:4–6 The mention of other gods in v. 4 is clarified by the words of v. 5: these gods are merely idols. Honor and majesty may be rephrased as “majestic honor.” Strength and beauty may be rephrased as “beautiful strength.”

96:7–9 families of the peoples: The allusion to the Abrahamic covenant continues (vv. 2, 3; see Gen. 12:1–3). One day, the praise of God will come gladly from people of all nations. Give to the LORD: The words of vv. 7–9 are quoted from 29:1, 2, with the substitution of “O families of the peoples” for “O you mighty ones.”

96:10 The LORD reigns is the key phrase of the royal psalms (93:1).

It shall not be ⁵ moved;
^k He shall judge the peoples righteously.”

- ¹¹ ^l Let the heavens rejoice, and let the earth be glad;
^m Let the sea roar, and ⁶ all its fullness;
¹² Let the field be joyful, and all that is in it.
 Then all the trees of the woods will rejoice

PSALM 98

A Song of Praise to the LORD for His Salvation and Judgment

A Psalm.

- Oh, ^a sing to the LORD a new song!
 For He has ^b done marvelous things;
 His right hand and His holy arm have gained Him the victory.
² ^c The LORD has made known His salvation;
^d His righteousness He has revealed in the sight of the ¹ nations.

It was the countercultural cry of ancient Israelites in a world that believed that gods could rise and fall. In contrast, the living God remains Ruler for all eternity. He shall judge: This verse answers the cry of the oppressed peoples of world history. God will restore justice (82:8; 94:1–3).

96:11–13 Let the heavens rejoice: This poem calls for all of creation to respond to the coming of the King of glory. He is coming . . . He is coming: Like the echo of approaching footsteps, the words echo each other. judge the world: See 98:9 for similar words; see Rev. 19; 20 for their fulfillment.

Psalm 97, one of the series of royal psalms (Ps. 93–99), has a particularly apocalyptic tone in its description of God’s final judgment on the wicked before He establishes His great kingdom. The structure of the poem is: (1) a call for the praise of God the King (v. 1); (2) a vision of the coming judgment of the wicked (vv. 2–6); (3) a prophetic statement about the end of idolatry (vv. 7–9); (4) a promise of great joy for the righteous (vv. 10, 11); (5) a call for the praise of God the King (v. 12).

97:1 The LORD reigns is the key phrase of the royal psalms (93:1). The earth as a whole and its smallest parts—the isles—join together in rejoicing at the prospect of God’s reign on earth.

97:2 Clouds and darkness may be rephrased “impenetrable clouds,” an indicator of the final judgment and God’s awesome power (Joel 2:2; Zeph. 1:15). Righteousness and justice may be rephrased as “absolute righteousness.” The foundation of God’s coming judgment will be His integrity; His judgments will be correct.

97:3 fire: The psalmist uses the imagery of the storm god Baal to describe God’s judgment. This poetic language attempts to describe the final judgment of God upon the earth before He establishes His kingdom.

97:7, 8 The continuing practice of idolatry throughout world history is a grave offense against the Lord. Such behavior will finally end in shame and terror (14:5). Worship Him: Anything that serves as an object of worship will one day bow before the true God (115:4–10).

97:10, 11 To hate means to reject; to love means to choose. Since both are an expression of the will and not merely an emotion, the Bible commands both love and hatred. Light is sown: The picture is that of someone sowing seed, with the seed being light and joy. This speaks of the restoration of the earth (Ps. 110).

97:12 Rejoice: The psalm begins and ends on a note of rejoicing. Psalm 98, one of the set of royal psalms that includes Ps. 93–99, is an exuberant psalm of praise. This poem shares the same joy as Ps. 96. The outline is as follows: (1) a call to praise God as the Savior (vv. 1–3); (2) a call to praise God as the King (vv. 4–6); (3) a call to praise God as the coming Judge (vv. 7–9).

98:1–2 The term marvelous things is used only to describe the actions of God in the Bible. The right hand of the Lord is a way of referring to His great salvation of Israel from Egypt (Ex. 15:6; Deut. 4:34). The phrase is like a slogan for the Lord’s redemption (118:15, 16). sight of the nations: God’s salvation was designed to be a witness to the nations (Deut. 4:6).

- 3 He has remembered His mercy and His faithfulness to the house of Israel;
 ^cAll the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.
- 4 Shout joyfully to the LORD, all the earth;
 Break forth in song, rejoice, and sing praises.
- 5 Sing to the LORD with the harp,
 With the harp and the sound of a psalm,
- 6 With trumpets and the sound of a horn;
 Shout joyfully before the LORD, the King.
- 7 Let the sea roar, and all its fullness,

8 Let the rivers clap their hands;

PSALM 100

title ^a Ps. 145: title
1 ^b Ps. 95:1 ¹ Lit. all the earth

98:7, 8 In Canaanite thought, the sea represented a dark deity. In the Psalms, the sea is a part of creation that God completely controls (Ps. 93). The clapping of the hands of the rivers and the rejoicing of the hills represents the praise of creation at the establishment of God's kingdom on the earth.

98:9 He is coming: This verse and 96:13 answer the call for justice found at many points in the Psalms. The coming of the Judge is a reason for joy. At last the Lord will put an end to cruelty, evil, and injustice.

Psalm 99, the last of the set of royal psalms that began with Ps. 93, praises God as the King of His people. The psalm has three movements, each ending with the words "He is holy": (1) praise to the Lord in the greatness of His glory (vv. 1–3); (2) praise to the King in the justice of His rule (vv. 4, 5); (3) praise to the Lord who answers the prayers of His people (vv. 6–9).

99:1, 2 The cherubim are the angels most closely related to the glory of God. Two gold cherubim graced the mercy seat of the ark of the covenant (Ex. 25:18–22). Let the earth be moved: Since God is the great King, the stability of the earth depends on Him; He can shake the world to demonstrate His power over it (Matt. 24:29).

great in Zion: The holy temple in Jerusalem was the earthly structure for God's heavenly presence. But His reign extends throughout the entire world.

99:3 awesome name: The name of God is a blessing and comfort; it also evokes awe and wonder. Holy means to be "distant" or "distinct from." This is the principal Hebrew word used to describe the transcendence of God (113:4–6).

99:5 The footstool of the Lord is sometimes said to be the earth (Is. 66:1); but more specifically, Zion is the Lord's footstool (132:7; Is. 60:13). When the Israelites came to the temple in Jerusalem to worship, they pictured themselves as being at the feet of the Creator.

99:6 The psalmists worshiped God by recalling His saving acts to their predecessors. Moses is mentioned by name in the Psalms several times (77:20; 103:7; 105:26; 106:16, 23, 32), as is Aaron (77:20; 105:26; 106:16; 115:10, 12; 118:3; 133:2; 135:19). This psalm is the only one to mention Samuel by name. He answered: The inference is clear—the Lord heard their prayers and did not remain silent. Since God answered the prayers of our ancestors, surely He will continue to answer the prayers of those who call upon Him.

99:9 His holy hill: As in 2:6, the site of Zion is "holy" because of the presence of the Lord. This holy hill is also His "footstool" (see v. 5).

Psalm 100 is a psalm of descriptive praise that follows a set of royal psalms (Ps. 93–99). Perhaps the ancient editors felt that the royal psalms demanded the response of worship provided by this psalm. The phrase "A Psalm of Thanksgiving" refers to public acknowledgment of the Lord.

100:1, 2 The Hebrew verb for make a joyful shout is a highly charged command for public praise. The command is addressed not just to Israel but to all the earth. The Israelites were to be a people who would attract the nations to worship God. with gladness:

- ³ Know that the LORD, He is God;
^cIt is He who has made us, and ²not
 we ourselves;
^dWe are His people and the sheep of His pasture.
- ⁴ ^eEnter into His gates with Joyful abandon was not the only mood of worship in ancient Israel (Ps. 95), but there was great emphasis placed on it.

100:3 The words the LORD, He is God reflect the great confession of faith in Deut 6:4-9. To know that the Lord is God is very similar to the command to "hear" in Deuteronomy. And not we ourselves is sometimes read "and His we are." sheep of His pasture: An inversion of these words can be found in 95:7.

100:4 Enter: The commands of vv. 1, 2 are reiterated. The people of the Lord may actually come into His presence and bring Him worship that pleases Him. Be thankful is a command for public expression of praise (106:1).

100:5 the LORD is good: The shout of the goodness of God in this verse is buttressed by an appeal to His mercy and His truth. The Hebrew word for truth comes from the root meaning "to be established" or "to be confirmed." From this root also comes the word amen, meaning "surely" or "truly." God's goodness is based on His loyal love and His truth.

Psalm 101 is a royal psalm. David the king declares his purposes and asks for God's help in maintaining righteousness. This brief psalm has a tone of strong judgment, indicating a desire not only to preserve the innocent and protect the needy, but also to maintain the reputation of God against the attacks of His foes. The outline of the poem is: (1) a determination to praise the Lord (v. 1); (2) a determination to behave wisely (v. 2); (3) a determination to abstain from wickedness (vv. 3-5); (4) a determination to discriminate between the righteous and the wicked (vv. 6-8).

101:1, 2 Mercy and justice may be rephrased as "gracious justice." There is a harshness to the tone of the psalm that might emphasize the justice element of this phrasing; but underlying the justice is God's "mercy" or "loyal love." Behave wisely means to act with skill. The strong form of the word indicates intense determination, not just a passing desire.

101:3, 4 The Hebrew expression for wicked implies utter worthlessness. The phrase I hate indicates utter rejection (5:5). David hated what God hated and loved what God loved. not know: The Hebrew verb for "to know" here has the idea of experience or intimate relationship with something or someone.

101:6-8 David made a covenant with his eyes (Job 31:1) to observe the righteous and sustain them in their walk. Alternatively, his eyes were also directed against the wicked. the evildoers: Elsewhere, this Hebrew phrase is rendered workers of iniquity (14:4).

Psalm 102, a penitential psalm, has an unusual inscription. The title describes a person in distress but does not name him. The structure of the poem is: (1) a cry to the Lord for deliverance (vv. 1, 2); (2) a description of the groaning brought about by guilt (vv. 3-7); (3) a description of suffering that results from the laughter of enemies (vv. 8-11); (4) praise to the Lord who rises to answer prayer (vv. 12-17); (5) praise to the Lord who stoops to the needs of His people (vv. 18-22); (6) a petition to the Lord to renew the strength of His servant (vv. 23-28).

102:1 In its entreaty to the Lord to hear, the beginning of the psalm reflects a pattern of lament (see 13:1, 2). The next section (vv. 3-7) reflects a pattern of penitence (see 32:3-5).

102:3 my days are consumed: This description of the psalmist's sense of his own frailty is matched by the words of 144:4, "like a passing shadow."

And my bones are burned like a hearth.
 4 My heart is stricken and withered like grass,
 So that I forget to eat my bread.
 5 Because of the sound of my groaning
 My bones cling to my ² skin.
 6 I am like a pelican of the wilderness;
 I am like an owl of the desert.
 7 I lie awake,
 And am like a sparrow alone on the housetop.
 8 My enemies reproach me all day long;
 Those who deride me swear an oath against me.
 9 For I have eaten ashes like bread,
 And mingled my drink with weeping,
 10 Because of Your indignation and Your wrath;
 For You have lifted me up and cast me away.
 11 My days are like a shadow that lengthens,
 And I wither away like grass.
 12 But You, O LORD, shall endure forever,
 And the remembrance of Your name to all generations.
 13 You will arise and have mercy on Zion;
 For the time to favor her,
 Yes, the set time, has come.
 14 For Your servants take pleasure in her stones,
 And show favor to her dust.
 15 So the ³ nations shall ^d fear the name of the LORD,
 And all the kings of the earth Your glory.
 16 For the LORD shall build up Zion;
^c He shall appear in His glory.
 17 ^f He shall regard the prayer of the destitute,
 And shall not despise their prayer.

PSALM 103

Praise for the LORD's Mercies

A Psalm of David.

Bless ^a the LORD, O my soul;
 And all that is within me, bless His holy name!

102:6-8 The psalmist names birds—a pelican, an owl, and a sparrow—who live in distant, lonely places. The psalmist felt isolated, alone, and vulnerable, an isolation intensified by the harsh ranting of his enemies, who deride him for his decision to trust in the Lord.

102:12 Shall endure may also be translated "sits enthroned." God is King forever. He is gracious, loves His people, and promises to favor them. With these words of praise, the psalmist expresses his hope that God will deliver him.

102:15 The psalmist anticipates a time when the Lord will reign over all the nations (Ps. 96-98); but his prayer is for God's answer to his own cry for deliverance.

102:18, 19 The psalmist realizes that the Eternal One has stooped from heaven to meet his need, that the King of kings has come to his aid. His joy is such that he wants people who have not yet been born to learn what God has done.

102:24, 25 midst of my days: The psalmist remembers his troubling experiences and contrasts the brevity of his own life with the eternity of God. Of old: God is eternal and His works are from ancient times. The writer of the Book of Hebrews applies these words of creation and eternity to the Son (vv. 25-27; Heb. 1:10-12).

Psalm 103, a wisdom psalm attributed to David, is also a psalm of praise. The poem begins with the psalmist speaking in the singular (v. 1), but then moves to include the community, both angels and people (vv. 20-22). The structure of the psalm is: (1) praise of the Lord for His many benefits (vv. 1-5); (2) praise of the Lord for His ongoing mercy (vv. 6-10); (3) praise of the Lord for His transcendent glory and gentle care (vv. 11-14); (4) a comparison of the transitory

- 2 Bless the LORD, O my soul,
And forget not all His benefits:
- 3 ^bWho forgives all your iniquities,
Who ^cheals all your diseases,
- 4 Who redeems your life from destruction,
^dWho crowns you with lovingkindness and tender
mercies,
- 5 Who satisfies your mouth with good things,
So that ^eyour youth is renewed like the eagle's.
- 6 The LORD executes righteousness
And justice for all who are oppressed.
- 7 ^fHe made known His ways to

His acts to the children of Israel.
- 8 ^gThe LORD is merciful and gracious,
Slow to anger, and abounding in mercy.
- 9 ^hHe will not always strive with us,
Nor will He keep His anger forever.
- 10 ⁱHe has not dealt with us according to our sins,
Nor punished us according to our iniquities.
- 11 For as the heavens are high above the earth,
So great is His mercy toward those who fear Him;
- 12 As far as the east is from the west,
So far has He ^jremoved our transgressions from us.

nature of humanity with the everlasting rule of God (vv. 15–19); (5) a call to heaven and earth to bless the Lord (vv. 20–22).

103:1 To bless the LORD is to remember that He is the source of all our blessings. The psalmist blesses the Lord with his entire being (146:2).

103:3–5 heals all your diseases: There are godly people who suffer illness, despite repeated prayers for healing. Even though God is not bound to heal every disease, every healing does come from Him. Who satisfies your mouth: In addition to being a healer, God provides food as well as other blessings (111:5). His mercy enables the believer to rise up like an eagle (see Is. 40:31).

103:6 God is for the helpless and the oppressed. He is not unfair, for He is the One who will restore justice to the earth.

103:7 made known His ways to Moses: God blessed His servant Moses in a special way by revealing the Law to him. His acts: During the Exodus and the wilderness wanderings, God acted on the Israelites' behalf. He saved them from Pharaoh's army, provided them with water and food, but most importantly revealed the Law to them.

103:8–14 The LORD is merciful: This is a basic description of God in the OT (see 86:15; Ex. 34:6, 7). If God dealt with us according to our sins, no one could stand before Him (130:3). There is no way to compare the divine with the mortal; the mercy of God is greater than the heavens. He removes our sins completely (Mic. 7:19) and cares for His people as a good father cares for his children. The fact that God remembers who we are and how He made us is another mark of His mercy, for we are dust.

103:17–19 Mercy may be rephrased as "loyal love." God's anger is for a moment (v. 8); His loyal love is forever. His blessing is on those who keep faith with Him (147:11). His throne: The Lord is King of all and King forever. His rule is the only rule that matters.

103:20–22 Bless the LORD: The poet began the psalm with a call to his own inner being to respond with praise to God (v. 1); he concludes the psalm with a call to heaven and earth to join him in joyful praise.

soul

(Heb. nephesh) (11:5; 103:1, 2; Lev. 26:30; Is. 1:14; 42:1; Jer. 5:9; 15:1) Strong's #315

This Hebrew word occurs more than 750 times in the Bible. It has quite a number of meanings, but most of them can be reduced to the following three categories: (1) life or the life force, especially in connection with blood (Gen. 9:4, 5; Lev. 17:11, 14); (2) one's soul or the immaterial being, the seat of intellect and emotion (42:1, 2; 86:4; 1 Sam. 1:10; 2 Sam. 5:8; Prov. 23:7; Song 1:7); and (3) an individual or person (84:2; Gen. 2:7; Judg. 12:3; Ezek. 18:4). Originally the word probably referred to the breath (Job 41:21). The Bible typically considers a person as an interconnected whole. This is why the Bible tells us to love God with all our heart, soul, and strength—in other words, with our entire being (Deut. 6:4, 5; Josh. 22:5).

The waters stood above the mountains.
- 7 At Your rebuke they fled;
At the voice of Your thunder they hastened away.
- 8 ³They went up over the mountains;
They went down into the valleys,
To the place which You founded for
them.
- 9 You have ^dset a boundary that they may not pass over,
^eThat they may not return to cover
the earth.
- 10 He sends the springs into the valleys;
They flow among the hills.
- 11 They give drink to every beast of the

BIBLE TIMES & CULTURE NOTES

Language

The language of the Psalms resembles the poetry of the ancient city of Ugarit. The Psalms pick up some of the phrases and expressions that were popular during that time, but this does not mean that the Psalms were copied from the literature of Ugarit. Psalm 104 is remarkably similar to the Egyptian “Hymn to Aton” in its use of poetic parallelism and in the thoughts of some verses. Although these similarities are too close to be incidental, a close comparison of the two poems shows that the biblical poem is clearly monotheistic (affirming the existence of one God) and quite different from the Egyptian poem in structure. Perhaps the Hebrew poet composed his hymn with the Egyptian piece before him. What the polytheistic poet ascribed to Aton, the monotheistic biblical poet attributed to Yahweh.

Psalm 104, a wisdom psalm, is also a creation psalm (Ps. 19). It is an exuberant poetic recasting of Gen. 1, a joyful celebration of the world as the creation of God. The poetry of the psalmists and the prophets often reflects upon God’s work in creation. The structure of the poem is: (1) praise for God’s great creation (vv. 1, 2); (2) the creation of the heavens (vv. 3, 4); (3) the creation of the earth (vv. 5–9); (4) the waters of blessing (vv. 10–13); (5) the fullness of the earth (vv. 14–18); (6) the patterns of life (vv. 19–23); (7) praise for God’s great creation (vv. 24–26); (8) an acknowledgment that all life is dependent upon the Lord (vv. 27–30); (9) a prayer for God’s glory (vv. 31, 32); (10) a personal response to God (vv. 33–35). 104:2 God is Spirit (see John 4:24), and descriptions of Him vary through the Bible. One strong description of Him is light (see 1 John 1:5). Here light is described as the garment that enfolds His wonder. The first act of God in Genesis was the command for light (Gen. 1:3). 104:3, 4 beams of His upper chambers: With these poetic words, the psalmist alludes to the heavenly dwelling place of God, a place beyond human understanding. makes the clouds His chariot: Idolaters used similar language of Baal. The psalmist strips Baal of these honors and applied them to the living God (Ps. 93). Angels are also spirit beings; they may appear as flames of fire (Is. 6:2). 104:5–7 You who laid the foundations of the earth is a poetic way of describing how God created the heavens and the earth. The deep is the same term used in Gen. 1:2. At Your rebuke: The poet recalls that God brought dry land from the watery abyss in Gen. 1:9, 10. The word of God is referred to as a “rebuke” or a “thundering.” 104:9 A boundary is a regular theme in wisdom literature (Prov. 8:29). God’s control over the turbulent waters (Ps. 93) is proof that He, not Baal, is the true Sovereign. 104:14, 15 vegetation: The basis for this section is Gen. 1:11–13, the creative acts of God on the third day. Here the psalmist indicates the specific purpose of God’s creation: to provide for the needs of human beings. Wine, oil, and bread—staples of everyday life in Israel—are blessings of God to enrich life.

The Eternal Faithfulness of the LORD

- Oh, ^agive thanks to the LORD!
Call upon His name;
^bMake known His deeds among the peoples!
- 2 Sing to Him, sing psalms to Him;
^cTalk of all His wondrous works!

104:19 seasons: The events of the fourth day of creation are reviewed here (Gen. 1:14–19). The point is that God has established the patterns of life.

104:24 The Hebrew wisdom writers looked at the world with a sense of wonder and reverence because it reflected the wisdom of its Creator.

104:25, 26 References to the sea in the psalms are generally in the context of Canaanite ideas. The Canaanites said that Baal controlled the powerful gods of the seas. But the psalmist asserts in the face of this falsehood that God created the waters and everything in them—even Leviathan, the great sea monster (see Job 41).

104:27–30 These all wait: All creation depends on the Creator for birth, life, and sustenance. Even death is controlled by the Sovereign One.

104:31 God continues to rejoice in His creative work on earth (Prov. 8:30, 31). The Lord considered His creation “good” from the beginning (Gen. 1:31), and His pleasure in it remains.

104:34, 35 my meditation: The poet wants to respond properly to God’s creation. Bless the LORD echoes the beginning of the psalm (v. 1).

Psalms 105, a psalm of praise (compare Ps. 113), focuses on the positive experiences of Israel in their early history. Contrast Ps. 106, which reviews the same period of history but with an emphasis on the faithlessness of the people. This poem celebrates God’s faithfulness to His covenant with Abraham in the lives of His people. The people needed to remember to be faithful to God, who had never forgotten to be faithful to them. The structure of the poem is: (1) a call for praise to God (vv. 1–6); (2) God’s covenant with Abraham (vv. 7–12); (3) the early experiences of God’s people (vv. 13–15); (4) the experience of Joseph (vv. 16–22); (5) the experience of Israel in Egypt (vv. 23–25); (6) the great deliverance from Egypt (vv. 26–36); (7) the great provisions (vv. 37–41); (8) God’s promise to Abraham (vv. 42–45).

give thanks

(Heb. yadah) (105:1; 122:4; 136:1) Strong’s #3034

Surprisingly in Hebrew, there is no verb that means “to thank” in the way the English word thank is used as a common expression of gratitude between people. The meaning of the Hebrew word is “to make public acknowledgment,” and its association with the Hebrew noun yad, meaning “hand,” suggests hands outstretched towards God. The word is used regularly in the Bible to depict public commendation of God’s person and attributes, and the public testimony to what He has done for His people; this is the core meaning of praise. Old Testament believers such as Leah (Gen. 29:35), David (2 Chr. 7:6), the psalmists (7:17; 42:5; 118:21), and the prophets (Is. 25:1; Jer. 33:11) all gave thanks, praising the Lord for His mercy towards them.

105:5 The psalmist calls to memory what God did for His people in fulfillment of the covenant with Abraham (Gen. 12:1-3; 13:14-17; 15:13-21; 17:7, 8; 26:3, 4; 28:13-15). Remember is the key idea of the psalm: the psalmist wanted to remind God's people of His goodness.

105:8 The psalmist assured his audience that even if they did not remember, God does remember. He remembers: The words of the original promise to Abraham set out the Lord's obligation in strong terms (Gen. 12:1-3). These ideas are reinforced by the dramatic encounter with Abraham in Gen. 15. In the story of the binding of Isaac in Gen. 22, the Lord undertakes an irrevocable oath of obligation (Gen. 22:16-18).

105:13-15 When they went: This section is an overview of the history of Israel, probably written after the return of the exiles from Babylon (Ps. 147). This is not a necessary conclusion, but it appears likely. The major theme of the poem is God's faithfulness to His people in their early history. My anointed ones: The parallel term My prophets suggests that these are the leaders of Israel—the kings and priests.

105:17 The experiences of Joseph occupy a long section of the Book of Genesis (Gen. 37-50). Here Joseph's story is recounted as poetry and song.

105:26 The psalmist recites the history of the plagues to demonstrate the Lord's power. The plagues took place within time and space; they were the action of God with humans in the real world. But the verses of this psalm are not historical prose; they are a poetic version of the events that capture the horror of it. The order of the plagues is not followed strictly, and only eight of the plagues are mentioned (Ex. 7-11).

PSALM 106

Joy in Forgiveness of Israel's Sins

Praise ¹ the LORD!

^a Oh, give thanks to the LORD, for He is good!
For His mercy endures forever.

2 Who can ² utter the mighty acts of the LORD?
Who can declare all His praise?

3 Blessed are those who keep justice,
And ³ he who ^b does righteousness at ^c all times!

4 ^d Remember me, O LORD, with the favor You have toward Your people.
Oh, visit me with Your salvation,

5 That I may see the benefit of Your chosen ones,
That I may rejoice in the gladness of Your nation,

That I may glory with ⁴ Your inheritance.

6 ^e We have sinned with our fathers,
We have committed iniquity,
We have done wickedly.

105:43, 44 with gladness: This poem celebrates the joy of the Lord in His acts of deliverance. gave them the lands: The psalm was probably composed after the exile in Babylon. A celebration of God's gift of land would have been a tremendous source of encouragement to the people who had just returned to the land.

Psalm 106, a wisdom psalm, rehearses much of the same history covered in Ps. 105. The two poems are companions, although their perspectives are different. Psalm 106 emphasizes the rebellion of the people despite the unflagging goodness of God. If Ps. 105 is about remembering, Ps. 106 is about forgetting—specifically God's people forgetting His mercies. This is a psalm of praise (as is Ps. 105), in that it calls for the praise of God despite the short memories of His people. The structure of Ps. 106 is: (1) a call to praise God (v. 1); (2) a report on the status of the present generation (vv. 2–15); (3) a recitation of the works of God on behalf of earlier generations (vv. 16–43); (4) a concluding appeal (vv. 44–47); (5) words of praise to conclude Book IV of the Psalms (v. 48).

106:1–4 Oh, give thanks to the Lord: The words of v. 1 and the general language of praise in v. 2 connect this poem with Ps. 105 as a set (105:1, 2). Possibly both psalms were written by the same poet and were designed to go together, since this psalm builds on the theme of remembering. Remember me seems to be a personal prayer based on the recitation of Israel's history in Ps. 105.

106:6 We have sinned with our fathers: The confession of sin comes without warning. This is a psalm of community penitence. The connection of the present generation to the sins of the fathers is ominous. Would the present generation have to suffer the misfortunes and judgments that God brought upon their fathers?

Two Sides of the Coin

"Think positive" is the message preached from many pulpits today. And for good reason: The message of salvation in Christ is good, positive news in a world that sometimes seems more and more depressing by the day.

However, before we can fully embrace the good news about God's Son, we must first accept the bad news about our own sin. Psalm 106 is the flip side of Ps. 105. Both recall Israel's history. But whereas Ps. 105 is an enthusiastic celebration of the Lord's faithfulness, Ps. 106 focuses on the continuing unfaithfulness of His people. Still, the piece is not without hope: The Lord remains committed to mercy, forgiveness, and doing the mighty wonders necessary to sustain His wayward children (106:44–46). No wonder the psalm concludes with a blessing for the Lord "from everlasting to everlasting" (106:48).

If Ps. 105 stood alone, the forgetful student of history might assume that God swept His people into the Promised Land with no setbacks or opposition. But Ps. 106 puts things in perspective. As we look at that same history, it confronts us with the ugly face of sin and shows why people (and nations) so badly need forgiveness. Thus Ps. 105 and 106 show the two realities involved in salvation: sin and grace. Focusing on either one without the other will lead to distortion.

- 7 Our fathers in Egypt did not understand Your wonders;
They did not remember the multitude of Your mercies, fBut rebelled by the sea—the Red Sea.
- 8 Nevertheless He saved them for His name's sake, gThat He might make His mighty power known.
- 9 hHe rebuked the Red Sea also, and it dried up;
So iHe led them through the depths,
As through the wilderness.
- 10 He j saved them from the hand of him who hated them,
And redeemed them from the hand of the enemy.
- 11 kThe waters covered their enemies;
There was not one of them left.
- 12 lThen they believed His words;
They sang His praise.
- 13mThey soon forgot His works;
They did not wait for His counsel,
- 14nBut lusted exceedingly in the wilderness,
And tested God in the desert.
- 15 oAnd He gave them their request,
But p sent leanness into their soul.
- 16 When q they envied Moses in the camp,
And Aaron the saint of the LORD,
- 17 rThe earth opened up and swallowed Dathan,
And covered the faction of Abiram.
- 18 sA fire was kindled in their company;
The flame burned up the wicked.
- 19 tThey made a calf in Horeb,
And worshiped the molded image.
- 20 Thus u they changed their glory
Into the image of an ox that eats grass.
- 21 They forgot God their Savior,
Who had done great things in Egypt,

- 22 Wondrous works in the land of Ham,
Awesome things by the Red Sea.
- 23 v Therefore He said that He would destroy them,
Had not Moses His chosen one
w stood before Him in the breach,
To turn away His wrath, lest He destroy them.
- 24 Then they despised x the pleasant land;
They y did not believe His word,
- 25 z But complained in their tents,
And did not heed the voice of the LORD.
- 26 a Therefore He raised His hand in an oath against them,
b To c overthrow them in the wilderness,
- 27 d To e overthrow their descendants among the f nations,
And to scatter them in the lands.
- 28 g They joined themselves also to Baal of Peor,
And ate sacrifices h made to the dead.
- 29 Thus they provoked Him to anger with their deeds,
And the plague broke out among them.
- 30 i Then Phinehas stood up and intervened,
And the plague was stopped.
- 31 And that was accounted to him j for righteousness
To all generations forevermore.
- 32 k They angered Him also at the waters of l strife,
m So that it went ill with Moses on account of them;
- 33 n Because they rebelled against His Spirit,
So that he spoke rashly with his lips.

106:8-12 God knew that His people would be faithless repeatedly, yet He saved them for His name's sake. The crossing of the waters of the Red Sea was not mentioned in Ps. 105 but is included here. Then they believed: The people were often faithless; but they had moments of true faith and performed actions of true praise.

106:13-15 They soon forgot: These words contrast dramatically with the emphasis of Ps. 105, which may indicate that the two psalms were written by the same poet and designed to go together. He gave them their request: Several times God gave the people what they thought they wanted, but with the gift came His judgment on their sin.

106:17 The rebellion of Dathan and Abiram is described in Num. 16.

106:19, 20 The story of the gold calf is recorded in Ex. 32. changed their glory: In exchange for the living God, the people accepted an image of an ox.

106:24 The fact that they despised the pleasant land is regarded as a result of their unbelief and rejection of God's good gift. God's judgment (Num. 13; 14) was fully deserved.

106:28-30 Baal of Peor refers to the incident described in Num. 25, following the encounter of Balaam and Balak at Moab. However, this psalm adds a new detail to the story: eating sacrifices offered to the dead. Phinehas, one of the great champions of God in the OT, is celebrated in this poem. As Abraham's faith was accounted to him for righteousness (Gen. 15:6), so was the action of Phinehas (Num. 25).

106:32, 33 Waters of strife is a reference to Meribah (95:8; Num. 20:1-13). Here the sin of Moses is called "speaking rashly." In Num. 20:12, God specifically identified Moses' sin as dishonoring Him before the people by not trusting Him. By not following God's command "to speak" to the rock, Moses had not modeled proper obedience and respect for God's command.

- ³⁴ ^jThey did not destroy the peoples,

Book Five: Psalms 107–150

PSALM 107

Thanksgiving to the LORD for His Great Works of Deliverance

- Oh, ^agive thanks to the LORD, for He
 is good!
 For His ¹mercy endures forever.
² Let the redeemed of the LORD say so,
 Whom He has redeemed from the hand of the enemy,
³ And ^bgathered out of the lands,
 From the east and from the west,
 From the north and from the south.
⁴ They wandered in ^cthe wilderness in a desolate way;
 They found no city to dwell in.

106:34–39 God's judgment on Israel in Canaan was a result of the Israelites' failure to destroy the peoples. If the Canaanites had been driven out of the land, the people of Israel might never have succumbed to the idolatry that marked their existence for hundreds of years. Instead, the Israelites learned to worship the Canaanite idols. They participated in the worst aspects of their religion and played the harlot against God their Redeemer.

106:40 The wrath of the LORD must be viewed in the context of His long-standing mercy and forbearance. There was a long history of rebellion in the face of His gracious provision before God became enraged. Yet even in the midst of His wrath, God's merciful nature was evident. He remained faithful to His covenant with His people even during their rebellion.

106:47 The words of appeal save us are buttressed with the words O LORD our God. Though the people had been faithless, the LORD was still their God. If they would return to Him, they would have a home in His mercy and a promise of eventual triumph.

106:48 Blessed be the LORD God of Israel: This verse is an addition to Ps. 106 that forms the concluding verse of Book IV of the Psalms. It is a beautiful liturgical call for the people together to bless their faithful God.

Psalm 107, a wisdom psalm, shares the form and many of the same themes as Ps. 105 and 106. The fact that this psalm begins Book V of the Psalms, however, suggests that it may not have been written as a companion psalm to the previous two psalms. Psalm 107 reviews God's actions in the experiences of His people, using illustrations not found in the narrative of the Pentateuch. The psalm begins and concludes with appeals to trust in the "loyal love" of God. The structure of the psalm is: (1) a celebration of God's enduring loyal love (vv. 1–3); (2) affirmation that God meets the needs of those who wander in the wilderness (vv. 4–9); (3) assurance that God delivers those in exile or in prison (vv. 10–16); (4) a declaration that God saves the foolish who call to Him (vv. 17–22); (5) God's salvation of those caught in storms (vv. 23–32); (6) God's provision for those in barren lands (vv. 33–38); (7) an affirmation that God multiplies peoples who are diminished (vv. 39–42); (8) a call to rediscover the loyal love of God (v. 43).

107:1 Oh, give thanks to the LORD: The beginning of this psalm links it to the two preceding poems (105:1; 106:1). The key point of this psalm is that God's mercy endures forever. He is always willing to restore those who call on Him.

107:4–9 They wandered in the wilderness: This may refer to the historical experience of Israel in the desert of Sinai. It also can apply to any group of dispersed Hebrew people away from the mercies of God. Oh, that men would give thanks to the LORD: These words are a refrain throughout the psalm, exhorting the reader to thank God for His mercy (vv. 15, 21, 31). He satisfies: This is the point that every generation of believers needs to remember. We will never discover anything more satisfying than the LORD, who will meet all our needs.

And dry land into watersprings.

107:10 Those who sat in darkness refers to prisoners. Those who know the Lord will call out to Him in their distress, even though it may have been their own rebellion that caused the distress. The mercy of God is demonstrated in His acts of deliverance, acts that call for renewed praise to Him for His goodness.

107:17 Fools is a harsh word that emphasizes moral failure (Prov. 1:7; 15:5). These people deserved the trouble they suffered. Yet they too may call upon the Lord, and He will deliver and restore them.

107:33–35 He turns rivers into a wilderness: Because of the people's sinfulness, God may bring curses on the land and afflict people with harsh circumstances in order to drive them back into His loving arms (1 Kin. 17:1–7). turns a wilderness into pools of water: When His people cried to Him for assistance, God restored the fertility of the land (Deut. 30:1–10; Ruth 1:6).

John 15:25 ☆

107:43 Whoever is wise: There is no wisdom apart from centering in and responding to the love of God. The psalmist exhorts the readers to review God's history of delivering those in trouble, and to praise His great love.

Psalm 108, a psalm of trust, reveals the assurance a person can have when the Lord is his or her God. The psalm is actually a medley of two other psalms of David. Verses 1-5 are from 57:7-11, and vv. 6-13 are from 60:5-12. Since David is the author of both of these psalms, the verses of this psalm may be ascribed to him as well, even if the arrangement may have been the work of an anonymous editor. As this psalm shows, there was considerable reworking of some parts of the Book of Psalms so that the psalms could be used in the varying circumstances of temple worship.

108:2 I will awaken the dawn: The psalmist wanted to sing to the Lord before the sun rose. The prospect of a sleepless night did not deter him from praise and thanksgiving.

108:7 The remarkable fact about the words I will rejoice is that they are spoken by God. The Lord has pleasure in delivering His people and giving them victory: He celebrates His deliverance of them.

Psalm 109, a psalm of lament, pays particular attention to the psalmist's enemies. As a result, this poem may also be regarded as an imprecatory psalm. The structure is: (1) a call for God not to be silent in the midst of the attacks from the psalmist's enemies (vv. 1-5); (2) a call for God to bring judgment on the wicked (vv. 6-20); (3) a call for God to come to the aid of the innocent (vv. 21-29); (4) a determination to praise the Lord (vv. 30, 31).

109:1-3 The call to not keep silent is a regular feature of the lament psalms. fought against me without a cause: The psalmist declares his innocence and insists that his enemies have rewarded his prayers with evil, his love with hatred.

- 4 In return for my love they are my accusers,
But I give myself to prayer.
- 5 Thus ^dthey have rewarded me evil for good,
And hatred for my love.
- 6 Set a wicked man over him,
And let ^ean ¹accuser stand at his right hand.
- 7 When he is judged, let him be found guilty,
And ^flet his prayer become sin.
- 8 Let his days be ^gfew,

And his wife a widow.
- 10 Let his children ²continually be vagabonds, and beg;
Let them ³seek their bread also from their desolate places.
- 11 ^jLet the creditor seize all that he has,
And let strangers plunder his labor.
- 12 Let there be none to extend mercy to him,
Nor let there be any to favor his fatherless children.
- 13 ^kLet his ⁴posterity be cut off,
And in the generation following let their ^lname be blotted out.
- 14^mLet the iniquity of his fathers be remembered before the LORD,
And let not the sin of his mother ⁿbe blotted out.
- 15 Let them be continually before the LORD,
That He may ^ocut off the memory of them from the earth;
- 16 Because he did not remember to show mercy,
But persecuted the poor and needy man,
That he might even slay the ^pbroken in heart.
- 17 ^qAs he loved cursing, so let it come to him;
As he did not delight in blessing, so let it be far from him.

- 29 ^z Let my accusers be clothed with shame,
And let them cover themselves with their own disgrace as with a mantle.
- 30 I will greatly praise the LORD with my mouth;
Yes, ^aI will praise Him among the multitude.

109:6–8 Set a wicked man over him: Here the psalm takes a decidedly negative tone. The description of the wife of the enemy becoming an impoverished widow and the children becoming beggars seems particularly harsh. However, the psalmist directs these strong requests to the Lord; he does not actually take the sword into his own hand. He may feel compelled to vent his anger in words, but the psalmist understands that vengeance itself belongs to the Lord. let another take his office: These words (along with the words of 69:25) are quoted in Acts 1:20 as having been fulfilled in the replacement of Judas Iscariot.

109:14–16 Let the iniquity of his fathers be remembered: Although the psalmist's words may seem extremely hostile, he is simply asking that his enemy's evil actions be judged. The poor are not those without wealth so much as those without protection or defenders.

109:21 The poet asks for action that would befit God's name, a name associated with righteousness (23:3). His appeal is to God's mercy or "loyal love." The poet describes himself as a wasted, hollow shell of a man, as in 22:6–8. The intensity of the psalmist's attacks on his enemies can be explained in part by the intensity of his own afflictions, as described in these verses.

109:27 That they may know: Even in the psalmist's intense emotional state, he wants to see the name of God defended, proclaimed, and honored. The Psalms always lead to the praise of God, even from the depths of desperate circumstances.

109:30, 31 The poet makes his vow of praise for the deliverance he knows that the Lord will provide. This vow to praise God is a characteristic of many of the psalms. He shall stand at the right hand of the poor: See 142:4 for a description of God as a shield at one's right hand.

- 31 For ^bHe shall stand at the right hand of the poor,
To save him from those ⁵who condemn him.

^h [Zech. 6:13] ⁱ [Heb. 5:6, 10; 6:20] ☆

Psalm 110, a royal psalm, is one of the most directly messianic of all the psalms. It should be read in conjunction with other messianic psalms such as Ps. 2; 24. Jesus Himself identified David as the writer of this psalm, as the title also indicates. Jesus' interpretation of this psalm is crucial for unlocking the psalm's meaning (Matt. 22:41–45; Mark 12:35–37; Luke 20:41–44; compare Peter's exposition of the psalm in Acts 2:34–36). The interpretative key to the psalm lies in the identification of “my Lord” in v. 1. Jesus asserted that in v. 1, David was speaking of someone greater than himself. Since no ordinary son of David could be greater than him, “my Lord” of v. 1 refers to the coming Messiah, God's Son. Hence this psalm describes a conversation between God the Father and God the Son (v. 1), in which the Father grants the Son royal and priestly honors. The structure of this brief psalm is as follows: (1) God's command to the Son to sit at His right hand (v. 1); (2) God's command to the Son to rule in the midst of His enemies (vv. 2, 3); (3) God's appointment of the Son to be a priest forever (v. 4); (4) God's description of the battle the Son must wage to win His kingdom (vv. 5–7).

110:1 The LORD is the Hebrew name Yahweh and refers to God the Father. to my Lord: According to Jesus' interpretation of the passage (Matt. 22:41–45; Mark 12:35–37; Luke 20:41–44), this is a reference to the Son of God in heaven in the presence of the Father. David himself confesses the Son to be his Lord, that is, his master or sovereign. at My right hand: This position of high honor beside the Father was given to the Savior upon His resurrection and ascension (Acts 2:33–36; 1 Cor. 15:20–28; Col. 3:1; Heb. 1:13). The Savior's placing His feet on His foes depicts the utter defeat of the enemies of Christ. Paul too describes this complete victory of Jesus (1 Cor. 15:25, 26; Eph. 1:22, 23).

110:2, 3 Rule: The Father commands the Son to take His kingdom back from His enemies. The outcome of this final battle was determined long ago (47:3). Your people: The description in vv. 2, 3 of the people who join the coming King in His great battle accords well with that in Rev. 19:14. From the womb of the morning describes the volunteer army in their robust and fresh vigor; they are ready for a holy battle.

110:4 priest: David himself had performed some priestly functions, especially when he led the worship surrounding the arrival of the ark of the covenant (2 Sam 6:12–19). He even exercised some authority over the priests by supervising the Levites (1 Chr. 23:1–6). But here David envisions God appointing the coming Messiah to be a priest (Heb. 7). This was a source of confusion for Jews, as evidenced by the questions the NT Jews had about the Messiah. Some Dead Sea Scrolls give evidence that more than one Messiah was anticipated. According to Scripture, the Messiah would be a descendant of David (Is. 9:7), but this prophecy presents Him as a

The Messiah in the Psalms

For the Christian, perhaps nothing in the Psalms is more compelling than the prophecies that the book contains concerning the Lord Jesus Christ. Psalm 2 speaks of His coming reign; Ps. 22 describes His crucifixion; Ps. 16 speaks of His resurrection; Ps. 110 pictures the Savior at the right hand of the Father in heaven and as a Priest according to the order of Melchizedek. These and other celebrated passages have led many to speak of a category of messianic psalms.

Many psalms are messianic because they point forward to Jesus Christ. Some psalms are directly prophetic (Ps. 2; 110). Others prophetically foreshadow events related to Christ (compare the description of a wedding of a King in Ps. 45 with Heb. 1:8, 9; Rev. 19:6–8). But almost all the psalms point forward in some way to the coming Messiah and His eternal reign of righteousness (1:1–3; 41:9). For example, the words of 6:8, “Depart from me, all you workers of iniquity,” do not seem to have a messianic thrust to them. Yet they are messianic, for Jesus is recorded to have used these very words in His prophetic pronouncement of the final judgment (see Matt. 7:23). This indicates that David's experience recorded in Ps. 6 was in some manner prophetically linked to the experience of Jesus. In fact, David's language in the psalms regularly suggests the language of the great King to come—that is, Jesus Christ. Consider the words of 7:8:

The LORD shall judge the peoples;
Judge me, O LORD, according to my righteousness,
And according to my integrity within me.

These words are David's protest. Suffering without cause, he cried out to God to clear his name. But David, though innocent of the specific charge, was not innocent of every charge. There is only One whose innocence is absolute, whose freedom from sin is complete. Jesus is the One who can be judged on the basis of His righteousness alone. He alone could say these words without flinching, for these words depict His character.

The suffering of the poor (as in Ps. 13), the unjust attacks upon the righteous (as in Ps. 7), the idealization of justice (as in Ps. 15), the portrait of the righteous person (as in Ps. 1), the images of royalty (as in Ps. 45), even the pronouncements of curses on one's enemies (as in Ps. 6) are all motifs of the Messiah in the Psalms. Jesus is the coming One; many of the psalms are in fact His songs.

priest. This might seem to be a contradiction because true priests had to be descendants of Aaron. The solution to this problem is that the Messiah was a priest by divine declaration—not human descent. Melchizedek is first mentioned in Gen. 14:18–20. He was a true priest of the Most High God, unrelated to Abraham and who lived hundreds of years before Aaron. He became a prototype of the Messiah, whose priesthood was not based upon connection with the line of Aaron, but was by divine decree (Heb. 5:5–11; 6:20; 7:1–28).

110:5–7 The Savior King is in battle (vv. 2, 3), and the Father is His shield at His right hand (16:8; 142:4). God the Father assists the Son in the battle. execute kings: The rule of the King will be absolute, dramatic, and forceful. dead bodies: This image is elaborated in Rev. 19:19–21. He shall lift up the head: As the great Victor, the Son will hold His head high in triumph over all His enemies (3:3).

Psalm 111, a wisdom psalm, also serves as a psalm of praise. This psalm and the next are written as acrostics. The structure of Ps. 111 is: (1) a determination to praise God in the midst of the congregation (v. 1); (2) a description of the praise of God for His wonderful works towards His people (vv. 2–9); (3) a concluding word tying the nature of true wisdom to the fear of the Lord (v. 10).

111:2–9 The distinctive message of this section of the psalm is an appreciation of the works of the LORD for the way they cause the psalmist to glorify God. Creation calls attention to the Creator

(19:1–6; 104:1–35). Gracious and full of compassion may be rephrased as “wonderfully gracious.” Faith understands food and all other provisions as gifts of God. redemption: The psalmists constantly look back to the Exodus, but they also speak of that which was still to come—redemption in the Savior Jesus.

111:10 The fear of the LORD describes an obedient response of wonder and awe before the Most High God.

Psalm 112, a wisdom psalm, is very similar to Ps. 111; together they form a matched pair of acrostic poems. The structure of the poem is: (1) a determination to praise God (v. 1); (2) the praise of God based on His works with His people (vv. 2–9); (3) the defeat of the wicked (v. 10).

112:1 Praise the LORD: Like Ps. 111, this psalm begins with the Hebrew word hallelujah. It then picks up where Ps. 111 left off. Blessed, a word meaning “one who is manifestly happy,” is the same term with which the Book of Psalms begins.

112:2–9 His descendants will be mighty: Compare the blessings of vv. 2, 3 with the strong curses placed on the wicked in 109:6–13 to see the vivid contrast the Psalms make between the destinies of the wicked and the righteous. This black and white distinction is characteristic of the wisdom writers in Israel. The description of the good man in v. 5 is similar to the description in Ps. 15. The horn is a symbol of power. When used of a righteous person, it speaks of prominence and a lasting sense of worth in his or her life.

- 5 ^c A good man deals graciously and lends;
He will guide his affairs ^f with discretion.
- 6 Surely he will never be shaken;
^g The righteous will be in everlasting remembrance.
- 7 ^h He will not be afraid of evil tidings;
His heart is steadfast, trusting in the LORD.
- 8 His ⁱ heart is established;
^j He will not be afraid,
Until he ^k sees his desire upon his enemies.
- 9 He has dispersed abroad,
He has given to the poor;
His righteousness endures forever;
His ³ horn will be exalted with honor.
- 10 The wicked will see it and be grieved;
He will gnash his teeth and melt
away;
The desire of the wicked shall perish.

112:10 Here as in Ps. 1, the contrast between the righteous and the wicked is sharp and uncompromising. The desire of the righteous will prevail (v. 8), but the desire of the wicked will perish.

Psalm 113, a psalm of descriptive praise, begins and concludes with the words "Praise the LORD!" (in Hebrew, hallelujah). This psalm and Ps. 114 are regularly recited at the Passover Seder, a celebratory meal before the serving of the dinner. Ps. 115–118 are recited following the dinner. The structure of Ps. 113 is: (1) an exhortation to praise the name of the Lord (vv. 1–3); (2) a celebration of the transcendent glory and abundant mercy of the Lord (vv. 4–6); (3) illustrations of God's grace (vv. 7–9).

113:1–3 The name of the LORD refers to the person of God. In biblical times there was a close association between a person's name and his or her identity. The name symbolized the person. Therefore, praising the name of God centers one's thoughts on God's character. The rising of the sun is the east and its going down is the west. The verse does not mean at every time, from dawn to dusk, but in every place, from east to west, the name of God is to be praised.

113:4–6 high above all nations: Unlike the man-made gods of the ancient Middle East, the Lord is not limited to a certain tribe or territory. He is sovereign over all; He is Most High (7:17; 47:2). glory above the heavens: Not only is God supreme over all nations, His glory cannot be contained in the universe. His glory is not only beyond the universe, it is beyond the capacity of human language to fully describe. Perhaps this explains Paul's response to his visit above the heavens (2 Cor. 12:1–4). The rhetorical words who is like the LORD present the incomparability of God (Is. 40:25). Who humbles Himself: God draws near to us.

113:7 The poor might try to eke out their existence by scratching at rubbish heaps outside the city wall, that is, out of the dust. God's care for the poor and needy is a special interest in the Psalms. In this psalm we see a marvelous picture of salvation. While we scavenge about for significance, God's mercy in Jesus makes us citizens of heaven.

113:9 No image better conveys human emotional suffering in biblical times than that of the barren woman. In that time and culture, a barren woman was without significance and without joy. Note that God stoops down to bring her the joy for which she craves—happy children. Salvation is like that. Not only does God fill us with significance, but also with joy.

Psalm 114 celebrates Israel's deliverance from Egypt. There is a light, lively spirit to this poem that balances the heavier pacing and stronger theology of the first song of deliverance in Ex. 15. This poem is recited with Ps. 113 at Passover before the dinner is served. This psalm has three movements: (1) a celebration of Israel's redemption from Egypt (vv. 1, 2); (2) a characterization of Israel's enemies (vv. 3–6); (3) a celebration of the Lord who redeemed Israel (vv. 7, 8).

114:1, 2 The newly freed slaves left Egypt still refusing the strange language of their long-term captors. With this slight, Israel affirmed that true values in life were not to be found in the "glories of Egypt," but in the presence of the Lord. sanctuary: This verse anticipates the NT sense of God living among His people rather than in a shrine (Ezek. 37:26, 27; 2 Cor. 6:16–18).

114:3–6 The sea and the Jordan, the mountains and the hills, all appear as frightened animals before the awesome presence of the Lord, who is not mentioned until v. 7.

5 ^g What ails you, O sea, that you fled?
O Jordan, that you turned back?
6 O mountains, that you skipped like rams?
O little hills, like lambs?
7 Tremble, O earth, at the presence of the Lord,
At the presence of the God of
Jacob,
8 ^h Who turned the rock into a pool of water,
The flint into a fountain of waters.

PSALM 115

The Futility of Idols and the Trustworthiness of God

Not ^a unto us, O LORD, not unto us,
But to Your name give glory,
Because of Your mercy,
Because of Your truth.
2 Why should the ¹ Gentiles say,
^b“So where is their God?”
3 ^c But our God is in heaven;
He does whatever He pleases.

114:8 God not only delivered His people from Egypt, He also provided for their needs by bringing water from a rock (Ex. 17; Num. 20). Water was a physical blessing, but also a spiritual symbol of His salvation.
Psalm 115, a community psalm of praise, focuses on the glory of the Lord in the salvation of His people. Several sections of this psalm are used in Ps. 135. This poem has five movements: (1) a glorification of the Lord who alone deserves praise (vv. 1, 2); (2) a comparison of the false gods and the true, living God (vv. 3–8); (3) a litany of trust in the Lord (vv. 9–11); (4) a litany of blessing in the Lord (vv. 12–15); (5) a glorification of the Lord (vv. 16–18).

115:1, 2 Not unto us: People have a natural tendency to divert to themselves glory that belongs to God. This psalm redirects the glory to its proper focus, the Lord Himself. The Gentiles, who do not know God, are prone to insult believers in times of testing when God’s activity is not apparent (42:3).
115:3, 4 Like the prophets (Is. 40; Jer. 10), the psalms are derisive toward the idols of the nations. The psalmist denies any reality to the false gods created by people (135:15–18). In contrast to these “gods” that have to be carried about, propped up, and coddled, Israel exalted the God who is in heaven and who does whatever He pleases. He is the only God who can demand our worship.

Psalms of the Passover

The celebrants of the Passover today either read or sing Ps. 113–118 as part of the haggadah, the liturgical retelling of the story of God’s deliverance of Israel from Egypt. As part of the Passover commemoration of God’s saving acts during the Exodus, these psalms lead the celebrants through a cycle of praise to their God and Savior.

Before the Passover feast, celebrating Jews read or sing Ps. 113 and 114. Both psalms remarkably capture in poetry and song the major ideas of the prose liturgy that is also recited before the Passover meal. That is, they speak of God’s saving works at the time of the Exodus. The first psalm focuses the worshipers on the condescending grace of God. He is the merciful Redeemer who bends from heaven to meet the needs of His people. Then with the singing of Ps. 114, the Jews recall Israel’s deliverance from Egypt—the reason for the Passover celebration and the central act of God’s saving grace. This psalm begins on a light and happy note, the salvation of Israel, and ends on an arresting and somber note, the earth trembling before the Almighty Lord. It is a wonderful companion piece to the songs of Moses and Miriam in Ex. 15.

After the meal, Ps. 115–118; 136 are read or sung. Psalm 115 is similar to a responsive reading, which includes the community’s expression of trust in the Lord (vv. 1–8, 12, 13, 16–18) and the priest’s blessing (vv. 9–11, 14, 15). After declaring their confidence in God, the celebrants praise God for saving them with the words of Ps. 116. Then the two verses of Ps. 117 build on the previous psalm by exhorting all the nations to praise the Lord for His love and faithfulness. Psalm 118 continues the emphasis on God’s faithfulness by celebrating the Lord’s enduring love in a responsive or antiphonal song. The heart of this psalm prophetically describes God’s deliverance of a rejected person; the despised or rejected One is Jesus Himself (v. 22; Is. 53:3; Mark 12:1–12). Finally Ps. 136 concludes the Passover supper. With the recitation of the history of the Lord’s saving works, it continues the previous psalm’s refrain “For His mercy endures forever.” With these songs, the celebrants leave the meal with their hunger satisfied, their hearts filled with thankfulness, and their lips overflowing with praise to the Lord.

Thanksgiving for Deliverance from Death

- I ^a love the LORD, because He has heard
My voice and my supplications.
- ² Because He has inclined His ear to me, Therefore I will call upon Him as long as I live.
- 3 ^b The ¹ pains of death surrounded me,
And the ² pangs of Sheol ³ laid hold

- 4 Then I called upon the name of the LORD:
“O LORD, I implore You, deliver my soul!”
- 5 ^c Gracious is the LORD, and ^d righteous;
Yes, our God is merciful.
- 6 The LORD preserves the simple;
I was brought low, and He saved me.
- 7 Return to your ^e rest, O my soul,
For ^f the LORD has dealt bountifully with you.
- 8 ^g For You have delivered my soul from death,
My eyes from tears,
And my feet from falling.
- 9 I will walk before the LORD
^h In the land of the living.
- 10 ⁱ I believed, therefore I spoke,
“I am greatly afflicted.”
- 11 ^j I said in my haste,
^k “All men are liars.”

115:9–11 On the basis of the confession of the reality of God, the psalm commences a litany that encourages trust in God alone. With this litany the choir leader would exhort first Israel, then the house of Aaron, and finally all who fear the Lord to trust God. The refrain proclaims God's protective care over them: He is their help and their shield.

115:12–15 A second litany focuses on God's blessing. Not only is He the only God who is trustworthy, He also desires to bless all those who trust in Him.

115:16, 17 The plural heavens may refer to the dwelling place of God (2 Cor. 12:2). The dead: As in 6:5, this is not a theology of death, but of praise. It is the work of the living to praise God. When anyone dies, that voice is lost from the living choir. Praise the Lord: Many of the Passover psalms (Ps. 115–117) conclude with word hallelujah, the Hebrew for “praise the LORD.”

Psalms 116, a messianic psalm, is one of the Passover psalms (Ps. 113–118). This psalm most likely was recited by Jesus on the night of His arrest, the night He celebrated Passover with His disciples (Luke 22:15). The structure of the poem is: (1) a declaration of the psalmist's love for the Lord (vv. 1, 2); (2) an experience on the brink of death (vv. 3, 4); (3) praise for God (vv. 5–7); (4) the psalmist's deliverance from death (vv. 8–11); (5) a vow of praise to the Lord (vv. 12–14); (6) a reflection on the psalmist's deliverance (vv. 15–17); (7) payment of his vow of praise to the Lord (vv. 18, 19).

116:1, 2 The wording of I love the Lord in Hebrew suggests deep excitement and emotion. He has inclined His ear to me: As in 40:1, these words speak of the love of God: He bends from His place of glory to meet the needs of His people.

116:3 Pains of death describes the psalmist's harrowing experience of suffering that brought him seemingly to the brink of death (86:13). These words point prophetically to the Savior's anguish on the cross (Matt. 27:27–35).

116:6 In this context, simple means innocent, clean, or untarnished. In the Book of Proverbs, the word usually means naive or untested (Prov. 1:22).

116:9, 10 Paul quotes the words I believed, therefore I spoke in 2 Cor. 4:13, 14 as proof of the scriptural hope of the resurrection of the Savior Jesus. The belief in v. 10 is the hope, articulated in v. 9, that the psalmist would walk in the land of the living.

116:12, 13 With the phrase what shall I render, the psalmist vows to praise God in an audible and public manner among the people of faith. At Passover this psalm is read after the meal, immediately following the third cup of wine, called the cup of salvation. How appropriate that this Passover psalm would call to mind God's cup of salvation the very night that the Savior was betrayed (Matt. 26:27; Luke 22:14–22).

116:16, 17 The psalmist declares that he is God's servant. As Jesus demonstrated in the Upper Room celebration of the Passover, every true follower of Christ must become a servant. Just as Jesus the Son of God became a servant to His disciples and washed their feet, so every believer needs to serve others (John 13:1–17). The words of the psalm were prophetically fulfilled when they were sung by Jesus on the night before He was crucified. The term thanksgiving basically means “public acknowledgment.”

116:18 I will pay my vows: These words are evidently the concluding words of the psalmist, declaring his intention to make good on his promise to bring his offering of praise to the temple court.

Psalm 117 is a descriptive psalm of praise. It is the shortest psalm and has a simple structure: (1) a call for the nations to praise God (v. 1); (2) an enumeration of reasons for the nations to praise God (v. 2).

117:1 Laud, which means “to speak well of,” nicely parallels the term praise, which means “to be excitedly boastful about.” The Hebrew word for Gentiles means all people except Jews; the word for peoples speaks of smaller groups of people, along ethnic and language lines.

117:2 Merciful kindness, or “loyal love,” refers to God's faithfulness to His covenant promises to His people. The reason the nations are to give praise to God is found in His relationship with Israel.

Praise the LORD: The concluding Hallelujah is an appropriate shout of triumph in God's mercy.

Psalm 118, a psalm of declarative praise, is the climax of the group of psalms called the Passover psalms or Hallel psalms, after the Hebrew word for praise, hallel. Hallelujah comes from this word. These psalms were probably sung by the Savior on the night before His death. The structure of the poem is: (1) a call for the praise of God in the community of the redeemed (vv. 1–4); (2) a report of confidence in the Lord (vv. 5–9); (3) a report of God's deliverance in a time of trouble (vv. 10–14); (4) the praise of the Lord by the righteous (vv. 15–18); (5) the declaration of the psalmist that he would enter the gate of the city to praise the Lord (vv. 19–21); (6) the picture of the rejected cornerstone (vv. 22–24); (7) the shout of “Hosanna” by the people in praise of God (vv. 25, 26); (8) the continuing determination of the psalmist to bring his praise to the Lord (vv. 27, 28); (9) the renewed call for the praise of God (v. 29).

118:2 The liturgical instruction let Israel now say appears from time to time in the Psalms (Ps. 124; 129). This psalm was recited in antiphonal responses. The refrain praises God's mercy: His mercy endures forever.

118:5–8 The idea of distress in these psalms is a picture of constraint, constriction, or lack of room. Even when surrounded by impossible circumstances, the believer can proclaim the LORD is on my side. And if so, what can man do to me? See 56:4, 9; 94:17. If our trust is in the Lord's strength, we do not have to fear the reprisals of our enemies. confidence in princes: Although relying on other people is part of living, our ultimate trust can only be placed in the Lord God. Even powerful rulers are limited by their own mortality (146:3).

PSALM 119

Meditations on the Excellencies of the Word of God

N ALEPH

Blessed are the ¹undefiled in the way,
^a Who walk in the law of the LORD!

118:10, 11 The poet feels that he is alone and that the whole world is arrayed against him. The words I will destroy them are used three times in vv. 10–12; the repetition is for emphasis and finality. Even though the psalmist is completely encircled by his enemies, he knows that God will help him triumph over them.

118:13, 14 You pushed me: Translated literally, the Hebrew phrase means "pushing, you pushed me to make me fall." But the LORD helped me: Compare Paul's words in 2 Tim. 4:17, 18. Deliverance always comes from God. The Lord is not only our Helper, but also our strength and song. These words are a quotation from the "Song of Moses" (Ex. 15:2); they are also quoted in Is. 12:2. The God who delivered the Israelites by dividing the waters of the Red Sea was ready to deliver the psalmist from trouble.

118:15–17 The voice of rejoicing: The psalmist summons the people of God to join him in praise, just as in the days of the Exodus from Egypt. The slogan of redemption, the right hand of the LORD, is also a quotation from the Song of Moses (Ex. 15:6). It depicts God using His limitless strength to save the psalmist. I shall not die: The poet describes a near-death experience, as in 16:9–11.

118:19–21 Open to me the gates: The poet draws on the wording and imagery of Ps. 24. There is only One who can enter the gates of the Lord of His own accord—the perfect King of glory. gate of the LORD: It is possible that the literal reference is to the gate of Jerusalem, the city of God—or even to a gate of the temple. Jesus declared that He was the gate or door leading to salvation (see John 10:9).

118:22 The Savior is pictured as a discarded stone that is then reused as the most significant stone of all, the chief cornerstone. This potent imagery depicts Jesus' rejection by many (Is. 53:3; Mark 8:31; Luke 9:22; 17:25). Jesus elaborated on this prophetic verse with the parable of the vineyard owner. In this parable, the rejection included the murder of the owner's son—a reference to God's only Son (Mark 12:1–12). But even though the Savior was rejected, He was elevated to the right hand of God (Acts 7:56). Only God could do this marvelous and unexpected work. The cross, the symbol of Jesus' rejection, has become the symbol of our salvation (1 Cor. 1:18; Heb. 12:2).

118:25, 26 The words save now in Hebrew are more familiar in the transliteration "hosanna." These words are so significant that if the children had not shouted them aloud (see Matt. 21:16) when Jesus entered Jerusalem, the stones would have had to shout them (Luke 19:40). The words blessed is he who comes are the words the people used to bless Jesus on his triumphal entry into Jerusalem (Matt. 21:9; Mark 11:9; Luke 19:38). As God's only Son, Jesus is the One who comes in the name of the LORD; He is the One who reveals God the Father (John 14:8–11).

118:29 The closing words call the community to end the psalm as it began (v. 1)—with praise for the goodness and love of the Most High God.

Psalm 119, a wisdom psalm, is the premier song about the Torah (Ps. 19). It celebrates the Word of God in a way that is almost exhaustive. This very lengthy poem is an acoustic: For each of the 22 consonants in the Hebrew alphabet, there are eight verses beginning with that letter. Within the psalm, eight words for God’s Law occur again and again: law; testimonies; promise; precepts; statutes; commandments; judgments; word. The psalm uses the full meaning of all these words as it elaborates on the application of the Law of God to both daily life and Israel’s destiny. The Law is never considered a curse; it is always seen as a gift from God. The cumulative effect of this lengthy celebration of the Word of God is impressive: the psalmist cannot stop praising God for His mercy and goodness in providing His people with instructions for living. 119:1 The Hebrew word torah, translated law, basically means “instruction” or “direction.” Broadly it refers to all God’s instructions from Moses to the prophets. More strictly it refers to the first five books of the OT. The Law was never designed as a means of salvation; no one could be saved by keeping it. The Lord gave His law to a people with whom He had already graciously established a covenantal relationship (Ex. 20:2). Instead, the Law was the means for the Israelites to learn how to live as God’s holy people. The psalmists consistently describe the Law of God as a great blessing, for it was God’s gracious revelation to His people for their own good (Deut. 6:1–3). In the Law, God mercifully pointed out the right path to follow. Only mistaken legalistic interpretations of the Law prompted the negative statements concerning it in the NT. 119:16 The Hebrew word for statutes refers to something marked out as a boundary, something inscribed or engraved. Hence the word speaks of the permanence of the Law. Indeed God Himself had engraved it in stone (Ex. 24:12). The same word is often translated “decree” (2:7).

119:22 The Hebrew word translated testimonies is derived from the Hebrew verb meaning “to witness” or “to testify.” It refers to the Ten Commandments, called the “two tablets of the Testimony” (Ex. 31:18). The commandments were a testimony because they were a witness to the Israelites of their faithfulness or unfaithfulness to the covenant (Deut. 31:26).

119:37 The phrase Your way describes the will of God as a path, distinguished from other paths that lead to destruction (compare Prov. 2:8). God’s path leads to life, and His ways are a reflection of His good character.

119:44, 45 at liberty: The psalmist celebrates the freedom that is found in obeying God’s instruction. Although many think of laws, instructions, and commandments (v. 47) as limiting and restricting, the Law of God paradoxically frees us. It frees us from sin (v. 133) and gives us the peace that comes from following the Lord’s instructions (v. 165).

119:56 precepts: This Hebrew word means "an appointed thing," "something for which one is given charge." The word has the same idea as a commandment (v. 4), for both words assume that the One who commands has the authority "to take charge" or "to appoint."
119:61, 62 the wicked have bound me: The psalmist describes a hostile world in which even rulers persecute him (v. 161). His enemies not only fabricate lies about him (v. 69), but also seek his death (v. 87). Yet in the same breath by which the psalmist voices his concerns, he proclaims his allegiance to the Law. He will not abandon the truth even under pressure.

119:70–72 The psalmist regularly affirms his delight with the Law (vv. 25, 35, 47, 174). This is not the delight of a passive observer, but the delight of a disciple who has staked his life and security on a cause or principle. The psalmist maintains this type of complete commitment to the Law, which he consistently values over material wealth (vv. 14, 127, 162).
119:82 The Hebrew term for word is derived from the verb "to say." The term is a general word for God's Law, encompassing everything that the Lord has promised and spoken.

119:89–91 The stability of the universe, or the heaven, mirrors God's faithfulness, love, and care. But even more important, it reflects the permanence of God's laws and the fact that the universe serves Him.

119:97–103 The psalmist again and again proclaims his love for the Law (vv. 47, 119, 127, 159, 167). He compares his desire to a thirst for water (v. 131) and a craving for honey (v. 103). Fundamentally, his attraction to the Law is the result of his love for God Himself, his Teacher (vv. 102, 132).

119:105 Word means the utterance of the Lord God. That God speaks at all to His people indicates His wonderful grace. God's speech to His people is something the psalmists marvel at, for God has not spoken this way to any other nation (147:19, 20). Here the psalmist describes God's Word as light, that is, a guide for living. In v. 130, the light refers to understanding.

law

(Heb. torah) (1:2; 89:30; 119:97; Ex. 24:12) Strong's #8451

Although usually translated law, the noun torah is derived from the verb yarah, meaning "to teach," and should be understood as carrying the idea of "instruction." The term can refer to any set of regulations, such as the instructions of parents (Prov. 1:8) or of a psalmist (78:1). But usually the word refers to God's law. The writer of Ps. 119 expressed great love for God's law, because it led him to wisdom and righteousness (119:97–176). In the NT, Paul also praised God's law because it pointed out his sin and made him realize his desperate need for a Savior (Rom. 7:7).

119:127 Commandments pertain to anything the Lord God has ordered. The word alludes to God's authority to govern His people. The commandments of God are positive and negative, specific and general, restrictive and permissive. Yet most important, they help a person to identify his or her way in a world that is filled with confusion, sin, and error.

119:132 As Your custom: Here the psalmist identifies himself as a servant of the Lord and asks to be treated as one of His own. The psalmist's reference to God's mercy in this verse alludes to God's promise to show mercy to those who love Him (Ex. 20:6).

PSALM 120

Plea for Relief from Bitter Foes

A Song of Ascents.

In ^a my distress I cried to the LORD,
And He heard me.

119:149 To revive means “to cause to live.” With this word the psalmist begs God to transform his life, to breathe new life back into his soul. The psalmist does not want his obedience to be mechanical; he asks for a renewed spirit. The basis of his plea is God’s covenantal love and His just nature.

119:160 The word judgments is derived from the Hebrew word meaning “to judge.” God has given decisions that are like the calls of a referee or the legal rulings of a judge; He has rendered judgments on what is acceptable behavior and what actions will receive His blessing. God is the Judge over all, and His decisions establish true justice.

119:169–176 come before: This term usually refers to the presentation of an offering before God. The only offering the psalmist can present here is his cry for help. Although he has chosen the Law of God to live by, he has not always kept it. Therefore, the psalmist ends his lengthy poem with a confession and a plea for salvation. Psalm 120 is the first of a group of psalms called the Songs of Ascent (Ps. 120–134). This group of hymns was likely used by pilgrims making their way to Jerusalem to worship the Lord during the three annual national feasts—Passover, Pentecost, and Tabernacles (Lev. 23). As pilgrim families made the arduous journey to the holy city for festive worship, they would use these psalms as encouragement along the way. It is also possible that once they arrived in Jerusalem, they would sing these songs anew as they drew near the temple, reenacting their journey and affirming God’s blessing on their path. Ps. 120, a psalm of lament, focuses on the lies of the wicked that affect the righteous. The structure of the psalm is: (1) a report of deliverance and a prayer for help (vv. 1, 2); (2) a taunt of the adversary who attacks with lies (vv. 3, 4); (3) a lament concerning life in a hostile environment (vv. 5–7).

PSALM 122 1 ^a [Is. 2:3; Mic. 4:2]; Zech. 8:21

120:2, 3 lying lips: In the context of these psalms, the lying lips belong to those who assault the believers for their trust in the Lord (40:4). You false tongue: As in Ps. 12, the poet is distraught at the seeming power of the words of the wicked.

120:5–7 This section of the psalm reveals the intensity of the psalmist's distress—woe is me. His environment was hostile even to his faith. Meshech and Kedar are random examples of the pagan peoples among whom the psalmist had to live. I am for peace: This may have set the stage for believers to make their pilgrimage to Jerusalem. In Zion they would be among the people of God. In Jerusalem they would hear the words of truth. In the temple they could pray for the peace of God (122:6; 125:5; 128:6).

Psalm 121, a psalm of trust (Ps. 23), is the second song of ascent. Ps. 120 sets the stage for the Israelites' journey to the Holy City; this poem is a song “for the road.” The psalm may also have been designed for antiphonal response, like Ps. 118; 124; 129; 134; 135; 136. The structure of the poem is: (1) an affirmation that help is from God (vv. 1, 2); (2) a word of praise to God, who does not slumber (vv. 3, 4); (3) a word of praise to God who keeps His people (vv. 5, 6); (4) an affirmation that God will protect His people during their journeys (vv. 7, 8).

121:1, 2 The words lift up my eyes dramatically picture a traveler approaching the city of Jerusalem. On first sight of the city walls and the temple, the singer asks rhetorically where help is to be found. The answer is the strong affirmation: My help comes from the LORD.

121:3–6 He will not allow: It is possible that several sections of this brief poem were recited back and forth by small groups of pilgrims; there is an antiphonal quality to these verses (also Ps. 124). will not slumber: On the long journey to Jerusalem the people would have to stop and sleep, yet they would still be cared for by God. The language of confidence in this psalm indicates that it is about the psalmist's trust in the living Lord, his Protector. The phrase nor the moon indicates that at no time is God “off duty.” The Keeper of Israel is always present.

121:8 and even forevermore: In what appears to be an antiphonal response to the words of vv. 6, 7, the poem concludes with a renewed affirmation of God's ongoing protection in this life and the life to come (23:6).

Psalm 122, a psalm of Zion, is the third song of ascent. This poem describes the joy of the pilgrim on arriving at Jerusalem to worship God. This is one of four songs of ascent attributed to David (also Ps. 124; 131; 133). The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a description of the pilgrim's joy in coming to Jerusalem (vv. 1, 2); (2) a description of the beauty of Jerusalem (vv. 3–5); (3) a prayer for the peace of Jerusalem (vv. 6–9).

122:1 I was glad: The Hebrew verb for laughter and delight is used to describe the attitude of the pilgrim who arrives in Jerusalem to worship the Lord. The joy of the pilgrim in this psalm contrasts strongly with the sorrow of those who were not able to come to worship God, because of personal (42:1–3) or national exile (137:1–3).

122:3 The visitor is overwhelmed not just by the buildings of Jerusalem, but by the fact that the city was the place for the worship of God. Where the tribes go up: This refers to the three annual feasts of ancient Israel (Lev. 23), as well as to any time that an individual or family needed to worship the Lord in the Holy City.

122:4 The Testimony of Israel may refer to the ark of the covenant (Ex. 16:34). To give thanks means “to make a public declaration” or “to give public acknowledgment” (105:1). The people of God would praise God for His goodness in their own lives. Their vocal praises would accompany their offerings of animals, grain, wine, and oil.

122:5 thrones: Jerusalem was not only the central place for worship, it was also the site where civil judgments and decisions were made. Religious and civil issues were closely intertwined in the Law of God.

122:6–9 peace of Jerusalem: In the process of praying for the good of the city, the people came under God’s blessing. It is God’s desire for the city to have peace (125:5; 128:6). True peace will only come when the Prince of Peace returns to establish His rule (Ps. 98).

Because of the house: The determination of the pilgrim to seek the good of Jerusalem was based on the fact that the site was the central location for the worship of the Lord and the place God had chosen for Himself (1 Kin. 11:36).

Psalm 123, an individual psalm of lament, is the fourth song of ascent. This brief poem has two sections, as follows: (1) an affirmation that the people’s eyes are fixed on the Lord (vv. 1, 2); (2) a petition for the Lord to direct His attention to His people (vv. 3, 4).

123:1, 2 who dwell in the heavens: The temple was considered

God’s dwelling place (132:5, 13, 14); yet the Israelites also knew that the One who made the heavens did not live in buildings made by hands (113:4–6). As the eyes: True servants fix their eyes on their masters; similarly, our eyes should be fixed on God. The more we look to the Lord, the more we become like Him (2 Cor. 3:18). Not being distracted by the other things of this life causes us to win in the race of life (Heb. 12:1, 2).

123:3 The people who prayed for God’s mercy had to endure the contempt of their neighbors. Perhaps they were being mocked for their resolute faith in God at a time when it seemed that God was not answering their prayers.

Psalm 124, a psalm of declarative praise, is one of four songs of ascent attributed to David (see also Ps. 122; 131; 133). This psalm

mercy

(Heb. chanan) (102:14; 123:2; Ex. 33:19; Is. 26:10) Strong’s #2603

This term signifies an act of graciousness to someone in need, from a person of superior rank or circumstance. The writers of wisdom literature frequently commend showing mercy to the needy (112:5; Prov. 14:21, 31; 28:8). But most of the references to mercy in the Bible have to do with the direct agent of mercy. The Scripture records God’s mercy being sought on numerous occasions, often using the phrase familiar from the psalms of lament, “Have mercy on me” (4:1; 6:2; 25:16; 51:1; 86:16). God shows His graciousness in many ways, including the prevention of harm, the bestowal of family and possessions, and the communication of divine law (119:29, 124; Gen. 33:5, 11; 2 Kin. 13:23).

PSALM 126

A Joyful Return to Zion

A Song of Ascents.

- When ^athe LORD brought back ¹the captivity of Zion, ^bWe were like those who dream.
- 2 Then ^cour mouth was filled with laughter,
And our tongue with singing.
Then they said among the ²nations,
“The LORD has done great things for them.”
- 3 The LORD has done great things
for us,
And we are glad.
- 4 Bring back our captivity, O LORD,
As the streams in the South.

was likely designed to be read aloud as an antiphonal response (see also 118:1–4; compare Ps. 121; 129; 134; 135; 136). The structure of the poem is: (1) a call for the people to confess God’s deliverance (vv. 1–5); (2) a blessing on the Lord for His deliverance (vv. 6–8).

124:1, 2 The LORD who was on our side amplifies the meaning of the divine name of God (Ex. 3:14, 15). The wording of the Hebrew text is even more dramatic: “The LORD was for us.” The priests may have spoken the words let Israel now say as encouragement for the people to rehearse aloud their national experience (Ps. 129).

124:3 swallowed us alive: The poet describes his enemies first as ravenous beasts, then as raging waters; but God has defeated them all. As in other psalms, the reference to raging waters has a double source—the story of creation and the Canaanite myths concerning evil gods who were believed to be water deities (Ps. 93).

124:6, 7 Blessed be the LORD: Blessing God means identifying Him as the source of our blessing (103:2). as prey: The animal imagery of the enemies (v. 3) continues in this praise of God. The image of a helpless bird that has escaped a trap is common in the Psalms (111:1–3).

124:8 The words who made heaven and earth are similar to the words in 121:2; 134:3. These liturgical phrases were recited by the worshiping community during their journey to Jerusalem and when they arrived for corporate worship.

Psalm 125, a psalm of trust (Ps. 23), is also a song of Zion. This anonymous poem is the sixth song of ascent. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a celebration of God’s protection of the righteous (vv. 1, 2); (2) a declaration that the power of the wicked cannot endure (v. 3); (3) a prayer for the upright (v. 4); (4) a curse on the wicked and a call for the peace of Israel (v. 5).

125:1, 2 As in the other songs of Zion (Ps. 48), there is a deep belief in the invincibility of the city of Jerusalem because of the Lord’s choice of Mount Zion (1 Kin. 11:36). Likewise, the psalmist proclaims that those who trust in the Lord will endure. the mountains surround Jerusalem: Jerusalem is built on one of seven mountain peaks in the region. The mountains provide some protection for the city, since any invading army would have to march through arduous and dangerous mountain paths. Yet the city’s true protection comes from the Lord.

125:3 The scepter of wickedness is a symbol of the power of evil. This verse recalls the Lord’s promise that the gates of hell will not prevail against His church (Matt. 16:18). In this way, God in His mercy protects His people from participation in evil.

125:5 The phrase workers of iniquity is often found in the wisdom psalms (14:4); the Lord will oppose those who do evil. Peace: The psalm concludes with a prayer for God’s peace to rest on His people. The same prayer appears at the close of Ps. 128; it may be a shortened version of the priestly benediction recorded in Num. 6:24, 25.

Psalm 126, a song of Zion, is the seventh song of ascent. The distinctive element of this poem is that it comes from the time of the restoration of Jerusalem following the Babylonian captivity (compare Ps. 137). The mood of this psalm is one of sweet joy following the sorrows of long separation. The structure of the poem is: (1) a description of the return from captivity (vv. 1–3); (2) a prayer for God to complete the process of return (v. 4); (3) a comparison of the return from captivity to a long-delayed harvest (vv. 5, 6).

126:1 The return from Babylonian captivity had been anticipated for so long that it seemed like a dream to the returnees. Some of the people had waited an entire lifetime. The joy of the people could not be contained; their praise to God was unstoppable. The mood of this section is one of laughter and joy, of rejoicing in God’s salvation (Is. 12).

126:4 The people who returned were a small percentage of those who had been exiled. Bring back is the beginning of the prayer that God would complete the restoration of His people to their land. Ultimately, this is a prayer for the coming of Jesus, who will complete God’s work among His people.

Blessings of Those Who Fear the LORD

A Song of Ascents.

- Blessed ^ais every one who fears the

Who walks in His ways.
2 ^bWhen you eat the ¹labor of your hands,
You shall be happy, and it shall be ^cwell with you.
3 Your wife shall be ^dlike a fruitful vine
In the very heart of your house,
Your ^echildren ^flike olive plants
All around your table.
4 Behold, thus shall the man be blessed
Who fears the LORD.
5 ^gThe LORD bless you out of Zion,
And may you see the good of Jerusalem
All the days of your life.
6 Yes, may you ^hsee your children's children.
ⁱPeace be upon Israel!

126:5 The people of Judah had gone to Babylon in tears. Yet their sorrow reaped tremendous rewards; the Lord came to the rescue of His humbled people (34:18; Is. 66:2; Matt. 5:4). Upon their return to Jerusalem and Judah, they were reaping a harvest of rejoicing. Psalm 127, a wisdom psalm and the eighth song of ascent, is one of only two psalms attributed to Solomon (the other is Ps. 72). The structure of the poem is: (1) an exhortation about the vanity of an endeavor in which the Lord is not active (vv. 1, 2); (2) a celebration of the value of an endeavor in which the Lord is glorified (vv. 3–5). 127:1, 2 With the words unless the Lord builds, the psalmist asserts that life lived apart from God is not worth living, a view that this psalm shares with the Book of Ecclesiastes. Even building a house is useless if the Lord is not in the process. The phrase the bread of sorrows captures the essence of those removed from a sense of the Lord in their lives. The food that should give them strength for life and a zest for living only maintains them in their miserable state.

127:3–5 children are a heritage: Children are God's gifts (128:3). Like arrows: In ancient times, having many children was regarded as a symbol of strength. This was particularly true in an agricultural economy, since the extra hands of children increased the productivity of the farmer. A full quiver was a mark of God's blessing. The blessing of a home in ancient times gave a person a measure of pride in the community. The gate was the place where the elders of the city met and where citizens would convene (Ruth 4:1–12).

Psalm 128, a wisdom psalm, is also a psalm of Zion. Like Ps. 127, this poem addresses God's blessings in the home and family. The feasts of ancient Israel were family affairs. As families made their way to the holy city for the annual festivals, they would encounter other families and mutually celebrate the goodness of God in their lives. Psalm 128 is the ninth song of ascent. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a blessing on the righteous (v. 1); (2) a description of the blessing (vv. 2–4); (3) a prayer for the blessing (v. 5); (3) a blessing on the community (v. 6).

128:1 The word blessed describes the happiness of those who trust in the Lord and do His will (127:5). who fears the Lord: The fear of God is an attitude of respect, a response of reverence and wonder. It is the only appropriate response to our Creator and Redeemer.

128:2, 3 labor of your hands: There is a reward in work and a satisfaction in labor that is a blessing of God (Eccl. 3:9–13). Your wife: This psalm focuses on the godly man in ancient Israel. Bearing children was a mark of God's blessing on his wife. His children were regarded as precious provisions, like olive plants, in his home (127:3–5). In that time more children meant more people who could work in the fields and increase the general welfare of the family.

128:5, 6 The Lord bless you: This is the psalmist's prayer for the man who desires for his own family the blessings described in the psalm. children's children: This priestly prayer of blessing includes a desire for longevity and for happy posterity in the land. Only when God grants His peace on His people will the ideal conditions of family life be realized. Therefore, whoever prays for the blessing of God on a family also prays for the blessing of God's peace on the community as a whole (122:6–9; 125:5).

(Heb. 'esher) (84:12; 127:5; 144:15; Eccl. 10:17) Strong's #835

This Hebrew word can also mean "blessed" or "fortunate." As in 1:1, it is often used in congratulatory exclamation. The characteristic biblical beatitude concerns a person who trusts in the Lord and lives by His revelation (1:1, 2; 34:8; Prov. 16:20). The word is often associated with those who have found wisdom or express benevolence; thus over half of its occurrences are in Psalms, with several more in Proverbs (41:1; Prov. 3:13, 18; 14:21). Jesus begins the Sermon on the Mount with a list of beatitudes that conform to the OT pattern (see Matt. 5:3–12).

Waiting for the Redemption of the LORD

A Song of Ascents.

the morning.
⁷ⁱO Israel, hope in the LORD;
For ^jwith the LORD there is
mercy,
And with Him is abundant redemption.
⁸And ^kHe shall redeem Israel
From all his iniquities.

Psalm 129, a psalm of trust (Ps. 23), has its roots in the psalms of lament, for those psalms contain a section proclaiming trust in the Lord. The psalm has an antiphonal quality, calling for response and counter-response (compare 118:1–4; 124:1–5). This is the tenth song of ascent. Its structure is as follows: (1) a rehearsal of the afflictions of Israel (vv. 1–3); (2) an affirmation of the victory of God (v. 4); (3) a condemnation of the wicked who have afflicted Israel (vv. 5–8).

129:1–4 Many a time: The psalm begins with a liturgy of suffering, as the people of God acknowledge that throughout their history in the land they have been under constant assault by various peoples. With the words let Israel now say, the priest calls for the people to rehearse their history aloud (124:1). The plowers plowed: This imagery of the brutal treatment they suffered was especially vivid in an agrarian setting. Even in the midst of such cruel circumstances, the Lord was righteous. He remained faithful to His promises to His people and He fought for them.

129:5, 6 those who hate Zion: This begins the imprecation or cursing of the foes of Jerusalem. Shame is the intended end of the wicked (35:26). This is not just a desire for their embarrassment but for complete humiliation before the Lord. as the grass on the housetops: Sod was sometimes used on the roofs of houses. After a spring rain, there might be grass growing on the housetop. But this was not grass that flourished; it soon withered under the summer heat. The curse here is strong: May the enemies wither as quickly as rooftop grass.

Psalm 130 is a penitential psalm. Its placement following a psalm of imprecation (Ps. 129) is fitting. After all, a person might take such joy in the destruction of the wicked that he or she no longer would consider his or her own heart before the Lord. This psalm is the eleventh song of ascent. The structure is as follows: (1) a call for God's mercy (vv. 1, 2); (2) a recognition of God's forgiveness (vv. 3, 4); (3) an expectation of God's forgiveness (v. 5, 6); (4) a call for God's mercy on all (vv. 7, 8).

130:1 The poet shouts aloud to God from the depths of his own despair (Ps. 32; 51). In this case it was not enemies who were plowing his back (129:3), but his own sense of sin that was eating at the depths of his soul.

130:3, 4 God does not mark or keep count of our sins. Through the sacrificial system and ultimately in the provision of Jesus Christ, God dismissed His people's sins altogether (Mic. 7:19); He does not keep track—as an accountant would—of their sins. The grace of God in His provision for forgiveness is not to be taken lightly (Rom. 6:1, 2). The truly forgiven sinner realizes the magnitude of God's grace, remains grateful for Jesus' sacrifice for sins, and lives in the fear or awe of God (Ps. 128).

130:5, 6 I wait . . . I do hope: In these two verses, the poet repeats five times that his hope is in the Lord. This was a confident expectation in the God who is always faithful to His promises.

130:7, 8 The psalm moves from the experience of an individual to that of the community. After proclaiming his own hope, the psalmist exhorts the community of Israel to hope in the LORD. God is not only capable of delivering the individual, He also delivers the community of believers who hope in Him (131:3). He shall redeem: In the OT, the redemption of God's people refers to God's deliverance of His people from Egypt and from all other national foes, as well as to God's forgiveness of sins through the sacrificial system. The final redemption of all God's people came only in the death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus Christ (Gal. 3:13).

Psalm 131, a psalm of trust, is one of four songs of ascent attributed to David (also Ps. 122; 124; 133). The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a statement of humility (v. 1); (2) a portrait of trust (v. 2); (3) a call for hope (v. 3).

131:1 my heart is not haughty: David presents himself with genuine humility, a delicate balance between self-abasement and arrogant pride. From the life of David we know that he was not always able to keep this balance. But it was his desire, and at times—by God’s grace—a reality in his life.

131:2, 3 Like a weaned child: The image is that of a child who is no longer unsettled and discontented, but one who is at peace and trusting in his mother, who is there to comfort and to meet his needs. The words hope in the LORD recall 130:7.

Psalm 132, a royal psalm, is the thirteenth song of ascent. Like Ps. 89, this poem reflects in poetry God’s covenant with David (2 Sam. 7), in which He promised David a royal house—a promise that would be fulfilled in the coming of the great Savior King. It is possible that this psalm was written late in Israel’s history, after the exile in Babylon. This would explain the people’s call for God to remember His covenant with David. With no king on the royal throne of David, the people had great reason to call upon God to remember His promise. Psalm 132 is the longest of the songs of ascent and is sometimes classified as a messianic psalm. Its structure is as follows: (1) a call for God to remember His covenant with David (vv. 1–5); (2) the expectation of the fulfillment of the promise (vv. 6–9); (3) a prayer for God’s kingdom to come (v. 10); (4) a recitation of the promise yet to be fulfilled (vv. 11, 12); (5) an elaboration of God’s covenant with David (vv. 13–18).

132:1 If this psalm was written during the postexilic period, the words remember David have a significant meaning. During the years between the return of the people to Jerusalem and the birth of Jesus, there would have been a growing desire on the part of godly people for the Lord to restore David’s kingdom in fulfillment of the Lord’s promise.

132:2 The Mighty One of Jacob is a rare designation for God. Identical or similar expressions are found elsewhere in the Bible only in Gen. 49:24 and the Book of Isaiah (Is. 1:24; 49:26; 60:16). a place: The poet recalls David’s desire to build a temple for the Lord (2 Sam. 7:1, 2).

132:6–8 Ephrathah refers to the region of Bethlehem (Ruth 1:2). The temple in Jerusalem was regarded as the footstool of God, whose dwelling is in heaven (99:5). In the context of this psalm, the call arise, O LORD is a prayer for God to fulfill His covenant promise to place a great king on David’s throne (v. 1).

132:10 Do not turn away: Based on God’s promise to David (2 Sam. 7), the psalmist calls for God to fulfill His word to send His Anointed. This is a clarion call for the coming of the Savior King, Jesus.

132:11, 12 The words the LORD has sworn are a poetic recasting of the central words of the Davidic covenant in 2 Sam. 7:8–16 (see also 89:3, 4, 26–29). The ultimate fulfillment of these words is in Jesus Christ, the Son of David (Luke 1:32, 33; Acts 2:30). your sons: The shout for joy

(Heb. ranan) (51:14; 132:9; Is. 35:6) Strong’s #7442

This Hebrew word means “to utter loudly,” with the vast majority of references being to shouts of joy or hearty, joyful singing (35:27; 59:16; 71:23). Twice the term is used of the summons of wisdom and once for the boisterous clamoring of a drunk (78:65; Prov. 1:20; 8:3). About half of its occurrences are in Psalms and about one-fourth are in Isaiah. This word is associated with many terms for joy in the OT (32:11; Is. 49:13; Zech. 2:10). It is used to summon the heavens, the Gentiles, and most frequently the people of God—collectively and individually—to rejoice in God’s blessings (33:11; Deut. 32:43; Is. 44:23; Zech. 2:10). Our loud rejoicing in the Lord is based on His greatness and His goodness to us (5:11; 145:7; Lev. 9:24; Is. 12:6).

12 If your sons will keep My covenant
And My testimony which I shall teach them,
Their sons also shall sit upon your throne forevermore.”

13ⁿ For the LORD has chosen Zion;
He has desired it for His ⁴dwelling place:

PSALM 134

Praising the LORD in His House at Night

A Song of Ascents.

Behold, bless the LORD,
All you servants of the LORD,
Who by night stand in the house of the LORD!

2 ^a Lift up your hands in the sanctuary,
And bless the LORD.

3 The LORD who made heaven and earth

PSALM 135

Praise to God in Creation and Redemption

Praise the LORD!
Praise the name of the LORD;
^a Praise Him, O you servants of the LORD!

promise to David was specific in terms of God's intended blessings on faithful sons, His chastening of wayward sons, and His ultimate fulfillment in the anticipated coming Son.

132:13 God's choice of the Davidic line was also a choice of Zion as His dwelling place.

132:17 This verse celebrates God's covenant to send His Anointed One (v. 10). The words horn and lamp speak of the Messiah's authority and righteousness (Is. 11:1–5). His crown: The Messiah's kingdom will be established forever (Is. 9:7); His enemies will not withstand Him (Ps. 2).

Psalm 133 is one of four songs of ascent attributed to David (see Ps. 122; 124; 131). With its emphasis on the unity of the believers, this poem anticipates Jesus' prayer in John 17. The structure of the psalm is as follows: (1) a portrait of the beauty of unity (v. 1); (2) the blessing of unity (vv. 2, 3).

133:1, 2 Good and . . . pleasant may be rephrased as “great delight” or “good pleasure.” There is a sense of serene wonder in these words describing the unity of God's people. like the precious oil: Priests were anointed with a fragrant oil as a symbol of God's blessing on their holy office (Ex. 30:22–33). This psalm pictures the oil in such large quantity that it flows from the head to the beard to the garment of Aaron, who represented the priests of God. When God's people live together in unity, they experience God's blessing.

133:3 like the dew of Hermon: This high mountain to the north of Israel received such large amounts of water that it seemed to be a source of moisture for the lands below. Similarly, the blessings of God flow to His people. the blessing: The intent of God is for the good of His people in this life and in the life to come. The people of Israel rarely achieved the level of unity—or the level of blessing—that the poem describes. Ultimately, this is a portrait of the kingdom of God. One day there will be the spiritual unity of God's people that this poem describes.

Psalm 134 concludes the songs of ascent. This psalm was likely read as a responsive poem of praise (see also Ps. 118; 121; 124; 129; 135; 136). The structure of this brief poem is as follows: (1) the blessing of the priests by the people (vv. 1, 2); (2) the blessing of the people by the priests (v. 3).

134:1, 2 To bless the LORD is to identify Him as the source of all blessing (103:2). In this context, servants of the LORD refers to the priests of Israel who conducted their ministry at all hours in the temple (135:1, 2). The idea behind this blessing was that the people who had come to worship at the temple were getting ready to go home. They had come for a great festival but had to return to their regular work and routine. However, the priests remained at the holy temple. It was their continuing worship of the Lord that allowed God's blessing to continue on the nation as a whole. Lift up your hands: One of the standard postures for prayer in biblical times was to stand with hands stretched out toward heaven (1 Tim. 2:8). 134:3 Bless you from Zion may have been the grateful response of the priests to the people, their own blessing on the people from the holy temple.

Psalm 135, a psalm of descriptive praise that recalls ideas and motifs from several earlier psalms, may have been composed after the exile in Babylon. The psalm presents God's saving works during the Exodus and contains a scathing attack on idolatry, taken from Ps. 115. The beginning and ending of this poem are written in the pattern of liturgical praise. The structure is as follows: (1) a call for the priests to bless the name of the Lord (vv. 1–4); (2) praise for the

Thanksgiving to God for His Enduring Mercy

- Oh, ^a give thanks to the LORD, for He is good!
^b For His mercy endures forever.
2 Oh, give thanks to ^c the God of gods!
For His mercy endures forever.
3 Oh, give thanks to the Lord of lords!
For His mercy endures forever:

Lord who alone is the great and active God (vv. 5–7); (3) praise for the Lord's saving deeds (vv. 8–12); (4) praise for the Lord's saving name (vv. 13, 14); (5) contempt for the ineffective and powerless gods of the nations (vv. 15–18); (6) a call for the people to bless the name of the Lord (vv. 19–21).

135:1–4 you servants of the LORD: This psalm begins with a call for the priests of Israel to praise God in the temple (134:1, 2). The endearing term special treasure is used only here in the Psalms (see also Ex. 19:5; Deut. 7:6; 14:2).

135:6, 7 Whatever the LORD pleases: These words are adapted from 115:3. The words lightning for the rain appear to be a citation of Jer. 10:13, indicating that this psalm was written after the exile in Babylon. The point of this section is clear: God is active in all creation. Conversely, the gods of the nations are impotent (vv. 15–18).

135:8 firstborn of Egypt: Like Ps. 78, this psalm rehearses the saving events of the Exodus, culminating in the events of the Passover (Ex. 12:12). The defeat of Egypt was solely the work of the Lord. Israel was merely His instrument; the battle belonged to Him (Ex. 15:3).

135:13, 14 God's saving actions established His reputation. Because of them, His name and His fame spread throughout the world. He will have compassion: As in Ps. 147, those who faced the hardships of restoring themselves in the land needed to know of God's continuing promise of mercy (Ps. 132).

135:15 The idols of the nations: This verse is a citation from 115:4–8. It is a devastating satirical attack on pagan idolatry. The people who returned from Babylon had had their fill of the worship of idols; at long last, the people of Israel were ready to worship the only true God.

135:19, 20 To bless the LORD is to identify Him as the source of all blessings (103:2) and to be grateful for all that He has given. This section is a sustained liturgy for the people to encourage one another to praise the Lord.

Psalm 136 is the quintessential psalm of descriptive praise. The worship leader, perhaps a priest, would read the first part of each verse. The people would then respond with their praise centering on the mercy of God: "For His mercy endures forever." This psalm, known as the "Great Hallel," was often recited in the temple as the Passover lambs were being slain. Some include Ps. 135 and the psalms of ascents (Ps. 120–134) in the "Great Hallel." The pattern for the psalm is: (1) a call for the people to praise the Lord (vv. 1–3); (2) praise for the Lord who is the great Creator (vv. 4–9); (3) praise for the Lord who is the great Deliverer (vv. 10–22); (4) praise for the Lord who remembers His people forever (vv. 23–25); (5) a concluding call for the people to praise the Lord (v. 26).

136:1, 2 Give thanks means "to give public acknowledgment"; it is one of the principal words for praise in the Psalms (35:18; 105:1; 122:4). Mercy, which may also be translated "loyal love," is the most significant term used in the Psalms to describe the character of God. His mercy is "forever"; it is part of His eternal character. God of gods: The poet uses Hebrew superlatives to proclaim the Lord as the Supreme Deity.

BIBLE TIMES & CULTURE NOTES

Story Music

The use of the epic song in worship started with the Hebrews, centuries before the Greek epics were written (such as The Iliad and The Odyssey). The earliest Hebrew worship songs arose out of a religious feeling toward God at important moments. For instance, the first recorded appearance of story music was when Miriam, Moses' sister, sang with joy after the Jews escaped the Pharaoh's men (Ex. 15:19–21). Many of the Psalms were epics (e.g., Ps. 114; 136; 137) and the prophets sometimes burst forth in epic songs (e.g., Is. 26; Hab. 3). The Hebrews did not apply intricate melodies to their epics, the tonal range of their songs was probably not great, and they selected rhythm instruments rather than melodic instruments. However, it is clear that the Hebrews came to consider the story songs an essential part of their worship. Their music sprang from the soul of a people whose everyday life was religiously ordered.

PSALM 137

Longing for Zion in a Foreign Land

By the rivers of Babylon,
There we sat down, yea, we wept
When we remembered Zion.

136:4, 5 In the OT, the term great wonders is used exclusively for the awe-inspiring actions of God. God's creation of the universe is the grand display of His wisdom. The heavens give a clear presentation of the glory of God (19:1–6). Romans 1:20 teaches that God's "invisible attributes" are clearly seen through the things He has made.
136:10–13 struck Egypt: The poet refers to God's great acts of deliverance in bringing Israel from Egypt at the dawn of Israel's redemption (Ps. 78; 105; 135:8–12). strong hand: This is a slogan of redemption (118:15, 16; see Ex. 15:6). It has been said when God created the universe, it was the work of His fingers (8:3); but when He battled for the salvation of His people, it was with His strong right hand. divided the Red Sea: God brought Israel across the Jordan by dividing its waters, then used the same waters to destroy the pursuing army of Egypt.
136:19, 20 The poet's recital of Israel's history includes the capture of the lands east of the Jordan, including the territories of Sihon and Og (Num. 21). The result was the gift of the land of Canaan to the people of Israel.

136:23 It is possible that the words remembered us suggest the return of the people of Judah and Jerusalem to their land following the Babylonian captivity. Like Ps. 135, Ps. 136 may have been written after the Exile.
136:26 Oh, give thanks: The psalm ends as it begins, with celebration of God's continuing faithfulness to His people Israel and a call to thank Him for His goodness.
Psalm 137, a song of Zion, is also a particularly impassioned imprecatory psalm. Although no author is named, the psalm clearly shares with the Book of Lamentations the despair of those who suffered the destruction of Jerusalem by the Babylonians in 586 B.C. This troubling psalm is one of deeply felt emotion. Its pattern is as follows: (1) weeping in Babylon at the memory of the destruction

- 2 We hung our harps
Upon the willows in the midst of it.
- 3 For there those who carried us away captive asked of us a song,
And those who ^aplundered us
requested mirth,
Saying, “Sing us one of the songs of Zion!”
- 4 How shall we sing the LORD’s
song
In a foreign land?
- 5 If I forget you, O Jerusalem, Let my right hand forget its skill!
- 6 If I do not remember you, Let my ^btongue cling to the roof of my mouth—
If I do not exalt Jerusalem
Above my chief joy.
- 7 Remember, O LORD, against ^cthe sons of Edom
The day of Jerusalem,
Who said, ⁱ“Raze it, raze it,
To its very foundation!”
- 8 O daughter of Babylon, ^dwho are to be destroyed,
Happy the one ^ewho repays you as you have served us!
- 9 Happy the one who takes and ^fdashes
Your little ones against the rock!

PSALM 138

The LORD's Goodness to the Faithful

A Psalm of David.

- I will praise You with my whole heart;
^aBefore the gods I will sing praises to
You.
- 2 ^bI will worship ^ctoward Your holy temple,
And praise Your name
For Your lovingkindness and Your truth;
For You have ^dmagnified Your word above all Your name.
- 3 In the day when I cried out, You answered me,
And made me bold with strength in my soul.
- 4 ^eAll the kings of the earth shall praise
You, O LORD,
When they hear the words of Your mouth.
- 5 Yes, they shall sing of the ways of the LORD,
For great is the glory of the LORD.
- 6 ^fThough the LORD is on high,
Yet ^gHe regards the lowly;
But the proud He knows from afar.
- 7 ^hThough I walk in the midst of trouble, You will revive me;
You will stretch out Your hand
Against the wrath of my enemies,
And Your right hand will save me.

of Zion (vv. 1-3); (2) longing for Jerusalem and the restoration of song in praise of God (vv. 4-6); (3) desiring reprisals against Edom and Babylon for their destruction of Jerusalem (vv. 7-9).

137:1, 2 Babylon was one of the great empires in world history. When this psalm was written, the Jews were living there in involuntary exile. we wept: The emotions of the psalm are clearly indicated. The memory of Zion was painful for those in a foreign land (42:1-3). hung our harps: Making joyful music to the Lord in a foreign land was so difficult that the captives refused to make music at all. They took the words of their captors as taunts.

137:5, 6 If I forget you: It is difficult for the modern reader to appreciate the love for Zion among the people of OT faith. As we observe regularly in the Psalms, this love was not just for a place but for its function in their lives. It was in Jerusalem that the temple had been built. The place was holy because of God's presence there (2:6).

137:7 Remember, O LORD: After speaking with great passion about his own remembering and forgetting (vv. 4-6), the psalmist calls upon the Lord to remember the abominable actions of the people of Edom in the day of Jerusalem's trouble (see Ps. 129 for a similar sentiment). Raze it: The men of Edom leered and jeered as Jerusalem was shamefully leveled.

137:9 Happy is the same term of blessing that begins the first psalm (1:1; 146:5). The blessing would come on the army that finally destroyed the wicked city of Babylon, that had itself been used as a tool of judgment in the hands of Almighty God (Hab. 1:12-17).

Psalm 138 is a psalm of declarative praise attributed to David. The mood of this psalm contrasts strongly with that of Ps. 137. Its structure is as follows: (1) a declaration of praise to God because of an overwhelming answer to the prayer of the king (vv. 1-3); (2) a prophetic vision of a future time in which all kings of the earth will join in the praise of God (vv. 4-6); (3) a determination to continually trust in God (vv. 7, 8).

138:1, 2 As in many psalms, the poet begins his praise with a determination to involve his whole being (146:1). Before the gods: David is so confident in his faith in the Lord that he is determined to take the name of God into foreign territory. Your holy temple: The use of the word "temple" does not rule out David as the author of this or similar poems (15:1). The Hebrew term is a general one that would fit whatever building was in use in David's day. The term was also proper for later readers and singers of this psalm when the actual temple had been built.

138:4-6 David, as a king who believed in God, looked forward to a day when all the kings of the earth would share his experience. great is the glory of the LORD: This is another way of expressing the reality of the living God. regards the lowly: God comes to the humble because they will have regard for Him. Conversely, He distances Himself from the proud (86:14; 147:6).

138:7, 8 Though I walk: The poet is well aware that new troubles will confront him. He has confidence that God, who has blessed him in the experience of this psalm, will continue to bless his path. perfect: The same Hebrew verb is translated "perform" in 57:2. The point of the word is that God acts on behalf of His servants. Your mercy, O LORD, endures forever: This is a slight rewording of the refrain in Ps. 136.

8 ⁱThe LORD will ¹perfect that which concerns me;
Your mercy, O LORD, endures forever;
^jDo not forsake the works of Your

Psalm 139, attributed to David, is a wisdom psalm of descriptive praise. This mixture of wisdom and praise is not uncommon in the Psalms (see Ps. 145; 146). This poem describes the attributes of the Lord not as abstract qualities, but as active qualities by which He relates Himself to His people. The structure of the psalm is: (1) a description of God's intimate knowledge of His servant (vv. 1-6); (2) a celebration of God's presence with David (vv. 7-12); (3) a celebration of God's creation of David from the moment of conception (vv. 13-16); (4) a declaration that God's thoughts toward David are innumerable (vv. 17, 18); (5) a prayer for the punishment of God's enemies (vv. 19-22); (6) a prayer that God might search and lead David (vv. 23, 24).

139:1-5 You have searched me: God is active to search and test His servants. He knows our motives, desires, and words before they are expressed. In short, He knows His servants completely. But as v. 5 makes clear, the purpose of His intimate knowledge of His servants is protective and helpful, not judgmental and condemning. 139:7 There are two different ways in which the words where can I go can be understood. One is that David wanted to flee from the presence of God, but could not. The second view takes the words as a celebration of God's mercy, that there was no place in all creation where David, the servant of God, would find himself separated from God's presence.

The Sanctity of Life: Created in His Image

God places special value on human life (Gen. 1:26, 27; Ps. 8:4-6). Human life is sacred because the man and woman alone were created in the image of God, and that life deserves protection. God commands His people to protect and defend innocent human life (Ezek. 16:20, 21, 36, 38). Under the Mosaic Law, the murder of another person deserved punishment by death because of the value of the life that was destroyed (Gen. 9:6; Ex. 20:13).

Scripture extends this special status and protection to human life in every stage of development and need (Is. 46:3, 4). The unborn child shares in God's image (Ps. 139:13-16) and is protected under Old Testament law (Ex. 21:22-25). Believers are exhorted to defend and care for the sick, the elderly, and the poor (Lev. 19:32; Deut. 15:7, 8). No one is excluded from protection and care.

Throughout history this biblical view of the sanctity of all human life has faced opposition—most notably from those who advocate a “quality of life” viewpoint, suggesting that human life must possess certain qualities and abilities before it can be considered truly valuable and worthy of life sustenance. According to this distorted humanistic view, if the unborn child, the handicapped infant, or the elderly person does not possess these qualities, that individual is not entitled to the protection which Scripture or the Law would give.

The Bible rejects this “quality of life” view. The value of human life does not depend upon the person's functional abilities or independent viability but is assured because of the image of God which is found in every human life. God does not measure the quality of a human being before He bestows His image. God calls upon us to extend our care and compassion to every life He has created, in every stage of development and in every need.

Psalm 139:13-16 declares that an unborn child shares in God's image.

PSALM 140

Prayer for Deliverance from Evil Men

To the Chief Musician. A Psalm of David.

- Deliver me, O LORD, from evil men;
Preserve me from violent men,
2 Who plan evil things in their hearts;
²They continually gather together for war.
3 They sharpen their tongues like a

The ^bpoison of asps is under their

- 4 ^cKeep me, O LORD, from the hands of
the wicked;
Preserve me from violent men,
Who have purposed to make my steps stumble.

139:10–12 Your hand: The wording of v. 10 seems protective, suggesting that the psalm speaks of God's helpful presence. darkness: Here David stretches his imagination to the brink. Darkness refers to death or the "pit" (16:10). This is an expansion of the words of v. 8, "If I make my bed in hell." David suggests this as the one place in the universe where God would not be present. But even though God is opposed to all darkness, God would turn the darkness into light in order to find His servant David. As in 18:7–12, the Lord would overturn the structure of the universe to save the person who worshiped Him.

139:13–16 You formed my inward parts: David affirms that the work of God in his life extended back to his development in his mother's womb. You covered me may also be translated as "You wove me together," a description of the work of God creating the person in the mother's womb. I am fearfully and wonderfully made might be rephrased as "I am an awesome wonder" (Ps. 8). skillfully wrought: The development of the fetus was something quite mysterious to the ancients. To them, it was as though the fetus were being developed in the middle of the earth. The Hebrew word my substance indicates the embryo. in Your book: The idea is that the life of a person, and the structure and meaning of that person's life, are all established from the beginning by God.

139:19 slay the wicked: David desires a world in which there is no more evil, no more distraction, no more destruction. The enemies of God are David's own enemies because his life and thoughts are so closely tied to the Lord.

139:23, 24 Search me, O God: These words are similar to those of 19:14. David asks God to examine his thoughts and purge him of sin so that he might enter into everlasting life.

Psalms 140, a psalm of individual lament ascribed to David, is particularly concerned with the wicked. David's desire for the judgment of the Lord to come upon the wicked identifies this poem as an imprecatory psalm. The structure of Ps. 140 is as follows: (1) a petition that David be delivered from the wicked (vv. 1–3); (2) a petition that David be kept from the wicked (vv. 4, 5); (3) a confession of trust in the Lord (vv. 6–8); (4) a prayer for the punishment of the wicked (vv. 9–11); (5) a declaration that the Lord will deliver the afflicted (vv. 12, 13).

140:1 Deliver me: David cries out to the Lord for deliverance from the wicked, who continually harm the innocent. The words violent men are repeated in v. 4. The word violent describes people who are harsh and ruthless, who plan the destruction of the righteous. They are purposefully evil and will be satisfied only if they can participate in the destruction of God's people. But God is always ready to deliver His precious ones from their grasp.

5 The proud have hidden a ^dsnare for me, and cords;
They have spread a net by the wayside;
They have set traps for me. Selah

6 I said to the LORD: “You are my God;
Hear the voice of my supplications,
O LORD.

7 O God the Lord, the strength of my salvation,
You have ⁱcovered my head in the day of battle.

8 Do not grant, O LORD, the desires of the wicked;
Do not further his wicked scheme,
^e*Lest* they be exalted. Selah

9 “As for the head of those who surround me,
Let the evil of their lips cover them;
10 ^fLet burning coals fall upon them;
Let them be cast into the fire,
Into deep pits, that they rise not up again.

11 Let not a slanderer be established in the earth;
Let evil hunt the violent man to overthrow him.”

12 I know that the LORD will ^gmaintain
The cause of the afflicted,
And justice for the poor.

13 Surely the righteous shall give thanks to Your name;
The upright shall dwell in Your presence.

For still my prayer is against the deeds of the wicked.

And they hear my words, for they are sweet.

7 Our bones are scattered at the mouth of the grave,

8 But ^gmy eyes are upon You, O God the Lord;
In You I take refuge;
²Do not leave my soul destitute.

9 Keep me from ^hthe snares they have laid for me,
And from the traps of the workers of iniquity.

10 ⁱLet the wicked fall into their own nets,
While I escape safely.

140:6 With the words You are my God, David confesses his complete trust in the Lord even though he is surrounded by people plotting his destruction. On the basis of his trust, he now pleads with the Lord to deliver him.

140:10 Let burning coals fall upon them: Here David recalls the judgment of Sodom and Gomorrah (11:6; Gen. 19:12–29) and asks God to use this particular judgment on his enemies.

140:12, 13 The cause of the poor and the afflicted is of special interest to the Lord. He promises to uphold and comfort them (41:1; 72:4; 109:31; Luke 4:18; 6:20).

Psalm 141, an individual psalm of lament, is ascribed to David. In this case no particular event is cited as the cause for David’s distress. Because this poem records David’s desire for the judgment of his enemies, it falls into the category of the imprecatory psalms also. The structure is: (1) an introductory cry to the Lord (vv. 1, 2); (2) a prayer for a guard over David’s mouth (vv. 3, 4); (3) an acceptance of righteous rebuke (v. 5a); (4) a vision of the punishment of the wicked (vv. 5b–7); (5) a statement of confidence in the Lord (vv. 8–10).

141:1, 2 Lord, I cry out to you: David asks to be heard as he prays in the assembly of the righteous. As the smoke and aroma of incense rises to the Lord as something sweet and compelling, so David desires that his prayer will not be ignored. The lifting up of my hands: With this impressive gesture David is asking God to pay attention to his plea.

141:3 Set a guard: This is a prayer for wisdom, for restraining evil language, and for knowing the correct words to speak. David wanted to avoid any act of impiety, irreverence, or even idolatry; he did not want to offend God with anything he said.

141:5 With the words let the righteous strike me, David expresses his willingness to accept the judgment of the righteous; what bothers him is the instruction and judgment of the wicked. against the deeds of the wicked: As in Ps. 140, the wicked have brought David to his state of distress. He envisions a day when the wicked will be destroyed—their power will collapse and justice will reign in its place.

141:8 In light of the wicked’s strength, it is easy for us to fix our eyes on, or worry about, the wicked. It is also natural to focus on ourselves: we either become self-absorbed in our difficulties or exalt ourselves in our victories. But David fixes his eyes only on the Lord (2 Cor. 3:18; Heb. 12:2, 3).

An Earnest Appeal for Guidance and Deliverance

A Psalm of David.

- Hear my prayer, O LORD,
 Give ear to my supplications!
 In Your faithfulness answer me,
 And in Your righteousness.
- ² Do not enter into judgment with Your servant,
^aFor in Your sight no one living is

 My heart within me is distressed.
- ⁵ ^cI remember the days of old;
 I meditate on all Your works;
 I ²muse on the work of Your hands.
- ⁶ I spread out my hands to You;
^dMy soul longs for You like a thirsty land. Selah
- ⁷ Answer me speedily, O LORD;
 My spirit fails!
 Do not hide Your face from me, ^eLest I ³be like those who ⁴go down into the pit.

Psalm 142, a psalm of individual lament ascribed to David, provides a specific reference for the setting of the poem. The term the cave may refer to one of two occasions on which David hid from King Saul in a cave. One occurred in En Gedi (Ps. 57; 1 Sam. 24); the other at Adullam (1 Sam. 22:1, 2). The second may well be the setting for this poem of deep anguish. This was a time in David's life when it appeared that he was totally alone. In fact, he began to doubt whether even God was truly for him. But as the superscription indicates, David turned to the Lord in prayer. The structure of the psalm is: (1) David's cry for help from the cave of his despair (vv. 1, 2); (2) David's lament of distress that no one was on his side (vv. 3, 4); (3) David's confession of trust and petition for deliverance (vv. 5, 6); (4) David's vow of praise when God delivered him (v. 7).

142:1 I cry out: There is a significant emphasis on the vocal and desperate nature of David's lament in this psalm. With my voice may also be translated "aloud."

142:3-5 In the midst of his distress, David makes his preliminary confession of trust—God knew his path from the beginning. Look on my right hand: With enemies on every path, David screams aloud to God that he is defenseless. The armed soldier in ancient Israel probably would have had his spear or sword in his right hand and his shield in his left. The shield of one man would protect the right side of his neighbor. David cries that there is no one on his right side; he expects to find God there (3:3, 4). You are my refuge: In the midst of his pain, David renews his confession of trust that somehow God must be near. He then pleads with God to deliver him from his foes.

142:7 The cave that was intended as a place of refuge has become a place of confinement—a prison. The psalm ends with a vow that when God would deliver him from his awful experience, David would bring renewed praise to God in the worshiping community. Even though he is still in the midst of his distress, David is able to conclude with a prayer of faith: You shall deal bountifully with me.

Psalm 143, a psalm of individual lament ascribed to David, is similar in tone to other psalms of distress, particularly Ps. 6. Some scholars categorize Ps. 6 and 143 as penitential psalms. The structure of Ps. 143 is as follows: (1) a presentation of great personal distress (vv. 1-4); (2) a longing for former days of delight (vv. 5, 6); (3) prayers for deliverance (vv. 7-12).

143:2, 3 David asks God not to bring him into judgment, yet he does not confess his sins as in Ps. 32; 38. no one living is righteous: This is not so much a confession of sin as an observation that everyone is sinful. in darkness: The biblical metaphor of light and darkness begins in Gen. 1:2, 3. To live in darkness is similar to being in the pit (v. 7); this is the reason for the parallel to those who are already dead (Job 10:21, 22).

143:5, 6 the days of old: This is similar to 42:4, in which the psalmist remembers rejoicing in temple worship in times gone by. spread out my hands: This was one of the traditional postures for prayer in biblical times.

143:7, 8 the pit: Without a renewed sense of God's presence, described by the words, Your face, David believes that he is as good as dead. in the morning: Often in the psalms there is an expectation that an answer from God might come with the morning light (5:3; 30:5; 130:6).

8 Cause me to hear Your lovingkindness ^fin the morning,
For in You do I trust;
^gCause me to know the way in which I should walk,
For ^hI lift up my soul to You.

9 Deliver me, O LORD, from my enemies;
⁵In You I take shelter.

10 ⁱTeach me to do Your will,
For You are my God;
^jYour Spirit is good.
Lead me in ^kthe land of uprightness.

11 ^lRevive me, O LORD, for Your name's sake!
For Your righteousness' sake bring my soul out of trouble.

12 In Your mercy ^mcut ⁶off my enemies,
And destroy all those who afflict my 143:11, 12 for Your name's sake: The requests of the psalmists are often tied to various character traits of God. When we pray “in Jesus’ name,” we pray both in the authority of His name and in the character it represents. I am Your servant: To be a servant of the Lord is a position to which even kings might aspire. Since there is no greater Lord, there is no greater position than to be aligned with His purposes.

Psalm 144, a psalm of descriptive praise with overtones of lament and petition, is ascribed to David. This poem is similar to Ps. 18 in that it describes the salvation acts of the Lord in terms of great heavenly phenomena. It is also possible that this psalm was used in the training of the army (as was Ps. 149). Warfare in ancient Israel was tied closely to the worship of God. Deliverance from the enemy was not just a task for tough soldiers, it was a matter of active piety. The structure is as follows: (1) a confession of praise to God the great warrior (vv. 1, 2); (2) a description of the frailty of human beings (vv. 3, 4); (3) a description of the saving acts of God (vv. 5–8); (4) a determination to praise the Lord (vv. 9, 10); (5) a call for God’s continual deliverance of His people (vv. 11–15).

144:1 The Lord my Rock is often used in the Psalms to describe God as the fortress of His people. At times, the word is translated strength (18:1). David found in the Lord the protection and preparation he needed in times of battle.

144:3, 4 what is man: This is a quotation from 8:4, but without the stunning answer presented in 8:5. Here the rhetorical question is used to speak of the frailty of humans who are in need of God’s help. passing shadow: The sense of human frailty is illustrated dramatically in these words (102:2, 3).

144:6 The lightning of the Lord is a symbol of His judgment (97:4). Here David celebrates God’s righteous judgments, which he prays will be exercised against his evil foes.

144:9, 10 I will sing a new song is David’s vow to respond to God’s deliverance with renewed worship and praise (149:1). David: It is rare for these poems to mention the psalmist by name (18:50). David’s use of his own name indicated to later generations that this psalm arose out of actual experiences in his life.

144:11 lying words: The principal lie of the enemy was that the Lord could not save His people (Ps. 12).

144:12–15 The image of pillars seems to indicate health, beauty, and dignity. barns: Agricultural productivity was possible only in times of peace and would be meaningful only in times of national freedom. Happy is often translated “blessed” (1:1). Its use twice in v. 15 is dramatic. The happiness that David describes refers both to external well-being—in such a state—and to internal peace—whose God is the LORD.

- 14 *That our oxen may be well laden;
That there be no ⁵breaking in or going out;
That there be no outcry in our streets.*
15 ¹Happy are the people who are in such a state;
Happy are the people whose God is
the LORD!

Psalm 145, a wisdom psalm, is also a psalm of declarative praise. The poem is written in the form of an acrostic, with one verse for each letter of the Hebrew alphabet. The structure of the psalm is: (1) a focus on the greatness of the Lord (vv. 1–3); (2) an expectation of the ongoing praise of the Lord (vv. 4–7); (3) a focus on the character of the Lord (vv. 8, 9); (4) an expression concerning the kingdom of the Lord (vv. 10–13); (5) an acknowledgment of the grace of the Lord to all (vv. 14–16); (6) a focus on the righteous grace of the Lord (vv. 17–21).

145:3 The familiar words great is the LORD express God's grandeur in the universe and remind us of how small we are in His presence. The fact that frail humans are used to praise God is a marvel to the psalmist.

145:4 One generation . . . to another: The expectation is that the message of God's wonder and mercy will be known throughout the land and will be taught for generations.

145:7 The word memory may refer to the divine name of God. The Hebrew term for memory is translated "memorial" in Ex. 3:15.

145:8 God had described Himself as gracious and full of compassion (Ex. 34:6, 7; Num. 14:18). David uses God's own words to praise Him for His merciful character (86:5, 15; 111:4; 112:4).

145:10–13 All Your works echoes the words of 19:1–3. All that God has made bears the marks of His wonder (111:2). They shall speak: The task of the righteous is to declare the works of the Lord to all people. an everlasting kingdom: Because the rule of God is eternal, the message of His wonders needs to be delivered to all people in the present time.

145:14 The words upholds all who fall describe the ongoing actions of God on behalf of the needy in a way that may suggest that these words are absolute and invariable. Yet the same people who sang the songs of praise also cried out to the Lord with the psalms of lament. In a world in which life is tough, the psalms delight in affirming that God is good and that there is no limit to His power, His love, and His concern for His people. The psalms celebrate each example of God's saving mercy and each example of His grace. Time after time, instance after instance—the whole becomes a beautiful tapestry of His ongoing grace.

145:17 The pairing of righteous and gracious is a powerful demonstration of the character of God. His righteousness leads to extol

(Heb. rum) (30:1; 34:3; 145:1; Ex. 15:2; Is. 25:1) Strong's #7311

The Hebrew word translated extol here is one of the many Hebrew words for praise in the Psalms. The specific meaning of this word is "to hold high" or "to esteem greatly." In contrast to King David's praise of the Lord as the exalted One (99:9; 2 Sam. 22:47), Lucifer's downfall came in trying to exalt himself above God (Is. 14:13). Thus in a negative sense, the word rum can mean "haughty" (see 2 Sam. 22:28). The psalmist's strong determination to honor and esteem God in 145:1 is indicated by the highly energized verb he employs in this passage, a verb which indicates a command directed to himself.

18^m The LORD is near to all who call upon Him,
 To all who call upon Him ⁿin truth.
 19 He will fulfill the desire of those who fear Him;
 He also will hear their cry and save them.
 20 ^oThe LORD preserves all who love Him,
 But all the wicked He will destroy.
 21 My mouth shall speak the praise of the LORD,
 And all flesh shall bless His holy name
 Forever and ever.

PSALM 147

Praise to God for His Word and Providence

Praise ¹ the LORD!
 For ^a it is good to sing praises to our God;
^b For it is pleasant, and ^c praise is beautiful.
 2 The LORD ^d builds up Jerusalem;
^e He gathers together the outcasts of Israel.

His discriminating judgment; His grace leads to His saving works and forgiving actions. God both preserves and destroys based on His infallible insight into human intent and purposes.

145:21 My mouth: David resolved to be faithful in praising the Lord (146:1), but he also saw his praise as one part of the praise of all creation—that is, all flesh.

Psalm 146, a psalm of descriptive praise, is part of the grand pinnacle of praise in this book of praises. Each of the last five psalms begins and ends with the Hebrew word “Hallelujah!” This final set of praise psalms forms an exuberant ending to Israel’s orchestrated responses to the wonder of God and His gracious works on their behalf. Psalm 146 also shows some similarities with wisdom literature. The structure of the poem is as follows: (1) a call for a life of praise to God (vv. 1, 2); (2) a warning against putting one’s trust even in good people (vv. 3, 4); (3) a blessing on the one who finds help in God (vv. 5–7); (4) a description of the wonderful works of God in the lives of His people (vv. 8, 9); (5) a call to praise God the great King (v. 10). 146:1, 2 My soul is another way of speaking of one’s inner being and is often used as a substitute for the pronouns “I” or “me.” While I live: The poet makes a strong vow to praise the Lord for the rest of his life.

146:3 in princes: The point is that even the best of people are not adequate help in times of terrible stress. Even princes are mortal, and are not able even to help themselves (118:9). In contrast is the individual who finds ultimate help in God who lives forever (vv. 5–7).

146:5, 6 Happy indicates a deep and abiding pleasure, a manifest joy. This is the proper description of one whose help and hope is in

God. Who made heaven and earth: Creation themes pervade the hymns of Israel (Ps. 104); here the point is that the Creator of the universe is the One who comes to the aid of the righteous.

146:8, 9 the eyes of the blind: In these two verses there is a special focus on the gracious actions of God on behalf of the impaired, the helpless, the lonely, and the needy (38:6). But the way of the wicked: The contrast in God’s treatment of the righteous and the wicked is as pronounced in this psalm as it is in other psalms (1:4, 6; 147:6).

146:10 The Lord shall reign forever: The Bible presents several dimensions of the rule of God: He is King as Creator (Ps. 93); He is King as Savior of His people (Ps. 99); and He is King as the coming One (Ps. 98). This verse speaks of God’s present and eternal reign rather than specifically of His coming rule at the end of time. Praise the Lord: The use of the Hebrew term hallelujah at the end of the psalm balances its use at the beginning.

Psalm 147, a psalm of descriptive praise, places a strong emphasis on creation themes. This anonymous poem was likely written following the return of the Jewish people to Jerusalem from the Babylonian captivity (also Ps. 126; 132; 135). The structure is threefold, with each section introduced by a command to praise the Lord: (1) a command to praise the Lord for His restorative mercies (vv. 1–6); (2) a command to praise the Lord for the joy He finds in His people (vv. 7–11); (3) a command to praise the Lord for His Word (vv. 12–20).

147:1 The sentiment praise is beautiful is also expressed in 33:1. The people of God may bring their offerings of praise and worship to the Lord.

147:2, 3 builds up Jerusalem: The few people who had returned from captivity faced an immense task. But they needed to know, as do all subsequent people who do the work of the Lord, that because the work was God's, He would see that it was accomplished. It is a privilege for God's people to be counted as part of the fulfillment of the task, but the glory belongs to Him. He heals the brokenhearted: God's principal work is within the human heart (51:10-12).

147:4-6 He counts the number of the stars: Quoted from Is. 40:26, these words describe the infinite knowledge of God. But the words signify more: God's principal interest is not in stars or insects; God's interest is in His people (v. 11). lifts up the humble: God's greatness may be approached only by the humble; He resists the proud, but He comforts the lowly (86:14; 146:9; James 4:6).

147:7-9 Sing praises: The second movement of the psalm begins with a new call for the praise of God (vv. 1, 12). rain for the earth: A regular part of God's covenantal mercies is the bringing of rain for produce and livelihood (Lev. 26:1-13). More than that, God sends rain on the just and the unjust because of His continuing mercy to all. We may describe the actions of these verses as God's "regular mercies." beast: Jesus describes God's care as extending even to sparrows (Matt. 10:29).

147:10, 11 He does not delight: The enjoyment God finds in His people is greater than any pleasure He may find in horses or runners. Forms of the verb delight and takes pleasure are found in 40:6-8; 51:16. These are God's responses to true piety; He enjoys people who respond rightly to Him (86:4). To fear God is to be properly responsive to Him in awe and wonder.

147:12 The words praise the Lord introduce the third movement of the psalm. This section was a reminder to the new settlers in the land of promise that God had blessed them in numerous ways. He had given them protection, posterity, peace, and productivity. 147:19, 20 God's word goes throughout His creation, causing snow, frost, hail, wind, and every other aspect of weather to obey His command. Here He gives His word to His people. Shall we obey as does the wind? Or shall we be the only element of creation that is unresponsive to the divine will? not dealt thus: Israel confessed the unique revelation that it had received from God and acknowledged their unique responsibility. Our responsibility is as profound as Israel's, for we too have heard the testimonies of the Creator through Scripture.

Psalm 148 is a complex psalm. Because of its many references to the creation, it can be labeled a wisdom psalm, and more particularly a creation psalm (Ps. 19; 104). It is also highly charged with praise. Like Ps. 19, this psalm moves from the heavens to the human heart. The structure is as follows: (1) a call for the heavens to give God praise because He is the Creator (vv. 1-6); (2) a call for the elements of the earth to give God praise because He is also their Creator (vv. 7-12); (3) a call for the people of God to give God praise because of His wonder in their midst (vv. 13, 14).

148:1-5 Praise Him: All of the universe is called to boast of the wonder of God. In this first section, praise is commanded from all aspects of the heavens above, including the angelic hosts. The language waters above the heavens comes from the creation story in Gen. 1:7. He commanded: Genesis 1 describes creation as a spontaneous response to the word of God (33:9; 147:15).

- 5 Let them praise the name of the LORD,
For ^cHe commanded and they were created.
- 6 ^dHe also established them forever and ever;

PSALM 149

Praise to God for His Salvation and Judgment

Praise ¹ the LORD!

- ^a Sing to the LORD a new song,
And His praise in the assembly of saints.
- 2 Let Israel rejoice in their Maker;
Let the children of Zion be joyful in their ^bKing.
- 3 ^cLet them praise His name with the dance;
Let them sing praises to Him with the timbrel and harp.
- 4 For ^dthe LORD takes pleasure in His people;
^eHe will beautify the ²humble with salvation.
- 5 Let the saints be joyful in glory;
Let them ^fsing aloud on their beds.
- 6 Let the high praises of God be in their mouth,
And ^ga two-edged sword in their hand,
To execute vengeance on the nations,
And punishments on the peoples;
- 8 To bind their kings with chains,
And their nobles with fetters of iron;
- 9 ^hTo execute on them the written judgment—
ⁱThis honor have all His saints.
- 3 Praise the LORD!

148:7, 8 The focus of the psalm switches to the earth. All hosts above and all creatures below are to praise our great God. great sea creatures: This includes real sea creatures that inspired awe and wonder, as well as creatures of mythology that the Canaanites had made into gods. Israel called on all creatures to praise God—both those that are His creation and those that their neighbors believed to be gods. In this way, every principality and power, every creature known and unknown, was called to worship God. Fire and hail: All natural phenomena are at God's command (147:15–18). 148:14 the horn of His people: The people are pictured here as an animal whose strength is in its horn. near: When we consider the meaning of God's holiness (99:1; Is. 6:3), the marvel that He approaches us to mercifully provide for us becomes overwhelming. Psalm 149, an exuberant call to praise God, was used by the army of Israel as well as by the people in their worship of God. The structure of the psalm is: (1) a call for a new song of praise (v. 1); (2) a call for the joyful worship of praise in the congregation of the Lord (vv. 2–5); (3) a call for the joyful worship of praise in the army of the Lord (vv. 6–8); (4) a concluding shout of praise (v. 9).

149:1 The call for a new song comes at several points in the Psalms (33:3; 40:3; 144:9). These words encourage more than just novelty; they call for freshness and integrity in performing music. In the assembly of saints: One of the primary emphases in the Book of Psalms is that the praise of God is to take place in the center of the worshipping community. Praise unites the people of God (33:1–3).

149:2–5 Maker: Not only is God the Creator of the universe (8:3; 19:1; 104:1–35), He is particularly the Creator of His people (100:3) and their great King (Ps. 93). In the temple of the preexilic period, sacred dance was an integral aspect of worship (150:4). Saints refers to the redeemed who have been made God's people by His grace. The Hebrew word is related to the term meaning "loyal love" (13:5). The saints are those who demonstrate in their lives the characteristics of God whom they serve. on their beds: In some of the festivals of Israel, such as Passover, the people would recline at feast tables as a vivid symbol that they had been redeemed. In the first Passover (Ex. 12), the people were to eat standing, ready to travel. The custom had developed for the people to recline at the table, symbolizing their redemption and enjoyment of God's work in their lives.

149:6 two-edged sword: The focus of the psalm switches from the congregation at worship to the army in training. Israel's army was to be the vanguard for the battle of the Lord. Their training was to have a strong component of praise and worship to God.

149:9 the written judgment: It is likely that this is a direct reference to the Law (perhaps Deut. 7:1, 2) in which God decreed His judgment on the peoples of the land of Canaan.

(Heb. shir) (149:1; 137:3, 4; 1 Sam. 18:6; 1 Chr. 16:9; Is. 5:1; Zeph. 2:14) Strong's #7891

This Hebrew word signifies singing, often with various musical instruments accompanying (1 Kin. 10:12; 1 Chr. 15:16; 2 Chr. 9:11). It is used most frequently as a participle meaning "singers" (especially in Nehemiah) and as a summons—of oneself or of the entire world—to sing praises to the Lord (13:6; 21:13; 96:1; 2 Chr. 35:25; Ezra 7:7). Singing is often associated with giving praise to God (106:12; Judg. 5:3). Songs are sung to the Lord to extol His great power and His mercy to His people (59:16; 89:1; Ex. 15:1; 1 Chr. 16:23, 24; Jer. 20:13).

Trumpet

The trumpet was used by the priests during services of sacrifice, especially to signal the Day of Atonement. The trumpet was also used to rally troops on the battlefield. Made of metal or bones, the trumpet featured a sounding air column not quite two feet long. This short length gave this instrument a high, shrill sound. The tone of the trumpet apparently could be regulated (2 Chr. 5:12). One distinctive type of trumpet or horn used by the Hebrew people was the ram's horn, also known by its Hebrew name, the shophar (Hos. 5:8). The shophar was the greatest of the Jewish ritual instruments. Eventually the horn of a mountain goat was used for this instrument, rather than the horn of a ram. The shophar was basically a signaling instrument, used to assemble the army, to sound an attack, or to sound an alarm.

PSALM 150 ¹ ^a Ps. 145:5, 6 ¹ Heb. Hallelujah ² expanse of heaven ² ^b Deut. 3:24 ³ ³ cornet ⁶ ⁴ Heb. Hallelujah

Psalm 150, a psalm of praise, is a development of the Hebrew word hallelujah, meaning "Praise the LORD." How fitting that this book of praises—the meaning of the name of the Book of Psalms in Hebrew—ends in repeated commands to praise the Lord. The structure is as follows: (1) a call for the praise of God in heaven above (v. 1); (2) a call for the praise of God for His great works (v. 2); (3) a call for the praise of God with all instruments (vv. 3–5); (4) a call for the praise of God from all creatures here below (v. 6).

150:1 in His sanctuary: The intent is for praise to come to God in His dwelling in heaven (148:1–4).

150:3–5 The varied instruments in this section include horns, reeds, strings, and percussion, encompassing many of the instruments known in Israel at that time (33:2, 3; 98:4–6).

150:6 everything that has breath: The very breath that God gives us should be used to praise Him. As long as we live we should praise our Creator (146:1, 2). By His breath God created all things (33:6), and by our breath we should adore Him. The Book of Psalms begins with God's blessing on the righteous (1:1) and concludes with all of creation blessing its loving Creator.

praise

(Heb. halal) (146:1, 10; 147:1; 149:3; 150:1, 6) Strong's #1984

The verb halal is a common Hebrew word for praise. It may be used to exalt human beauty (Song 6:9), a virtuous wife (Prov. 31:30), or a wise man (Prov. 12:8), but most frequently halal is used to praise God. It often occurs in the imperative, expressing an exhortation or command: "Praise!" (135:1) or "Praise Him" (150:2). The most familiar example of the imperative is halleluyah (meaning "Praise the LORD!"; see 146:1; 150:6), a combination of halal and the divine name Yah. The last five psalms present a climax to the praises contained in the Book of Psalms, commanding believers (145:10), the Israelites (149:2), the angels (148:2), Jerusalem itself (147:12), the heavens (148:1), and finally every being that has breath (150:6) to praise the Almighty God, the Creator of the universe.

PROVERBS

EVERYONE KNOWS THE VALUE of good advice. Listening to those who are wiser than we are gives us the benefit of their hard-won experience. Growing up, getting along with others, and holding a job all would be impossible without guidance from folks who have been there before. The Book of Proverbs gives that kind of help.

But the book is more than a collection of “tips and tricks.” It passes on a core of knowledge and experience that God says we must have if we are to live successfully. These proverbs are not merely old sayings that concern people in far-off lands, but universal principles that apply to all people of all times. They speak to modern problems as much as to ancient ones because they concern human nature and God’s ways. Human nature has not changed since Solomon’s time; neither has God’s. Only the landscape around us has changed.

Author and Date King Solomon wrote many proverbs, more than those which have survived to this day. The title of the Book of Proverbs (1:1) and two collections of maxims within it (10:1; 25:1) identify him as their author. First Kings confirms this by attributing three thousand proverbs and more than a thousand songs to him (1 Kin. 4:32). In fact, the writer of Kings boasted that Solomon’s wisdom exceeded that of all the wise men in the East and in Egypt (1 Kin. 4:30). Solomon’s interests and research covered nearly every aspect of knowledge, from zoology and botany to grammar and theology. To think of wisdom in Israel was to think of Solomon, who was granted wisdom by God’s gracious gift (see 1 Kin. 3:12).

Although Solomon was the main writer of the Book of Proverbs (10:1—22:16), some proverbs were written by other writers, and some of Solomon’s were not added to the book until after his death. Agur wrote chapter 30, and Lemuel wrote 31:1–9. Moreover, it is not clear whether Solomon wrote the first nine chapters; they may have been contributed by someone else as an introduction to the book. Proverbs 25:1 tells us that a group of assistants to King Hezekiah (who reigned about 729–699 B.C.) compiled and added the proverbs of Solomon contained in chapters 25–29. The Book of Proverbs as we know it may well have been completed during Hezekiah’s time, but we cannot be certain, because we have no information about Agur (ch. 30) or Lemuel (31:1–9) besides their names.

Structure Solomon’s 375 proverbs (10:1—22:16) appear as a large collection with no particular organization to the whole. In places a few sentences on one theme appear together, but other sentences on that theme often appear elsewhere as well. we might expect all proverbs on poverty to be in one section and all on child-rearing in another, but these and many other topics are interspersed throughout the collection. sometimes repeated words or sounds are the link between separate sentences. or it may be that phrases repeat, suggesting a new linking of ideas.

In addition to the proverbs that stand alone, at the beginning and ending of the book sections of extended instruction appear together (chs. 1–9; 30; 31). these chapters contain some of the same proverbs as the rest of the book, but as units they differ greatly from the main section of solomon's proverbs (10:1—22:16). unlike the scattered arrangement of solomon's main section, these chapters develop themes.

Purpose and Theme the prologue states the book's purpose and theme (1:1–7): it is to give a course of instruction in wisdom, preparation for life, and the ways of life in God's world. Many topics, such as riches, success, and social relations, appear in other collections of wisdom literature that have survived from the ancient Middle East, but they are treated differently. Israel's contribution to wisdom literature was to place all wisdom in the context of faith in the Lord. the words "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of knowledge" (1:7) set the record straight, so to speak. this is the foundation on which all other wise sayings stand. It is the Book of Proverbs' central idea: Fear of the Lord motivates us to obey God's commandments, and obedience to them constitutes true wisdom.

CHRIST IN THE SCRIPTURES

although Jesus is not identified by name in 8:22–31, it is clear that the writer is describing him. wisdom, godlike and perfect, is personified: "I have been established from everlasting, from the beginning, before there was ever an earth . . . when he prepared the heavens, I was there . . . I was beside him as a master craftsman; and I was daily his delight" (8:23, 27, 30). compare that to John 1:1, 3, "In the beginning was the word, and the word was with God, and the word was God . . . all things were made through him, and without him nothing was made that was made." this divine wisdom is also the source of biological and spiritual life (3:18; 8:35). It is right and moral (8:8, 9), and it is available to all who will receive it.

The Beginning of Knowledge

The ^aproverbs of Solomon the son of David, king of Israel:

- ² To know wisdom and instruction,
To ¹perceive the words of understanding,
- ³ To receive the instruction of wisdom,
Justice, judgment, and equity;
- ⁴ To give prudence to the ^bsimple,
To the young man knowledge and discretion—
- ⁵ ^cA wise man will hear and increase learning,
And a man of understanding will ²attain wise counsel,
- ⁶ To understand a proverb and an enigma,
The words of the wise and their ^driddles.
- ⁷ ^eThe fear of the LORD is the beginning of knowledge,
But fools despise wisdom and instruction.

Shun Evil Counsel

And do not forsake the law of your mother;
- ⁹ For they will be a ^ggraceful ornament on your head,
And chains about your neck.

The Call of Wisdom

- ²⁰ Wisdom calls aloud ⁸outside;
She raises her voice in the open squares.
- ²¹ She cries out in the ⁹chief concourses,
At the openings of the gates in the city
She speaks her words:
^{22o} How long, you ¹simple ones, will you love ²simplicity?
For scorners delight in their scorning,
And fools hate knowledge.

1:2, 3 verses 2–6 explain the purpose of the Book of Proverbs. the verbs to know, to perceive, and to receive refer to the ways we acquire wisdom. Wisdom refers to skill. Instruction could also be translated discipline; it refers to the process of receiving knowledge and then applying it to daily life. a person develops discipline in life by applying words of insight.

1:3 the word for wisdom in this verse is different from the word used in v. 1. this word denotes applied skill, such as that of an artisan or a musician. that is, wisdom affects living much the way the skills of artists affect the practice of their craft. the words justice, judgment, and equity give wisdom, discipline, and words of insight a moral context. Biblical wisdom involves all of life; it involves a change of behavior and a commitment to justice.

1:4 The simple or “naive” is young, inexperienced, and likely to make mistakes. the terms prudence and discretion include the harsh facts of life. a wise person has learned by experience how to distinguish what is true, praiseworthy, and good from what is false, shameful, and bad (see r om. 12:1, 2).

1:5, 6 increase learning: no one finishes the study of wisdom; there is always more to learn. verse 6 speaks of the lessons that a more mature person gains from the study of a proverb, an enigma, words of the wise, and riddles.

1:7 The fear of the LORD is the most basic ingredient in wisdom. all wisdom depends on knowledge of God and submission to his will. to know something but not to know God overturns the value of having knowledge in the first place. Fools have rejected the fear of the LORD. the term despise packs a strongly negative punch—not fearing God is the same as rejecting wisdom outright (see dan. 11:32; John 17:3).

1:8, 9 the opening words of wisdom’s instruction come as an appeal from parents to their son (a generic term for child)—a theme that continues throughout the book. Both father and mother teach.

1:10–14 if sinners entice you: this is the first of several texts in which wisdom teaches by means of a story.

1:15–18 the parents speak words of caution. one step on this precipitous path is a step toward destruction. spreading a net in the sight of the bird one wishes to trap would be a fruitless task. yet the fool is less sensible than the bird; he will watch the trap being set and get caught in it anyway.

1:19 It takes away the life: these words conclude the story and introduce a theme that the following passages develop further: the study of wisdom is a matter of life and death.

1:20, 21 the word wisdom is plural but the verb calls is singular. the plural is intensive—it calls attention to the word and heightens its meaning.

1:22–27 wisdom addresses the simple ones, or “open ones,” the naive. these are young people who have not yet made up their minds about life or the direction they will take. wisdom ridicules those who reject her when they come to face the inevitable judgment of their foolishness (see Ps. 2:4). yet wisdom laughs with joy at God’s works and has delight in the people of God (8:30, 31).

- 23 Turn at my rebuke;
Surely ^pI will pour out my spirit on you;
I will make my words known to you.
- 24 ^qBecause I have called and you refused,
I have stretched out my hand and no one regarded,
- 25 Because you ^rdisdained all my counsel,
And would have none of my rebuke,
- 26 ^sI also will laugh at your calamity;
I will mock when your terror comes,
- 27 When ^tyour terror comes like a storm,
And your destruction comes like a whirlwind,
When distress and anguish come upon you.
- 28 “Then ^u they will call on me, but I will not answer;
They will seek me diligently, but they will not find me.
- 29 Because they ^vhated knowledge
And did not ^wchoose the fear of the LORD,
- 30 ^xThey would have none of my counsel
And despised my every rebuke.
- 31 Therefore ^ythey shall eat the fruit of their own way,
And be filled to the full with their own fancies.
- 32 For the ^zturning away of the simple will slay them,
And the complacency of fools will destroy them;
- 33 But whoever listens to me will dwell ^zsafely,
And ^awill be ⁴secure, without fear of evil.”

The Value of Wisdom

- 2 My son, if you receive my words,
And ^atreasure my commands within you,
- 2 So that you incline your ear to wisdom,
And apply your heart to understanding;
- 3 Yes, if you cry out for discernment,
And lift up your voice for understanding,
- 4 ^bIf you seek her as silver,
And search for her as for hidden treasures;
- 5 ^cThen you will understand the fear of the LORD,
And find the knowledge of God.
- 6 ^dFor the LORD gives wisdom;
From His mouth come knowledge and understanding;
- 7 He stores up sound wisdom for the upright;
^eHe is a shield to those who walk uprightly;
- 8 He guards the paths of justice,
And ^fpreserves the way of His saints.
- 9 Then you will understand righteousness and justice,
Equity and every good path.
- 10 When wisdom enters your heart,
And knowledge is pleasant to your soul,
- 11 Discretion will preserve you;
^gUnderstanding will keep you,
- 12 To deliver you from the way of evil,
From the man who speaks perverse things,
- 13 From those who leave the paths of uprightness
To ^hwalk in the ways of darkness;

1:28-33 I will not answer: when fools despise wisdom, they must face the results of their choice. Their hatred for wisdom arises out of a refusal to fear God (v. 29). verses 31, 32 pick up the theme of v. 19 from the parents' instruction: Fools bring about their own destruction. Their rejection of wisdom will slay them. This dismal warning ends with a promise of life to the few who will listen; they will find safety and ease.

2:1-4 These verses begin the second of the my son passages and tie the concepts of wisdom and the knowledge of God more closely together. On the one hand, wisdom is near and available. yet it is not easy to embrace.

2:5-8 when a person seeks wisdom, he or she finds it in the fear of the LORD, or the knowledge of God. Those who know God fear (revere) him. verses 6-8 resemble the words of a psalm (compare Ps. 91). sound wisdom: here is another word for wisdom, a word that may be translated "abiding success" or "victory."

2:8-13 the phrase paths of justice (v. 8) contrasts strongly with ways of darkness (v. 13). This contrast introduces one of the dominant themes of Proverbs, the contrast of two roads. Jesus spoke of two roads, one narrow and the other broad (Matt. 7:13, 14). The right road is marked by demands of righteousness, justice, and equity (see 1:3). These demands come from God's law.

2:10, 11 enters your heart: These words stress the internalization of wisdom. The proverbs do not merely provide knowledge; they provide insight to be learned intimately and practiced.

2:12-15 The way of evil (v. 12) contrasts directly with the way of wisdom. It is characterized by perverse things, by lies and distortion, by twisting and deception, and by darkness and deviousness.

equity

(heb. mesar) (2:9; Ps. 17:2; 75:2; 99:4) strong's #4339

The verbal root of this word means "to be smooth, straight, or level." Most of the occurrences of this word are in Psalms and Proverbs. Quite frequently, especially in Psalms, the word for equity appears in legal contexts with "righteousness" and "judgment," indicating a fair or impartial hearing (8:6-8; Ps. 9:8; 58:1; 96:10; 98:9; Is. 45:19). Proverbs often associates equity with wisdom (8:6; 23:15, 16). It is used by the biblical writers to describe the speech of a righteous person, wisdom, and even God himself (8:6; Is. 33:15; 45:19). God takes pleasure in equity; thus it is one of the bases of a righteous lifestyle (2:9; 1 chr. 29:17; Is. 26:7).

2:16–19 The immoral woman is literally “the strange woman.” a dulteress was foreign and strange to the ideal of God’s law. “a dulteress” also connoted prostitution, because the “foreign women” of the ancient Middle Eastern fertility cults included sexual practices in their worship rituals.

3:1, 2 Law and commands are words that, as in 1:8, draw attention to the connection between wisdom and the law of Moses. t he proverbs are an application of the law.

wisdom

(heb. chokmah) (3:13; 1 kin. 4:29) strong’s #2451

t he word chokmah also means “skill” and can refer to ability in craftsmanship (Ex. 31:6), in war (Is. 10:13), and in trade (Ezek. 28:4, 5). t he most common use of chokmah is in reference to wisdom in daily living. t his is the sense of the word as it is used throughout Proverbs, which teaches that true wisdom involves not only intelligence but also moral integrity (8:7–9). Because a sinful lifestyle is ultimately self-destructive, wisdom is extolled as the only path to a full and fruitful life (3:13–26). t he source of wisdom is God, who by wisdom, founded the earth (3:19), numbered the clouds (Job 38:37), and made the world (Jer. 10:12). he alone can provide men and women with the wisdom to live righteously (2:6; Job 11:6).

3:3, 4 Mercy and truth is an important pair of words in the Bible, describing God’s character (see Ps. 100:5) and the demands he makes of his people. t he apostle John used the Greek equivalent of these words, “grace and truth,” to describe Jesus’ character (John 1:14).

3:5, 6 t he words trust in the LORD echo the command of deut. 6:5 to love God with all our being. t he verb trust is complemented by the verb “lean.” t rusting in God is a conscious dependence on God, much like leaning on a tree for support. t he idea is reinforced here by the command to acknowledge Him, which means to observe him and get to know him in the process of living. In doing so, a person finds time and time again that God smoothes out paths.

3:7–10 t he promises in these verses describe general patterns, not rules that have no exceptions. t hese are the results that often follow a full commitment to God. t he command to honor God with wealth and to give to him from the firstfruits of all income is a part of what it means to worship God. In God’s covenant with Israel, fullness of barns and vats was God’s blessing, a part of God’s covenant promise. yet these verses should not be taken as a formula for getting rich. t hey speak of what righteous people can reasonably expect in life, not what God promises to return on investments.

3:11, 12 t he discipline of the LORD is the other side of his grace. we should cherish God’s correction in our lives, because God disciplines only those he loves (see heb. 12:7–10).

3:13–18 Happy: t he beatitudes of Jesus in the sermon on the Mount (Matt. 5:3–12) work much the way these verses do. t he hebrew term blessed is an explosive word: “o the manifold happiness

Security in Wisdom

- 4 Hear, ^a*my* children, the instruction of a father,
And give attention to know understanding;
- 2 For I give you good doctrine:
Do not forsake my law.
- 3 When I was my father’s son,
^bTender and the only one in the sight of my mother,
- 4 ^cHe also taught me, and said to me:
“Let your heart retain my words;
^dKeep my commands, and live.
- 5 ^eGet wisdom! Get understanding!
Do not forget, nor turn away from the words of my mouth.
- 6 Do not forsake her, and she will preserve you;
^fLove her, and she will keep you.

of” (see Ps. 1:1). It implies that God is truly pleased. The person who has discovered wisdom has found a priceless treasure. A dam and Eve were expelled from the Garden and forbidden access to the tree of life (Gen. 3:22–24), but wisdom is another tree of life and will begin to restore the lost happiness of Paradise.

3:19, 20 by wisdom founded the earth: One central theme in Proverbs is the association of wisdom with creation. Chapter 8 is devoted to this theme.

3:21 let them not depart: This verse encourages the son to keep faith with wisdom. The intent is much like that of the shema (see deut. 6:4–9). It also resembles the basic ideas of Ps. 91 (compare v. 26 with Ps. 91:10–13).

3:28 This verse introduces a passage that explains the proper treatment of your neighbor, a theme that Jesus also developed (Luke 10:25–37).

3:31–35 There is no benefit in feeling envy for the wicked, because God detests wickedness. Only a fool would wish to be detestable to God! The section ends with a contrast of God’s blessing on the righteous and his curse on the wicked (see Gen. 12:3).

4:1–4 In most of the ancient Middle East instruction in wisdom was primarily a matter of training for the court. The masters were regarded as “fathers” of the students. But in Israel, training in wisdom extended to the home. Instruction of a father implies warmth and affection, as well as a parent’s concern and discipline. Verse 1 begins a little like the first parental section (1:8), but the addressee is now plural, my children. As his father had taught him, so the son now teaches his own sons, one generation instructing another. The call for parents to teach the things of God to their children is based on deut. 6:7 and is reflected in the Psalms (as in Ps. 78:3, 4). 4:5–7 Verses 5–9 present an impassioned plea from the father to his sons to get wisdom whatever the cost. The presentation in these early chapters of Proverbs follows the pattern: statement, restate-ment, embellishment. By making generous use of creative restate-ment, the ideas come through all the more strongly. Particularly

7 ^gWisdom is the principal thing;
Therefore get wisdom.
And in all your getting, get understanding.

8 ^hExalt her, and she will promote you;
She will bring you honor, when you embrace her.

9 She will place on your head ⁱan

A crown of glory she will deliver to you.”

10 Hear, my son, and receive my sayings,
^jAnd the years of your life will be many.

11 I have ^ktaught you in the way of wisdom;
I have led you in right paths.

12 When you walk, ^lyour steps will not

^mAnd when you run, you will not stumble.

13 Take firm hold of instruction, do not let go;
Keep her, for she is your life.

14 ⁿDo not enter the path of the wicked,
And do not walk in the way of evil.

15 Avoid it, do not travel on it;
Turn away from it and pass on.

16 ^oFor they do not sleep unless they have done evil;
And their sleep is ^ltaken away unless they make someone fall.

17 For they eat the bread of wickedness,
And drink the wine of violence.

striking are the words of v. 7: Wisdom is the principal thing. t he word principal is translated “the beginning of” in 1:7, but here it has the force of “first in importance.”

4:8, 9 t hese verses emphasize the supreme value of wisdom. t he person who holds wisdom in highest esteem and embraces it fully will be exalted and honored; its very presence becomes an ornament of grace and a crown of glory. t hese metaphors are compelling calls for a heartfelt response (see 1:9; 3:3).

4:10–19 t hese verses present a renewed appeal from father to son to walk in the way of wisdom and to avoid the path of the wicked at all costs. t he contrast of the two paths is profound. t he way of wisdom is straight, unencumbered, and safe. t he way of the wicked is tortuous, hazardous, and marked by violence. o ne road is a path of light, the other of darkness; one leads to promise, the other to a stumbling destruction.

4:20–27 t his section demands constancy of heart and purpose, honesty in speech, steadiness of gaze, and a right goal in walk and life. setting off on the path of wisdom is no casual thing. Much of this chapter reiterates and refines the themes found in chs. 1–3. t he emphasis on virtue prepares us for the frightening warnings of ch. 5.

5:1–6 c hapter 5 returns to the theme of the immoral woman (see 2:16–19). t his passage speaks strongly for marital fidelity against any and all pressure to the contrary. If you want to preserve discretion, heed these words, lest your feet go down to death.

5:8–10 t he Bible teaches elsewhere that temptation in general is unavoidable, but some temptations should be avoided at all costs. a wise son knows this and will not go near an immoral woman. t he apostle Paul’s instruction to t imothy to flee youthful lusts (2 t im. 2:22) teaches the same theme. Involvement with such sin dishonors and consumes all who fall into it.

Dangerous Promises

The Folly of Indolence

- 6 ^cGo to the ant, you sluggard!
 Consider her ways and be wise,
 Which, having no ⁴captain,

 Provides her ⁵supplies in the summer,
 And gathers her food in the harvest.
- 9 ^dHow long will you ⁶slumber,
 O sluggard?
 When will you rise from your sleep?
- 10 A little sleep, a little slumber,
 A little folding of the hands to sleep—
- 11 ^eSo shall your poverty come on you like a prowler,
 And your need like an armed man.

The Wicked Man

- 12 A worthless person, a wicked man,
 Walks with a perverse mouth;

5:15 In an arid country like Israel, a well was a prized possession and a privilege to be cared for. so was (and is) a spouse. Drink water is an oblique reference to sexual union (see 9:17), and from your own cistern is a clear call to marital fidelity—one man, one woman, together in marriage. the writers of the Bible sometimes speak of salvation as a spring (Is. 12:3); to call one’s spouse a spring of water was a term of endearment (see song 4:15).

5:18–20 the words rejoice with the wife of your youth comprise a command and an encouragement to find pleasure in the mutual joy of married love. Indeed, pleasure in the marriage bed is blessed by God (see song; heb. 13:4).

6:1–5 these verses warn against putting up surety (see 11:15), or cosigning a loan. this does not mean we should never be generous or helpful if we have the means, only that we should not promise what we cannot deliver. In solomon’s day, a cosigner who could not pay could lose all he had and be reduced to slavery besides.

Even though laws differ today, inability to pay a debt is still a form of bondage and can be a serious problem. Modern conditions are different than in ot times, but the warning still applies.

6:6–11 this passage warns against the trap of laziness. the sluggard or lazy person is held captive to leisure. he can learn all he needs to know by studying the ant, a humble creature that busies itself with storing food during the summer against the winter that lies ahead. like the ant, a wise person works hard. By contrast, the lazy person is addicted to sleep and has lost all interest in work (see 26:13–16).

6:12–15 A wicked man is a troublemaker. unlike the sluggard, whose only desire is another place to nap, the troublemaker cannot wait to cause more problems or to get into more mischief. unlike the sluggard (see v. 6), he is too busy, though he is doing the wrong things. he delights in bringing dissension. But like the sluggard, he does not realize that calamity awaits him.

¹³ *f*He winks with his eyes,
He ⁷shuffles his feet,
He points with his fingers;
¹⁴ Perversity is in his heart,
^gHe devises evil continually,

6:16–19 t his passage is a numerical proverb (see 30:15–31) that describes seven things that the LORD hates. t he use of numerical progression—six, even seven—in these proverbs is a rhetorical device that embellishes the poetry, provides a memory aid, and builds to a climax. t he progression involves not just the numbers but also the words that describe God’s response; the word hates progresses to abomination. t he word abomination is the Bible’s strongest expression of hatred for wickedness (compare Lev. 18:22). In a list of this type, the last item is the most prominent. t hus the reader knows that causing discord among brethren (see v. 14) causes God’s greatest disapproval. c ontrast the blessing of God on brothers who live together in peace (Ps. 133:1).

The Poetry of the Proverbs

a proverb is a self-contained unit that presents a capsule truth about life, the world, and the way God works. t he Book of Proverbs contains many hundreds of these “sayings of the wise.” t hey are written in hebrew poetic style, with its customary varieties of parallel units. t hey often employ bold imagery and daring uses of language. t hey are short, memorable, and transferable to all people of all times. sometimes they state what is obvious to all, and sometimes they reveal what cannot be seen by direct observation.

Proverbs is cast in hebrew poetry, a rich pattern of rhetoric that shares with poetry of many cultures a special use of words for effect, sound and sense, vivid imagery, and concise language. In contrast to other types of poetry, hebrew poets—from the psalmists to the authors of proverbs—use parallelism, the repetition of related thoughts (see the article on “t he Poetry of the Psalms,” Ps. 2, p. 837).

Synonymous parallelism restates the first line in slightly different terms:

a good name is to be chosen rather than great riches, l oving favor rather than silver and gold. (22:1)

Both lines say nearly the same thing; but the restatement drives the point home. t he pattern is: “a is so; so is B.”

Antithetical parallelism expresses the thought negatively:

a prudent man foresees evil and hides himself,
But the simple pass on and are punished. (22:3)

t his proverb contrasts the prudent person with the simple person. t he antithesis goes both ways. Each line amplifies and explains the other.

Climactic parallelism is when the second line completes the thought of the first line:

t he rich and the poor have this in common,
t he l ORD is the maker of them all. (22:2)

t he two lines are incomplete without each other.

Finally, many of the proverbs are based on comparisons between two parallel lines. t hese are the “better than” proverbs:

Better is a little with righteousness,
t han vast revenues without justice. (16:8)

a ll these examples illustrate the heart of hebrew poetry: parallelism. Each verse sharpens and heightens the thought by use of restatement, comparison, and building to a climax. t hese subtle devices draw us in and cause us to see and understand the point of each proverb more clearly.

a proverb is memorable and transferable. a modern example is the saying “a stitch in time saves nine,” which comes from the observation that fixing a loose thread when it first starts to loosen saves the trouble of resewing the whole seam later on. t his terse statement is short and easy to remember. It also applies to many areas of life—to the timely changing of a car’s oil or to interpersonal conflicts as well as to sewing.

t he hebrew proverb typically compares a principle with an ordinary human experience to illustrate its truth. Proverbs 21:17, for example, speaks of love of “wine and oil” to illustrate the danger of indulging in luxury. Everyone has felt a desire to have the best. t he concrete example encourages us to see the truth of the proverb and to apply it immediately to our lives.

It is important to keep in mind that most proverbs are generalizations, not promises or predictions of the future. t hey report what we observe to be true most often, or what we can reasonably expect God to do. a ll of them rely on the assumption that final outcomes include eternity—which is to say, things may not turn out the way we hoped in this life. In keeping with this, the verbs in most proverbs use a tense that depicts actions repeated regularly, indicating that proverbs should be treated as guidelines.

 12 At times she was outside, at times in the open square,
 Lurking at every corner.

6:20-24 ^t his passage links the teaching of the father with that of the mother (see 1:8). ^t the mother's instruction should be bound about one's heart and neck, a constant companion and a trusted guide—just like God's law (compare deut. 6:4-9; 11:18-21). lamp ... light: compare Ps. 119:105.

6:30-35 steals to satisfy: ^t his passage does not condone theft. It merely contrasts theft, which can be an understandable course of action, with adultery, which never makes sense. ^t hrowing away one's commitment to one's life-long companion is pure folly. For the ancient Israelites, marital fidelity was a mark of one's fidelity to God.

7:1-5 ^t he problem of immorality (see 2:16-19; 5:1-23; 6:20-35) does have a solution: Keep my commands . . . as the apple of your eye. People should guard wise words as instinctively as they protect the pupil of the eye. God cares for his people with the same diligence (deut. 32:10).

7:6-10 ^t he young man who gives in to the immoral woman is described as simple, a term that pegs him as naive, inexperienced, and devoid of understanding (see 1:4; 9:3). he has no idea how foolish he is. he thinks he makes his way to the woman, but she in fact seduces him.

Wisdom Cries Out
Wisdom is personified in the Proverbs and acts as God’s dynamic Word. In the New Testament, Jesus becomes the Wisdom and Word of God.

The Excellence of Wisdom

8 Does not ^awisdom cry out, And understanding lift up her voice?
2 She takes her stand on the top of the ¹high hill, Beside the way, where the paths meet.
3 She cries out by the gates, at the entry of the city, At the entrance of the doors:
4 “To you, O men, I call, And my voice is to the sons of men.
5 O you ²simple ones, understand prudence, And you fools, be of an understanding heart.
6 Listen, for I will speak of ^bexcellent things, And from the opening of my lips will come right things;
7 For my mouth will speak truth; Wickedness is an abomination to my lips.
8 All the words of my mouth are with righteousness; Nothing crooked or perverse is in them.
9 They are all plain to him who understands, And right to those who find knowledge.

7:14–20 All the adulteress does is perverse. she audaciously begins her proposition by talking about her supposedly righteous actions that day. since the offerings she presented to the Lord were fellowship or peace offerings, she could bring part of them home for a feast before the Lord. But here she presents the offering as a feast for the young man she plans to entrap. her preparations and her words of invitation might pass between a wife and husband and be honored by God. But in her mouth these words become evil. she overcomes her target’s fear by assuring him that her husband will not come home and discover them together.
7:22, 23 the passage here uses several unflattering metaphors to describe how a young fool falls into immorality. the phrase as a fool to the correction of the stocks could be translated “as a stag prances into captivity.” the idea is that the young man is oblivious to his fate. such a fool has no idea how foolish he is.

8:1–11 chapter 8 is a hymn of praise about how wonderful wisdom is. Does not wisdom cry out: wisdom wants to reach everyone and therefore broadcasts her message publicly, unlike the immoral woman, who uses privacy and deception to achieve her goals. wisdom’s words can be trusted, and her offers of grace are beneficial. her words of truth contrast with the lies of wickedness (7:21–23); wisdom will deliver on her promises; she is not a tawdry tease. what wisdom offers is of inestimable worth, far more valuable than silver and gold; no gems or other desirable things may be compared with it (see 3:14, 15 for a similar expression).

- 10 Receive my instruction, and not silver,
And knowledge rather than choice gold;
- 11 ^cFor wisdom is better than rubies,
And all the things one may desire

8:12, 13 The words I, wisdom, dwell with prudence introduce the second section of this passage about the excellence of wisdom (vv. 12–21), a gain in this context we see wisdom tied directly to the fear of the LORD. The offer of wisdom is held out only to those who fear God. Coming to wisdom requires coming to God, and coming to God means turning away from all that God hates—evil, pride, arrogance, misbehavior, and perverse speech. Jesus said that the truth is found in him (see John 8:32).

8:14–18 princes . . . nobles . . . judges: Power and authority require the use of wisdom; this is one of its loftiest appeals. What's more, wisdom leads those who follow her to riches and honor (see 9:1–6). These contrast directly with the shameful fate of the fool (6:33, 35).

8:22–31 This section of ch. 8 describes wisdom's role in creation. The LORD possessed me at the beginning of His way: The Hebrew verb for possessed can mean "brought forth" or "created." Melchizedek used the same word to identify God as creator of the universe (see Gen. 14:19). God, who is ever wise, produced wisdom; God, who possesses all knowledge, brought forth knowledge. Wisdom had a beginning only in the sense that God singled it out for special display at that time; insofar as it is one of God's perfections, it has always existed (v. 23). These verses provide part of the background for the NT portrayal of Christ as the divine word (John 1:1–3) and as the wisdom of God (1 cor. 1:24, 30; col. 2:3).

8:30, 31 The term master craftsman speaks of an artisan or of a darling child. Wisdom is both. With wisdom's skill, God created the universe. A proper study of the universe is a progressive discovery of God's wisdom (see rom. 1:20). delight: In her playful, childlike exuberance, wisdom is a darling child. And her greatest joy comes in the finest of the work of God—the sons of men—that is, humankind.

8:32–36 Now therefore, listen to me, my children: This section is the epilogue of the ch. 8 hymn of praise. It calls everyone to listen.

instruction

(heb. musar) (1:2; 4:1; 8:10; deut. 11:2; Is. 26:16; 53:5) strong's #4148

The Hebrew word translated instruction means "discipline" that is instructive and corrective in nature. The word emphasizes the "nourishing" and "chastising" elements of bringing up a child. Instruction has to do with both the reception of knowledge through hearing and the application of that knowledge in daily life. In Proverbs, discipline comes primarily through one's father but also through one's mother (see 1:8; 3:11, 12, 13:1; 31:1). Usually the word refers to verbal instruction, but it can also refer to the rod of correction (see 13:24; 22:15; 23:13). The content of the instruction is frequently linked to wisdom, knowledge, and the fear of the LORD (1:2, 3; 12:1; 15:33; 23:12, 13). Outside of Proverbs, discipline and instruction is frequently connected to God. The Exile was identified by the prophets as God's corrective punishment on the Israelites (Jer. 2:30; 5:3; 30:14).

- 33 Hear instruction and be wise,
And do not disdain it.
- 34 ^u Blessed is the man who listens

Waiting at the posts of my doors.

All those who hate me love death.”

And he who rebukes a wicked man only harms himself.

The Way of Folly

- 13 ^l A foolish woman is ² clamorous;
She is simple, and knows
nothing.
- 14 For she sits at the door of her
house,
On a seat ^m by the highest places of the city,
- 15 To call to those who pass by,
Who go straight on their way:
- 16 “Whoever ⁿ is ³ simple, let him turn in

And as for him who lacks

- 17 “Stolen ^o water is sweet,
And bread eaten in secret is pleasant.”
- 18 But he does not know that ^p the dead
are there,
That her guests are in the depths of ⁴ hell.

wisdom offers blessing and life to those who heed her, but cursing and death to those who hate her. wisdom’s gracious invitation is more desirable than anything and an invitation to a blessed life.

9:1 here is the final contrast between wisdom and folly. Each holds a banquet, one for life (vv. 1–6) and one for death (vv. 13–18). Between the two banquet descriptions is a section (vv. 7–12) that speaks of consequences of the life of wisdom and of the plight of folly. Wisdom has built her house: here as in 1:20, the term for wisdom is in the intensive plural rather than the singular. It calls attention to itself. Seven pillars: the number seven represents completeness, as it often does in semitic poetry. That is, it is not that there were precisely seven pillars so much as that the house of wisdom was solidly built and substantial in character.

9:2, 3 the meal at wisdom’s banquet includes meat and wine and a lovely table (see 7:14). Freshly butchered meat was a mark of a feast in biblical times. mixed her wine: wine was a staple in ancient Israel; but when a feast was special, a homemaker would add aromatic spices to the wine, enlivening the bouquet and improving the taste (see song 8:2). This all sets up a contrast with the foolish woman. While wisdom is busy, attending to every detail like a gracious hostess, the foolish woman sits at the entrance of her house with very little to do (v. 14). wisdom sends her trusted maidens throughout the city, inviting people to come and dine.

9:4–6 wisdom makes a point of inviting the simple, meaning those who have not yet made up their minds about their course in life (see 1:4; 7:6). bread . . . wine: wisdom promises life. Forsake foolishness: the person who comes to wisdom has nothing to lose but naiveté. see heb. 5:14, which speaks of a mature person as one who is able to eat and to enjoy solid food, in contrast to the naive who is able only to drink milk (heb. 5:13).

9:7–9 a scoffer or mocker is thoroughly set against wisdom (see 1:22) and scoffs at the things of God (Ps. 1:1). how should a person respond to a mocker? It is best not to respond at all. By contrast, a wise man accepts correction and responds with gratitude to the one who points out his error. a wise person always welcomes constructive criticism; by implication, he or she is also humble (v. 10; 3:7; 11:2).

9:10–12 fear of the LORD: this is the central theme of the Book of Proverbs (see 1:7). the only appropriate way to approach the holy God is with fear, that is, reverence. the term Holy One is an intensive plural of the hebrew word for holy: “the most holy one” or “the quintessence of holiness.” for yourself . . . alone: you will feel the effects of your wisdom or foolishness directly; you cannot escape them.

9:13–18 this section is a parody of vv. 1–6. I like personified wisdom, the foolish woman calls out an invitation. But she is brash, loud, undisciplined, and knows nothing (see 7:10–12). she cries out in the same words that wisdom has used (compare v. 16 with v. 4), but with a twist: she has no marvelous banquet for her guests, only shabby food, stolen and meager. though she gets lots of attention, her appeal makes sense only to him who lacks understanding.

Wise Sayings of Solomon

10 The proverbs of ^aSolomon:

- ^bA wise son makes a glad father,
But a foolish son is the grief of his mother.
- ² ^cTreasures of wickedness profit nothing,
^dBut righteousness delivers from death.
- ³ ^eThe LORD will not allow the righteous soul to famish,
But He casts away the desire of the wicked.
- ⁴ ^fHe who has a slack hand becomes poor,
But ^gthe hand of the diligent makes rich.
- ⁵ He who gathers in ^hsummer is a wise son;
He who sleeps in harvest is ⁱa son who causes shame.
- ⁶ Blessings are on the head of the righteous,
But violence covers the mouth of the wicked.
- ⁷ ^jThe memory of the righteous is blessed,
But the name of the wicked will rot.

10:1 The proverbs of Solomon focus on the wise son, as in chs. 1–9, and contrast him with the foolish son. t he term son is generic—the central issue is not that he is a son rather than a daughter, but that he is wise or foolish. t he child’s behavior affects both parents. Both parents find their joy or sadness in their child who demonstrates skill in life. t he tense of the verbs suggests that time after time a wise child gladdens parents, and time after time a foolish child brings distress to parents.

10:3 t his verse speaks of God’s gracious provision of food for the righteous and h is retributive justice on the wicked. Proverbs such as this emphasize (1) circumstances as they ought to be and (2) the end of the wicked (see Ps. 73:17). t hey do not necessarily indicate circumstances as they always are, nor what the wicked are experiencing right now.

10:4 slack hand . . . poor: Proverbs often link laziness with poverty, and hard work with riches, but not always (see v. 2). t his proverb states the norm.

10:5 Gathers in summer contrasts a skillful person with a shameful person, based on whether he works hard during the harvest season. t he description of the second person is particularly critical: “he who snores away during the harvest.”

10:7 In biblical times, a person’s name was significant and important. when a person’s name was remembered by future generations for good, that person’s life was believed to have been of great value. But when the memory of a name rotted away, it was as though that person had never lived.

10:8 t he hebrew verb for will fall means “is ruined” and comes from the same root as the verb will rot in v. 7. t his type of poetic parallelism would have delighted the ancient Israelites.

10:9 Many of the proverbs contrast two paths of life. Walks with integrity means conforming to God’s law as a course of life. c hoosing crooked paths is willfully to disdain the l aw God so graciously provided.

10:10 winks with the eye: a lthough many proverbs contrast two behaviors, both units of this proverb speak of evil actions. More-

- ¹⁵ The ^prich man’s wealth is his strong city; over, the second unit of this verse is identical with the second unit of v. 8; this is a connective link that ties the passage together.

10:12 Hatred . . . love: t his verse describes interpersonal relationships, not salvation. when people respond in love to each other, they cover over the sins, or offenses, that would otherwise come between them.

10:13 t his proverb tells of the positive role that speech can have—that of speaking wisdom. t he rod refers to punishment, in this case deserved. t he term devoid of understanding comes from the hebrew idiom “lack heart.” t he one who “lacks heart” is contrasted with the one who is “wise in heart” (see v. 8).

10:14, 15 t o store up knowledge is a strong theme in the instruction section of chs. 1–9 (see 1:1–3; 3:1). t his set of verses contrasts the wise person’s pursuit of knowledge with the empty talk of a fool. Wealth is like a strong city. In biblical times only walled cities

t his hebrew word means an “insightful saying.” t he word is commonly associated with solomon, who spoke some three thousand proverbs (1 kin. 4:32; Eccl. 12:9). In Proverbs, the section headings indicate that both the two-line witty adage and the longer instructions of wisdom can be called by this name (see 1:1; 10:1; 25:1). In Job, even an extended philosophical discourse can be called a proverb (Job 27:1; 29:1). In Ezekiel, the insightful saying can take on the form of a parable (see Ezek. 17:2; 24:3). t he Book of Proverbs makes it clear that all of these sayings are exclusively the domain of the wise (1:6; 26:7, 9). t hey are intended to instruct us in the realities of life, the truth, and most importantly the fear of God (1:6, 7).

had any defense against enemy armies; likewise, a wealthy person is able to withstand the assaults of others.

10:16, 17 t these verses present the doctrine of the two ways: the righteous is on the way of life, but the wicked wander from it. t the phrase wages of the wicked is similar to Paul's expression in 1 cor. 6:23: "the wages of sin is death."

10:18–21 t these verses tell of the dangers of speech, particularly lying and slander. t the way to avoid these sins is to exercise restraint.

10:23, 24 t the word translated sport usually means "joyous laughter" (see Job 8:21; Ps. 126:2). a t times it means "hollow laughter" (14:13; Eccl. 7:3, 6). here the proverb uses the word in a completely negative sense. For the fool, wickedness is only a game. he makes up the rules as he goes along; for him losing is only in getting caught. But a person who has understanding takes a longer-term perspective. In the end he gets his way while justice comes upon the wicked.

10:25 t the short-lived nature of the wicked is contrasted with the stability of the righteous. a s in Ps. 1:3, 4, where the righteous are compared to a tree and the wicked to chaff, so in this proverb the storm blows away the wicked but cannot dislodge the righteous. t the everlasting foundation of the righteous is faith in God, much like the waters that nourish the tree of Ps. 1:3.

10:27 t this verse contains the first instance of the phrase the fear of the LORD in chs. 10–22 (see 1:7, 29; 2:5; 8:13; 9:10). t the tie of piety to long life and of wickedness to an early death is another common theme in Proverbs (see 3:1, 2).

10:28 hope . . . expectation: t he righteous have something to look forward to; the wicked do not (v. 24).

10:29 d different people see the way of the LORD differently. t those who are innocent see it as a shelter from the storm and the heat of the day. t those who practice iniquity see it only as a source of terror. t the viewer's perspective makes all the difference; the way of the LORD itself remains constant and true.

10:30 t his proverb presents a confident hope in the ultimate survival of the righteous and the final judgment of the wicked. In our limited experience, we might see the wicked succeeding and the righteous only struggling to live. But the final judgment (see Ps. 73) will reverse their fortunes.

10:31, 32 t these verses form another pair of sentences about true and false speech. t they may be compared to vv. 11, 13, 20, 21 and James 3. t his repetition with variation indicates the significance of truth and falsehood in both ancient Israel and in the modern world as well.

11:1 dealing fairly with one another is an outgrowth of the command to love one's neighbor as oneself (see 1 ev. 19:18), which in turn is an outgrowth of the central command given to Israel, to love God alone (see deut. 6:4–9). t hat is why false balances are an abomination to God, a term that refers to stomach-wrenching hatred.

11:2 Many proverbs contrast the arrogant with the humble, as this one does. t he hebrew word for pride comes from a root that means "to boil up"; it refers to a raging arrogance or insolence.

- 3 The integrity of the upright will guide ^cthem,
But the perversity of the unfaithful will destroy them.

the image pictures the presumptuous or arrogant behavior of the godless person. such behavior always leads to shame.

11:3–6 t hese verses form a series of proverbs that contrast the results of righteousness and perversity in people's lives. a s pride and humility are contrasted in v. 2, so integrity and perversity are contrasted in v. 3.

11:4 From time to time the proverbs speak of death as a time of reward and punishment. Riches cannot help with this. o nly righteousness has meaning and power beyond the grave.

11:10, 11 t ruly righteous people bring justice to all the inhabitants of a city, and the city experiences true peace—that is, shalom, meaning “things as they ought to be.” Many psalm writers cried for vindication of the righteous and for a cessation of evil (see Ps. 69:22–28). For the fate of a city without any righteous persons in it, see the story of sodom and Gomorrah in Gen. 18:22–33.

11:12 Patience and control are part of wisdom. a person who is devoid of wisdom, who “lacks heart” (see 10:13), despises his neighbor. But the understanding person knows enough to control his passion and to keep silence (see 17:28).

11:13 a faithful friend conceals delicate matters that an unfaithful person reveals. “I ove covers a multitude of sins” (see 10:12; James 5:20; 1 Pet. 4:8).

11:14 In modern times as much as formerly, leaders of nations need adequate counsel. s o do all individuals. we all need to seek advice from wise and trustworthy people.

11:15, 16 t hese two proverbs balance each other. t he first warns against rashly giving surety or a pledge for a stranger. t he second praises generosity; generosity begets honor. o ne of the greatest virtues is to be freed of possessiveness. t he members of the early church gave freely to those in need (acts 2:44, 45; 4:32–35).

11:19 Proverbs such as this remind us that the pursuit of righteousness is a matter of life and death.

11:21 t he term join forces is literally “hand for hand.” collective opposition to God's purposes makes no sense at all (Ps. 2:1–4).

11:22 a golden ring would be ludicrous on a pig's snout. t o the ancient Israelites, pigs were unclean and repellent. t he immoral person is compared to such an animal, no matter what the outward appearance might be.

11:23 t he term desire is used in some of the proverbs in a negative sense (see 13:12, 19; 18:1; 19:22), but here it has a positive meaning. t he righteous desire good.

11:24–26 These proverbs should shape our attitudes toward wealth: it should be shared. stinginess may lead to poverty. Generosity has the opposite effect. selfishness is foolish because it only creates enemies and dishonors God.

11:28 This proverb addresses the folly of trusting in riches. the second line can easily be misinterpreted to mean that righteousness always leads to success. the proverb actually addresses a person's attitude toward wealth. It is foolish to trust in riches instead of God.

11:30 as in 3:18, the image of the tree of life denotes the tree in the Garden of Eden (Gen. 2; 3). righteousness and wisdom are ways of recovering the lost tree of life.

11:31 here is a how much more proverb, one that argues from a premise to conclusion. since the righteous will finally find their reward (see 2 cor. 5:10), it follows that the wicked, who are defiant toward God and in conflict with his works, will certainly receive judgment.

12:1 the wise person knows that discipline and instruction will bring its own reward. yet the person who hates a reprimand is stupid, literally "stupid as a cow."

12:2 He will condemn: John's Gospel speaks of one being condemned already because of evil deeds, and deliberately clinging to the darkness even though the light has come (see John 3:16–21).

12:3 c contrasts such as the one in this proverb speak of a person's ultimate end; otherwise they would be proven false by countless examples of wicked persons who flourish while the righteous suffer. In the end, the righteous will stand sure, as in the image of the tree in Ps. 1:3.

12:4 Excellent wife, or "noble woman," are the same hebrew words used in the famous acrostic in 31:10–31. a husband whose wife is like the woman described in ch. 31 should rejoice in her, because her noble character brings him honor.

12:5, 6 our thoughts do matter. at the very least, they must not be deceitful. a person's thoughts determine what he or she says and does. the words of wicked persons are like a deadly ambush. 12:9 a better . . . than proverb, this verse contrasts a person who is a "nobody" but has a servant with a person who makes a great display but does not even have food on the table. Pretension and arrogance destroy those who indulge in them.

12:11 tills his land: Many proverbs contrast hard work with laziness. wise people work hard while fools waste time.

12:12, 13 yields fruit . . . is ensnared: wickedness hurts the wicked; righteousness helps the righteous (see v. 14). t his is another way of saying "whatever a man sows, that he will also reap" (Gal. 6:7). t he expression the root of the righteous also appears in v. 3.

12:16 at once: careless words can make a fool out of us, so we are wise to think before we speak. king david showed such restraint (see 2 sam. 16:5–12).

12:18, 19 Many proverbs praise people who speak carefully and truthfully. *s*peech reflects a person's character. t he words of a righteous person are faithful and true (v. 17), and soothe the listener.

12:22, 23 a n abomination is something that "nauseates" God (see 11:20). t he term conveys extreme hatred. t hus it is better to remain silent than to have lying lips.

12:24 anyone who wants to have a position of authority cannot dare to be lazy (see vv. 11, 14).

12:25 Anxiety loses some of its force in the face of a positive, encouraging word. Barnabas's encouragement of Paul is a great example of this (see act 4:36; 9:27; 11:2–30; Gal. 2:1).

12:26 o ur friends help to determine who we will become (see 1 cor. 15:33).

12:27 Lazy people do work, they just don't finish what they start. t he cure for their laziness is diligence—to follow through to the end.

13:1 a wise son listens to instruction (see 10:1, 17) and is better off than the scoffer—the worst kind of fool (see Ps. 1:1). some fools are naive and inexperienced, but open to suggestions; sometimes even those established in folly may rethink their position. But scoffers laugh at righteousness. *s*uch people are impervious to rebuke. 13:5 t he person who hates lying does not merely feel bad about it; he avoids it like the plague.

13:6 In the proverbs, righteousness is portrayed as a friend and wickedness as an enemy (see 11:27). wickedness hurts us but righteousness helps.

13:7 rich . . . nothing: t he paradox of greed causing poverty, and of generosity causing wealth, is a recurring theme in scripture (see 11:24; Matt. 6:19–21). t the point is not how much money you have, but what you do with it.

13:9 For an ancient Israelite, an oil lamp would be the only source of light at night. without it, a person had no way of seeing the path in front of him (see 20:20; 24:20).

13:10 t he word pride (see 11:2) does not refer to self-esteem or to a positive mental attitude, but to arrogance and a refusal to glorify God. such pride is self-serving and leads to conflict.

13:11 t his proverb describes the natural long-term consequences of cheating. People who compromise their honesty to get rich merely postpone the inevitable need to earn their keep. t he day comes when their cheating catches up with them, but by then their honest colleagues have become far better at obtaining wealth. cheating doesn't work anymore, and the wealth of the dishonest is diminished.

13:12 t he tree of life (see 11:30) symbolizes the achievement of a deeply felt desire. It is like coming back to the Garden of Eden.

13:13 will be rewarded: a person can either despise instruction or respond in reverence, understanding that the ultimate Giver of instruction is God. c correction is only for one's good.

13:14 fountain of life (see 10:11): In an arid land such as ancient Judah, a fountain provided water for oneself and for one's flocks. It was a necessity—a source of life. t hat is a very strong endorsement for the law of the wise. a fountain was also a picture for salvation (Is. 12:1–3).

13:15 Favor with God and other people—a good reputation—is highly desirable because it ensures that you won't be alone in life. It comes from good understanding. a good reputation was the first qualification listed by the apostles for deacons in the early church (a cts 6:3).

13:16 Many proverbs pit the fool against the prudent person.

13:17 A . . . messenger who acts wickedly will be discovered and his sentence will be harsh indeed. But a messenger who acts in faithfulness brings healing as he goes. In ancient times it was not unusual for a monarch to lash out against the bearer of bad news. t his proverb is a lashing out against a wicked messenger.

13:19 Few things are as sweet as accomplishment. But the folly of the fool is so deeply entrenched that he becomes ill if he leaves his self-destructive path. t he term used of his revulsion, abomination, is the same word used of God in other passages (see 11:1).

13:20 walks with: t he selection of friends (see 12:26) is extremely important. Pressure from peers is much stronger than many people realize.

13:21 Evil is a sinner's enemy (see v. 6), not a friend; a pursuer, and not a companion.

13:22 In the Book of Proverbs, wealth is a topic with many themes. wealth may come as a benefit of righteous living (v. 11; 10:22); but there is no guarantee of this (28:6). wealth cannot make a person good (11:4), and in the end it matters less than God's favor anyway (11:28). A good man knows this and trusts in God to meet his needs; the sinner tries to acquire and keep wealth and in the end fails.

7 Go from the presence of a foolish man,
When you do not perceive in him the lips of ^fknowledge.

8 The wisdom of the prudent is to understand his way,
But the folly of fools is deceit.

9 ^gFools mock at ²sin,
But among the upright there is favor.

10 The heart knows its own bitterness,
And a stranger does not share its joy.

11^h The house of the wicked will be overthrown,
But the tent of the upright will flourish.

12ⁱ There is a way that seems right to a man,
But ^jits end is the way of ^kdeath.

13 Even in laughter the heart may sorrow,
And ^lthe end of mirth may be grief.

14 The backslider in heart will be ^mfilled with his own ways,
But a good man will be satisfied ³from ⁿabove.

15 The simple believes every word,
But the prudent considers well his steps.

13:24 hates . . . loves: t his is the first of several proverbs on parental discipline. a parent's loving discipline is modeled after God's loving correction (see 3:11, 12).

14:1 a wise woman builds her house; that is, she develops a peaceful setting for family nurture.

14:2 Fears the LORD contrasts starkly with despises Him. I ove for uprightness will naturally coincide with love and respect for the most upright one of all, God himself. I ove for perversity will likewise result in hatred for him. Fear of the Lord as the beginning of wisdom is the central theme of Proverbs (see 1:7).

14:3 rod of pride: t his proverb addresses the dangers of foolish speech and the rewards of sensible speech. t he words of the fool shape themselves into a rod that is ready for his enemies to use on him. t his proverb calls to mind that many people are their own worst enemy; given enough rope, they prepare a noose for their own hanging.

14:4 clean: a farmer has to put up with some disorder in the barn if he wants the help of an ox. t his is not an excuse to be slovenly, but an encouragement to work hard.

14:5 t his proverb is a restatement of God's law: "you shall not bear false witness against your neighbor" (Ex. 20:16; deut 5:20).

14:8 t his proverb contrasts prudent and foolish people. wise people know what they are doing and why they are doing it. t hey have wise reasons for what they do, based on a knowledge of their choices. Fools, on the other hand, deceive so often that they deceive themselves. t hey do not know where they are headed.

14:12 only when it is too late does the deluded person discover that he is on the crowded highway to death. t he implication is not that he was tricked, but that he relied too heavily on his own "wisdom" rather than turning in humility to God. a way . . . the way: Many proverbs put their message in terms of two ways—one that leads to life and another that leads to death (see 16:25).

14:15 a characteristic of the naive person is gullibility. a prudent person is careful.

(heb. 'ivvelet) (14:1; 16:22; 17:12; 26:4, 5) strong's #200

t his hebrew word signifies an absence of wisdom. Except for two occurrences in the Psalms, this term occurs only in Proverbs, where the foolishness of fools is frequently contrasted with the wisdom of the wise and prudent (13:16; 14:8, 18, 24). Foolishness characterizes the speech of fools and the reactions of the impulsive person (12:23; 14:17, 29; 15:2, 14; 18:13). Foolishness affects the lifestyle of a person, causing his or her heart to fret against God (15:21; 19:3). Indeed, foolishness is often identified with iniquity and sin (5:22, 23; 24:9; Ps. 38:4, 5). a lthough Proverbs does not hold out much hope for separating an adult fool from his foolishness, the rod of correction is identified as a remedy for children (22:15; 26:11; 27:22).

14:16 t he phrase fears and departs from evil suggests fear of God (see v. 2).

14:19 In an ancient walled city, the gate area would normally be the weakest section of the wall. t he city engineers of ancient canaan developed complex structures to fortify this point. c ontrolling the gate of a city meant controlling the city; submitting at the gate meant an inability to overcome its defenses. In the end, the wicked will submit at the gates of the righteous.

14:21 despises . . . sins: see 1 ev. 19:13, 17. Jesus identified the command to love others, and not hate them, as second only to loving God (see Matt. 22:39).

14:22 o ne of the most significant pairings of words of piety in the Bible is the phrase translated mercy and truth. t ogether the words mean “constant faithfulness” or “true loyalty.” In the n t, the Greek equivalent of this phrase is translated “grace and truth” (John 1:14) and is used of the savior Jesus. t hose who plot evil know nothing of this characteristic.

14:26, 27 t hese proverbs interject the central idea of the Book of Proverbs—the fear of the LORD (see 14:2). t he fear of God provides both protection and a fountain of life (see 13:14; 18:10), an image that recalls the Garden of Eden.

14:31 oppresses . . . honors: t he theme of “as you treat people, so you treat God” is central to scripture (Ex. 22:22–24; Matt. 25:31–46; 1 John 4:20).

14:32 some of the proverbs describe deliverance from death itself (see 11:4). t he teaching of life after death is not a major teaching in the ot , but neither is it altogether neglected.

14:34 Righteousness exalts a nation: a lthough each individual is responsible for his or her actions, the effects extend to the whole community.

15:1 o ften it is not so much what we say but the way we say it that prompts such varied responses as acceptance and wrath. For a bigail’s gentle words to david when he was angry, see 1 sam. 25:12–34.

15:3 t hat the eyes of the LORD are in every place watching everything chills those who do evil and comforts those who submit to him (see Eccl. 12:14).

15:4 t he soft answer of v. 1 is now a soothing tongue, and the hurtful word of v. 1 is now crooked dealing. t he former is like a tree of life, taking us back to Eden (see 3:18; 11:30; 13:12); the other breaks the spirit, recalling the expulsion from the Garden (Gen. 3:23, 24).

15:5 t he truly wise person profits from instruction. t he term for the prudent in the second part of this proverb means “to be shrewd.” shrewdness can be evil, but here it has the positive sense of “street smarts” (see 1:4).

15:6 o ne house is a blessing and the other is ruinous; the reason for this lies in how the house was acquired and how it is being used. t he house of the righteous contains great treasure because it is founded on wisdom and a proper response to God. o n the other hand, the wicked never gain enough to suit them, and lose what they have because of their deceptive ways.

15:7 People reveal who they are by what they say. t he fool cannot help but speak foolishness.

15:8, 9 From time to time the proverbs touch on the subject of worship (see 16:6). worship from those who are not contrite or humble is an abomination to God (see 11:20). From Gen. 4 to John 4 scripture contrasts good and bad worship (see Is. 1:11–15). verse 9 speaks of yet another abomination to the LORD—the course of life taken by the wicked.

15:10 t his proverb promises harsh discipline for any person who forsakes the way of God. t hat is, discipline comes as a means of correction, not punishment. o nly the person who hates correction—the one who stubbornly refuses to listen, time and time again—will die.

15:11 t his is a “how much more” proverb (see 11:31), which impresses on the reader the clarity with which the l ord sees people’s hearts. t he hebrew word sheol, translated Hell, in this proverb connotes the fear of the unknown (see 9:18). when used with the word for Destruction, sheol means “the mysterious realm of death,” a dark and scary condition. yet death is no mystery to the l ord. a nd if the mysterious realm of the dead is known to him, then surely a person’s heart is transparent to him. such arguments from the greater to the lesser appear in both testaments.

15:12 t he scoffer (see 14:6) is used as a foil or comparison in Proverbs to expose more sharply the character of the wise. whereas the sluggard is a comic figure in Proverbs, the scoffer is a villain. he delights in scorning the things of God (1:22) and is incapable of responding to discipline (9:7), reproof (9:8), or rebuke (13:1). he cannot find wisdom (14:6) and should be avoided (see Ps. 1:1). his basic problem is displayed in his response to correction. he does not learn from it nor does he seek it. t he scoffer is adamant in his folly.

15:14 t he person with an understanding heart, another description of the wise, is never satisfied with what he or she knows. t he pursuit of wisdom and knowledge are life-long occupations—never fully realized in this lifetime. But fools, not knowing the extent of their ignorance, continue to pursue folly.

15:18 a wrathful person can stir up strife where there is none; but a person who has a slow fuse—who is slow to anger—soothes contention (see v. 1).

15:20 despises his mother: t his proverb is like the fifth commandment: “honor your father and your mother” (see Ex. 20:12; deut. 5:16). honoring and listening to parents is a favorite theme of solomon’s proverbs; this collection begins with the same exhortation (see 10:1).

15:22 t he greater the decision, the greater the need for advice. Even wise, capable decision-makers—whether common people or rulers—need counselors (see 13:10).

15:23 words are powerful: they can either build up or destroy. solomon devoted many of his proverbs to the consequences of speech (see v. 4; 14:23). Just as foolish words can bring about a person’s own destruction (see 14:3), a wise word can bring joy to all who hear it. t he apostle James wrote of the destructive power of words (in James 3:5, 6); the author of hebrews also exhorted us to encourage one another (heb. 10:24, 25).

15:25 God will bring about justice in the end. to the haughty, God will give a dose of humility. But for the widow, a completely defenseless person in ancient times, God will provide protection. scripture in many places describes God as a Protector of the defenseless (see deut. 10:18; Ps. 68:5; 146:9; Jer. 49:11).

15:26 Many proverbs focus on what God hates (see vv. 8, 9). Evil thoughts, for one, disgust him. t here is no such thing as “private thoughts.” we should pray with david that our words and the meditation of our hearts would be acceptable in God’s sight (see Ps. 19:14).

15:31, 32 He who disdains instruction despises his own soul: t he natural instinct for self-preservation is dangerous when it is time to listen to a necessary rebuke. For the relationship between discipline and wisdom, see 1:7.

15:33 knowledge alone does not make a person wiser; the fear of the LORD must accompany it. t he same is true of honor.

16:1, 2 t hese verses contrast human limitations with the sovereignty of God. Man can plan, dream, and hope, but the final outcome is from the LORD. r ather than “resign ourselves to fate,” we should trust in God. o ur loving l ord is in control of our seemingly chaotic situations. verse 2 elaborates on this theme. In addition to being sovereign, God is the final Judge. a ll the injustices of this world will be corrected some glorious day.

16:3 t he verb commit...to is from a word meaning “to roll.” t he idea is to “roll your cares onto the l ord.” trusting the l ord with our decisions frees us from preoccupation with our problems (see 3:5, 6).

16:5 proud in heart: Pride has everything backwards. It takes credit away from the Giver who gives graciously and awards it to the receiver who takes without thanking. t hat is why God sees it as an abomination, a word that throughout Proverbs refers to God's revulsion (see 15:26).

16:6 In mercy and truth can also be translated "by genuine piety." Atonement probably alludes to a sacrificial offering, but not apart from a contrite heart (as in Ps. 40:6–8). fear: r espect for God turns a person away from evil (see 3:7).

16:8 t he Book of Proverbs often speaks of wealth as the reward of wisdom and virtue (see 14:11), but not always. Righteousness is the real treasure.

16:10 t his verse begins a section that relates to kings (vv. 10–15). t he word divination refers to judicial decisions. Because the nation rested in the king's hands, his first responsibility was to obey God (see king Josiah's reform of Israel, 2 kin. 22; 23). Even the king had to submit to the dictates of justice.

16:11 Honest weights and scales matter to God because God is perfectly true. Falsehood and dishonesty do not merely cheat people, they also offend God.

16:15 life . . . his favor: successfully courting a powerful person's favor is like seeing rain clouds in a dry land. t he phrase about the light of the face in this proverb helps us understand aaron's benediction in num. 6:24–26.

16:17 a highway is a thoroughfare, a metaphor for the way a person lives habitually. a n upright person's "highway," or habit, is to depart from evil. h e does not compromise; he consistently strives to do good.

16:19 the proud: destructive pride brings down many winners and is contagious.

16:21 t his verse begins a small section of proverbs on the superiority of wisdom (vv. 21–24). wisdom is never easily gained or quickly achieved; that is why a wise person increases learning.

16:22, 23 t hose who possess understanding have access to a fountain of life that constantly renews itself and is available to everyone. t he phrase wellspring of life is an image of salvation; water was essential for life in the arid regions of ancient Israel (see Ps. 36:8–10; Jer. 2:13). t he wise know they are ignorant, so they keep on learning.

16:24 t he hebrew word for honeycomb is also used in Ps. 19:10, 11 with regard to the word of God. t he israelites saw honey as a healthy food as well as a sweetener. a ny comparison to it would connote positive, healthful effects.

16:25 contrasts of God's way with the way of the wicked figure in the teaching of Jesus as well as the proverbs (Matt. 7:13, 14). t his proverb likens the wicked to being on the wrong road. t hey think they are going the right way, but in the end it leads to death (see 14:12). death refers to physical death (as in 1 Cor. 11:29, 30; see also Rom. 6:23; 8:13; James 1:15; 5:20).

16:27–29 t hese verses all begin in a similar way, describing three different types of wicked people. t he word ungodly, or “scoundrel,” means “a man of Belial”; this person is a muckraker who uses bad information for evil purposes; he destroys people on purpose. t he perverse person starts fights between friends. t he violent man uses his power of persuasion to recruit others to join in his attacks.

16:31 o ld age becomes a crown of glory to those who walk the way of righteousness—one of the rewards of pursuing wisdom.

16:32 o ne of the most favored persons in the ancient Middle East was the military hero. yet this proverb suggests that one who is slow to anger and who rules his spirit is a greater hero than a returning warrior. controlling one's rage is more impressive than completing a daring exploit (see 14:29).

16:33 t he use of lots in ancient Israel (see v. 10) could easily be confused with luck. But when a lot was cast as a means of determining God's will, the people knew it did not fall indiscriminately. God exercises sovereignty over human affairs (see 16:4).

17:1 t he expression a dry morsel means “very little,” especially in comparison to feasting. But the feasting in this verse is tainted by contention. Feasting could also be part of a sacrifice to God, but even such a feast could be ruined by angry disputes between believers.

17:2 r eversals of fortune could happen if the wise servant was sufficiently skillful and the son and his brothers were undeserving. Much of the Book of Genesis describes the rise of an unexpected younger son over his older brother (see Gen. 25:23–34).

17:3 t he refining of silver and gold is an exacting process, involving skill and considerable heat and stress. t he refining work of God on his people often requires stress too.

17:4 t his proverb presents the evildoer and the liar as a parody of the wise. a s the righteous person listens with care to the instruction of a teacher, so the wicked person listens with care to the ruinous speech of the unrighteous.

17:6 o nly a grandmother or grandfather can appreciate this verse fully. yet all of us can see its central point: Grandparents adore their grandchildren, and children adore their parents. It is this strong bond of family ties that keeps generations together.

17:7 It is a contradiction in terms for a fool to speak well or for a prince to be a liar. It is not becoming for such inappropriateness to exist.

17:12 nothing in the woods matches the rage of a mother bear who has been separated from her cubs; yet there is nothing in life more dangerous than the fool in the midst of his folly.

17:15 abomination to the LORD (see 16:5): since God is a God of justice, he detests those who pervert justice—both those who declare the innocent guilty and those who declare the guilty innocent.

17:17 t his proverb lauds faithfulness. unlike fickle friends (see 14:20), a true friend is constant, and a real brother helps in times of stress.

17:18 Making a pledge for another person is not wrong, but this proverb does call for caution in such transactions (see 11:15). t he one making the loan may lose his own independence.

17:21 t he foolish child is one of the hardest realities to face (see 10:1). t here is no heartache so grievous as the pain of realizing that one's child is a fool, obdurate to God, and useless in life.

17:23 l ike false weights (see 16:11), skewed justice destroys a culture. a bribe is literally a "gift." In v. 8, the same hebrew word is translated positively as present, but in this verse the meaning is negative because they purpose of the gift is to pervert justice.

17:24 Wisdom produces a satisfied life. t he fool continues searching without finding any satisfaction.

17:26 o nly a perverse population would punish the righteous. l ike several other proverbs, this one describes what is to be recognized as an outrage.

18:1 t his proverb condemns any person who isolates himself from the community for selfish reasons. s uch a recluse is so intolerant of anyone who disagrees with him that he finds fault with all wise judgment.

18:2 a compulsive talker never listens, only pausing to plan what he will say next. Every speech confirms what a fool he is.

and is a fool.

18:5 show partiality: distortion of justice is all too common; many proverbs condemn it (see 17:23).

18:8 The words of a talebearer (see 16:28) are like delicious sweets. although they are fun to eat, they ruin the person's health. Gossip is fun to listen to, but the stories damage the listener's inmost body, or soul.

18:9 the word slothful means a person who is "known to be slack." It refers to a lazy person (see 15:19). Destroyer means "lord of destruction."

18:10, 11 the phrase name of the Lord (v. 10) is a way of speaking of God's person. the righteous turn to God for security. rich people, by contrast, tend to trust in their wealth (v. 11; luke 12:13–21). safe: God's protection is a prominent theme in scripture (see Ps. 91:1–4).

18:12 the hebrew word for haughty, ordinarily negative, can also be used positively to mean courage and daring (see 2 chr. 17:6). the path to honor, which the proud so covet, is humility.

18:14 this proverb affirms the value of coping skills. Sickness can be overcome, but there is no medicine for a broken spirit (see 15:13; 17:22; ls. 66:2).

18:18 whenever both sides agree on the method of settling a dispute, that method is a means to peace. the casting of lots was a biblical pattern for assistance in decision-making (16:33). Behind the lots was the sovereign power of God.

18:20, 21 stomach . . . mouth: Inner satisfaction comes from true and good speech. Death and life: the words people say wield great power (see James 3:2).

18:22 favor: Problems in marriage arise from breakdowns in communication or mutual respect, not from some flaw in marriage itself (see 12:4).

18:24 this is a difficult verse to translate because of confusion over an ambiguous hebrew word translated here as be friendly. this translation takes it to mean "to make oneself pleasing" as in 1 sam. 29:4. to have friends one must be friendly. But the word could also mean "to beat each other up" as in ls. 24:19. then the verse could be translated, "sometimes even friends destroy each other, but there is a Friend who loves more faithfully than a brother."

19:1 this proverb, one of the "better than" proverbs (see 17:1, 10), presents a poor person in a more favorable light than a rich person (see 28:6). In this case, the poor person's life is marked by integrity, whereas the successful person has gained his wealth through cheating and deception. the Book of Proverbs does not place a 19:4 t his proverb speaks of the effects of wealth and poverty on friendship. It does not describe how friends ought to behave, but how many friends actually do. I like a faithful spouse, a faithful friend is priceless (see 14:20).

19:7 t he behavior of brothers and friends who abandon a friend because of poverty should be contrasted with the true friend in such texts as 17:17; 18:24.

19:8 ultimately, to find good means to find the Lord in his word (see 16:20).

19:10 t he phrase is not fitting might also be rendered "is not a pretty sight" (see 17:7). For the wrong people to rule is an outrage.

19:11 discretion: Patience and restraint are virtues of wisdom (see 16:32); rashness and violent outbursts of rage are not.

19:12 t he descriptions of a lion's roar and dew on the grass are especially fitting when a monarch has all power. his rage may be violent and unpredictable, his pleasure gracious and restorative. a good king will display rage and spread favor for the right reasons.

19:13, 14 Continual dripping speaks of constant dissension within a family. A prudent wife is a woman who demonstrates wisdom or skill. Finding the right spouse is a blessing from God (see 18:22).

19:15 t he proverbs have no kind words for laziness, the habit of the sluggard (see 6:6, 9). t he proverbs call for mercy and compassion on the poor and the weak, but only contempt for the lazy (see v. 17; 10:4, 5).

19:18 on his destruction: r refusal to discipline dooms a child's future (see 13:24).

t his noun designates an associate, a person who is nearby or in contact with someone else. Most frequently, it signifies simply the second person in a dialogue (Gen. 11:3; Jon. 1:7). It can even refer to someone who becomes one's adversary in a fight (Ex. 2:13; 21:14). Quite often this word is used in connection with various words for lovers and loved ones, including the people commonly associated with the term brethren (see Ps. 35:14; 122:8; song 5:1, 16; Jer. 3:1; hos. 3:1). t he use of this word in the commandment to love one's neighbor (I ev. 19:18) prompted a certain lawyer to ask Jesus who his neighbor was. And ^bthe mouth of the wicked devours iniquity.
- 29 Judgments are prepared for scoffers, ^cAnd beatings for the backs of fools.
- 20 Wine ^ais a mocker,
Strong drink is a brawler,
And whoever is led astray by it is not wise.
- 2 The ¹wrath of a king is like the roaring of a lion;
Whoever provokes him to anger sins against his own life.
- 3 ^b*It is* honorable for a man to stop striving,
Since any fool can start a quarrel.
- 4 ^cThe lazy man will not plow because of winter;
^dHe will beg during harvest and have nothing.
- 5 Counsel in the heart of man is like deep water,
But a man of understanding will draw it out.
- 6 Most men will proclaim each his own ²goodness,
But who can find a faithful man?

19:21 a wise person commits his or her plans to the Lord (see 16:3). a person whose plans oppose the Lord (as in Ps. 2:1–3) may actually become God's enemy. But the person whose ways are from God will certainly succeed (see also 16:1, 9).

19:22 the poor person who has integrity has more honor than the successful person who has achieved his station or rank by deception (see v. 1). Kindness may also mean "beauty." Faithfulness is beautiful, whereas deception is a disfigurement of character (see 3:14; 31:18).

19:23 this proverb emphasizes the lifelong nature of genuine piety and the abundant rewards that it gives. The fear of the Lord is contrasted with all other pleasures (see 15:16, 33), because it alone keeps the believer innocent and provides lifelong satisfaction.

19:25 the simple person, the one who has yet to set his or her course in life, can learn by watching the scoffer suffer. the scoffer himself may not learn from his punishment, but anyone who is ready to learn surely can.

19:26, 27 the desire for a good son—or daughter—is the subject of several proverbs (see 10:1). a child who is abusive to his parents shames them and violates God's command (see 20:20; Ex. 20:12; deut. 5:16). the juxtaposing of this proverb addressed to my son for the first time since chs. 1–9 with that of the abusive son in v. 26 is deliberate. as an abusive son is shameful, so an obedient son is faithful and successful.

20:1 this chapter begins with a warning against the abuse of wine, or excessive drinking (see this theme more extensively in 23:29–35). a wise person takes the danger seriously. there is no wisdom in drunkenness, only brawling and confusion.

20:4 Because the lazy man (see 19:24) does not plow his field on time, he has nothing to harvest (see 10:5).

20:5 draw it out: the wise of ancient Israel knew something that modern counselors rediscover in their training and experience, that motivation for behavior is complex. a gifted counselor is able to draw out from a person genuine feelings and motivations, just as someone draws water from a deep well.

fear

(heb. yir'ah) (9:10; 16:6; 19:23) strong's #3374

this hebrew word signifies awe in regarding what is unknown or potentially dangerous. sometimes it refers to fear or terror inspired by danger or one's enemies (Ps. 56:4). More often, it means "reverence," particularly for God (19:23). the use of this word does not imply that one needs to be afraid of God, but it does demand the appropriate recognition and respect for God's fearsome qualities, such as his righteous wrath (see Ps 5:4–7). the fear of God—that is, the proper respect of God—compels us to abandon our evil ways (16:6) and teaches us wisdom (9:10). Perhaps somewhat ironically, fear of God leads to confidence in this life, for if we have submitted to the Almighty we do not have to fear any other power in this world. no one can harm us because the Almighty is our Protector (see 14:26, 27; heb. 13:6).

 4 repay

20:9 Who can say: t his proverb is a rhetorical question. Everyone sins, a theme that Paul addresses at length in r om. 3:10–23. anyone who claims never to sin is a liar (see 1 John 1:8, 9). But those who confess their sin obtain forgiveness (see r om. 4:7).

20:10 t he repeated emphasis on crooked weights and diverse measures (see 11:1) reminds us that cheating is a chronic problem.

20:11 by his deeds: a pattern established early in life may continue to mark a person for his or her lifetime. Even at a very early age, a person’s moral character may be revealed.

20:12 t his proverb speaks of what the LORD has made. we can use both our ears and our eyes to learn about God’s law (see Ps. 40:6; 119:18). t hey are physical means to getting the guidance we need. c ontrast this verse with Moses’ complaint of a stammering tongue and God’s response (Ex. 4:10, 11).

20:13 Sleep is a gift from God that restores a person’s energy and vitality. yet sleep can also be a matter of excess and laziness. hard work is necessary to make a living; laziness leads only to poverty (see 6:6, 9).

20:15 t his verse is not a comment on the morality of wealth, but a statement about the comparative value of wisdom and money. wisdom is simply worth more. t hus being poor and wise is more precious than being rich and foolish (see 19:1).

20:16 It is foolish to lend to a stranger without securing a pledge, or promise, of repayment (see 11:15). t he Israelites were not allowed to exact such pledges from other Israelites (see Ex. 22:25–27).

20:17 afterward: t he s criptures do not say that there is no pleasure in sinning, only that the reward doesn’t last (9:17, 18).

20:18 t his proverb is a maxim that moves from the lesser to the greater (see 15:11). we should always think before we act, and serious matters like war require a maximum of forethought.

20:20 t his proverb is about breaking the fifth commandment, “honor your father and your mother” (Ex. 20:12; deut. 5:16). t he term whoever curses is based on a word that means “to treat lightly, to regard as insignificant.” t he statement His lamp will be put out in deep darkness is a symbol of eternal damnation.

20:21 at the beginning: sometimes what seems to be sudden luck turns out to be a dismal turn of fortune. what seems too good to be true often is.

20:22 Because of our limited understanding and imperfection, we are not qualified to recompense evil. Instead we must commit our cause to God, whose vengeance is certain and perfectly just. God says “vengeance is mine; I will repay” (see Matt. 5:38, 39; r om. 12:17, 19; 1 t hess. 5:15; 1 Pet. 3:9).

20:24 Even a man with great strength does not fully control his steps, his life; his very breath is a gift from God. since life itself is God’s gift, only a fool assumes he knows its full meaning.

20:25 several proverbs warn against making rash promises about holy things, then withdrawing the promises later (see Eccl. 5:1–7). It is better never to vow than to vow and then change one’s mind.

20:26 t his royal proverb (see v. 8) presents discipline as a merciful act. to punish wickedness is entirely appropriate. when the wicked are sifted out and punished with the severity that their crimes demand, all of society benefits. verse 28 provides the balance to this principle. Ideally, the king in Israel mirrored God's character.

20:29 Each stage of life has its own advantages. t he young have their youth and vigor; the aged have their wisdom (see 16:31).

20:30 suffering cleanses. n o one wants to be hurt, but God can bring good out of any evil and make us better through hardship.

21:1 a person can look at a river and think that it is following a random pattern, but the water is following the direction of God's hand. s o is the king. t his world's apparent chaos is God's work.

21:2 in his own eyes: a person's own defense of his life, manner, or way may convince himself, but the final evaluation belongs to God (see 17:3).

21:3 t he proverbs occasionally touch on the subject of worship (see 15:8; 16:6). t his proverb affirms, as do Ps. 40:6-8; Mic. 6:8, and numerous other passages in the Bible, that righteous living is more important than sacrifice (see 1 sam. 15:22).

21:4 haughty . . . proud: see 16:18. t he second unit of the verse is difficult to translate. s ome versions render the problematic h ebrew word for plowing as lamp.

21:5 Planning typically leads to plenty, and haste to poverty (see 20:21). It is not wrong to plan, but it is wrong to plan what the l ord has expressly forbidden (see also 16:1).

21:6 s ome prosperity is good and some is bad. t he difference lies in how one gets it. A lying tongue has a total return of zero.

21:8 The way: t his antithetical proverb takes us back to the very beginning of the study of wisdom, the contrast between the righteous and the wicked (see chs. 1-9; Ps. 1).

21:9 a ncient Israelite roofs were flat and could be used as a deck or terrace. o n occasion people would build a temporary shelter on a part of the roof. h ere, the harried husband finds he prefers to live on the housetop rather than below with the nagging words of his wife.

21:10 h ere is a person whose passion is evil; hence, he has no compassion for anyone. wicked persons typically refuse to think of anyone but themselves.

21:11 t he fool in this text is the worst sort, the scoffer (see 19:25); a person who is simple has enough sense to learn from seeing the scoffer punished. t he wise always learn, the simple sometimes learn, but the scoffer is a lost cause.

21:13 cry himself: a person who is indifferent to people in need will find no one helping him when he calls out for help.

21:15 Justice is not a heavy obligation that weighs a person down. For the righteous, promoting justice is a joy. For the wicked there is no joy in justice, nor will there be joy in their final end (see 10:29).

21:16 The assembly of the dead: the term dead is a frightful one, meaning “shades” (see 9:18). death in these verses may speak of physical death rather than spiritual death (as is the case in James 1).

21:20 t his proverb contrasts the prosperity of the wise with the poverty of the fool (see 20:15). t he key lies in the way they treat their possessions. Fools abuse or neglect their own property.

21:21 life, righteousness and honor: It is possible that these three ideas go together to mean “a more abundant life.” t he pursuit of righteousness is its own reward. But added rewards are found in fullness of life, achieving righteousness, and receiving honor. all these things are gifts from the l ord (see 15:9).

21:23 t his proverb has a pun on the word “to keep.” If a person guards or “keeps” his mouth, he will keep or preserve his soul. t he converse of this is seen in the many troubles a person brings on himself by careless speech.

21:24 t his proverb applies four different hebrew words for arrogance to the scoffer (see v. 11). t he first two words, proud and haughty, mean “profoundly arrogant” (see v. 4). t he second two, arrogant and pride, mean “boundless arrogance.”

21:25 t he longing of the lazy man kills him; he is devoured by his own passions because he will not expend the energy to fulfill them. verse 26 describes further the insatiable greed of the lazy person by contrasting it with the generosity of the righteous.

21:28 a large number of proverbs focus on the false witness (see 19:28). t he problem with a false witness is that his lies pervert justice for others. Even if he lies only once, the lie may be circulated by others.

21:30 usually the proverbs use the word wisdom positively. But in this verse the word is paired with conjurers’ tricks. t hese tricks have no power over God, as Balaam the pagan prophet discovered in his encounter with the l ord on the plains of Moab (see n um. 22–24). true wisdom can be found only in God.

21:31 a soldier can do all within his ability to prepare for battle (see 20:18), but in the end no preparation can override God’s power. victory is in God’s hands.

22:1 t his proverb points out that a reputation has more value than possessions or wealth. a name cannot be replaced easily, not even with lots of money.

22:2 t his sentence eloquently repeats the theme of riches (v. 1): God makes both the rich and the poor. t his means that those who favor the rich over the poor (see James 2) have not only missed the point of creation, they have insulted the creator (see 14:31).

22:3 t he term prudent means “shrewd” (see 1:4 for a related word). t here is no wisdom in being reckless.

Religious Education

t he religious education of children was the parents' responsibility (deut. 11:19; 32:46). no exceptions were made for parents who felt they were too busy to teach. Even when children came of age and married, the parents' responsibility did not end; they also had an important part in educating the grandchildren (deut. 4:9). In fact, they often lived in the same house. t he Israelite father was ultimately responsible for the education of the children, but mothers also played a crucial role, especially until a child reached the age of five. during those formative years she was expected to shape the future of her sons and daughters. clearly, parents wanted to see the proverb come true: "train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it" (22:6). when a boy became old enough to work with his father, the father became his principal teacher, even though the mother continued to share in the teaching responsibility (1:8, 9; 6:20). If someone other than the father had to assume the responsibility of teaching a boy, then that person was considered his "father."

22:4 t he route to the good life—riches and honor and life (see 21:21 for a similar triad)—is humility (see Mic. 6:8) and the fear of God.

22:8 t he idea of just retribution is significant (see 21:7). Jesus' teaching on justice reflects the idea in this verse. a person who lives by violence is likely to die violently; a person who lives wickedly should not be surprised if he falls victim to crime (see Matt. 26:52).

22:9 t he words expressing the idea of generosity in this verse are "a good eye." a good eye observes the needs of others first. a bad eye sees only its own self-interest.

22:10 t he scoffer (see 21:24) should be expelled from the community because his influence is harmful to everyone. t he wise know that the scoffer is not a laughing matter, because he is laughing at holy things, at God himself.

22:11 a person who is marked by purity of speech and heart becomes the confidant of a good king. compare this proverb with Ps. 15, which describes a person who wants to become a friend of the LORD.

22:12 The eyes of the LORD (see 15:3; 21:2) are the final arbiters of knowledge and justice. t he eyes of human beings are simply not trustworthy. when the king takes his position seriously, he also makes decisions that are proper and upright (see 20:8).

22:13 t he proverbs about lazy people (see 19:15) provide comic relief by poking fun at how the lazy invent all sorts of excuses for avoiding work and risk. t hey will do anything to avoid doing anything.

22:14 t his proverb takes us back to the immoral woman, or the "strange woman" (see 2:16). her mouth is an open pit, destruction to anyone who falls there (see 9:18).

Sayings of the Wise

- 17 Incline your ear and hear the words of the wise,
And apply your heart to my knowledge;
18 For it is a pleasant thing if you keep them within you;
Let them all be fixed upon your lips,
19 So that your trust may be in the LORD;
I have instructed you today, even you.
20 Have I not written to you excellent things
Of counsels and knowledge,
21 ^pThat I may make you know the certainty of the words of truth, ^qThat you may answer words of truth To those who ⁴send to you?
22 Do not rob the ^rpoor because he is poor,
Nor oppress the afflicted at the gate;
23 ^sFor the LORD will plead their cause,
And plunder the soul of those who plunder them.
24 Make no friendship with an angry man,
And with a ^tfurious man do not go,
25 Lest you learn his ways
And set a snare for your soul.
26 ^uDo not be one of those who ⁵shakes hands in a pledge,

22:16 t he last of the proverbs of solomon in this collection deals with social justice. ultimately, all human affairs are in God's hands, even though at times the wicked prosper. God made both the poor and the rich (v. 2) and he will justly determine their destinies (24:12).

22:17—24:22 t he phrase the words of the wise marks a new section of the Book of Proverbs. t he content changes at v. 17. t hree elements distinguish this section: (1) the change from one-verse units to multiple-verse units, (2) section headings that are embedded in the text, and (3) the affinity of this section with ancient Egyptian wisdom texts, particularly the Instruction of Amen-em-opet.

22:17–21 Incline your ear: t hese introductory words call the reader to pay attention and to prepare to learn about and worship God. t he advice emphasizes strongly that a person's trust must be in the LORD.

22:22, 23 Most violations of justice target poor and afflicted people because they are weak and defenseless. But anyone who does this makes an enemy of God, who will plead their cause.

22:24, 25 friendship with an angry man: whereas the words of vv. 22, 23 are based on hebrew faith, these ideas are derived from observation of human behavior and interaction. t he Book of Proverbs includes both types of insight: revelation of truth about God, and observation of human experience (see 1 cor. 15:33).

22:28 t he ancient Israelites regarded respect for the posted landmark as more than a question of private property. t hey saw it as a basic part of civil life. People must feel a certain sense of public trust and fairness for society to function.

23:1–3 a big part of the training of the courtier would be in proper manners at state dinners and formal occasions. t he comment on a knife to your throat is prompted by two concerns: (1) rude behavior was to be avoided at all costs, and (2) too many royal dainties would likely make one ill.

23:4, 5 t hese verses call for moderation in work. do not overwork to be rich: although the proverbs discourage laziness (see 22:13), they also discourage any overworking whose purpose is greater wealth.

- 10 Do not remove the ancient³ landmark,

When it ⁷swirls around smoothly;
- 32 At the last it bites like a serpent,
And stings like a viper.
- 33 Your eyes will see strange things,
And your heart will utter perverse things.
- 34 Yes, you will be like one who lies down in the ⁸midst of the sea,

- 35 “They ^u have struck me, but I was not hurt;
They have beaten me, but I did not feel it.
When shall ^vI awake, that I may seek another drink?”

24 Do not be ^aenvious of evil men,
Nor desire to be with them;

23:10, 11 their Redeemer is mighty: t he tendency of evil people in all ages is to take advantage of the helpless. But the destroyer of persons needs to know that the widow and the orphan have a redeemer, a protector of family rights—his name is the living God. 23:12 t he hebrew word for instruction can also be translated “discipline.”

23:13, 14 he will not die . . . beat him: t his language was designed to motivate overly permissive parents, who were afraid of damaging young children with any kind of discipline, or of making rules and enforcing them. t here is no call here for abuse. l oving discipline does not destroy rebellious children; it does them a big favor.

23:17, 18 t he first proverb here sharply contrasts the vain envy of sinners with the fear of the LORD, the expression of piety that the proverbs repeatedly encourage (see 1:7). t he second gives the perspective that everyone needs: Present success—or lack of it—is not the final outcome. t here will be a future state fundamentally different from this world. t he word hereafter can also be rendered “glorious future” (see num. 23:10).

23:19–21 The drunkard and the glutton have no self-control, and this fact plagues them. hebrew culture gave a prominent place to eating and drinking, but it had little tolerance for drunkenness and gluttony.

23:24, 25 the father of the righteous: Joy comes to parents who see their children succeed. But when those parents have faith in the l ord, the greatest joy comes from seeing their children be faithful to him.

23:29–35 Who has woe: a long with Isaiah’s celebrated description of debauchery (Is. 19:11–15), this section is one of the sharpest attacks on drunkenness in the Bible (see vv. 19–21; 20:1). t he satire is razor sharp and the imagery vivid.

24:1, 2 Do not be envious of evil men: w hereas 23:17, 18 tells about the future to discourage envy of the wicked, this set of verses simply points out how unworthy the wicked are of any admiration at all.

Further Sayings of the Wise

- ²³ These things also belong to the wise:
- ^q It is not good to ⁴show partiality in judgment.
- 24 ^r He who says to the wicked, “You are righteous,”
Him the people will curse;
Nations will abhor him.
- 25 But those who rebuke the wicked will 24:11 t these verses speak with a certain confidence and understanding of life beyond the grave (23:17, 18). t his verse is a prayer to God as death approaches.

24:12 according to his deeds: Jesus’ words about eternal rewards open and close the n t (compare Matt. 5:11, 12 with r ev. 22:12). yet Jesus’ action on the cross will deliver those who believe in him from any condemnation (see r om. 5:18; Gal. 3:18; r ev. 22:17).

24:13, 14 here is one of the associations in the Proverbs of honey and the honeycomb with wisdom (see 16:24). wisdom and its pursuit, while rigorous, is good for the soul and can be pleasant.

24:15, 16 ultimately the wicked will fall. t he righteous can be assured of this not because they are strong, but because they have a redeemer (see 23:10, 11).

24:21, 22 fear the LORD and the king: t he hebrew text breaks the phrasing: “Fear God, my son, and the king” (see also r om. 13:1–7; 1 Pet. 2:17). t his proverb relates most fully to the davidic kings, who were God’s regents on earth; one way the ancient Israelites could show respect for God would be to respect the king. But the duty to honor civil authorities still applies to all people of all times (r om. 13:1).

24:23–34 These things also belong to the wise is a sectional heading that corresponds to the one in 22:17. verses 23–34 serve as an appendix to the preceding section (22:17—24:22).

24:23, 24 Israel’s basic concern with equity in judgment was not unique; but in Israel a concern for equity was tied to God’s character. since God does not show partiality, neither should we.

24:28, 29 verse 29 states the “Golden rule” (Matt. 7:12) in terms of what we should not do. Jesus said this is our most important duty.
24:30–34 the lazy person is judged on the basis of the shambles of his field. From this sorry state of affairs the wise take a lesson. the only concern the lazy have is for a little sleep.
25:1 after the first collection of proverbs from Solomon (10:1–22:16) and proverbs from foreign sources (22:17–24:22; 24:23–34) comes a collection of proverbs attributed to solomon, but which were not compiled until the time of king Hezekiah. the following observations can be made: (1) the wisdom tradition concerning solomon was prodigious; (2) Israel’s interest in wisdom was particularly centered in times of relative peace and a vital royal court life in Jerusalem; (3) hezekiah’s involvement in this activity was a mark of the strength of his rule and the sense he had of restoring solomon’s glory.

25:4, 5 Silver is valuable only after the impurities have been removed. similarly, wickedness needs to be removed from a king for his throne to be established rightly.
25:6, 7 Do not exalt yourself: knowing your place is a recurring theme in the Bible. It is humiliating to be told to remove yourself from a seat of honor. Jesus spoke of the same need for deference (1 luke 14:11). Whom your eyes have seen: this phrase reflects the custom in the ancient world of never looking directly in the eyes of a superior until told to do so (see ls. 6:5).
25:8–10 hastily to court: In our own litigious age, this group of verses has unusual relevance. seek to deal with complaints outside the court on a private level or even with an arbiter.

^f*So* a fool repeats his folly.

25:16 found honey: too much of even a good thing can cause illness and distress.

25:17 neighbor's house: the issue is moderation. too much "neighborliness" becomes an imposition.

25:19 an unfaithful man—annoying and undependable—cannot be trusted at all.

25:21, 22 the words of Jesus in Matt. 5:43–48 have direct ties to these verses. Coals of fire speaks of God's judgment (see Ps. 120:4; 140:10); the idea is that an act of kindness to your enemy may cause him or her to feel ashamed. this is just one way to overcome evil with good (see r om. 12:20).

25:27 much honey: Moderation in good things (see v. 16) goes with humility.

25:28 rule: self-control is a key part of obedience to God (see Gal. 5:22, 23).

26:1 snow in summer: a most unlikely happening in Israel. Rain in harvest is not only unusual, but disastrous, because rain at that time would cause the crops to rot.

26:3 rod for the fool's back: the fool has no internal motivation to do anything. he is no better than a brute beast whom someone else has to motivate.

26:4, 5 some people have called the two proverbs here contradictory, but that is not necessary. the phrase according to his folly appears twice as a play on words with two shades of meaning. on the one hand, it means "avoid the temptation to stoop to his level"; that is, don't use his methods, lest you also be like him. on the other hand, it means "avoid the temptation to ignore him altogether"; that is, respond in some way, or else he will become wise in his own eyes and his folly will get worse.

26:11 dog . . . vomit: a fool does not learn from his mistakes. the apostle Peter cited this verse and applied it to false teachers (2 Pet. 2:22).

12^g Do you see a man wise in his own eyes?

There is more hope for a fool than for him.

13 The lazy man says, “There is a lion in the road!”

26:12 Being haughty is even worse than being a fool. Egotism is the epitome of folly (see 28:11).

26:13–15 t these proverbs about the lazy man have a “can you top this” quality that provides comic relief; the lazy man is the object of many jokes in scripture. t this set of verses includes several (see 19:15). Each one belittles laziness and the many outrageous excuses people often use to justify it.

26:17 t he problem with taking a dog by the ears is that the dog will not like it and probably bite. t he same is true of getting involved in another’s quarrel. It’s an invasion of privacy.

26:20, 21 Fires do not burn without fuel; strife, or fighting, works the same way.

26:22 t he slanderer looks upon his nasty words as tasty tidbits, delicious morsels of raw gossip. Many people have an insatiable hunger for malicious gossip.

26:23 t he meaning of this proverb is not far from Jesus’ remarks to his enemies that they were like whitewashed tombs (Matt. 23:27).

n o amount of painting on the outside changes the value of the rotten interior.

26:24–26 a person who hates says one thing but stores up anger within. he may find that his hatred hurts him, when in his life there is so much falsehood that no one believes him no matter how gracious and truthful he might be at times. revealed before the assembly: w hen we lament the unfairness of the prosperity of the wicked and contrast our own situation to theirs, we need to keep Ps. 73:17 in mind. t he end will more than compensate them for the evil they have done (see r om. 6:23).

27:1 a s Jesus did in his teaching (Matt. 6:25–34), the wise of ancient Israel warned about a concern for tomorrow that overshadows the needs of today.

27:6 correction given in love by a friend is better than insincere acts of affection (see Ps. 141:5).

27:7 t hose who are full do not appreciate what they have, while to those who are hungry anything tastes good.

27:8 from its nest: straying from home can mean losing security and becoming open to new and powerful temptations (see the parable of the prodigal son, Luke 15).

27:11 t his is the first my son proverb in this collection; it is very similar to those in the earlier parts of Proverbs (see chs. 1–9). a child who grows up wise confirms that the parents who taught him or her were themselves wise (see 10:1).

27:13 n normally a garment given in pledge was only a symbolic collateral and was returned immediately, but not if the one making the pledge was unreliable or a stranger (see 20:16).

27:17 iron sharpens iron: a famous proverb, this verse may also be translated as applying to the will: “I let iron sharpen iron, and so let a person sharpen his friend.” t he idea is that people grow from interaction with one another.

27:18 keeps the fig tree: t his proverb speaks of faithfulness and reward. t he word master may refer to God.

27:19 a man's heart: t thoughts reflect a person's true character.

27:20 Hell and Destruction are used often in the Bible to describe the fearful aspect of death. t hey are like ravenous monsters. compare this proverb with the image of satan as a roaring lion (see 1 Pet. 5:8).

27:23–27 t hese verses affirm diligence and describe its practical rewards. t he model is that of the farmer who cares for his flocks and herds; if he diligently cares for them, in time they will care for him.

28:1 t he wicked flee when there is no cause (see Ps. 53:5) because of guilt and the fear of getting caught that goes with it.

28:4, 5 when a person abandons God's law, he or she loses all sense of right and praises the wicked (see r om. 1:28–32), and since true justice is from God, the ungodly have trouble understanding it. This is why the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom (see 1:7).

28:6 the proverbs balance their words on poor and rich people; they do not assume that godliness leads to wealth or that wealthy people are necessarily godly. As this proverb points out, sometimes we must choose between doing good and getting rich.

28:7 to be a companion of gluttons (see 23:20, 21) is to break God's law. This is why Jesus' enemies charged him with associating with gluttons: such accusations were attacks on his faithfulness to God (see Matt. 11:19).

28:8 Profit taken by usury is unjust. God will help the poor eventually, at their exploiters' expense.

28:10 causes the upright to go astray: these words resemble Jesus' warning against leading his disciples astray (Matt. 18:6). Paul vividly captures this kind of evil: "If anyone defiles the temple of God, God will destroy him" (see 1 cor. 3:17).

28:14 Happy is the man is a beatitude (see Ps. 1:1) about the person who is in awe of God. The person who never thinks of God faces calamity.

28:19 Tills his land is a call to hard work, a promise of reward, and a warning against frivolity or overindulgence in fun.

28:20 A faithful man succeeds. That is, faithfulness to God, not greed, determines success in life.

28:21 to exercise partiality (literally "to recognize faces") means to judge on the basis of favors or bribes instead of what is right.

28:23 rebukes a man: constructive criticism has more value than flattery, which aims only to win people's affection.

24 Whoever robs his father or his mother,

28:24 robs his father: t his proverb condemns breaking the fifth commandment, “honor your father and your mother” (Ex. 20:12). r espect for parents as a duty is a common theme in the Book of Proverbs.

28:25, 26 o ne of the main causes of strife is pride; trust in God leads to blessing. walks wisely: security can only come by trusting God, not by relying on oneself.

29:1 t he hebrew phrase for often rebuked is “a man of rebukes.” t he judgment on a person who stubbornly rejects God’s correction is swift and final.

29:2–4 t he words righteous are in authority can also be translated “righteous are great.” People will always respond to good government and justice. Justice is not served by bribes, nor is good government established that way.

29:5, 6 Spreads a net: l ies entrap liars (see 10:8). Moreover, the evil one is trapped by his own actions. Both the liar and the wicked are contrasted with the righteous, who run happily because they are innocent of any wrongdoing.

29:7 r ighteous people are concerned for the poor and help them (see 22:22); the wicked do not even consider the needy.

29:13 God is responsible for giving life to both the poor man and the oppressor. Jesus attested that God causes rain to fall on the just and the unjust (Matt. 5:45).

29:15–17 t he words rod and rebuke both speak of correction or discipline. a n undisciplined child shames everyone, especially his or her parents (see v. 17). verse 17 places the burden of correction on the parents. t he word translated delight speaks of rich, delicious food (see Gen. 49:20).

Vocational Training

since Israel was an agricultural society, much of the practical wisdom handed down from father to son was about farming. this included lessons on preparing the soil for planting and cultivating the various crops, as well as harvesting and storing the bounty. sons learned these skills by working alongside their fathers throughout their youth. they carefully observed their fathers planting, pruning, and harvesting. It was also the father's responsibility to teach his sons a trade or craft. For example, if the father was a potter, he taught that skill to his sons. while the boys were learning these skills, the girls learned baking, spinning, and weaving under the watchful eyes of their mothers (Ex. 35:25, 26; 2 sam. 13:8). If there were no sons in the family, daughters might be required to learn the father's work (Gen. 29:6; Ex. 2:16). such training was important, for "a child left to himself brings shame to his mother" (29:15).

CHAPTER 30 2^a Ps. 73:22; Prov. 12:1 3^b [Prov. 9:10]

29:18 where there is no revelation: the hebrew word for revelation speaks of revelatory vision, a word from God. without God's revelation of the law, the people flounder. true happiness is discovered within the constraints of revelation, in the counsel of the savior.

29:20 hasty in his words: Even a wise person may become foolish by speaking too quickly. It is better to be silent or to choose words carefully than to speak whatever first comes to mind.

29:23 see Ps. 147:6; God raises the humble and puts down the arrogant. Mary praised God for doing this marvelous thing (see Luke 1:46–55).

29:26 God controls human affairs. therefore it makes more sense to seek the Lord first before stooping to seek the favor of human rulers.

30:1 an entirely new section of the Book of Proverbs begins with the words of Agur. like I emuel (31:1–9), a gur was a non-hebrew contributor to the Book of Proverbs. he came to faith in the God of Israel in a foreign land. we know nothing about his father Jakeh, but the word translated his utterance may be a place name. Ithiel and Ucal were probably a gur's pupils. since the back-to-back repetition of the name Ithiel is unusual, some construe the hebrew letters differently and translate the text "I have wearied myself, o God; I have wearied myself, o God, and am consumed." t his would fit the context of the following verses.

30:2, 3 more stupid than any man: a gur means he was at a loss. similarly, his denial of knowledge of the Holy One is a rhetorical flourish as well (as is seen by comparison with his words of vv. 5, 6). a gur was stating with dramatic irony that he could not explain the puzzle before him.

- 4 ^c Who has ascended into heaven, or descended?
^d Who has gathered the wind in His fists?

30:4 t his verse gives the riddle that perplexed a gur. t he questions are enigmatic. t hey culminate in What is His name, and What is His Son's name, if you know? at this point, the riddle has no answer. t he ot would answer that “his name” is the l ord God, but did not have a name for his son. t his riddle was to remain unsolved until Jesus answered it for nicodemus (see John 3:13). t hese verses form one of the most straightforward messianic texts in the Bible.

30:7–9 two things: t his was all a gur needed.

30:10 t his proverb is unusual in warning against slandering a servant. slaves in ancient times were often regarded as less than a full person.

30:11–14 a gur wrote about a generation plagued by social ills such as lack of respect for parents, self-righteousness, greed, and selfishness. Ironically, such evils have plagued every generation, not just a gur's.

30:17 mocks his father: t he lack of parental respect spoken of in

v. 11 leads to this curse. t he language is strong and violent, as is the punishment of the one who abuses his or her parents.

30:19 t he term translated virgin could also read “young woman” in this context.

30:20 t his verse contrasts with the way of v. 19; this way is awful whereas the former is wonderful. t he adulterous woman regards her illicit sexual relations without remorse, as if she were finishing a plate of food.

30:21–23 contrasting with the four wonderful things of vv. 18, 19 are four things that are grievous, an upsetting of order. t hree are clear: the servant, the fool, and the maidservant are all in unexpected positions of power. t he hateful woman describes the sorry lot of a woman whose husband hates her.

30:24–28 t his numerical proverb speaks of four creatures that are small in size but amazing in behavior. Each of these small creatures has a behavioral trait from which wise people can learn.

30:32, 33 t he proverbs of a gur conclude with warnings against boasting and troublemaking. t he phrase put your hand on your mouth means "stop it." t he idea is if you are in the middle of making trouble and suddenly realize your foolishness, stop right then before things get worse.

31:1 t his verse begins a new section of material from a non-Israelite source. some have thought that the name Lemuel, meaning "Belonging to God," is a pseudonym for solomon, but this is only a guess.

31:2-5 l emuel's mother advised him not to give his strength to women. o ften in the ancient world a king would amass a large harem or involve himself sexually with many women. t he wisdom of l emuel's mother was that such behavior destroys rulers. s he likewise advised him to avoid intoxicating drink altogether, so that he could always have a clear enough head to rule justly.

31:8, 9 for the speechless: t he duty of a king in the ancient world was to defend the weak, to uphold the helpless. t hese ideals were rarely realized in that age or even in our own. But one day a king who is the defender of the helpless will establish his righteous reign (see 23:10, 11).

31:10 Proverbs 31:10-31 is an acrostic poem; each verse begins with a successive letter of the hebrew alphabet. some have thought that it continues the teaching of king l emuel's mother (vv. 1-9), but it may also be an independent, concluding unit. a s the Book of Proverbs begins with the Prologue (1:1-7), which gives the goals of wisdom in general terms, so now it concludes with this Epilogue (vv. 10-31), which presents them in a case study. t he opening words who can find position this woman as an ideal. t he phrase a virtuous wife speaks of excellence, moral worth, ability, and nobility, not just marital fidelity (see also 12:4). such a woman is the ideal of wisdom in action.

31:13-15 t hese verses emphasize both hard work and skill. t he woman they describe does things s he enjoys, finding her fulfillment in varied tasks. t he words she... rises while it is yet night describe her concern for others; she gives of herself to care for her family and servants.

31:16, 17 She considers a field; that is, she buys and sells and builds her own resources. t hese words are remarkable in light of the many restrictions placed on women in the ancient world.

- 18 She perceives that her merchandise is good,
And her lamp does not go out by night.
- 19 She stretches out her hands to the distaff,
And her hand holds the spindle.
- 20^m She extends her hand to the poor,
Yes, she reaches out her hands to the needy.
- 21 She is not afraid of snow for her household,
For all her household is clothed with scarlet.
- 22 She makes tapestry for herself;
Her clothing is fine linen and purple.
- 23ⁿ Her husband is known in the gates,
When he sits among the elders of the land.
- 24 She makes linen garments and sells them,
And supplies sashes for the merchants.

- 25 Strength and honor are her clothing;
She shall rejoice in time to come.
- 26 She opens her mouth with wisdom,
And on her tongue is the law of kindness.
- 27 She watches over the ways of her household,
And does not eat the bread of idleness.
- 28 Her children rise up and call her blessed;
Her husband also, and he praises her:
- 29^a “Many daughters have done well,
But you excel them all.”
- 30 Charm is deceitful and beauty is passing,
But a woman who fears the LORD, she shall be praised.
- 31 Give her of the fruit of her hands,
And let her own works praise her in the gates.

31:18, 19 her merchandise is good: one of the avenues the woman exploits is a “cottage industry” in which she acts independently.

31:20–22 the virtuous woman works not to get rich, but to give to the poor. she can be concerned for others because she has provided for her family.

31:23 the virtuous woman’s husband has a position in the gates as an elder of the city; some of his status comes from his wife’s reputation, not just his own.

31:24 Linen garments probably indicates clothing for women.

31:25 the virtuous woman’s own clothing is far richer than linen or silk; she is dressed in strength and honor.

31:26 any woman who opens her mouth with wisdom deserves praise, given all the information on the use and misuse of speech in the Book of Proverbs. a virtuous woman takes care to speak well (James 3:2).

31:28, 29 the virtuous woman is blessed by her family—by her children as well as her husband. the words of v. 29 are the blessing of her husband.

31:30, 31 Charm may be used for good or for evil; it is not necessarily bad. But its good use requires the fear of the Lord—the main theme of the Book of Proverbs.

THE BOOK OF

ECCLESIASTES

THE BOOK OF ECCLESIASTES is one of the most misunderstood books in the Bible. Christians have tended either to ignore the message of the book, or to regard it as the testimony of a man living apart from God. This is unfortunate, for the book asks relevant, searching questions about the meaning of life, and it declares the utter futility of an existence without God. Like all Scripture, the Book of Ecclesiastes benefits and edifies God's people.

Negative descriptions such as “cynical,” “fatalistic,” or “existential” do not do the Book of Ecclesiastes justice. There is too much evidence of robust cheerfulness throughout its pages. “So I commended enjoyment” (8:15) is a recurrent theme that pervades the book; in fact, the Hebrew words for “gladness” and “being glad” appear seventeen times in Ecclesiastes. The underlying mood of the book is joy: finding pleasure in life despite the troubles that often plague it. Those who fear and worship God should experience this joy; they should rejoice in the gifts God has given them.

Author The writer says that he was “the son of David, king in Jerusalem” (1:1, 12, 16), words that have led many to assume that the writer was Solomon. Evidence in the book itself points to Solomon: (1) the author had “more wisdom than all who were before” him (1:16; see 1 Kin. 3:12); (2) he gathered for himself “silver and gold and the special treasures of kings” (2:8; see 1 Kin. 10:11–23); (3) he “acquired male and female servants” in great numbers (2:7; see 1 Kin. 9:20–23); (4) he engaged in extensive building projects (2:4–6; see 1 Kin. 9:1–19); (5) he developed a great understanding of plants, birds, and natural phenomena (2:4–7; see 1 Kin. 4:33); (6) he declared, “there is not a just man on earth who does good and does not sin” (7:20; see 1 Kin. 8:46); and (7) “he pondered and sought out and set in order many proverbs” (12:9; see 1 Kin. 4:32).

Nevertheless, some scholars argue that Solomon is not the author. They point to two passages to make their case: 1:12 and 1:16. The past tense of the verb in 1:12: “I . . . was king over Israel in Jerusalem” may lead the reader to think that the author was no longer king when he wrote this work. But the verb can denote a state of action that began in the past and continues into the present. Hence 1:12 could be translated, “I have been [and am] king.” Also, the phrase in 1:16 suggests there were many kings before Solomon in Jerusalem. Since David was the first Hebrew king in Jerusalem, the argument goes, the writer must have lived many generations after the time of David. Yet we should recall that the history of Jerusalem can be traced to early Canaanite settlements. The kings of Jerusalem may well have included Melchizedek (Gen. 14:18), Adoni-Zedek (Josh. 10:1), and Abdi-Khepa (mentioned in the Amarna Letters) to name just a few. Therefore it can reasonably be asserted that Solomon is the author of this wonderful but unusual book.

Purpose Solomon probably wrote this book toward the end of his life, after he had repented of idolatry and his pursuit of foreign wives. Thus the Book of Ecclesiastes is both a monument to Solomon's recommitment to the living God and a guide for others through the pitfalls and perils of life.

In fact, Solomon might have written this wisdom book as a tract for other nations. That would explain why he did not write about the Law, and why he used the divine title Elohim, meaning “Exalted God,” instead of the covenantal name yahweh in the book (Ex. 3:14, 15). Solomon had entertained many dignitaries from other nations, including the queen of Sheba. The queen’s questions concerning the basic meaning of life might have prompted him to write Ecclesiastes to teach the Gentiles about the living God and their need to worship only him. Centuries before, Moses had called for this type of treatise to the pagan nations (Deut. 4:6–8). The nations that had heard of Israel’s success needed to know about the living and exalted God who had blessed Israel with wealth and wisdom.

Themes sometimes it is better to read the end of a book to understand better the direction in which the book is headed. This is certainly true of Ecclesiastes. The book should be interpreted in light of its conclusion: “Fear God and keep his commandments, for this is man’s all” (12:13). To fear God means to revere, worship, and serve God—to turn from evil and turn in awe to the living God. This was the attitude of Abraham (Gen. 22:12), Job (Job 1:1, 8, 9; 2:3), and the Egyptian midwives (Ex. 1:17, 21). It does not involve dread, but instead a proper respect for and obedience to our creator. Why should we respect and obey God? The Book of Ecclesiastes answers this question in its concluding verse (12:14): God will judge everyone—both the righteous and the wicked. Life cannot be lived with abandon, as if God will not see or remember the deeds of the past. For on the final day, he will call forth all men and women to account for their actions. The admonition to fear God and the expectation of divine judgment are the two great themes that conclude the book and provide an interpretive framework for the rest of it (see 12:13, 14).

The journey of Solomon to his conclusion “to fear God” is founded on the human search for meaning in life. In 3:11, Solomon eloquently expresses humankind’s dilemma: God has placed eternity in our hearts. A search for true meaning in this life—in money or fame, for instance—will only leave us empty-handed, because our souls yearn for something that will last. Our frustration arises from a hunger for fellowship with our eternal creator—the only one who can give meaning to our lives. In Ecclesiastes, Solomon takes us on a tour of all of life and concludes that all of it is vanity. Pleasures and riches lead merely to boredom and despair. Only a relationship with the one who created us and continues to care for us will truly satisfy. Troubles and uncertainty will continue to plague us, but even during these times we can find joy in a secure trust in our Father.

CHRIST IN THE SCRIPTURES

Ecclesiastes is a candid commentary on the emptiness and inner perplexity that marks the life of one who is disconnected from his creator. It's a journal of honest doubts, hopes, and fears. Because all people have "eternity in their hearts" (3:11), there is a purpose for Jesus to disrobe himself of his divine dignity and descend to our sinful planet. In that we bear God's image, he desires to enter our world to provide the necessary remedy in order to maximize our eternal potential. As we peer into the looking glass and see the sad state of life lived apart from the Lord, we recognize that only in Jesus can ultimate satisfaction, wisdom, and joy be found.

The Grief of Wisdom

¹²I, the Preacher, was king over Israel in Jerusalem. ¹³And I set my heart to seek and ^lsearch out by wisdom concerning all that is done under heaven; ^mthis burdensome task God has given to the sons of man, by which they may be ⁵exercised. ¹⁴I have seen all the works that are done under the sun; and indeed, all is vanity and grasping for the wind.

1:1 the title Preacher denotes a function or a profession. It literally means “one who assembles” or “one who gathers people together.” Thus the word refers to Solomon as a person who convened an assembly of the wise in order to explore in a formal manner the meaning of life. It might be better to transliterate the Hebrew word Qohelet rather than to translate it, for it seems to be Solomon’s pen name.

1:2 Vanity of vanities: this phrase translates the Hebrew superlative, familiar from such phrases as “song of songs” and “holy of holies.” Here it might express “the ultimate absurdity” or “utter emptiness.” This has led many to conclude that the Book of Ecclesiastes is a negative, cynical book that denies any meaning in life. Others have suggested that this book explains that life apart from God is “utter emptiness.” However, the book itself does not say this, for there is no qualifying phrase such as “except when one is related to God.” Instead, the book clearly says that life itself is “vanity of vanities.” The word vanity means “breath” or “vapor” and thus speaks of life as “quickly passing.” Wherever we read the word vanity in Ecclesiastes, we should think not of what is “meaningless,” but of what is “quickly passing” (v. 14; 6:12). This is one of the key terms in the Book of Ecclesiastes, for it is found 38 times there. The teaching of the Preacher is to realize that life is a fleeting thing that needs to be savored and enjoyed as a gift from God.

1:3 the senses of the term profit are: (1) “advantage” and (2) “adequate gain.” Here it refers to compensation or gains, usually in the commercial realm. The question is: what is left after all expenses are taken into account? labor: Both the noun and the verb carry negative connotations, referring to activities requiring exertion. under the sun: this phrase (also translated as “under heaven” in v. 13; 2:3; 3:1) describes life lived here on this earth, as God has been pleased to place us. In these two verses (vv. 2, 3), the Preacher has established one of his principal ideas: Life may seem pointless because it is quickly passing. It is the burden of the rest of his book to help the assembly of the wise understand how to truly value life because it does indeed pass so very quickly.

1:4 the term generation suggests both the human actors and the natural phenomena as well. with the verb passes away we have the first of a series of antitheses in Ecclesiastes. the earth abides forever: only God is eternal and everlasting in the fullest sense. But compared to the lives of humankind, the earth abides with little change.

1:5-7 The sun . . . The wind . . . the rivers: these three elements of God’s creation are seen to be going about in their expected courses, with little change and little effect.

1:8 All things are full of labor: what is true of the sun, wind, and rivers (vv. 5-7) is also true of all other temporal things. The whole world is made up of what could be called “the restless ones.” The eye is not satisfied: here a proverb is quoted describing insatiable appetite (4:8; 5:10; compare Prov. 27:20) in depicting the seeming pointlessness of the courses of natural phenomena.

1:10, 11 If it appears that something new does happen from time to time, it is only because people’s memories are short.

1:12 I, the Preacher, was king: there is a shift from the third person of vv. 1, 2 to the first person here. The writer, or perhaps a later editor, returns to the third person in the epilogue, 12:9-14. This is most likely a reference to Solomon as the author of the book.

1:13 under heaven: this is a synonymous expression for “under the sun” (vv. 3, 9); it refers to life as it is lived by people on earth. God: Ecclesiastes does not use the divine title yahweh, God’s covenantal name (Ex. 3:14, 15). Instead, the book uses the word Elohim for God 28 times, a word that stresses his sovereignty over all creation. The wisdom writers often use Elohim when they wish to speak of universal truth instead of truths that are peculiar to God’s covenantal relationship to Israel. sons of man: this is a way of speaking of human beings in a very general sense. may be exercised: this verb is used only in Ecclesiastes and means “to be occupied with” or “to be busy with”; it is associated with the noun task (see 3:10).

1:14 grasping for the wind: this phrase does not occur in the Hebrew Bible outside of Ecclesiastes. Seven of its nine occurrences (v. 14; 2:11, 17, 26; 4:4, 6; 6:9) follow “vanity” statements. The phrase explains the nature of life according to the Preacher. Life is real, but quickly passing; any attempt to seize it is as futile as grasping the wind.

Solomon's Search for Satisfaction
Solomon drifted away from God during his lifetime, pursuing different ways to achieve satisfaction. Only after many years of futile searching did he finally remember the true source of peace: a proper relationship with God. Solomon wrote Ecclesiastes to pass on this truth. Satisfaction can be found only by fearing God and keeping His commandments (12:13).
Solomon sought fulfillment in:	The result was:

The Vanity of Pleasure

2 I said ^ain my heart, “Come now, I will test you with ^bmirth; ⁱtherefore enjoy pleasure”; but surely, ^ethis also was vanity. 2 I said of laughter—“Madness!”; and of mirth, “What does it accomplish?” 3^d I searched in my heart how ²to gratify my flesh with wine, while guiding my heart with wisdom, and how to lay hold on folly, till I might see what was ^egood for the sons of men to do under heaven all the days of their lives.

1:15 solomon is not claiming that there is no use trying to straighten out or change anything. r ather, he explains that no amount of investigating or using the resources of earth will ever straighten out all that is crooked, twisted, perverted, or turned upside down (7:13).

1:16 all who were before me in Jerusalem: t his phrase does not rule out solomon as the author of the book just because he was preceded in Jerusalem only by his father david. t here were other kings including Melchizedek (Gen. 14:18) and a doni-Zedek (Josh. 10:1). t he city of Jerusalem had existed for hundreds of years before solomon became its king.

t his word basically means “vapor” or “breath,” such as the rapidly vanishing vapor of one’s warm breath in cool, crisp air. with this word, the Preacher described worldly pursuits—such as wealth, honor, fame, and various pleasures—as similar to desperately grasping at air (2:17). It is absurd and useless. Jeremiah used the same word to denounce idolatry as “worthless” (Jer. 18:15); and Job used it to bemoan the brevity of human life (Job 7:16). But the Preacher of Ecclesiastes used the word more than any other o t author. a cording to him, all of life is vanity unless one recognizes that everything is from the hand of God (2:24–26).

1:17 It was not wisdom that solomon judges absurd, but rather becoming “more wise” (2:15) and “overly wise” (7:16).

1:18 much wisdom is much grief: For all of wisdom’s other advantages, solomon confesses that much wisdom and learning are the source of pain, chagrin, and sorrow. It is well known that the very process of learning is an expansion of the awareness of our ignorance. For mortals, an increase of wisdom may only increase pain (12:12).

2:1 t he Preacher uses a literary device of conversing with himself as a way of describing his thought processes. mirth: a new test is proposed, following the test of wisdom. It is the test of “joy,” or “pleasure.”

2:2 solomon labels the lighter side of pleasure and joy as sheer madness, but even the weightier aspects of laughter cause solomon to ask if anything substantial is really achieved. a s solomon writes in Prov. 14:13, “Even in laughter the heart may sorrow, and the end of mirth may be grief.”

2:3 flesh with wine . . . heart with wisdom: here the test is an attempt to balance excess on the one side with learning on the other.

2:4–6 I built myself houses: solomon worked for 13 years building “the king’s house” (1 kin. 9:10), then he built “the house of the Forest of Lebanon” (1 kin. 10:17), and another house for his wife, Pharaoh’s daughter (1 kin. 9:24). he also fortified the cities of hazor, Megiddo, Gezer, Beth horon, Baalath, and tadmor (1 kin. 9:15, 17, 18). vineyards . . . gardens and orchards: solomon’s interest in the natural world (God’s creation) was prodigious (1 kin. 4:33).

2:7, 8 Maintaining the various buildings and gardens of the king must have demanded an extensive staff of servants. silver and gold: solomon’s riches were unsurpassed by the kings of the ancient world (1 kin. 10:14–29). musical instruments: t he meaning flocks than all who were in Jerusalem before me. ^{8g}I also gathered for myself silver and gold and the special treasures of kings and of the provinces. I acquired male and female singers, the delights of the sons of men, and ⁵musical instruments of all kinds.

^{9h}So I became great and ⁶excelled ⁱmore than all who were before me in Jerusalem. Also my wisdom remained with me.

- ¹⁰ Whatever my eyes desired I did not keep from them.
I did not withhold my heart from any pleasure,
For my heart rejoiced in all my labor;
And ^jthis was my ⁷reward from all my labor.
- ¹¹ Then I looked on all the works that my hands had done
And on the labor in which I had toiled;
And indeed all was ^kvanity and grasping for the wind.
There was no profit under the sun.

The End of the Wise and the Fool

- ¹² Then I turned myself to consider wisdom ^land madness and folly;
For what can the man do who succeeds the king?—
Only what he has already ^mdone.
- ¹³ Then I saw that wisdom ⁿexcels folly
As light excels darkness.
- ¹⁴ ^oThe wise man's eyes are in his head,
But the fool walks in darkness.
Yet I myself perceived
That ^pthe same event happens to them all.

- ¹⁵ So I said in my heart,
“As it happens to the fool,
It also happens to me,
And why was I then more wise?”
Then I said in my heart,
“This also is vanity.”
- ¹⁶ For there is ^qno more remembrance of the wise than of the fool forever,
Since all that now is will be forgotten in the days to come.
And how does a wise man die?
As the fool!

¹⁷ Therefore I hated life because the work that was done under the sun was distressing to me, for all is vanity and grasping for the wind.

¹⁸ Then I hated all my labor in which I had toiled under the sun, because ^rI must leave it to the man who will come after me. ¹⁹ And who knows whether he will be wise or a fool? Yet he will rule over all my labor in which I toiled and in which I have shown myself wise under the sun. This also is vanity. ²⁰ Therefore I turned my heart and despaired of all the labor in which I had toiled under the sun. ²¹ For there is a man whose labor is with wisdom, knowledge, and skill; yet he must leave his ^sheritage to a man who has not labored for it. This also is vanity and a great evil. ²² ^sFor what has man for all his labor, and for the striving of his heart with which he has toiled under the sun?
²³ For all his days are ^tsorrowful, and his work burdensome; even in the night his heart takes no rest. This also is vanity.

of the hebrew term so translated has long been debated. a n Egyptian letter found at a marna contains this word in a kadian as an explanation of an Egyptian word meaning “concubine.”

2:10 my eyes desired: solomon had limitless ability to fulfill any and all of his desires. labor: one of the Preacher's favorite words occurs here for the third time. It appears in the book about 31 times.

2:11 at the end of his grand quest for possessions and experiences, solomon concluded that it was vanity or “vapor,” a grasping for the wind. that is, even with all he had done and experienced, there was still a sense that nothing lasting or enduring had been achieved.

2:12 madness and folly: t his topic was introduced briefly in 1:17. t he two words together express a single concept, “senseless folly.”

2:13 t here is a relative value of wisdom over folly, but both have their limitations (vv. 19, 21).

2:14 the same event: some versions incorrectly render this hebrew term which means “happening,” or “event” as the word fate. t his is one of the Preacher's favorite words (vv. 14, 15; 3:19; 9:2, 3, 11). here, the inevitable event is death. Both the wise and the foolish must die.

2:17 such hatred of life is astonishing since the one who finds wisdom also finds life, according to Prov. 3:16; 8:35. But the Preacher's dissatisfaction was related to the quickly passing nature of everything (1:2), including even the good things; they were a grasping for the wind (1:14).

2:20 labor in which I had toiled: t his could refer either to all the toil he had undertaken or, more probably, to the “earnings” he had gained.

2:21 t he noun skill is found only in Ecclesiastes (v. 21; 4:4). It depicts one who is expert at a craft. great evil: t he term evil often has a sense of moral evil; here, however, it may mean “calamity” or “ruin.” t here is a sense of sadness that runs through this section. n othing that we gain in this life can be carried on into the life to come.

2:24 t his translation, with most interpreters, assumes that the comparative form—better—is to be supplied here, though it is missing in the hebrew text; it is in agreement with later passages, see 3:12; 5:18; 8:15. t he Preacher concludes that all good is located only in God. eat and drink . . . good in his labor: t his repeated refrain marks one of the central affirmations of Ecclesiastes (vv. 24–26; 3:12, 13; 3:22; 5:18–20; 8:15; 9:7); in the midst of a world of trouble, a believer is able to seize the moment in joy from God. o nly God supplies the key to the meaning of life. without him, genuine meaning, satisfaction, and enjoyment in life are ultimately elusive. from the hand of God: t his figure of speech announces that even such mundane acts as eating, drinking, and earning a paycheck are gifts from God.

God. ²⁵For who can eat, or who can have enjoyment, ⁹more than I? ²⁶For God gives wisdom and knowledge and joy to a man who is good in His sight; but to the sinner He gives the work of gathering and collecting, that ^whe may give to him who is good before God. This also is vanity and grasping for the wind.

The God-Given Task

^{9h} What profit has the worker from that in which he labors? ¹⁰ⁱ I have seen the God-given task with which the sons of men are to be occupied. ¹¹ He has made everything beautiful in its time. Also He has put eternity in their hearts, except that ^jno one can find out the work that God does from beginning to end.
¹² I know that nothing is ^kbetter for them than to rejoice, and to do good in their lives, ¹³ and also that ^levery man should eat and drink and enjoy the good of all his labor—it is the gift of God.

2:25 more than I: an alternative meaning of this phrase, “apart from God,” may be more appropriate in this context. Believers pray before their meals in order to affirm that God is the great Giver of all good gifts. They can enjoy the food on their plates only when they recognize that fact.

2:26 God gives: one of the words used most frequently in Ecclesiastes to describe God’s relationship to individuals is the verb “to give.” It appears 11 times with God as subject.

3:1–15 This poem speaks with eloquence of the role of time in the life of the believer. Some regard the Book of Ecclesiastes as describing life apart from God, but clearly this text describes life that is lived in relationship with God. Through these words, the Preacher is not teaching that everything has an opportune time according to which one should choose one action or the other. Rather, he teaches that all events are in the hand of God, who makes everything happen in the time he judges appropriate. Illustrating this comforting assertion, the Preacher turns to 14 pairs of opposites in vv. 2–8.

3:1 a season . . . A time: Both words are usually regarded as being specific points in time rather than a continuity of time. under heaven: that is, life “under the sun,” the sphere in which human life is lived.

3:2 born . . . die: the pairs of words in these verses are natural events in human life, and all are under the hand of the living God.

3:3 A time to kill: In the plan of God, there is a time for executing murderers (Gen. 9:6) and for going to war against enemies designated by God. A time to break down: there is a time for dismantling walls, stone buildings, or even nations (Is. 5:5; Jer. 18:7, 9).

3:4 weep . . . laugh: God’s plan includes both sorrows and joys. Believers do not mourn in the same way as unbelievers (1 Thess. 4:13), but we do mourn (Matt. 5:4). dancing and leaping are natural ways of expressing laughter, pleasure, and joy in the presence of the Lord (Ex. 15:20; Ps. 149:2, 3; 150:4) and in times of personal happiness (l uke 15:25).

3:5 In times of peace, stones were cleared from the fields, allowing for cultivation. In wartime, the rocks were thrown on the fields to make them unusable (2 Kin. 3:19, 25). to embrace: In this context the words describe the sexual embrace.

3:6 to keep . . . to throw away: there is a period of life in which one wishes to accumulate things for enjoyment and memories; later in life, one needs to work out ways to dispose of what has been accumulated.

3:7 when bad news came, it was customary to rip one’s garments to show grief (2 sam. 13:31). when the problem passed, it was just as well to sew the garment back together. silence . . . speak: see the two contrary ways of responding to a fool (Prov. 26:4, 5).

3:8 In this verse the first part names the positive love first, then the negative hate. the second part uses the reverse order, negative then positive, to end with peace.

3:9 What profit: this is the same question posed in 1:3. the answer here is that all of life unfolds the appointment of God. all the toiling of man cannot change the times, circumstances, and control of events that God has reserved to himself.

3:10 one of the words that is unique to the Book of Ecclesiastes, task may have a neutral connotation as here (see 5:3; 8:16) or a negative connotation (something burdensome, as in 1:13; 2:23, 26; 4:8; 5:14).

3:11 all of God’s creation is beautiful. the point is that God makes everything that way in its time. From the divine perspective, there is no ugliness in the events of our lives (3:1–8). Eternity in their hearts refers to a deep-seated, compulsive drive to transcend our mortality by knowing the meaning and destiny of the world. Because we are made in the image of God, we have an inborn inquisitiveness about eternal realities. we can find peace only when we come to know our eternal creator. Even then, we know God only in part (1 cor. 13:12). from beginning to end: all we see is the micro-moment of our own existence in the grand span of eternity. thus the scriptures call people to live in robust faith during times of trial and pain; in the grand scheme of things, God will make everything beautiful.

3:12, 13 nothing is better: as in 2:24, the advice of the Preacher is to seize the day in the joy of God. rejoice . . . enjoy: Biblical faith is a call for joy, even when we live in a wicked world and under terrible stress; this is because we find true joy in the living God.

is done under the sun.

The Vanity of Selfish Toil

⁴ Again, I saw that for all toil and every skillful work a man is envied by his neighbor. This also is vanity and grasping for the wind.

⁵ ^d The fool folds his hands
And consumes his own flesh.

⁶ ^e Better a handful with quietness Than both hands full, together with toil and grasping for the wind.

3:14 God’s works have a durable quality to them. a s deut. 4:2; 12:32; Prov. 30:6 advise, nothing may be added and nothing taken away. should fear: t he “fear” of God in wisdom literature refers to true piety, not terror (5:7; 12:13).

3:16, 17 t he term judgment may also be translated “justice,” giving an even more striking contrast to these words. It was outrageous that in the very establishments where people should expect justice, they could find only wickedness. t he Preacher warns the wicked judges that God, the final judge, will come, rectify all wrongdoing, and bring true justice. t his theme is so prominent in the book that solomon repeats it in the conclusion (12:14), and he raises it often in the course of his argument (9:1; 11:9).

3:18 tests them: t he basic meaning of the verb is “to choose, select, purify, test.” d eath is the great leveler of all persons. In that regard, humans are no different than animals.

3:19 one breath: t he hebrew expression might be translated “one spirit” or “one wind.” t he phrase in this case describes breath as the sign and symbol of life (see 8:8; see also Gen. 6:17; 7:15, 22). In this, humanity and animals are alike (but see v. 21). advantage: t his word appears only here in Ecclesiastes. It is also found in Prov. 14:23: “In all labor there is profit,” and in Prov. 21:5: “t he plans of the diligent lead surely to plenty.”

3:20, 21 All go to one place: Both humans and beasts die and go to the grave. But this is not the end for human beings—they will face eternal life or death. t he rhetorical question who knows occurs six times in the hebrew Bible outside of Ecclesiastes (2 sam. 12:22; Esth. 4:14; Ps. 90:11; Prov. 24:22; Joel 2:14; John. 3:9) and four times in Ecclesiastes (2:19; 3:21; 6:12; 8:1). People and animals differ; their bodies go back to the dust from which they came, but the human spirit is immortal.

3:22 better: a s in v. 12 and 2:24, there is a blessing given to human-kind in terms of ordinary pleasures. his heritage: t he allotment that God has designated may include material possessions (2:21; 11:2) or the pleasures that come from them (2:10; 3:22; 5:17, 18; 9:9).

4:1 here is another complaint that threatens the plan of God. so much pain can come to the downtrodden that they may even despair of life (1 kin. 19:4; Job 3:3–10). o nly when the oppressed go into the house of God will they gain perspective for possible recovery (5:1–6; Ps. 73:17). they have no comforter: t he absence of anyone to offer comfort only increases the pain and frustration.

4:2 I praised the dead: Being without a comforter is often worse than death itself.

4:3 he who has never existed: so powerfully wrong and so lonely is the suffering of the oppressed, that solomon, with a good deal of poetic license similar to Job 3:3–10, argues that nonexistence could be preferred over existence.

4:4 a man is envied by his neighbor: t o the previous obstacles to accepting that God’s plan encompasses everything is now added a fourth: the envy and cruel competition found in the world.

4:5, 6 two proverbs follow. The fool: t here are numerous statements in the Book of Proverbs about the self-destructive nature of laziness. a handful: Moderation is preferred to overexertion. In place of the sometimes cruel competition of the marketplace, solomon recommended: “Better is a little with righteousness, than vast revenues without justice” (Prov. 16:8).

⁷Then I returned, and I saw vanity under the sun:

- ⁸ There is one alone, without² companion:
He has neither son nor brother.
Yet there is no end to all his labors,
Nor is his^f eye satisfied with riches.
But^g he never asks,
“For whom do I toil and deprive myself of^h good?”
This also is vanity and a³ grave misfortune.

The Value of a Friend

- ⁹ Two are better than one,
Because they have a good reward for their labor.
¹⁰ For if they fall, one will lift up his companion.
But woe to him who is alone when he falls,
For he has no one to help him up.
¹¹ Again, if two lie down together, they will keep warm;
But how can one be warm alone?
¹² Though one may be overpowered by another, two can withstand him.
And a threefold cord is not quickly broken.

Popularity Passes Away

- ¹³ Better a poor and wise youth
Than an old and foolish king who will be admonished no more.
¹⁴ For he comes out of prison to be king,
Although⁴ he was born poor in his kingdom.

⁸ ^f Prov. 27:20; Eccl. 5:10; [1 John 2:16]
⁹ Ps. 39:6 ^h Eccl. 2:18-21 ² ⁱ it. a second ³ ⁱ it. evil task
¹⁴ ⁴ ^t he youth

- ¹⁵ I saw all the living who walk under the sun;
They were with the second youth who stands in his place.
¹⁶ There was no end of all the people⁵ over whom he was made king;
Yet those who come afterward will not rejoice in him.
Surely this also is vanity and grasping for the wind.

Fear God, Keep Your Vows

⁵ Walk ^a prudently when you go to the house of God; and draw near to hear rather ^b than to give the sacrifice of fools, for they do not know that they do evil.

- ² Do not be ^c rash with your mouth,
And let not your heart utter anything hastily before God.
For God is in heaven, and you on earth;
Therefore let your words ^d be few.
³ For a dream comes through much activity,
And ^e a fool's voice is known by his many words.

- ⁴ ^f When you make a vow to God, do not delay to ^g pay it;
For He has no pleasure in fools.
Pay what you have vowed—
⁵ ^h Better not to vow than to vow and not pay.

⁶ Do not let your ⁱ mouth cause your flesh to sin, ^j nor say before the messenger of God that it was an error. Why should God be angry at your ¹ excuse and destroy the work of your hands? ⁷ For in the multitude of dreams and many words there is also vanity. But ^k fear God.

¹⁶ ⁵ ⁱ it. to all before whom he was to be

4:7, 8 t he problem of sadness and loneliness is another obstacle to accepting the fact that God has a plan that embraces everything. consider the person who has no family, not even an heir to whom he can leave all for which he has worked so hard. In 4:1 there is “no comfort.” In 4:4–6 there is no rest. In 4:8 there is no companion. grave misfortune: t his literally refers to an evil or burdensome task (3:10).
4:9–12 t throughout this section there is an emphasis on the obvious benefits of companions. t he intimacy and sharing of life brings relief for the problem of isolation and loneliness. a companion can offer assistance, comfort, and defense. threefold cord: t he Preacher uses this proverbial saying to clinch his case about the value of friends.
4:13, 14 Before the Preacher lists the final obstacle (vv. 14–16) to believing in God’s good plan, he first places the answer in proverbial form. Popularity, even in the form of royal power, is elusive. In one case, an old king had been born to the throne but becomes so foolish and senile that he cannot discern that his days for ruling are over. In another case, a young man, like Joseph, may rise from prison to take the throne (Gen. 41:14, 37–41).
4:16 those who come afterward: Even the young man who replaces his predecessor will share the old king’s fate. today’s hero may become tomorrow’s beggar.

5:1 Walk prudently: I literally, this phrase is “guard your feet” when you go to worship God. It means to behave yourself. t he idea of righteous behavior is rephrased at the end of the section in the words: “But fear God” (5:7). to hear: a s is common in the prophets, there is a warning to be circumspect about sacrifice. God has no pleasure in those who do all the right things for all the wrong reasons (Is. 1:10–15). the sacrifice of fools: a s the prophet samuel warned saul, “Behold, to obey is better than sacrifice, and to heed than the fat of rams” (1 sam. 15:22).
5:2 God is in heaven . . . you on earth: t he essential contrast between God’s righteous might and our sinful mortality should cause us to revere the almighty (see v. 7).
5:4, 5 o ne should not attempt to bribe God with a hasty vow. t he first part of this verse is almost identical to deut. 23:21. see the later example of the lie of a naniass and sapphira (acts 5:1–11).
5:6 a priest or prophet or one of God’s angels is the messenger of God who would hear such excuses for unfulfilled vows (hag. 1:13; Mal. 2:7).
5:7 to fear God, a central theme of the Book of Ecclesiastes, does not mean to be afraid of God (Ex. 20:2). It means to have reverence, awe, and wonder in response to his glory. For the wisdom writers (Job 1:1; Ps. 111:10; Prov. 1:7), “to fear God” means to respond to him correctly, in true piety.

The Vanity of Gain and Honor

⁸If you ¹see the oppression of the poor, and the violent ²perversion of justice and righteousness in a province, do not marvel at the matter; for ^mhigh official watches over high official, and higher officials are over them.

⁹Moreover the profit of the land is for all; even the king is served from the field.

¹⁰ He who loves silver will not be satisfied with silver;
Nor he who loves abundance, with increase.
This also is vanity.

¹¹ When goods increase,
They increase who eat them;
So what profit have the owners
Except to see them with their eyes?

¹² The sleep of a laboring man is sweet,
Whether he eats little or much;
But the abundance of the rich will not permit him to sleep.

¹³ ⁿThere is a severe evil which I have seen under the sun:
Riches kept for their owner to his hurt.

¹⁴ But those riches perish through ³misfortune;
When he begets a son, there is nothing in his hand.

¹⁵ ^oAs he came from his mother's womb, naked shall he return,
To go as he came;
And he shall take nothing from his labor

¹⁶ And this also is a severe evil—
Just exactly as he came, so shall he go.
And ^pwhat profit has he ^qwho has labored for the wind?
¹⁷ All his days ^rhe also eats in darkness,
And he has much sorrow and sickness and anger.

¹⁸Here is what I have seen: ^s*It is* good and fitting for one to eat and drink, and to enjoy the good of all his labor in which he toils under the sun all the days of his life which God gives him; ^tfor it is his ⁴heritage. ¹⁹As for ^uevery man to whom God has given riches and wealth, and given him power to eat of it, to receive his ⁵heritage and rejoice in his labor—this is the ^vgift of God. ²⁰For he will not dwell unduly on the days of his life, because God keeps him busy with the joy of his heart.

6 There ^ais an evil which I have seen under the sun, and it is common among men: ²A man to whom God has given riches and wealth and honor, ^bso that he lacks nothing for himself of all he desires; ^cyet God does not give him power to eat of it, but a foreigner consumes it. This is vanity, and it is an evil ¹affliction.

³If a man begets a hundred children and lives many years, so that the days of his years are many, but his soul is not satisfied with goodness, or ^dindeed he has no burial, I say ^ethat ²a stillborn child is better than he— ⁴for it comes in vanity

5:9 for all . . . king: all people live by God's grace in his provision for the earth.

5:10 not be satisfied: the topic of an insatiable appetite is addressed for the third time (1:8; 4:8). desire always outruns possessions, no matter how vast acquisitions may grow.

5:12 there are few things so satisfying in life as sleep following a hard day's work; but the greedy rarely enjoy decent rest.

5:14 Misfortune literally refers to a "worthless task" (compare 3:10).

5:15 naked shall he return: the maxim that "you can't take it with you" is affirmed here (2:21).

5:16 labored for the wind: the wording is similar to "grasping for the wind" (1:14).

5:17 darkness . . . anger: the frugal lifestyle of the covetous prevents them from enjoying what they do have (contrast 2:24–26; 3:12, 13).

5:19 God has separated the gift of enjoying something from the gift of the object itself so that we might be driven back to the Giver.

5:20 keeps him busy: the literal meaning of the verb is debated, but it appears to be a form of the verb meaning "to answer." God keeps a person occupied and delighted primarily with himself and then with the gifts he gives. joy of his heart: the Preacher uses the word joy in two ways: (1) "enjoyment," an internal sense of pleasure (2:10, 26; 4:16; 9:7; 10:19) and (2) "pleasure," pleasurable actions (2:1, 2, 10; 7:4; 11:9).

6:2 God does not give him power: Prosperity without the divine gift of enjoyment amounts to nothing (5:19).

6:3 sometimes the achievement of the greatest of goals becomes hollow when there is no decent end to life. stillborn child: ordinarily a great sadness, the child who does not live is considered to be better off than the person who has lived poorly. If life is nothing more than a meaningless journey to death, then a stillborn is better off, for that child reaches the end of the worthless journey with less pain (vv. 4–6).

labor

(heb. 'amal) (2:11; 5:18; Ps. 105:44; Jer. 20:18) strong's #5999 the noun means "toil," or work for material gain (Ps. 127:1; Prov. 16:26), but it can also mean "trouble" or "sorrow" (see Job 3:10). the effort required for work and human achievement produces "sorrow" and "troubles" in the sense that it can never satisfy the deeper needs of the human soul (6:7). however, when believers recognize that their work is a gift from God, work can become a joy (5:18–20). our work is part of God's plan to establish his eternal kingdom. In this sense, we can be assured that our faithful commitment to our work will have eternal consequences and reap eternal rewards (see 1 cor. 3:8, 14; 15:58).

The Value of Practical Wisdom

- 7 A ^agood name is better than precious ointment,
And the day of death than the day of one's ^bbirth;
- 2 Better to go to the house of mourning
Than to go to the house of feasting,
For that is the end of all men;
And the living will take it to ^cheart.
- 3 ¹ Sorrow is better than laughter,
^dFor by a sad countenance the heart is made ²better.
- 4 The heart of the wise is in the house of mourning,
But the heart of fools is in the house of mirth.
- 5 ^e It is better to ³hear the rebuke of the wise
Than for a man to hear the song of fools.
- 6 ^fFor like the ⁴crackling of thorns under a pot,

6:6 t hat one place is, as 3:20 argues, the grave. If a long life terminates in death with no prospect of anything else, will that life have been worthwhile? I on life without knowing God and without the power to enjoy it is indeed frustrating and useless.

6:7 t he hebrew word for soul can also be translated appetite. If it is meant to parallel the word mouth in the first line, then appetite may be appropriate in this context. yet the translation soul fits well in the argument of the gift being kept separate from the power to enjoy the gift (5:10).

6:9 t he meaning of this proverb is that it is better making do with what we can look on and enjoy than fantasizing about desirable things that are beyond our grasp.

6:10 Whatever happens has been already known, because to name something is to know it (1:9–11). all things are foreknown and foreordained by God.

6:12 like a shadow: t his phrase is a confirmation of the meaning of the hebrew word translated vanity. I life passes away quickly, like a vapor. what will happen after him: t he implied answer is that only God knows what will happen to us after death. r ather than imply that nothing exists beyond the grave, this book teaches that each person's life will be reviewed by God after death.

7:1 a person's death may be better than the day of birth if the name of that person has merited a lasting reputation and influence.

7:2–4 t hese verses expand upon the idea of v. 1. we may learn more about the meaning of life in the house of mourning than in the house of feasting.

7:5, 6 Burning thorns will provide quick flames, little heat, and a lot of noise, just like the sudden outbursts of laughter among fools; there is more noise than substance.

Wisdom Literature

t he Book of Ecclesiastes is an example of what is called wisdom literature. common in the ancient Middle East, wisdom literature provided instructions for upright living. such writing falls into two categories: proverbial wisdom, short, instructive sayings of the kind found in the Book of Proverbs, and speculation wisdom, consisting of dialogues or monologues that subtly disclose wisdom to readers. t he Book of Job is an example of speculation wisdom in the form of dialogue; the Book of Ecclesiastes is an example of monologue.

t he wisdom taught in these books is thoroughly practical. t he wisdom literature of the Bible is more than pithy advice for day-to-day living; it provides a foundation and a way to know God himself. t he Book of Job explores the meaning of existence and a person's relationship with God; Proverbs gives advice on topics ranging from parenting to money management; the Book of Ecclesiastes comes out of the hard lessons of solomon's life. despite all his wisdom and possessions, solomon made foolish choices. as an old man looking back on his life, he could not hide his regrets. so much of what solomon had thought would bring him happiness—money, learning, and fame—crumbled before his eyes. despite its apparent cynicism, the Book of Ecclesiastes is both a warning and an encouragement from a man who wanted others to avoid his mistakes. It shows that our efforts to live without God are meaningless. t his realization is the beginning of true wisdom.

- So is the laughter of the fool.
This also is vanity.
- 7 Surely oppression destroys a wise man's reason,
8 And a bribe ⁵ debases the heart.
- 8 The end of a thing is better than its beginning;
^hThe patient in spirit is better than the proud in spirit.
- 9 ⁱDo not hasten in your spirit to be angry,
For anger rests in the bosom of fools.
- 10 Do not say,
“Why were the former days better than these?”
For you do not inquire wisely concerning this.
- 11 Wisdom is good with an inheritance,
And profitable ^jto those who see the sun.
- 12 For wisdom is ⁶a ^kdefense as money is a defense,
But the ⁷excellence of knowledge is that wisdom gives ^llife to those who have it.
- 13 Consider the work of God;
For ^mwho can make straight what He has made crooked?
- 14 ⁿIn the day of prosperity be joyful,
But in the day of adversity consider:
Surely God has appointed the one ⁸as well as the other,
So that man can find out nothing that will come after him.
- 15 I have seen everything in my days of vanity:

7:7 bribe: a nother form of this maxim is found in Ex. 23:8; deut. 16:19, see also Matt. 28:11–15; l uke 22:4–6.

7:10 t the temptation to glorify the past at the expense of the present must be resisted. t the pleasures or advantages of those days may be more imaginary than real.

7:11 t those who find wisdom find life, argues solomon (Prov. 8:35). wisdom is as good as an inheritance; in fact, wisdom is even more advantageous or profitable. who see the sun: t his seems to be a variation on the more familiar phrase “under the sun.”

7:12 t the word translated defense literally means “shade” or “shelter,” a kind of protection. t he hebrew word translated here as excellence is often rendered profit in Ecclesiastes.

7:13 t he crooked that needs straightening (1:15) is the presence of afflictions and adversities in life. Both prosperity and adversity come from the hand of God. For prosperity give thanks, but in adversity reflect on the goodness and comprehensiveness of the plan of God.

7:14 find out nothing: If mortals do not come to know God and his plan, they will not be able to discern anything about life (3:11) or about what will happen after they are gone.

7:15 just man: t here are inequities in life that will always be a mystery (3:16—4:3; see also 8:14).

7:16 Do not be overly righteous: Few verses in Ecclesiastes are more susceptible to incorrect interpretation than these (vv. 16–18). t his is not the so-called golden mean that advises: “don’t be too holy and don’t be too wicked; sin to a moderate degree.” t he Preacher was warning instead about pseudo-religiosity and showy forms of worship. t he hebrew verb for “be wise” may be rendered “think yourself wise,” and to “be overly righteous” would mean “righteous in your own eyes” (see Prov. 3:7).

7:18 t he this that solomon refers to is the true wisdom that comes from the fear of God. t he other is the folly of fools. fears God: t rue piety in reverence and awe is the best protection against either absurdity.

7:20 not a just man on earth: t his language recalls solomon’s prayer when he dedicated the temple (1 kin. 8:46; see also Ps. 14:2–4; 143:2).

7:21, 22 take to heart: a t times you may find another doing to you the same harmful thing that you have done to someone else.

7:23 proved by wisdom: t he verb means “to put to the test.”

7:24 t he theme of wisdom’s inaccessibility also appears in Job 28. t he answer to this search for wisdom is that God can find wisdom (see Job 28:23–28).

^{26 z} And I find more bitter than death
The woman whose heart is snares and nets,
Whose hands are fetters.
² He who pleases God shall escape from her,
But the sinner shall be trapped by her.

^{27 a} “Here is what I have found,” says a the Preacher,
“Adding one thing to the other to find out the reason,
²⁸ Which my soul still seeks but I cannot find:
b One man among a thousand I have found,
But a woman among all these I have not found.
²⁹ Truly, this only I have found:
c That God made man upright,
But d they have sought out many schemes.”

8 Who is like a wise man?
And who knows the interpretation of a thing?
a A man’s wisdom makes his face shine,
And b the c sternness of his face is changed.

Obey Authorities for God’s Sake

² I say, “Keep the king’s commandment c for the sake of your oath to God. ^{3 d} Do not be hasty to go from his presence. Do not take your stand for an evil thing, for he does whatever pleases him.”

⁴ Where the word of a king is, there is power;
And e who may say to him, “What are you doing?”
⁵ He who keeps his command will experience nothing harmful;
And a wise man’s heart ² discerns
both time and judgment,

⁶ Because f for every matter there is a time and judgment,
Though the misery of man ³ increases greatly.
^{7 g} For he does not know what will happen;
So who can tell him when it will occur?
^{8 h} No one has power over the spirit to retain the spirit,
And no one has power in the day of death.
There is i no release from that
war,
And wickedness will not deliver those who are given to it.

⁹ All this I have seen, and applied my heart to every work that is done under the sun: There is a time in which one man rules over another to his own hurt.

Death Comes to All

¹⁰ Then I saw the wicked buried, who had come and gone from the place of holiness, and they were j forgotten ⁴ in the city where they had so done. This also is vanity. ^{11 k} Because the sentence against an evil work is not executed speedily, therefore the heart of the sons of men is fully set in them to do evil. ^{12 l} Though a sinner does evil a hundred times, and his days are prolonged, yet I surely know that m it will be well with those who fear God, who fear before Him. ¹³ But it will not be well with the wicked; nor will he prolong his days, which are as a shadow, because he does not fear before God.

¹⁴ There is a vanity which occurs on earth, that there are just men to whom it n happens according to the work of the wicked; again, there are wicked men to whom it happens according to the work of the o righteous. I said that this also is vanity.

7:26 wisdom literature is filled with warnings about the loose woman (see Prov. 7), however, this is balanced by the Preacher’s praise for a spouse as a gift from God (9:9).

7:28 t he truth that all persons are sinners is put in a deliberate exaggeration. Man and woman mean “a good man” and “a good woman.” In the Book of Proverbs, solomon asked the same question: “who can find a faithful man?” (Prov 20:6).

7:29 Even though God made everything beautiful (3:11) and made human beings upright (see Gen. 1:31), solomon’s search for the “sum” had failed, yet humankind’s search for wicked devices and intrigues had succeeded wonderfully.

8:1 t he idiom “to cause one’s face to shine” (see also the l evitical blessing of num. 6:25) is an image of a person who is stable. o ut of the depths of experience and understanding, that person is able to enjoy life and build up others.

8:2, 3 subjects are obligated by an oath of allegiance to render their obedience to “the powers that be” (rom. 13:1–5). not . . .
stand for an evil thing: Even before a king, evil is to be resisted (acts 5:29).

8:4, 5 What are you doing: t his same question is asked of those who pretend to be able to rebuke God (Job 9:12; dan. 4:32). t he rhetorical question amounts to a firm denial of the king’s power.

8:6 time and judgment: t he phrase means an “appropriate time of judgment.” God will judge everyone; every matter, including judgment, has its set time (12:14).

8:8 since the word spirit is paralleled by the “day of death,” the term spirit in this context means “life force” (3:19).

8:10 It was difficult to see the wicked receiving a funeral procession from the city to the cemetery while the righteous were forgotten.

8:11 sentence . . . is not executed: t here are cases when God postpones punishment, letting the guilty person live longer.

8:12, 13 the sharp contrast of the righteous and the wicked in these verses is a hallmark of hebrew wisdom literature (Ps. 1).

8:14 according . . . righteous: although there seem to be some glaring inequities in this present life, we know that God is working out his good purposes (3:16—4:3; 7:15).

¹⁵ So I commended enjoyment, because a man has nothing better under the sun than to eat, drink, and be merry; for this will remain with him in his labor all the days of his life which God gives him under the sun.

¹⁶ When I applied my heart to know wisdom and to see the business that is done on earth, even though one sees no sleep day or night, ¹⁷ then I saw all the work of God, that ^a a man cannot find out the work that is done under the sun. For though a man labors to discover it, yet he will not find it; moreover, though a wise man attempts to know it, he will not be able to find it.

9 For I ¹ considered all this in my heart, so that I could declare it all: ^a that the righteous and the wise and their works are in the hand of God. People know neither love nor hatred by anything they see before them. ^{2b} All things come alike to all:

One event happens to the righteous and the wicked;
To the ² good, the clean, and the unclean;
To him who sacrifices and him who does not sacrifice.
As is the good, so is the sinner;
He who takes an oath as he who fears an oath.
